
Dark spots in the satellite imagery let the meteorologists know that an extremely strong updraft is present.