Incident #1 - near Layton, Utah - 1st October 1967

There is no as yet rational explanation for this incident.

Since the size of the object was 100 mph, if it had passed over a cluster of small balloons, a flock of migrating birds, or any other group of relatively stationary objects, it would undoubtedly have appeared to observers within as many seconds as it did, just as telephone poles appear from a window of a speeding train. Little credence can be given to the pilot's statement that the object could not have been migrating birds; there would have been no time for identification.
