@TheUfoJoe They are calculating (approximately) the speed of the jet, not the object.

The motion of the object comes from parallax. Determined by looking at changes in the camera angle. Since the object is mid-way between the jet and the water, it visually has the same speed as the jet.

@MolotoVNKA @skot75 Buckling columns quickly lose 99% or more of their support strength. They can still support tons of weight, but they need to support hundreds of tons, so the collapse happens at 99% of freefall.

Which, at NTSC TV resolution, is indistinguishable from 100% freefall.

Dear Mr. Ibrahim Sued. As a faithful reader of your column, and an admirer of yours, I wish to give you, as a newspaperman, a "scoop" concerning flying discs. If you believe that they are real, of course. I didn't believe anything said or published about them. But just a few days ago I was forced to change my mind. I was fishing together with various friends, at a place close to the town of Ubatuba, Sao Paulo, when I sighted a flying disc! It approached the beach at unbelievable speed and an accident, i.e. a crash into the sea, seemed imminent. At the last moment, however, when it seemed it was almost striking the waters, it made a sharp turn upward and climbed rapidly on a fantastic impulse. Astonished, we followed the spectacle with our eyes, when we saw the disc explode in flames. It disintegrated into thousands of fiery fragments, which fell sparkling with magnificent brightness. They looked like fireworks, despite the time of the accident, at noon, i.e. at midday. Most of the fragments, almost all, fell into the sea. But a number of small pieces fell close to the beach and we picked up a large amount of this material—which was light as paper. I am enclosing a sample of it. I don't know anyone that could be trusted to whom I could send it for analysis. I never read about a flying disk being found, or about fragments or parts of a disk that had been picked up. Unless the finding was made by military authorities and the whole thing kept as a top-secret subject. I am certain the matter will be of great interest to the brilliant columnist and I am sending two copies of this letter—to the newspaper and to your home address.

From the admirer (the signature was illegible), together with the above letter, I received fragments of a strange metal.

@Altouiz @Big_phone_home Although results are consistent with Earth metal, so not super interesting - or does it conflict with Vallee? http://pbs.twimg.com/media/EyAx8cZU4AIZKV0.jpg

Two specimens of Brazil magnesium, together with four comparison specimens, have been subjected to internal analysis by a laser ablation inductively coupled plasma mass spectrograph (ICP-MS) instrument. This analysis shows that the Brazil specimens contain calcium at a few thousand ppm and (as found by the Colorado Project) both strontium and barium at a few hundred ppm. One specimen also contains titanium at a few hundred ppm. This analysis indicates that the existing Brazil samples are not as pure as magnesium specimens readily available in the 1950s.

Some of the specimens have been subjected to isotopic analysis. The only departures from normal isotopic ratios are small differences that may be attributed to fractionation as a result of heat treatment.

The origin of these fragments remains a mystery. There is no evidence that the specimens are of extraterrestrial origin.

@Altouiz Isotopic ratios. Metals on Earth, like, say, magnesium, generally have a certain ratio of isotopes. There are claims that some ratios don't or even can't occur on Earth, and that finding those ratios indicates the metal (or any element, but it seems mostly metals) is ET.

@conterammundi @LueElizondo The Chilean pilots did not, and the exact same argument was made there.

And yet, they got it wrong. It was just a plane.
http://pbs.twimg.com/media/EyAnMa3VcAArT-o.jpg

The technician filmed the object for nine minutes and twelve seconds, mainly in IR. This sensor produces a black and white video in which the black, white and grey tones are directly related to temperature. IR detects heat, and the hotter the material being filmed, the darker it appears on the image. The officers stopped the camera when they had to return to the base and the object disappeared behind the clouds.

The Navy immediately turned over the footage to the CEFAA, and General Bermúdez, accompanied by nuclear chemist Mario Avila, a CEFAA scientific committee member, conducted interviews with the two officers at their Navy base. "I was very impressed by these witnesses," Avila told me. "They were highly trained professionals with many years experience, and they were absolutely certain that they could not explain what they saw." Both offiicers also provided written reports at the base, as is required, and for CEFAA.

The Navy Captain stated that the object was a "flat, elongated structure" with "two thermal spotlights like discharges that did not coincide with the axel of motion." The technician described it as as "white with a semi-oval shape on the horizontal axis."

@murnut @LueElizondo The point is that we can't ELIMINATE the possibility of a jet. From behind, in some circumstances, jets get obscured by the IR glare they make, and all you see is the "heat signature" of the engine, and it's not a neat little cone. Perfect example:

From looking at the video at the time and more recently, do you get a sense as to how much heat this thing was giving off?
Well, normally, you would see engines emitting a heat plume. This object was not doing that. The video shows a source of heat, but the normal signatures of an exhaust plume were not there. There was no sign of propulsion. You could not see the thing that the ATFLIR pod should pick up 100 percent of the time: the source of heat and exhaust that a normal object flying would give you[4]. Does that make sense?

Yeah, it does.
Like, no method of propulsion or exhaust — and the exhaust part of it was the thing that kind of made me raise my eyebrows and be like, "Okay, this is interesting."

It has four engines. It has a heat signature, but you won't see any exhaust plumes.

@pstanley123 Sound is the easy part. I just took it from a video. You could also play it in the background to get the sound in real-time, and have a genuine in-camera verifiable video.

@dave_beaty @Dogbert34664346 @jimmy2cans @DusterePodcast @BobMcGwier_N4HY @LtTimMcMillan Yeah, and of course you could also use 4K video, for more realism. This is a quick way of adding the window glare and realistic camera movements.

Here's a VERY quick example. (i.e. could be way better with a couple of hours work) @jimmy2cans @DusterePodcast @BobMcGwier_N4HY @LtTimMcMillan @dave_beaty Well, I don't think it's a flying saucer actually flying around a plane. It's obviously a hoax.

But I think it's always an interesting challenge to think about how it might be done with a model. Maybe a printed backdrop, a sheet of perspex, and a saucer on some fishing line.

If we are preparing for unlikely stuff, then I think preparing for an inbound asteroid would be a bigger priority. And ahead of that there's mega-tsunamis, pandemics, etc. Higher priority.

@MichaelEMann @GlobalEcoGuy I think most geoengineering researchers would prefer it not be used. But someone (say China) might still try to do it. @FutureRider4 @OwatcherUf @PhillipJeffre16 @TxUFOSightings What is debunked in the flying green pyramid case is the claim that the videos show several flying green pyramids. They show mostly stars, a light on the ship, and one aircraft with human-like lights.
There's a minor mystery as to what the aircraft is, but that's not bunk.

IMAX isn't the best camera to capture a UFO. No one camera is the best. The best is actually MULTIPLE camera, filming from different vantage points. 8K HDR RAW would be nice, but what you really need is to demonstrate extraordinary motion. Triangulate.

3/ More of a physics puzzle, why does the contrail seem "hot"?

Simple answer, the same reason the clouds seem "hot". They are not hot, they are cold, just not as cold as the <-80Â° apparent temperature of empty sky against which ice seems hot.

2/ At the simplest level, this was solved because we have both the radar data and the ADS-B data that shows that flight IB6830 was exactly where that UFO was, same time, same size, same velocity, everything. Perspective makes it look like it's moving sideways, it's flying away

1. Conventional Drones, foreign or domestic.
    1. From a nearby ship
    2. From the Kidd or other Navy ship (maybe test of anti-drone tech)
    3. From a sub
    4. From a plane
2. Ordinary phenomena, misidentified
    1. Lights on distant planes
    2. Venus and other heavenly bodies
    3. Birds, possibly lit by searchlights
    4. St Elmo's fire
    5. On-board lights
3. Advanced Human Technology
    1. Super long-range conventional drones
    2. Unconventional lift/thrust technology (anti-gravity, massless reaction)
    3. Plasma "holograms" or other projected images
4. Non-Human Technology
    1. Aliens
5. Something else (no list of possibilities is complete)
6. A combination of some of the above

@atotalshunt @SomewhereSkies It was 2011, not that long ago. Some guy working at a game studio could do it in their spare time. Some of the large studios have dedicated mocap stages that they could use after hours (or just use some generic NPC mocap.) Then the fake old-movie filter hides the rough edges.

The problem with Lindell's "irrefutable evidence" is that people know it's bullshit cherry-picking, and the election is over, so people are not going to bother debunking it in depth.

So it's probably going to get a little momentum.

Is it worth addressing? http://pbs.twimg.com/media/Ex2FJEyVEAQTMq7.jpg @WitnessCitizen @LuAngeles @AFSUnidentified @BrianDunning So I have to lobby congress for classified information before I can analyze claims people make about public videos?

If I sign a petition will my analysis suddenly become more credible to you? Or do I actually have to call up my congressman?

How does it work?

@mspaceinc @Lockheed75 The little white dot is the internal reflection of the street light (jiggling a bit from image stabilization). There's no internal reflection for the three brighter UFO lights, so they are probably added later.

@micksabox @WilsonStraiph @PostDisclosure @Omen_eth @TheUfoJoe A problem here is that it's a report, not an investigation. So it might contain language like "some consider this data to ... @Fiddaman @SicCoP1 @SilvaRecord @MiddleOfMayhem @LueElizondo @g_knapp Well, that depends on what he said. Taken to an extreme - if he says he saw Santa, then no, if he says he saw a bright light, then probably yes. John Ratcliffe 0:45

Well, sure, we have lots of reports about what we call Unidentified Aerial Phenomenon. And this actually, is a program that's been in place for a few years in terms of a task force that that has been there under the National Defense Authorization Act. But as you correctly point out, Maria, there's now a report that will be issued by the by the Pentagon, by the Secretary of Defense and the Director of National Intelligence, I actually wanted to get this information out and declassified before I left office. But we weren't able to get it down into an unclassified format that we could talk about quickly enough. But frankly, there are a lot more sightings then have been made public. Some of those have been declassified. When we talk about sightings, we're talking about objects that have been seen by Navy or Air Force pilots, or have been picked up by satellite imagery, that, frankly, engage in actions that are difficult to explain. Movements that are hard to replicate that we don't have the technology for, or traveling at speeds that you know, exceed the sound barrier without a sonic boom. So in short, things that we are observing that are difficult to explain. And so, you know, there's actually quite a few of those. And I think that that information is being gathered, and will be put out in a way that the American people can see. We always, when we see these things, Maria, we always look for a plausible explanation. You know, weather can cause disturbances, visual disturbances. Sometimes we wonder whether or not our adversaries have technologies that are a little bit further down the road than we thought or that we realized. But there are instances where we don't have good explanations for some of the things that we've seen. And, you know, when that information becomes declassified, I'll be able to talk a little bit more about that.

Criticism [edit]

Criticism of the Drake equation follows mostly from the observation that several terms in the equation are largely or entirely based on conjecture. Star formation rates are well-known, and the incidence of planets has a sound theoretical and observational basis, but the other terms in the equation become very speculative. The uncertainties revolve around our understanding of the evolution of life, intelligence, and civilization, not physics. No statistical estimates are possible for some of the parameters, where only one example is known. The net result is that the equation cannot be used to draw firm conclusions of any kind, and the resulting margin of error is huge, far beyond what some consider acceptable or meaningful.[71][72]

One reply to such criticisms[73] is that even though the Drake equation currently involves speculation about unmeasured parameters, it was intended as a way to stimulate dialogue on these topics. Then the focus becomes how to proceed experimentally. Indeed, Drake originally formulated the equation merely as an agenda for discussion at the Green Bank conference.[74]

@JLuvin @papercrane111 @realufobros @MadScientistPod The Drake equation (old or new) is only as good (at best) as the largely indeterminal numbers you put into it - and may well be missing some factors.

@of_skeptical Simplest - Set up a zoom meeting, and have them call into that, and hit record.

Ideally have them use Zoom.

@SocialistFT @Miles90234527 @PostDisclosure @fin365 Digital zoom does not really "affect" glare.

The exposure setting is calculated for the full frame, then the digital zoom is just a cropped portion of that frame.
When it's an optical zoom, the exposure is calculated on just that portion of the frame, so glare is smaller.

Clearest view is at 2:16, before switching the zoom (and hence changing the exposure, and the glare size)

Or does the operability of "Remote Viewing" somehow depend on it not being used for anything? Or even being observed?

@SocialistFT @Miles90234527 @PostDisclosure @fin365 Glare is essentially scattered and unfocussed light around a light source. It's always there. You see it when the central light is very bright compared to the exposure setting. The more over exposed the central light is, and the more scattering & defocus, the larger the glare.

@Altouiz @steven_nikolic @theurigeller Someone contacted me asking to test their RV ability. So I did. http://pbs.twimg.com/media/ExcmcRFVIAAs0sJ.jpg Could I set a target for you? How would that work?

Mar 10, 2021, 5:15 PM ✓

Well I don't do it for the money. Just for the enjoyment.

Mar 10, 2021, 5:18 PM

Donate the money.

Mar 10, 2021, 5:18 PM ✓

What you do is pick a place with a photo but don't tell me what it is. Then print it and keep it safe. I'll then see if I can percieve as much information as I can.

I then do a 1 hour meditation to prepare the mind, then I follow a set protocol and see what I get.

Mar 10, 2021, 5:21 PM

How do you make the connection to me and what I printed? Surely simply having exchanged a few Twitter messages would not do anything.

Mar 10, 2021, 5:22 PM ✓

The soul mind knows what the target is and how to connect to it. The regular mind must not know or it makes guesses which are always wrong.

Mar 10, 2021, 5:23 PM

Okay, I've picked a place and printed a photo of it.

@HiFiWhiPhi @Starboss56 @fucktard_5 @MomsYoy @NASAEarth @NASA And yes, I think it has not been done - for the very simple reason that they are still trying to figure out how to do it, and if it will work, and what the side effects might be.

@HiFiWhiPhi @Starboss56 @fucktard_5 @MomsYoy @NASAEarth @NASA The changes in the climate are significant, and if they continue it will be a serious situation. I think a far better solution (than geoengineering) is to vastly reduce carbon emissions. But an understanding of our options is a good thing - because someone (China?) might try it.

Adaptation will be very difficult and likely highly disruptive: wars, famines, megadeath. Climate control is something states will want to try. So we need to understand how it works to regulate (or ban) it @zcichy @LtTimMcMillan I think it's 100% certain that some UAP represent a POTENTIAL threat.

I mean, something unidentified flies over a restricted area = potential threat.

That does not mean it 100% IS a threat though, nor does it mean we won't eventually find out what it was.

2021-03-26T16:31:01+00:00

@HiFiWhiPhi @Starboss56 @fucktard_5 @MomsYoy @NASAEarth @NASA And, regarding the weather. The best way of checking conditions is to look at the RH at flight altitudes, like 300mb (about 30,000 feet). Green regions.

@HiFiWhiPhi @Starboss56 @fucktard_5 @MomsYoy @NASAEarth @NASA Sorry, I'm not permanently on Twitter, I miss posts.

Contrail formation is very sensitive to humidity levels, so a difference of just 1,000 feet (indistinguishable from the ground) can make the difference between CT and no CT, or persistent CT.

Engine type can also affect it.

@HiFiWhiPhi @Starboss56 @fucktard_5 @MomsYoy @NASAEarth @NASA Put more simply:

Some years it rains a lot, some years it does not rain much. This is normal.

Some years there are lots of persistent contrails, some years there are not many. Same thing.

It's the weather. (And, occasionally, air traffic variations)

@HiFiWhiPhi @Starboss56 @fucktard_5 @MomsYoy @NASAEarth @NASA They did not go anywhere. There are always a lot fewer in summer, and over the last year there's been significantly less air traffic.

It also depends on the weather, which varies by location. Less here in NorCal, but also a lot less rain - just yearly variations.

@HiFiWhiPhi @Starboss56 @fucktard_5 @MomsYoy @NASAEarth @NASA The point I was responding to was "you're talking about contrails, usually about 2 or 3 plane lengths long and disappear before the plane is out of sight. Chemtrails stay and spread."

@FettuccineSplit Off-world seems more likely.

An advanced (and presumably fairly large) underwater civilization would be unlikely to have evaded detection. But an occasional visitor from another world has a smaller footprint.

@JLuvin @Oswald1160 @LtTimMcMillan Being aware of an illusion does not make you immune to it. In fact, there's lots of research discussing the problems of things just like this for military pilots. Spatial disorientation leads to crashes and deaths, not just failing to identify things.

https://safety.army.mil/Portals/0/Documents/ON-DUTY/AVIATION/FLIGHTFAX/Standard/2014/May

_2014_Flightfax.pdf http://pbs.twimg.com/media/ExQs4z9U8AIs0ro.jpg

Nature of spatial disorientation accidents

Almost all pilots will experience SD events at some time, but the events are usually recognized and do not result in adverse consequences. Nevertheless, SD has always been involved in a significant proportion of aviation accidents, particularly those with more serious consequences. Statistics from the United States show that SD was involved in:

- 11 percent of fatal general aviation accidents during 1976–1992 (Collins and Dollar 1996)
- 2 percent of general aviation accidents during 1983–1992, with 92 percent resulting in fatalities (Mortimer 1995)
- 1.2 percent of civil helicopter accidents during 1983–1996, with 61 percent resulting in fatalities (Mortimer 1997)
- 11 percent of United States Air Force accidents during 1990–2006, with 69 percent resulting in fatalities (Lyons and others 2006)
- 11 percent of helicopter accidents and 31 percent of fatal helicopter accidents in the United States Army during 2002–2011 (Gaydos and others 2012).

Many authors have indicated that accident statistics often underestimate the proportion of accidents that are associated with SD due to the difficulty in establishing the contributing factors in some accidents and differences in the use of definitions (Gibbs and others 2012, Mortimer 1997, Newman 2007).

When SD does result in an accident, it is usually in the form of a controlled flight into terrain or in-flight loss of control, resulting in a collision with terrain or in-flight break-up. With most SD accidents, the pilot does not recognize the problem, or at least does not recognize it in time to effectively recover the situation. This unrecognized SD, often known as Type I, can occur for an extended period of time lasting up to tens of seconds or even longer (Previc and Ecoline 2004).

My thoughts on the USS Kidd "Drone" encounter.

It's a very low information story. Drones are not the only explanation, but anti-gravity craft are not #2.

https://www.metabunk.org/threads/uss-kidd-drones-encounter-2019.11681/

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/ExQr3raVoAINezM.jpg

I feel there's a variety of explanations we should consider, although some will no doubt be mocked as ridiculous. Broadly breaking it down:

1. Conventional Drones, foreign or domestic.
    1. From a nearby ship
    2. From the Kidd (maybe test of anti-drone tech)
    3. From a sub
    4. From a plane
2. Ordinary phenomena, misidentified
    1. Lights on distant planes
    2. Venus and other heavenly bodies
    3. Birds, possibly lit by searchlights
    4. St Elmo's fire
    5. On-board lights
3. Advanced Human Technology
    1. Super long-range conventional drones
    2. Unconventional lift/thrust technology (anti-gravity, massless reaction)
    3. Plasma "holograms" or other projected images
4. Non-Human Technology
    1. Aliens
5. Something else (no list of possibilities is complete)
6. A combination of some of the above

Science or Scam?

Adam says what he does can be completely explained by science. Edgar Mitchell -- who walked on the moon during the Apollo 14 mission -- says he recognizes the science behind Adam's work. "It's about channeling energy and resonating with the person," says Mitchell.

Mitchell has spent the last 30 years exploring the science of the paranormal. "The principles of quantum physics explain many of these intuitive mystical aspects of attention and intention," says Mitchell.

Instead, we get uniformly bad photos.

This is ... odd. Reminds me how, within unusual beliefs, it's the non-believer that is regarded as the dysfunctional one, the one that needs helping. Believers are heroes.

@prentic4 That's a funny take. The possibility that some UFO photos and video are faked does not mean they all are. Just that they might be. But we knew that already.

Of course, this says nothing at all about eyewitnesses where there are no photos/video.

One way of faking a UFO video is to use a mirror, which avoids having to suspend things way up in the air. You can put things on the mirror itself, or hang them just out of shot. Just flip the video vertically. Bigger mirrors improve the effect.

@cheals1996 I think it's almost certain that extraterrestrials exist.

I don't think it's likely they are currently flying around our skies. There's a lack of evidence. The disconnect between witnesses and lack of images being the strongest argument against those witnesses seeing aliens.

Either way, issues.

Abstract

In 2020, the Pentagon released three videos taken from F-18 fighters[1]. These three videos have been named as FLIR1, GIMBAL and Go Fast.

FLIR1 video was taken in 2004 during training exercises near San Diego (CA). It was recorded after some pilots reported the sighting an UFO/UAP, which was later known as tic tac due to its shape, and that allegedly showed extraordinary movements, speeds and accelerations. However those movements cannot be appreciated in the video.

An analysis on this video was done by the Scientific Coalition for Ufology (SCU)[2], and served as the basis for a later publication in the journal Entropy, by Knuth et al.[3]. The analysis calculates a high acceleration of the UAP in the last frames of the video, assuming the UAP starts from rest respect to the fighter.

This work proposes a simple model based on the assumption that the UAP is moving in a straight line with constant speed and heading. The values obtained are within the normal operation of known aircrafts.

What are you suggesting, that the Men In Black swoop in after a report and confiscate all the photos?

There are thousands of General Aviation (private) flights every day. How would that work?

Looking back to the drone flap last year. Police officers and journalists confidently interpreted planes at 10,000 to 30,000 feet as drones at 500 feet. And they were utterly unconvinced by the "plane" explanations.

I wonder how they recall it now? More or less interesting?

@Fiddaman @LouiseDArcy1 @JLuvin @ChristopherKMe4 Witness testimony is always harder to analyze than video footage. It's very subjective and immediately starts to both degrade and be embellished. It's also self-selecting for mistakes, as mistakes that make something seem interesting lead to that mistake being reported.

During his 30 years of investigations Dr. Haines has established a percentage break down of what type of pilot has reported a UFO. From his 3000 odd reports from 1916 (WWI) to October 1996, military pilots have reported 52% of these sightings while commercial pilots represent 40%, private pilots 7% and less than 1% for test pilots. Of these sightings, most are seen in good weather and 30% are during the day while the remaining 70% account for the night. Approximately 3% of the total reports have experienced electromagnetic effects on instruments when a UFO is close to the aircraft; even dimming of the cabin lights has been reported. These effects have lasted for 5 seconds up to a staggering 180 minutes of flight time.

But for web versions, they get compressed. You get artifacts, especially around the edges of moving objects.

@QldUap @Oswald1160 @Dogbert34664346 @PostDisclosure 5 major mishaps in 100,000 hours is one every 20,000. A military pilot might amass 3,000 hours in a career, meaning roughly 1 major mishap per 7 pilots.

How many pilots have had a close encounter with a UFO, like Fravor did?

@QldUap @Dogbert34664346 @PostDisclosure How are you quantifying this?
http://pbs.twimg.com/media/EwjQ9BvVoAAGh8T.jpg

All USAF F-16 fighter Class A (major) aircraft mishaps from 1975-93 were analyzed, using records from the U.S. Air Force Safety Agency (AFSA). There were 190 Class A mishaps involving 204 F-16's and 217 aircrew during this 19-yr period. The overall Class A rate was 5.09 per 100,000 flight hours, more than double the overall USAF rate. The mishaps are categorized by year, month, time of day and model of aircraft in relation to mishap causes as determined and reported by AFSA. Formation position, phase of flight and primary cause of the mishap indicate that maneuvering, cruise and low-level phases account for the majority of the mishaps (71%), with air-to-air engagements associated with a higher proportion of pilot error (71%) than was air-to-ground (49%). Engine failure was the number one cause of mishaps (35%), and collision with the ground the next most frequent (24%). Pilot error was determined as causative in 55% of all the mishaps. Pilot error was often associated with other non-pilot related causes. Channelized attention, loss of situational awareness, and spatial disorientation accounted for approximately 30% of the total pilot error causes found. Pilot demographics, flight hour/sortie profiles, and aircrew injuries are also listed. Fatalities occurred in 27% of the mishaps, with 97% of those involving pilot errors.

Why would a highly-compressed 144p shakey video be described as an "excellent capture" if it's just a hubcap on a string?

AATIP was a real program studying UAPs in case they were fancy foreign drones, but it wasn't really taken seriously because of ET bent. It has classified info that's both tabloid fodder and a hassle to declassify, so they stonewall and hope people go away

1) What are each of the three videos (FLIR1, GOFAST, and GIMBAL) currently classified as?

A: The objects in the videos remain characterized as "unidentified." Unidentified means we cannot definitively determine what they are.

2) If, after examination, it was determined that a video had a plausible explanation as an aircraft or balloon, then would that classification publically change?

A: The official designation would change if we definitively identify the objects. However, any report generated as a result of these investigations will, by necessity, include classified information on military operations. Therefore, no release of information to the general public is expected.

3) Would it change if the exact aircraft was identified?

A: The official designation would change if we definitively identify the objects. However, any report generated as a result of these investigations will, by necessity, include classified information on military operations. Therefore, no release of information to the general public is expected.

4) Has the military determined that
4a) FLIR1 shows an object essentially in level flight, making no sudden maneuvers
4b) GIMBAL shows an IR glare that rotates due to the camera's gimbal rotation.
4c) GOFAST shows an illusion of speed, a high slow object appearing to be a low fast one.
A: To maintain operations security and to avoid disclosing information that may be useful to our adversaries, DOD does not discuss publicly the details of either the observations or the examination of reported incursions into our training ranges or designated airspace, including those incursions initially designated as UAP.

5) Other than being designated UAP's What more can you tell me about what is thought to be show in each video?
A: To maintain operations security and to avoid disclosing information that may be useful to our adversaries, DOD does not discuss publicly the details of either the observations or the examination of reported incursions into our training ranges or designated airspace, including those incursions initially designated as UAP.

6) Have any of the videos been used in pilot training?
A: No.

[Second email]
One follow up regarding question #1:
7) Would a distant plane of undetermined type and origin "remain characterized as 'unidentified'" even if could be determined that it was a plane.
A: To maintain operations security and to avoid disclosing information that may be useful to our adversaries, DOD does not discuss publicly the details of either the observations or the examination of reported incursions into our training ranges or designated airspace, including those incursions initially designated as UAP.

@All4LightBearer @YouTube Advertisers don't want their ads running on disinfo videos, and those videos only represent a tiny fraction of views on YouTube. They also open YouTube up to criticism, and possibly even lawsuits if the disinfo prompts criminal acts (even mass murder). So they supress them.

@PineForestCmpr @YouTube I'm an American. It think elections SHOULD be fortified.

Read what the article says this entails. http://pbs.twimg.com/media/EwYJ5vAVkAEwDxJ.jpg

> The handshake between business and labor was just one component of a vast, cross-partisan campaign to protect the election—an extraordinary shadow effort dedicated not to winning the vote but to ensuring it would be free and fair, credible and uncorrupted. For more than a year, a loosely organized coalition of operatives scrambled to shore up America's institutions as they came under simultaneous attack from a remorseless pandemic and an autocratically inclined President. Though much of this activity took place on the left, it was separate from the Biden campaign and crossed ideological lines, with crucial contributions by nonpartisan and conservative actors. The scenario the shadow campaigners were desperate to stop was not a Trump victory. It was an election so calamitous that no result could be discerned at all, a failure of the central act of democratic self-governance that has been a hallmark of America since its founding.

@danthegreater @P_Dubbin @YouTube I think, again, it's about where you draw the line. In most cases, I don't think people should be banned for sharing opinions. Where it gets more justifiable is if they are repeatedly sharing things that are A) verifiably false and B) harmful.

@P_Dubbin @YouTube Who isn't? Nobody sensible wants revenge-porn (or worse) or inciteful racist hate speech to be given a free and powerful platform without restrictions. But we differ on where and how to draw the line.

I'd like to do a podcast episode on this topic (friendly fire by YT)

LE Lue Elizondo 38:53

Well, there's a difference between being critical analysis and criticizing. And and I don't think I don't think we I think that's critical. Okay, the gimbal video has been more self contained, I think, because there isn't that much kind of other stuff associated with it, at least in public. The gimbal video shows what looks like a flying saucer type thing. And it's got this this aura around it. And that was kind of reflected in the title of The New York Times article, glowing auras and black money. But the aura was later discovered to be just kind of a standard artifacts of the infrared. The infrared camera system is this thing called an Unsharp Mask, which creates contrast in the boundaries between light and dark. And yet this was something that was it was promoted on the PTSA site that there was an order on the New York Times thing it was an identified why wasn't this discovered? It's just barely simple thing that it's it's just an artifact of the camera. Even Jeremy Cobell now admits that it's just an artifact of the camera. Why wasn't this discovered right from the start?

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/EwTP13kVgAIjb04.jpg

WHILE DESCENDING FROM 24K FT TO GAIN A BETTER VIEW OF THE UNID CONTACT IN THE WATER, FAST EAGLE 110 SIGHTED AN AIRBORNE CONTACT WHICH APPEARED TO BE CAPSULE SHAPED (WINGLESS, MOBILE, WHITE, OBLONG PILL SHAPED, 25-30 FEET IN LENGTH, NO VISIBLE MARKINGS AND NO GLASS) 5NM WEST FROM POSITION OF UNID OBJECT IN WATER.

CAPSULE (ALT 4K FT AT COURSE 300) PASSED UNDER FAST EAGLE 110 (ALT 16KFT). FAST EAGLE 110 BEGAN TURN TO ACQUIRE CAPSULE. WHILE 110 WAS DESCENDING AND TURNING, CAPSULE BEGAN CLIMBING AND TURNED INSIDE OF FAST EAGLE'S TURN RADIUS. PILOT ESTIMATED THAT CAPSULE ACHIEVED 600-700 KTS. FAST EAGLE 110 COULD NOT KEEP UP WITH THE RATE OF TURN AND THE GAIN OF ALTITUDE BY THE CAPSULE. 110 LOST VISUAL ID OF CAPSULE IN HAZE. LAST VISUAL CONTACT HAD CAPSULE AT 14KFT HEADING DUE EAST.

NEITHER FAST EAGLES 110 OR 100 COULD ACHIEVE RADAR LOCK OR ANY OTHER MEANS OF POSITIVE ID. FAST EAGLE 100 WAS FLYING HIGH COVER AND SAW THE ENGAGEMENT BY FAST EAGLE 110. FAST EAGLE 100 CONFIRMS 110 VISUAL ID; 100 LOST CONTACT IN HAZE AS WELL.

statement, which is a bit different (and also contradicts Elizondo, with "unauthorized release")
http://pbs.twimg.com/media/EwTGDSIVIAEPlE_.jpg

The Department of Defense has authorized the release of three unclassified Navy videos, one taken in November 2004 and the other two in January 2015, which have been circulating in the public domain after unauthorized releases in 2007 and 2017. The U.S. Navy previously acknowledged that these videos circulating in the public domain were indeed Navy videos. After a thorough review, the department has determined that the authorized release of these unclassified videos does not reveal any sensitive capabilities or systems, and does not impinge on any subsequent investigations of military air space incursions by unidentified aerial phenomena. DOD is releasing the videos in order to clear up any misconceptions by the public on whether or not the footage that has been circulating was real, or whether or not there is more to the videos. The aerial phenomena observed in the videos remain characterized as "unidentified." The released videos can be found at the Naval Air Systems Command FOIA Reading Room: https://www.navair.navy.mil/foia/documents.

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/EwS0v4BUUAE6u-U.jpg

Both F-18s assumed combat formation enroute to the new location. “Source” and OK-1’s aircraft was approximately .3 NM behind OK-2 and OK-3’s aircraft and both F-18s proceeded East [Fravor: "we’re still heading West"] at an altitude of approximately 10,000 to 20,000 feet towards San Clemente Island.

Approximately two seconds after noticing the unusual water disturbance, “Source” described witnessing a small, unidentified aerial system (UAS) cross over the turbulent area of water. The unidentified object was elongated, approximately 30 to 40 feet in length, white in color, and described resembling a ‘tic-tac candy mint. [Fravor:"Just forward of the wing line is this little white thing, which looks like a tic-tac, which is why we call it the tic-tac, "]The object had no distinguishable control surfaces, was uniformly smooth, with no windows. doors, or lights visible. The object was opaque with a solid, definable edge. The object did not appear to emit any noticeable light or radiation from its surface nor did it have any noticeable exhaust trail. The object traveled from left to right over the disturbed water at an altitude of approximately 1000 to 3000 feet. The object appeared to travel at a speed of approximately 300 to 500 knots in a straight line. ... [Fravor:"and it’s moving around erratically."

OK-2 [Fravor] conducted an aggressive banking maneuver and dropped his aircraft while turning at the same time in order to catch up with the object [Fravor: "I started an easy descent"]. As OK-2 conducted the maneuver, “Source” noticed the object immediately respond to OK-2’s change of direction [Fravor: "it’s just kind of randomly moving around this vehicle. And it’s basically forward of the right wing by the cockpit and then it goes back and it’s kind of moving around like it was checking it out. "]. (“Source” Comment – the UFO turned on [Fravor] and _____ as if it knew or somehow anticipated what they were going to do and even pointed towards them! I was worried for them because whatever this was. [Fravor] and _____ didn’t stand a chance against it! There is no way any aircraft or missile that I know of could conduct maneuvers like what we saw that day.) “Source” indicated that the object began to make deliberate changes in its altitude and angle in response to OK-2’s aircraft in a manner that seemed to defy the laws of flight physics. [Fravor: " It kind of recognizes that we’re there and it starts to mirror us."] The object instantaneously but in a controlled, intelligent manner ‘tumbled” into nonsensical angles, that made any engagement by the F-18 impossible [Fravor: "So I’m still coming down nice and easy and I’m watching this thing. Because it’s just kind of watching us and following."]. OK-2 and OK-3 were approximately 1000 to 3000 feet from the object when the object turned and “pointed at them”. OK-2 conducted one or two evasive turns in their F-18 [Fravor: "He’s at the 3 o’clock position and I go, “well the only way I might get this is to do an aggressive out-of-play maneuver”. So I dump the nose and I go from the 9 o’clock through the vertical down, to go across to the 3 o’clock. @SicCoP1 @zcichy @AFSUnidentified @UAPNewsline @prodbyguess Here I highlight the

And these are not even all her own words, they are mostly a paraphrasing by someone who knows Fravor's account. http://pbs.twimg.com/media/EwSzKtPUcAoo-re.jpg

---

Both F-18s assumed combat formation enroute to the new location. “Source” and OK-1’s aircraft was approximately .3 NM behind OK-2 and OK-3’s aircraft and both F-18s proceeded East [Fravor: "we’re still heading West"] at an altitude of approximately 10,000 to 20,000 feet towards San Clemente Island.

Approximately two seconds after noticing the unusual water disturbance, “Source” described witnessing a small, unidentified aerial system (UAS) cross over the turbulent area of water. The unidentified object was elongated, approximately 30 to 40 feet in length, white in color, and described resembling a ‘tic-tac candy mint. [Fravor:"Just forward of the wing line is this little white thing, which looks like a tic-tac, which is why we call it the tic-tac, "]The object had no distinguishable control surfaces, was uniformly smooth, with no windows. doors, or lights visible. The object was opaque with a solid, definable edge. The object did not appear to emit any noticeable light or radiation from its surface nor did it have any noticeable exhaust trail. The object traveled from left to right over the disturbed water at an altitude of approximately 1000 to 3000 feet. The object appeared to travel at a speed of approximately 300 to 500 knots in a straight line. ... [Fravor:"and it’s moving around erratically."

OK-2 [Fravor] conducted an aggressive banking maneuver and dropped his aircraft while turning at the same time in order to catch up with the object [Fravor: "I started an easy descent"]. As OK-2 conducted the maneuver, “Source” noticed the object immediately respond to OK-2’s change of direction [Fravor: "it’s just kind of randomly moving around this vehicle. And it’s basically forward of the right wing by the cockpit and then it goes back and it’s kind of moving around like it was checking it out. "]. I was worried for them because whatever this was. [Fravor] and _____ didn’t stand a chance against it! There is no way any aircraft or missile that I know of could conduct maneuvers like what we saw that day.) “Source” indicated that the object began to make deliberate changes in its altitude and angle in response to OK-2’s aircraft in a manner that seemed to defy the laws of flight physics. [Fravor: " It kind of recognizes that we’re there and it starts to mirror us."] The object instantaneously but in a controlled, intelligent manner ‘tumbled” into nonsensical angles, that made any engagement by the F-18 impossible [Fravor: "So I’m still coming down nice and easy and I’m watching this thing. Because it’s just kind of watching us and following."]. OK-2 and OK-3 were approximately 1000 to 3000 feet from the object when the object turned and “pointed at them”. @Disclos93884769 @foiaboi @makoteko1 The Chilean Military's CEFFAA had a panel of experts and military resources and failed to identify a plane for two years. It's possible that Lue's group also failed.

@onelastread @ryan_ha @HISTORY @LueElizondo @ChristopherKMe4 @tomdelonge Then surely all that can be claimed is "we saw something that looked tic-tac shaped. We lost contact with after a while"

Instead, Fravor's account is taken as gospel in the smallest details with no verification, and some contradiction from Ms. Source - which isn't even her words @zcichy @AFSUnidentified @SicCoP1 @UAPNewsline @prodbyguess But she "backs up" Fravor's account only in the loosest terms.

What we'd expect from trained observers would be two accounts that match in their details. Instead, we have the equivalent to two eyewitnesses to a murder who only agree with "it was a black man, he went that way"

@onelastread @AFSUnidentified @SicCoP1 @zcichy @UAPNewsline @prodbyguess I'm not accusing any of the pilots or crew of lying. I would not eliminate it as a possibility, but it's not high on the list.

@TRandallizer @_Desmoden @lucio_linae @Julesofthwood @prodbyguess It didn't. In the Chilean case it was on radar, and being tracked by ATC, and it was on the radio with Santiago Departure. The pilots, and later the government investigators, just were looking in the wrong spot.

But the Chilean navy pilots were highly trained.

They failed to identify a plane. http://pbs.twimg.com/media/EwSsITWUUAEPNBG.jpg

> The Navy immediately turned over the footage to the CEFAA, and General Bermúdez, accompanied by nuclear chemist Mario Avila, a CEFAA scientific committee member, conducted interviews with the two officers at their Navy base. “I was very impressed by these witnesses,” Avila told me. “They were highly trained professionals with many years experience, and they were absolutely certain that they could not explain what they saw.” Both offiicers also provided written reports at the base, as is required, and for CEFAA.

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/EwQVPOpUcAMs4RK.jpg

For example, referring again to FIG. 3, when an object being continuously tracked by moving the first coelostat minor 220 in various directions by rotating around the first rotation axis 244 and/or around roll axis 242 and/or optional fourth axis 246 using control system 390 is projected to go close to or through the gimbal singularity, and optional fourth gimbal axis 246 is provided with a range of angles (for example, ±3 degrees), the roll axis 242 is no longer used for tracking the object within the ±3 degree range that surrounds the gimbal singularity. Instead, the first rotation axis 244 and fourth gimbal axis 246 are used to continue to track the object within the ±3 degree angular range. When, on the other hand, the object location exceeds, for example, the ±3 degree singularity, the roll axis 242 is used by control system 390 in the tracking motion. In this case, the fourth axis 246 may be gradually returned to 0 degrees and no longer has involvement in the tracking motion. In other words, control system 390 controls the tracking by rotating the first coelostat mirror 220 around the fourth gimbal axis 246 when an object is located closely around the singularity (e.g., within the ±3 degree range). Otherwise, when the object is outside the ±3 degree range around the singularity, control system 390 controls the tracking by rotating the roll axis 242 and leaving the fourth axis 246 fixed or returning the third axis to 0 degrees.

(57) ABSTRACT

An optical sensor assembly in which a four axis gimbal and dual coelostat mirror configuration provide pointing of the sensor line of sight in azimuth and elevation, stabilized for platform pitch. One example of a sensor system includes a first optical sub-system including a first plurality of optical elements, and a second optical sub-system configured to rotate about a first axis relative to the first optical sub-system. The second optical sub-system includes afocal foreoptics configured to direct a collimated beam of electromagnetic radiation to the first optical sub-system, a first coelostat minor configured to rotate about a second axis substantially perpen-

My guest today is Lou Elizondo who is a former senior intelligence official, a disclosure advocate, a national security expert. And perhaps most interestingly, the former director of the Pentagon's UFO / UAP program, known as AATIP. So, Louis, thank you very much for being here, it's been a bit of a challenge, getting some of the key figures in the UAP world to talk. So thank you very much for agreeing to be here.

@prodbyguess Elizondo wasn't particularly familiar with my analyses of the videos but still says I'm wrong because of classified data he's seen, but no longer has access to and can't share. I explained the rotating glare hypothesis to him and he seemed to understand, but same thing.

In my chat with Luis Elizondo, we discuss his time at the AATIP UFO/UAP program. There's some discussion on TTSA and then we get into some depth on the Navy UFO videos (US and Chilean) and then we run out of time and agree to continue at a later date!

@Josephu38701463 @area51org If I shine a flashlight at a camera then you cannot see the flashlight, maybe not even the hand holding it. You only see the glare. But the glare is made by a solid object. I think that's what we SEE in Gimbal, the glare from a jet engine, hiding the plane behind it.

@Josephu38701463 @area51org As much as my flashlight is a solid object, yes. The glare would come from something very hot, like a jet engine. Attached to a plane. Very solid.

@ron9gray @DavidJayB @blackvaultcom The rotation that makes the glare rotate is hidden to the user because itâ□□s unwanted, itâ□□s a mechanical necessity that is optically derotated. But since part of the optical path rotates, the glare rotates.

@_Desmoden @BobMcGwier_N4HY @blackvaultcom I'm attempting to demonstrate a physical effect using as few special effects as possible, and in a way that other people can easily replicate.

@Borders750 @AFSUnidentified @ufouapam @LueElizondo "Advocate" is a terrible word to use. It implies arguing in bad faith, like a lawyer, or in blind faith, like a priest.

Those things sound similar but are radically different.

One of the more famous UFO videos, FLIR1, is incredibly low resolution and blurry. Here I overlay it with a video of a fighter jet at the same resolution and blur. It's a plausible match.

@UsCars4 @aka__V @1joe1clarke I think he's wrong, and I have explained why.

The resolution and focus of the video, combined with glare, would not show neat little cones, because even by resolution alone they would be a single pixel. Glare and focus them spreads it out.

@emilio968 @blackvaultcom No, a derotation rotates the entire image. But since the glare has ALREADY rotated with the camera component relative to the scene, then derotating to make the scene not rotate makes it look like just the glare rotates.

Mull on it for a while.

later in software. Like:

@LisaRob23467689 @benjimaan22 @blackvaultcom Disproving the flat earth does not require testimony. You can do it by experiment.

Amusingly one of those experiments is holding a ruler up to the horizon. You just need one that's long enough and a high place to stand (360 feet in this example) @1joe1clarke @aka__V He's seeing something in the display that looks like it is rotating, and thinks that it is. @UsCars4 I don't know what it is. The point of the glare explanation is that it opens the door to conventional explanations like an aircraft powered by jet engines. It removes the NECESSITY of advanced technology.

"Looming Superior Mirage" isn't actually a thing, @weatherbraine. Looming is not a mirage. Cold air low down will raise up a ship, but it also raises up the ocean. Mirages are very distorted. The floating boat effect needs a particular combination of wind, lighting, haze, and a crappy camera.

@gheathen @hexapodcaster @hoaxeye The main part of the illusion is the ocean diffusely reflecting more of the sky in the distance. The mist just blends things together more. You can see the difference in water surface in images like this:

@MBurnsKaurin @AstroKatie @Rainmaker1973 But what you describe is generally the normal state of things. The air near the water tends to have more dramatic gradients. The exception is when you get an inversion layer - which is what you need for a classic superior mirage.

@MBurnsKaurin @AstroKatie @Rainmaker1973 It's 100% not a mirage. Mirages are upside-down.

It's not lofting either. Lofting raises up the water too.

It's just a false horizon, water blending with the sky.

This "hovering ship" in the UK is probably not a mirage - which would be far more distorted, it's more like a false horizon. The water near the boat is just misty and/or reflecting the sky. This has been observed before.

@PredatoryPanic @Oswald1160 @rpowell2u If the plane is moving, then it contributes to the apparent motion of the object relative to the background.

Is the plane moving?

The background can be made not to move by the camera panning (i.e rotating) left/right. That has no effect on parallax.

@mission_europa @ExploreSCU The background immediately behind the sign, yes. Obviously this is an imperfect example as the background has depth, and so will always shown internal parallax. But here's four consecutive frames, at about 5 sec.

@bobofango86 I don't say it's "a bokeh" any more than I say "it's an out of focus". I always say "it's bokeh".

I think this is the clearest way of conveying what we are talking about, and effect that makes points into shapes when they are out of focus.

@bobofango86 Words are defined by their common usage. "Bokeh" is commonly used to refer to the shape of an out-of-focus point. Usually light, but the principle is the same for dark bokeh.

@SnakePo9 @WasilenkoAlex @mike_bogaards @BoYeePoon2 There is plenty of info. We have a transparent camera-aligned diamond shape that slowly moves.

We have distant trees in focus, so a distant craft would also be in focus.

We have similar shaped light bokeh from other cameras.

@PredatoryPanic @rpowell2u You have to distinguish between camera ROTATION, which moves the entire image but does not change the apparent positions of objects relative to each other, and camera TRANSLATION (a position change) which does change the apparent positions @PredatoryPanic @rpowell2u The camera is rotating because the camera operator is manually tracking the object. The rotation has no effect on parallax, but it can make the background move or not move on some frames.

Since the plane is in constant 200mph motion, the parallax effect is also constant.

The @ExploreSCU appendix L issue is simple but hard to visualize - maybe because it is so simple. Basically, the logic in appendix L would mean this sign is ACTUALLY moving because, on some frames, it VISUALLY moves, but the background does not.
It's really that simple.

@Arnfden0 @IWANTTOKNOWUK @ChrisKMellon @NASA @SenBillNelson Aguadilla is most definitely not "legit." The SCU report is riddled with errors that @ExploreSCU have resolved only by ignoring them.
For example, Appendix L is basically 100% wrong because of a basic misunderstanding of parallax. This was pointed out seven years ago.

@rpowell2u The plane is moving; therefore an aerial object will move against the background from the camera's perspective.

Do you actually think that the plane STOPPED MOVING for a frame? The lack of movement of the background is from camera rotation, not lateral movement (translation)

@AstroKatie Sure, but your definition seemed to hinge on apparent motion that "decreased for increasing distance between the observer and the object"
That's more a feature of parallax than parallax itself - which is just apparent relative motion of objects due to observer motion.

2022-07-21T16:17:24+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/1550152977326821376

@AstroKatie But if the distance (perpendicular to the camera) does not change, there's still parallax, right? So that definition does not really work - although it perhaps defines a feature of parallax.

@Channa_Sr @edwardcurrent I'm not sure how intuitive it is to the average person.

But then there's also the secondary issue, why does gas exiting the nozzle make the rocket move forward? "Conservation of momentum" is an abstraction, what's actually happening?

@Channa_Sr @edwardcurrent The point of the poll is to gauge how well people understand how rockets work. Historically there was a common misconception that they push against the air. This is still found in flat earth mythology.

About 10 miles from the carrier, he turned west and slowed to about 300 miles per hour. He was apparently unaware that the commander, whose name was redacted from the final report for privacy reasons, had flown a similar route.
> Around 5:40 p.m., the two planes collided. The commander told investigators he was unaware of the collision, feeling only a "thump" on his left engine. Within seconds, his plane was aflame and spinning wildly out of control. He bailed out and was later plucked from the sea.

One of the things like Kevin de mentioned about these radar contacts, like before, just directly before for everything counting we'll get to that in a second was that he was told that there were the ballistic missile tracking system was detecting them coming down from space, through 60,000 feet or thropugh 80,000 feet. And then coming down to the surface of the water is something that you you have heard

But my last in-person Kevin, discussion with Kevin was actually in Brooklyn, probably seven months ago now. The "rain", I hate to I hate to even correct Kevin, because he's not wrong in what he says. He just I don't know, if he used the best choice of words, to say what he said, You know, there's no reason to doubt that they were way up high coming down. You know, that's the, that's, you know, the range of SPY-1. That's where it's supposed to look. That's where ballistic missiles travel is way up hot, you

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/Evp8_szUcAQbVK6.jpg

Kevin Day 0:38

Yeah, it was several days, we were operating off the coast of California in our in our military operating or doing, getting ready to go on deployment. And for several days, I've been watching these weird contexts off the off the coast of Catalina Island. And the reason why I say they were weird, is because our Ballistic Missile Defense guys was tracking these things coming down from outer space, I found out later, that wasn't the view that I had on my radar, I was I'm more concerned with 30,000 feet and below. And then we go from 80,000 feet then suddenly dropped to 28,000 feet. And they were going south at about 100 knots, which is really weird for something that high in the sky to go that slow. What the hell flies like that I'd been sitting behind that radar for 18 years on three different ships behind this SPY-1 radar. I had never seen anything fly like that. And I was convinced it was sort of a glitch in the system. I was like, Hey, we need to run diagnostics, reload the systems. And I wasn't really concerned from a defense point of view, because they, as far as I knew it was something entirely civilian, and they didn't know we were down there.

According to the survey by the American Enterprise Institute, 29% of Republicans believe the baseless claim that former President “Donald Trump has been secretly fighting a group of child sex traffickers that include prominent Democrats and Hollywood elites.” That’s the idea at the center of the false QAnon conspiracy theory, which has gained millions of supporters across the United States and was praised repeatedly by Trump.

Dalmia to build 0.5Mta carbon capture facility

By ICR Newsroom
20 September 2019

As part of its drive to become a carbon-negative by 2040, Dalmia Cement announced plans to build a 0.5Mta carbon capture facility at its cement plant in Tamil Nadu in 2-3 years.

"The company is committed to become 'carbon-negative by 2040', and capturing process emissions from cement manufacturing will be critical towards reaching the target of net zero by 2040," said Mahendra Singhi, MD and CEO, Dalmia Cement (Bharat) Ltd. The approach is to set up scalable large demonstration projects on carbon capture with multiple utilisation streams, he added.

"To achieve the target of being carbon negative by 2040, the company is planning to adopt 100 per cent renewable power under fossil-free electricity initiative by 2030, double energy productivity by 2030, and switch to renewable biomass bamboo and waste to replace fossil fuel by 2035," according to Mr Singhi.

@rjtklein @FHBBiermann Correct. My concern is that people would see tweets (or later media stories) about the experiment having "risks of catastrophic consequences", combined with a photo of a volcano, and assume the experiment entailed physical risk.

My issue here is framing the experiment itself as if it will have some actual immediate physical effect. The open letter did not do that. The press release photo (and your tweet) would likely lead to misunderstanding cap. They flew at 20,000 feet and were flying a max endurance profile at approximately 300 knots ground speed.

All on board systems were functioning normally. The radar was in a standard search mode (RWS/ 80NM/ 4bar/ intr) and the FLIR was in L+S slave (the FLIR would point in direction of an L+S track). There was no radio or communication interference and they had entry into the Link-16 network. Initial awareness of an object came via the radar. According to the radar display, the initial tracks were at approximately 30-40 nm to the south of the aircraft. LT [redacted] was controlling the radar and FLIR and attempted multiple times to transition the radar to Single Target Track (STT) mode on the object. The radar could not take a lock, the b-sweep would raster around the hit, build an initial aspect vector (which never stabilized) and then would drop and continue normal RWS b-sweep. When asked, LT [redacted] stated that there were no jamming cues (strobe, champagne bubbles, "any normal EA indications"). It "just appeared as if the radar couldn't hack it." The radar couldn't receive enough information to create a single target track file. The FLIR, in L+S slave, pointed in direction of the initial track flies as the radar attempted lock. The FLIR showed an object at 0 ATA and approximately -5deg elevation (Figure 2). According to LT [redacted], "the target was best guess co-altitude or a few thousand feet below," estimating the object to be between 15-20 thousand feet. The object, according to the FLIR, appeared stationary (Figure 3). There was no discernable movement from the object with the only closure being a result of the aircraft's movement. As LT [redacted] watched the object it began to move out of FLIR field of view to the left. LT [redacted] made no attempt to slew the FLIR and subsequently lost situational awareness to the object. The Flight continued with training mission with no further contact with object.

@ryan_ha @discernment_dr It would certainly raise concerns. But it sure would be interesting.

Most likely we'll discover life that is far away (and long ago). But, theoretically, the motherships might arrive at any moment!

@ryan_ha Everything is in the realm of possibility.

Maybe, someone, is concerned flights adjacent to MOAs might record something classified. But, heck, planes have windows. Passengers have GPS-enabled 4K cameras, so you'd think they would have that covered already.

@cmnit I understand. However, my concern here is the framing of the experiment itself as having possibly catastrophic consequences.

@Oswald1160 @human_wavfunctn @GeezerSqueezer @Deardenpad @benjimaan22 @TheProjectUnity @EricRWeinstein It's also not the exhaust in the sense of looking at a cone of hot gasses behind the plane. It's looking UP the tailpipe into the very hottest part of the jet. Like in the first few seconds of this FLIR vide.

The first SCoPEx test flight will do nothing. Later tests may spray a few pounds of essentially harmless dust. It raises no local "risks of catastrophic consequences"

As the first physical atmospheric SRM test it does raise big global questions. But this test won't damage Sweden https://twitter.com/FHBBiermann/status/1367133877194665989

@discernment_dr It is unresolved. But GOFAST isn't going fast. GIMBAL is not rotating. FLIR1 makes no sudden moves.

Those are things that can be analyzed and resolved, and things that many UFO boosters have @FourPhilly @GeezerSqueezer @Deardenpad @benjimaan22 @TheProjectUnity @EricRWeinstein No, the camera rotates (gimbal limits), causing the horizon to rotate relative to the glare. A derotation mechanism adjusts the horizon to be stable, which the causes the glare to appear to rotate.

@AdmiralQuality @gummibear737 It would get a significant percentage.

The key things it would give you would be a precise time, location, and heading of the observation. If a good camera is used then it should show what the pilot sees - like a "cylinder" or whatever.

@AdmiralQuality @gummibear737 The point here is that pilots report VISUAL observations that don't get recorded in other ways (like the AA2292 sighting).

So we need a visual recording. Video. Dash Cam.

If we have that, AA2292 would have either been solved, or vastly more interesting.

EW Eric Weinstein 13:16

I mean, the key question would be, we've had the Pentagon release multiple videos of strange UFOs. That undermined a lot of us, I just think it's also really fascinating to talk about the fact that those of us who were trained to call BS on all of this stuff, just had the rug pulled out from under us by the Pentagon choosing to do this. And you know what the effect of that is, you've opened the door for every stupid theory, known to man, my aunt saw a ghost. Okay, now we're gonna have to listen to what? "Hey, the Pentagon used to deny it, then it turned out there were UFOs dude!" Whoever is in charge of lying to the public. They need a cost function that incorporates the damage and trust because I held this line that this was all garbage and all BS. Now, I don't know what to think.

@knightsabers01 @crackedscience Getting past value rigidity is something that really only comes with experience. You can talk about it, but you've got to actually do it.

I read "Zen and Art of Motorcycle Maintenance" as a teen. Mentioning it to @crackedscience reminds me of the huge influence it had on how I debug & debunk. "Peace of mind", but also the notions of "gumption", "value rigidity", and "premature diagnosis" https://www.mcgill.ca/oss/article/critical-thinking-pseudoscience/zen-and-art-talking-conspiracy-theorists http://pbs.twimg.com/media/EvPygJGVEAA1gv0.jpg

Well, those were the commonest setbacks I can think of: out-of-sequence reassembly, intermittent failure and parts problems. But although setbacks are the commonest gumption traps they're only the external cause of gumption loss. Time now to consider some of the internal gumption traps that operate at the same time.

As the course description of gumptionology indicated, this internal part of the field can be broken down into three main types of internal gumption traps: those that block affective understanding, called "value traps"; those that block cognitive understanding, called "truth traps"; and those that block psychomotor behavior, called "muscle traps." The value traps are by far the largest and the most dangerous group.

Of the value traps, the most widespread and pernicious is value rigidity. This is an inability to revalue what one sees because of commitment to previous values. In motorcycle maintenance, you must rediscover what you do as you go. Rigid values make this impossible.

The typical situation is that the motorcycle doesn't work. The facts are there but you don't see them. You're looking right at them, but they don't yet have enough value. This is what Phaedrus was talking about. Quality, value, creates the subjects and objects of the world. The facts do not exist until value has created them. If your values are rigid you can't really leam new facts.

This often shows up in premature diagnosis, when you're sure you know what the trouble is, and then when it isn't, you're stuck. Then you've got to find some new clues, but before you can find them you've got to clear your head of old opinions. If you're plagued with value rigidity you can fail to see the real answer even when it's staring you right in the face because you can't see the new answer's importance.

The birth of a new fact is always a wonderful thing to experience. It's dualistically called a "discovery" because of the presumption that it has an existence independent of anyone's awareness of it. When it comes along, it always has, at first, a low value. Then, depending on the value-looseness of the observer and the potential quality of the fact, its value increases, either slowly or rapidly, or the value wanes and the fact disappears.

Ariel School UFO Sighting Video: Production Underway in 2007

In 1994, Harvard Professor of Psychiatry John E. Mack, M.D. traveled to Zimbabwe with research associate Dominique Callimanopulos to study one of the most extraordinary sightings of a UFO in recent times. At the Ariel School in Ruwa, Zimbabwe, sixty-two children between the ages of eight and twelve reported seeing a UFO and “strange beings” during morning recess.

In 2007, on behalf of the John E. Mack Institute, Dominique Callimanopulos will undertake production of a non-commercial, edited video program presenting John Mack’s interviews with the schoolchildren and faculty.

These interviews constitute one of the most impressive UFO sighting and alien encounter cases in recent history, and serve as an exemplary demonstration of the interviewing skills and sensitivity John Mack exercised when working with people reporting extraordinary experiences.

The goal of producing this video program is to preserve the historical record of this compelling case in a format that can be accessible to students and educators.

The program is being made from original Betacam footage that was shot between November 28 and December 6, 1994.

Randy Nickerson, Editor
Randy Nickerson has worked on both sides of the camera, as an actor and a filmmaker. He has a keen interest in the human condition and trauma recovery. His most recent work includes a film, titled "A Silence in the Heard", about the significance of listening and silence on an interpersonal and global level. Randy is a graduate of the Institute of Core Energetics, an evolutionary body therapy training that integrates all aspects of humanity - the emotional, physical, intellectual, and spiritual. He is currently a faculty member at the institute and has a private practice in New York City. Randy is also a classical pianist and nature photographer.

The closest they get is about 33,000 feet horizontally, with a 5,000 feet vertical difference. Closer than the Zion misidentification (42,000 feet away, 15,000 feet vertical)

5,000 in 33,000 is looking about 9 degrees at the closest point, less before and after that.

@mark58329831 @MusicAndTruth Of course, you can also say something true that is backed by mistaken justification (an unjustified true belief). That's not important. The issue is why some people seem blind to the possibility that a false statement is not a lie if the person saying it believes it to be true.

@Borders750 @Flyingh43892139 @steven_dor You would think so. It was broadcasting ADSB and presumably squawking something.

In other cases, pilots misinterpret where the object is relative to them, so even though the plane is on the display, they eliminate it as being in the wrong place.

In UFO sightings by pilots, people often claim that a pilot "knows what a plane looks like" and would not mistake one for a UFO.

But it happens sometimes. Like MUFON case 105762, which was a plane, but was reported as a UFO. Even with video.

@DavegiudiceDave @PostDisclosure But have you ever seen a plane that was at such an angle that you could not identify it as a plane.

THE DESERT EMPIRE'S LEADING DAILY NEWSPAPER

O. 167 16 PAGES 2 SECTIONS Palm Springs, California, Tuesday, February 16, 1965 PRI

NEW YORK (UPI) — Three members of a Negro terrorist group and an attractive Canadian girl were seized today and charged with plotting to dynamite three of the nation's most famous symbols of freedom — the Statue of Liberty, the Liberty Bell and the Washington Monument.

Authorities identified the three men as members of the black liberation front, described as a 10-member "terrorist organization" with ties to both black supremist groups and pro-Castro Cubans.

Police swooped down on the three within hours after the girl, a 22-year-old television announcer from Quebec, smuggled the dynamite across the border from Canada in an automobile.

Authorities said the plot was uncovered by Police Officer Ray Wood of New York City's special undercover police unit who infiltrated the organization three months ago.

Could Have Succeeded

"Their mission could have very easily been accomplished if Wood hadn't infiltrated the group," said New York Police Commissioner Michael J. Murphy.

Murphy quoted one of the men as saying he wanted to "Knock the head and arms off that damned old bitch." This was a reference to the Statue of Liberty which stands in New York Harbor.

"We know they made contacts in other cities," Murphy said, but he didn't elaborate. The other alleged targets were located in Washington and Philadelphia.

Murphy said the girl smuggled the dyanmite into the city by automobile and buried it in a vacant lot in the Bronx before going to a hotel.

There she contacted Wood and other members of the organization.

Explosives are Located

Police found the cache of 22 sticks of dynamite and blasting caps buried in the Bronx lot and arrested one of the suspects there. The others were rounded up at various spots in the city.

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover said all four were charged with conspiring to dynamite the three structures — traditional symbols of liberty and freedom in the United States.

The arrests of the three Negro men and one white woman were made by FBI agents and New York City police.

There was no immediate word on whether others were implicated in the three-city plot.

The three men were identified as Robert Steele Collier, 28, a self-styled leader of the "Black Liberation Front"; Walter Augustus Bowe, 32, a Philadelphia native and pro-Castroite and Khaleel Sultarn Sayyed, 22, a Brooklyn native and graduate of Howard University School of Engineering in Washington.

The woman was identified as Michelle Duclos of Montreal, Canada, a member of a Quebec separatist party called Rassemblement Pour l'Independence.

Collier was said to have traveled to Cuba in 1964 with a student group in violation of a State Department travel ban.

blement Pour l'Independence.

Collier was said to have traveled to Cuba in 1964 with a student group in violation of a State Department travel ban.

Bowe was described as a judo instructor at a New York settlement house.

The arrests culminated an investigation which had been under way by city and federal authorities for some time.

An FBI spokesman said the four were arrested at different locations in New York City. A cache of dynamite and blasting caps was found buried in a lot at 609 West 239 St., in the Bronx.

This was only part of the explosives which the four had sought to acquire, authorities said.

January 25, 2011 TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN

I Raymond A. Wood being of sound mind and body wish to confess the following:

I was a black New York City undercover police officer from April 1964 through May of 1971. I participated in actions that in hindsight were deplorable and detrimental to the advancement of my own black people. My actions on behalf of the New York City Police Department (BOSSI) were done under duress and fear that if I did not follow the orders of my handlers I could face detrimental consequences. Presently, I am aging with failing health; recently I have learned of the death of Mr. Thomas Johnson and are deeply concerned that with my death his family will not be able exonerate him after being wrongly convicted in the killing of Malcolm X.

The Facts are as follows:

April 17, 1964. I was hired by the New York City police department. Without training I was immediately assigned to the BOSSI investigation unit.

My job was to infiltrate civil rights organizations throughout New York City, to find evidence of criminal activity, so the FBI could discredit and arrest its leaders.

After witnessing repeated brutality at the hands of my coworkers (Police), I tried to resign, Instead I was threatened with arrest by pinning marijuana and alcohol trafficking charges on me if I did not follow through with the assignments.

Under the direction of my handlers I was told to encourage leaders and members of civil rights groups to commit felonious acts.

The Statue of liberty bombing idea was created by my supervisor/handler. Using surveillance the agency learned that Bowe and Sayyed were key players in Malcom X's crowd control security detail. It was my assignment to draw the two men into a felonious federal crime, so that they could be arrested by the FBI and kept away from managing Malcolm X's Audubon Ballroom door security on February 21, 1965. On February 16, 1965 The Statue of Liberty plot was carried out and the men were arrested just days before the assassination of Malcolm. At that time I was not aware that Malcolm X was the target.

On February 21, 1965 I was ordered to be at the Audubon Ballroom, where I was identified by witnesses while leaving the scene. Thomas Johnson was later arrested and wrongfully convicted to protect my cover and the secrets of the FBI and NYPD.

I have placed my full confession into the care of my cousin Reginald Wood Jr. I have requested that this information be held until after I have passed away.

It is my hope, that this information is received with the understanding that I have carried these secrets with a heavy heart and remorsefully regret my participation in this matter.

Looks like Tom DeLonge's TTSA has abandoned any pretense of serious science and technology research and is reorganizing as an entertainment company.

1-U 1 form1-u.htm

To The Stars Academy of Arts and Science Inc.

TTSA now enters its natural evolution as a company as we adapt to a new global landscape with new opportunities and priorities. The COVID-19 global pandemic has had a significant and negative impact on the defense and entertainment industries, and on individual investors' willingness to invest in companies that are active in those industries, including TTSA. Taking into account the company's natural evolution and the changes in the business environment due to COVID-19, TTSA is looking to build on the momentum of business initiatives where we are seeing highest success and which are increasingly likely to yield shareholder value. To achieve its goals, TTSA has decided to restructure its operations to scale back its initiatives in science and tech commercialization and to place a greater emphasis on the operations of its entertainment business.

Further, as part of the restructuring, Stephen Justice, TTSA's Chief Operations Officer, Luis Elizondo, TTSA's Director of Government Programs & Services, and Christopher Mellon, a member of TTSA's advisory board, are no longer with the company. To keep in sync with TTSA's public benefit mission of informed entertainment media, the company plans to keep its science advisory board, whose connections will influence TTSA's stories for film, and to add a board member with expertise in the film industry.

Dear [redacted]

I watched your interview on "Unidentified" with great interest. I'm a writer and podcaster, and I've been following the Nimitz incident for some time. I also have a YouTube channel where I do some analysis of the Nimitz "Flir1" video, as well as "Gimbal" and "Go Fast"

The reason I'm contacting you is that there's a lot of confusion about exactly what was reported that day, in terms of things like timing, angles, sizes, relative positions, instrumentation, continuity, altitudes, and speeds, as well as the way things played out after you returned to the Nimitz.

Could you possibly spare some time for an interview on these topics? I'd love to do a podcast on it, with a deeper dive into the details. I will respect your anonymity, and will not edit anything out (unless you request specific edits). We can talk for as long as you like.

Regards,

All on board systems were functioning normally. The radar was in a standard search mode (RWS/ 80NM/ 4bar/ intr) and the FLIR was in L+S slave (the FLIR would point in direction of an L+S track). There was no radio or communication interference and they had entry into the Link-16 network. Initial awareness of an object came via the radar. According to the radar display, the initial tracks were at approximately 30-40 nm to the south of the aircraft. LT [redacted] was controlling the radar and FLIR and attempted multiple times to transition the radar to Single Target Track (STT) mode on the object. The radar could not take a lock, the b-sweep would raster around the hit, build an initial aspect vector (which never stabilized) and then would drop and continue normal RWS b-sweep. When asked, LT [redacted] stated that there were no jamming cues (strobe, champagne bubbles, "any normal EA indications"). It "just appeared as if the radar couldn't hack it." The radar couldn't receive enough information to create a single target track file. The FLIR, in L+S slave, pointed in direction of the initial track flies as the radar attempted lock. The FLIR showed an object at 0 ATA and approximately -5deg elevation (Figure 2). According to LT [redacted], "the target was best guess co-@RealCSharp @conorowens94 @Oswald1160 @hughespj1 @steven_nikolic @MarceloPLima @DrBrianKeating @lexfridman You seem to be confusing the Aguadilla case with the Chilean Navy case. Aguadilla was a US Coastguard plane filming lanterns.

Chilean Navy case was a Chilean Navy Helicopter filming a passenger plane.

Neither involved radar jamming. Both involved distance confusion.

That does not mean it (and other planes) did not show up on radar.

It just means that due to uncertainties of range and bearing, they don't know which plane it was.

It's not like it was just Underwood all by himself with no expected planes for a hundred miles.

@RealCSharp @Oswald1160 @conorowens94 @hughespj1 @steven_nikolic @MarceloPLima @DrBrianKeating @lexfridman It involved the ATC system of Santiago airport.

The key point is that the UFO/plane showed up on the radar just fine, and was identified. But the camera operators did not know what they were pointing their camera at, even after asking ATC.

I suspect something similar here.

@hughespj1 @steven_nikolic @Oswald1160 @RealCSharp @MarceloPLima @DrBrianKeating @lexfridman Sure they knew what that jet was, exactly the same as in the Chilean Navy case, where Santiago departure knew what IB6830 was. There was just a disconnect with the Navy chopper.

@hughespj1 @steven_nikolic @Oswald1160 @RealCSharp @MarceloPLima @DrBrianKeating @lexfridman Assuming they knew how far away it was.

There were many jets in the air, according to Kevin.

@conorowens94 @steven_nikolic @Oswald1160 @RealCSharp @hughespj1 @MarceloPLima @DrBrianKeating @lexfridman How does that square with Underwood losing what he had the camera pointed at?

https://twitter.com/_/status/1362573281132351490
@steven_nikolic @hughespj1 @Oswald1160 @RealCSharp @MarceloPLima @DrBrianKeating @lexfridman I think it's actually more likely that he filmed a distant fighter jet - part of the exercise. Just not where he thought it was.

@steven_nikolic @Oswald1160 @RealCSharp @hughespj1 @MarceloPLima @DrBrianKeating @lexfridman Oh, I've got plenty of reasonable theories. I think the radar glitch (maybe weather-related) hypothesis is perfectly reasonable for explaining the slowly drifting groups. I think Fravor saw something else, and Underwood filmed a plane

The "Burning Snow" thing started in 2014, and crops up whenever it snows somewhere unexpected. A butane lighter blackens snow because of soot. It's not burning it any more than it's burning this ice cube.

FAST EAGLES 110/100 UPON TAKE OFF WERE VECTORED BY PRINCETON AND BANGER (1410L) TO INTERCEPT UNID CONTACT AT 160@40NM (N3050.8 W11746.9) (NIMITZ N3129.3 W11752.8). PRINCETON INFORMED FAST EAGLES THAT THE CONTACT WAS MOVING AT 100 KTS @ 25KFT ASL.

FAST EAGLES (110/100) COULD NOT FIND UNID AIRBORNE CONTACT AT LOCATION GIVEN BY PRINCETON. WHILE SEARCHING FOR UNID AIR CONTACT, FAST EAGLES SPOTTED LARGE UNID OBJECT IN WATER AT 1430L. PILOTS SAW STEAM/ SMOKE/CHURNING AROUND OBJECT. PILOT DESCRIBES OBJECT INITIALLY AS RESEMBLING A DOWNED AIRLINER, ALSO STATED THAT IT WAS MUCH LARGER THAN A SUBMARINE.

WHILE DESCENDING FROM 24K FT TO GAIN A BETTER VIEW OF THE UNID CONTACT IN THE WATER, FAST EAGLE 110 SIGHTED AN AIRBORNE CONTACT WHICH APPEARED TO BE CAPSULE SHAPED (WINGLESS, MOBILE, WHITE, OBLONG PILL SHAPED, 25-30 FEET IN LENGTH, NO VISIBLE MARKINGS AND NO GLASS) 5NM WEST FROM POSITION OF UNID OBJECT IN WATER.

CAPSULE (ALT 4K FT AT COURSE 300) PASSED UNDER FAST EAGLE 110 (ALT 16KFT). FAST EAGLE 110 BEGAN TURN TO ACQUIRE CAPSULE. WHILE 110 WAS DESCENDING AND TURNING, CAPSULE BEGAN CLIMBING AND TURNED INSIDE OF FAST EAGLE'S TURN RADIUS. PILOT ESTIMATED THAT CAPSULE ACHIEVED 600-700 KTS. FAST EAGLE 110 COULD NOT KEEP UP WITH THE RATE OF TURN AND THE GAIN OF ALTITUDE BY THE CAPSULE. 110 LOST VISUAL ID OF CAPSULE IN HAZE. LAST VISUAL CONTACT HAD CAPSULE AT 14KFT HEADING DUE EAST.

NEITHER FAST EAGLES 110 OR 100 COULD ACHIEVE RADAR LOCK OR ANY OTHER MEANS OF POSITIVE ID. FAST EAGLE 100 WAS FLYING HIGH COVER AND SAW THE ENGAGEMENT BY FAST EAGLE 110. FAST EAGLE 100 CONFIRMS 110 VISUAL ID; 100 LOST CONTACT IN HAZE AS WELL.

CPA OF ACFT 110 FROM CONTACT 4000-5000 FT.

@hughespj1 So when you said "Fravor or other inaccurate information" you are just referring to his recollection that the tapes/bricks were simply erased or reused, not removed unexpectedly?

@hughespj1 @ExoExplorer3 @Oswald1160 @steven_nikolic @MarceloPLima @DrBrianKeating @lexfridman That seems VERY significant. If they were actively emitting signals that were detected by the ESM then that's a whole different ball-game compared with just radar returns. Is there anyone who could give more details?

@ExoExplorer3 @hughespj1 @Oswald1160 @steven_nikolic @MarceloPLima @DrBrianKeating

@lexfridman That's talking about a visual sighting, although he mentions "the systems that tracked it" - it's not clear if that includes radar.

@RealCSharp @hughespj1 @conorowens94 @Oswald1160 @steven_nikolic @MarceloPLima @DrBrianKeating @lexfridman Trust, yet verify.

Experts are great, and certainly, in the absence of anything else, I'd accept an expert opinion. However, I've seen many experts make mistakes, and even totally misunderstand things. So I think it's worth trying to understand and verify their explanations.

2021-02-16T16:25:23+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/1361713295850229762

@buffcommacu @hughespj1 @MarceloPLima @conorowens94 @Oswald1160 @RealCSharp @steven_nikolic @DrBrianKeating @lexfridman Of course I allow it to be "real". I think that because there were reports from two planes, then it's almost certain there was a physical object there.

The question is: did it move hypersonically and was it related to the slow-moving radar groups?

https://twitter.com/_/status/1361712536064692228

@hughespj1 @Oswald1160 @steven_nikolic @MarceloPLima @DrBrianKeating @lexfridman When was the Hawkeye tracking something? Kevin says Princeton took over controlling Fravor because the group of five ONLY showed up on Princeton's radar, not the Hawkeye.

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/EuXGRxCUUAITwVS.jpg

Kevin Day 20:54

Well, we didn't have the airwing available to us, until the very last part of this encounter. And as soon as I, as soon as I, as soon as I had aircraft that I can use, I talked to commander Smith, I said, Hey, sir, you know, been tracking the things for several days, and no one in the strike group has any idea what these are. And I, we're getting ready to do a big air defense exercise, we're going to launch a bunch of aircraft off the beach, and we're going to launch our guys, a mock air battle in that same piece of sky. So now I'm concerned about safety of flight. Because I've got these unknown objects, right in our playground area. And I strongly recommend we go intercept one and see what they are. So if there's not some sort of an error, error mishap, because if there is, you can ask both you and me we were so damaged, curious. And he looks at me, he goes, you're right. So your chief intercept one. And that that's how commander, Fast Equal's up. Fast Eagle 01. He was the first one to launch. And we immediately took him under control because EW Hawkeye radar ??? did not have any radar on these things, only we did. And we drove them to the closest contact. And that's when it all happens.

Mick West 22:11

So say 10 days earlier, let's say, it happened on the 14th. And you saw on the first on the fourth. Like, why? I mean, wasn't it wasn't that serious, though?

@hughespj1 @conorowens94 @Oswald1160 @RealCSharp @steven_nikolic @MarceloPLima @DrBrianKeating @lexfridman Kevin is still seeing an interpretation of the raw return signals by the system. Until Fravor reported eyes-on, Kevin thought (for scores of observations over 8 days) that it might be a system malfunction.
http://pbs.twimg.com/media/EuXEOFQVoAM6X57.jpg

Mick West 24:17

And, and you still, I guess you're still thinking it might be radar glitches at that point.

Kevin Day 24:24

I totally thought that that is what it was. leading up to that whole, leading up to that day. I either thought it was something entirely civilian related. I didn't even know we were down there. None of our business type of thing. Or I thought it was some sort of system malfunction.

Mick West 24:42

Right.

Kevin Day 24:43

I definitely wasn't thinking UFOs, trust me on that. That was Yeah, wasn't really my thought process at the time who I would have laughed back, if someone would have said that. I would have laughed.

@officer_pinky @uFo_dis_ci_ple Memory changes over time, this is true. But the closer you are to the event the better the memories.

@RealCSharp @steven_nikolic @Oswald1160 @hughespj1 @MarceloPLima @DrBrianKeating @lexfridman There was no observation of the actual maneuvering. In fact, Kevin's recollection seems to differ quite radically from Fravor's - in that he describes an encounter at co-altitude. The radar did not (as he recalls) pick up any of the rapid changes in direction.

@alo_pumpa There's new information, but it seems conflicting with other accounts. So it raises a lot of questions.

My #1 theory about the entire event is pretty much the same. But there are lots of unknowns - and probably unknowables.

@dave_beaty @Oswald1160 @steven_nikolic @hughespj1 @MarceloPLima @DrBrianKeating @lexfridman Kevin remembers it as his control sending Underwood - then it was a bit chaotic, with other planes not under his control possibly doing intercepts, and then they canceled the exercise and had everything return home. And then Underwood went to the same group for five for "almost a merge plot" on one of them

1 - 5 NM from merge-plot

2 - Immediately after merge plot, at 28,000 (or 20,000) feet? Before it dove towards the disturbance?

3 - After merge plot, but at sea level?

@steven_nikolic @Oswald1160 @hughespj1 @MarceloPLima @DrBrianKeating @lexfridman I'm not being snarky. I'm being clear. I think when something cannot be identified, then it's generally too far away.

There are limits to all technologies. If Underwood got closer to the object (and why did he not?) then the video blob mystery would likely be resolved.

Kissing on the lips (a peck, not making out) within families is a culturally variable thing, more common in Europe, but also widespread in the US.

Kevin Day says that Fravor told him (and radar verified) that the first contact with the Tic-Tac was co-altitude, and that it was part of a group of five. @ThanosAlpha @SicCoP1 @TheChilterns @RobAgs0817 I don't think the content of that briefing was nonsense. I think it was tinged with nonsense, but there are real issues of unidentified airspace incursions that are a serious national security concern.

@MarceloPLima @DrBrianKeating @lexfridman The unusual "radar evidence" is all anecdotal, conflicting (was it a descent from outer space, or 28,000 feet?), and mostly over a decade before being written down. It would be great to attempt to resolve it, but you'd need primary sources, like Kevin Day.

https://twitter.com/_/status/1360301973250076672

@steven_nikolic @MarceloPLima @DrBrianKeating @lexfridman I think you are making some significant assumptions about what "the issue" is there. The military simply describes it as "unidentified airspace incursions" - which includes (their example) quadcopter drones.

If "the issue" was "looks like new physics", then yes.

But no.

@RagnarSpock @g_knapp @flarkey You're thinking of the same video. You've just been fooled by parallax.

Hiring a plane with a thermal camera and messing around with lanterns for days trying to get the right image might be something a TV production company could do. But not me.

Seattle's New Year Eve celebration was virtual. If you looked at the Space Needle it would just look lit with a purple light. Online it seemed surrounded by an amazing hologram. This led some to fear it was a test of technology to simulate a UFO invasion.

I was wrong about this case. My #1 explanation was that it was a hoax. Initial reporting was all poor-quality phone video, and photos that didn't show the cranes. It also seemed too high to be a projection. But the technology was sufficiently advance (and better photos arrived)

Ashley Vanderbilt's story of her journey down the QAnon rabbit hole (and her escape) is a great example of the role of isolation and inactivity. Stuck at home during the pandemic, a lot of people got sucked in, in part, because they had no-one to talk to and nothing better to do @Bhima_Jenkins @Spootums @BlueshiftRadio @Th_Unidentified There is no distinct cloud pattern in that video.

However, if you single-step through it, you will see a region of light coming in from the top right as the object moves off the bottom left.

The Dodger Stadium Covid-19 vaccination site was briefly shut down by anti-vax protestors. This was organized by "Stand for Freedom Now" - an eccentric group who think the vaccine is part of a "transhumanist agenda" http://pbs.twimg.com/media/EtBMcmIUYAENjcW.jpg

If you make your own sign consider using short simple messages relevant to the COVID testing and vax center with clear bold type for example:

"COVID Tests = Unproven Inaccurate Nonsense"

"COVID Vax = A Bizarre Experiment"

"The C.D.C. Admits the COVID Test Is Inaccurate"

"COVID Vaccine Makers Are Exempt From Liability When They Make You Sick"

"The Media Is Lying To You About COVID"

Flyers: We'll be providing flyers for all protesters to hand out.

After the protest event we'll be having an after hours flyering action for an hour where we go out into the general area around the protest location and pass flyers out on parked cars and to passers by.

Day: This Saturday the 30th of January 2021
Time: 12pm-3pm (Plus an after hours flyering action in the area for those that want to join)
Location: In the Echo Park area of metro Los Angeles at the corner of Sunset Blvd & Vin Scully. We'll be meeting and protesting at this corner from 12 noon to 3pm. If you need directions to the general area refer to this page on the Dodger's website.
Parking: There is plenty of free or very cheap coin metered street parking in the area.

CARPOOL INFO: SFFN Planning Committee leader Paulette is offering to connect people who're going to the protest who're interested in carpooling with each other. If you're interested in carpooling you can e-mail Paulette at: paulettenavarro@yahoo.com She'll get back to you asap with more info about others in your area who you can carpool with.

Signs: Bring your own protest sign if you have the time to make one, or use one of the dozens of pre-made protest signs that our group will bring.

@RichardGriffs It's 85% effective in preventing severe disease after 28 days. 72% Moderate to severe in the US. 66% worldwide.

Actual J&J statement:

https://www.jnj.com/johnson-johnson-announces-single-shot-janssen-covid-19-vaccine-candidate-met-primary-endpoints-in-interim-analysis-of-its-phase-3-ensemble-trial

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/Es6mHSpUYAgPyOn.jpg

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J., January 29, 2021 – Johnson & Johnson (NYSE: JNJ) (the Company) today announced topline efficacy and safety data from the Phase 3 ENSEMBLE clinical trial, demonstrating that the investigational single-dose COVID-19 vaccine in development at its Janssen Pharmaceutical Companies met all primary and key secondary endpoints. The topline safety and efficacy data are based on 43,783 participants accruing 468 symptomatic cases of COVID-19.

The Phase 3 ENSEMBLE study is designed to evaluate the efficacy and safety of the Janssen COVID-19 vaccine candidate in protecting moderate to severe COVID-19, with co-primary endpoints of 14 days and 28 days following vaccination. Among all participants from different geographies and including those infected with an emerging viral variant, Janssen's COVID-19 vaccine candidate was 66% effective overall in preventin moderate to severe COVID-19, 28 days after vaccination. The onset of protection was observed as early as day 14. The level of protection against moderate to severe COVID-19 infection was 72% in the United States, 66% in Latin America and 57% in South Africa, 28 days post-vaccination.

Prevention of severe disease; protection against COVID-related hospitalization and death

The vaccine candidate was 85 percent effective in preventing severe disease across all regions studied, [i] 28 days after vaccination in all adults 18 years and older. Efficacy against severe disease increased over time with no cases in vaccinated participants reported after day 49.

The Janssen COVID-19 vaccine candidate demonstrated complete protection against COVID-related hospitalization and death, 28 days post-vaccination. There was a clear effect of the vaccine on COVID-19 cases requiring medical intervention (hospitalization, ICU admission, mechanical ventilation, extracorporeal membrane oxygenation (ECMO), with no reported cases among participants who had received the Janssen COVID-19 vaccine, 28 days post-vaccination.

@Alien_Scientist Of course, facts can prove a conspiracy exists. Conspiracies are very real and happen all the time.

@TyrannyCounter @ConspiracyBull1 Still, there's enough out there that just looking at the stuff that HAS been debunked should give one pause, if actually open-minded.

@19Nimbus @UFO_Researchers @hovebooks @IanC42188964 @UFO_Researcher @IWANTTOKNOWUK Huh, a narrow field of view won't make a difference.

If the view axis remains parallel, then small movements of the camera will have a huge effect on things close to it (eg 1-10 cm), but very little on things far away (10-100m)

Fact-based debunking works when people are ready for it.

Creating factual debunkings of claims might not seem like it has any immediate effect, but it's a resource that needs to be there when people reach the tipping point.

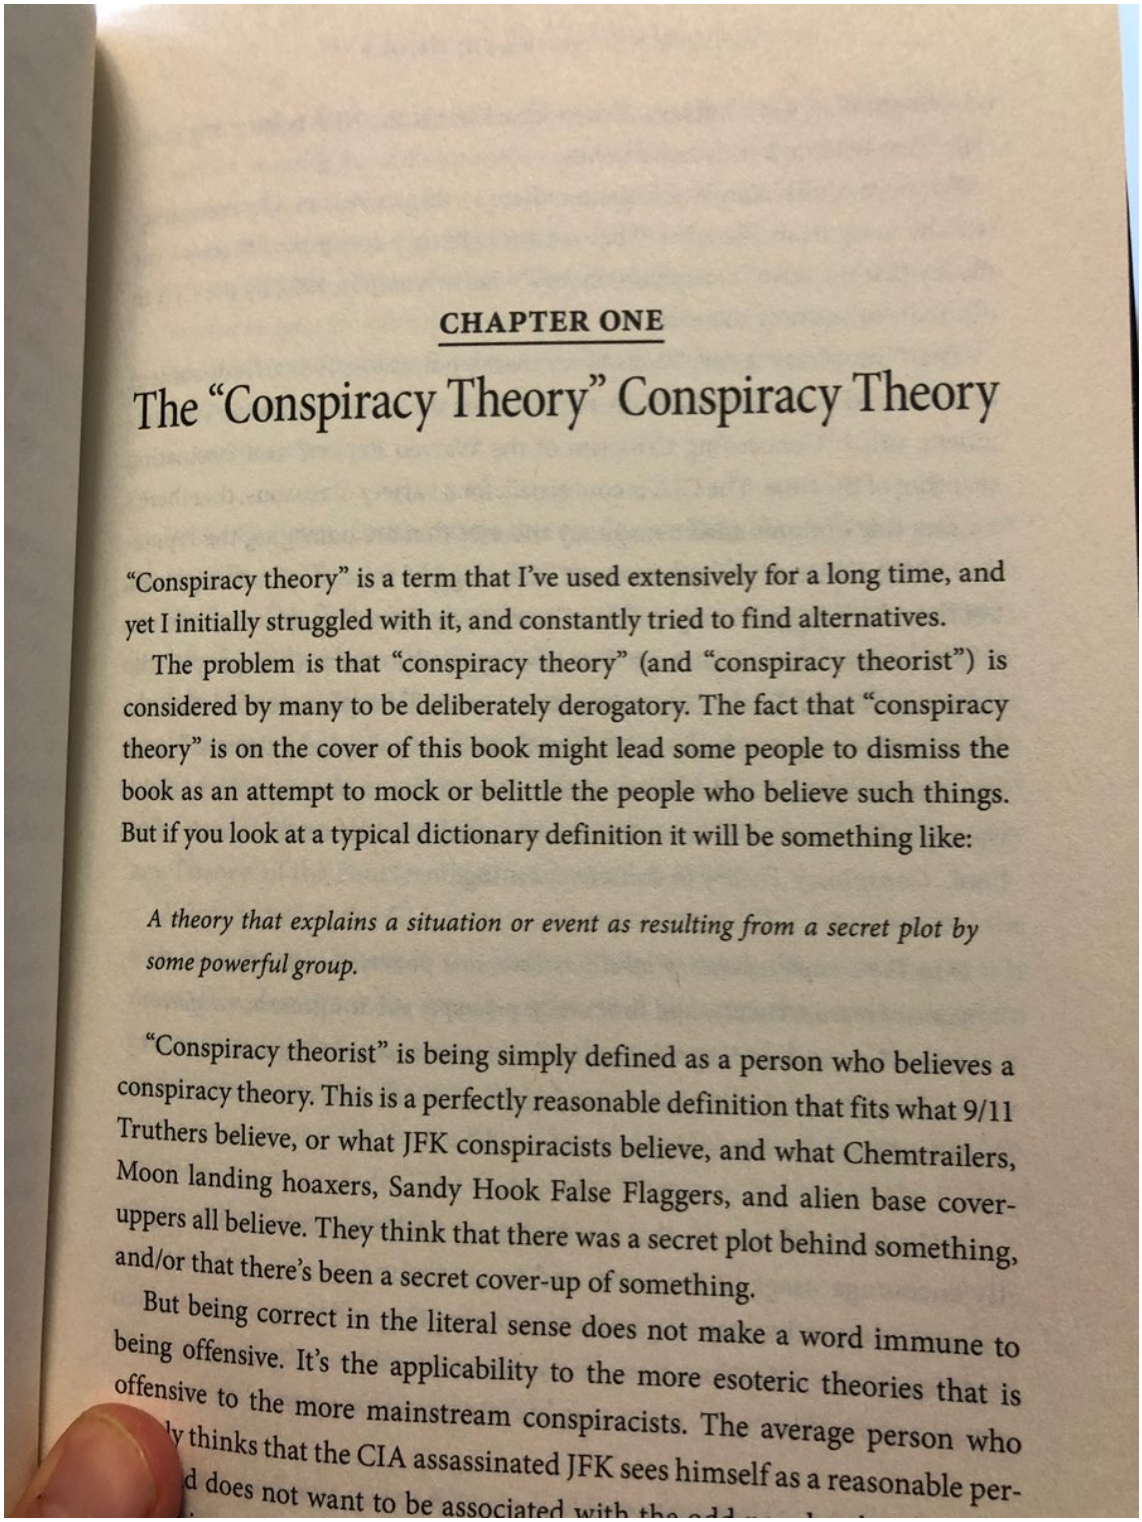
@AdventuresMixed I wrote a chapter on it. http://pbs.twimg.com/media/EsIAcWRU0AEdfUM.jpg



CHAPTER ONE

The "Conspiracy Theory" Conspiracy Theory

"Conspiracy theory" is a term that I've used extensively for a long time, and yet I initially struggled with it, and constantly tried to find alternatives.

The problem is that "conspiracy theory" (and "conspiracy theorist") is considered by many to be deliberately derogatory. The fact that "conspiracy theory" is on the cover of this book might lead some people to dismiss the book as an attempt to mock or belittle the people who believe such things. But if you look at a typical dictionary definition it will be something like:

A theory that explains a situation or event as resulting from a secret plot by some powerful group.

"Conspiracy theorist" is being simply defined as a person who believes a conspiracy theory. This is a perfectly reasonable definition that fits what 9/11 Truthers believe, or what JFK conspiracists believe, and what Chemtrailers, Moon landing hoaxers, Sandy Hook False Flaggers, and alien base cover-uppers all believe. They think that there was a secret plot behind something, and/or that there's been a secret cover-up of something.

But being correct in the literal sense does not make a word immune to being offensive. It's the applicability to the more esoteric theories that is offensive to the more mainstream conspiracists. The average person who ly thinks that the CIA assassinated JFK sees himself as a reasonable per-d does not want to be associated with the

It's often falsely claimed the phrase "conspiracy theory" was invented after JFK's assassination in 1963 to discredit conspiracy theories.

Yet here's a 1962 columnist using the phrase quite naturally, in its modern context.

The Daily PRINCETONIAN

Thoughts Between Seattle and Walter Schirra

By DENNIS LIVINGSTON

I sit listening to the broadcast of Walter Schirra's orbital flight around the earth, and I try to comprehend the scientific and organizational effort that went into placing one disembodied voice into space. But of course it's all too vast—the mind can barely take in the fact that between one commercial and the next, a man may travel across half a continent. And in mulling over such facts and their implications I think back over the few days I spent during the summer viewing one immense and costly effort to popularize science, the United States Science Exhibit at the World's Fair.

Well, it was a good try. The U. S. and such other "nations" as Bell Telephone, General Electric, and IBM built their places of science, ringed them with burbling fountains and clean rest rooms, and stuffed them with the latest wonders that are guaranteed to make the future American's life anything but nasty, brutish, and short. We were properly awed by the large model of a Saturn rocket emitting dinosaur-type noises every few minutes, silenced at the wonder of a computer adding up figures spoken into it by a technician, pleased at the sight of a pretty girl demonstrating the razzle-dazzle of a modern laboratory and its mysterious experiments, bewildered as a pleasant guide explained in some language that sounded very close to English how a concentrated light beam was going to revolutionize everything you could think of, and amused at the sight of baby monkeys making faces at the tourists. I recall how, after taking this all in, I finally came upon the last room in the U. S. exhibit, in which, to the accompaniment of stereophonic music and wide screen film, the visitor is informed that the way in which all these scientific marvels are to be used rests with him.

I almost broke into laughter at this. For me, the fair had emphasized two factors which I don't think were intended to be stressed. First was how really incomprehensible are the workings and social effects of the inventions and theories of science to the average citizen. One did not have to be a poll-taker to notice the blank looks on most people's faces as they wandered around the flashing lights and complicated diagrams that enhanced most of the presentations. It was clearer than ever that our society may not only face more technological unemployment as time goes on, but a certain "mental unemployment" which is the result of the incapacity of even the well educated man to understand exactly what affects his daily life.

Second, and a corollary to this, is the obvious fact that into the vacuum must step, whether they like it or not, those who are responsible for keeping the wheels (or microwaves) of technology going. I imply no ridiculous conspiracy theory, but state the simple opinion that our political executives must necessarily entrust ultimate decision-making power to those "advisers" whose technological knowledge enables the decisions to be carried out.

If the solution to this lies in more education for the people, whatever that means, then fine. But it is unfortunate that the fair concentrated almost exclusively on the marvels of science, paying scant attention to their social effects.

@johnpeart1 Yes, it's from a set of precincts that have historically voted 90% Democratic. Cities do that. Detroit in this case, I think.

@Paranormal_PI @zcichy I think that individual observation is best explained by a radar glitch. i.e. a false return that first gave one altitude, and then another. I asked Kevin Day if there were intermediate readings, and did not get a clear answer, but he did not rule out the possibility of a glitch.

Belief in QAnon

QAnon, a far-right conspiracy theory about “deep state elites” has extensive support among Republican voters. One in three Republicans (33%) believe that the QAnon theory is mostly true. Another 23% of Republicans say that some parts of the QAnon conspiracy are true. Only 13% of Republicans think that it is not true at all. In contrast, 72% of Democrats say the QAnon conspiracy theory is not true at all.

Awareness of QAnon has grown substantially since one year ago. In July 2019, 35% of Americans had never heard of QAnon -- that number has fallen to 14% now. For Republicans, greater awareness has led to greater support. The percentage of Republicans who believe that the QAnon theory is partially or mostly true has grown from 46% one year ago to 56% today.

On July 15, 2022, Deputy Secretary of Defense Kathleen Hicks, in coordination with the Director of National Intelligence (DNI), amended her original direction to the Under Secretary of Defense for Intelligence & Security by renaming and expanding the scope of the Airborne Object Identification and Management Group (AOIMSG) to the All-domain Anomaly Resolution Office (AARO), due to the enactment of the National Defense Authorization Act for fiscal 2022, which included a provision to establish an office, in coordination with DNI, with responsibilities that were broader than those originally assigned to the AOIMSG.

Today, USD(I&S) Hon. Ronald S. Moultrie informed the department of the establishment of AARO within the Office of the Under Secretary of Defense for Intelligence and Security, and named Dr. Sean M. Kirkpatrick, most recently the chief scientist at the Defense Intelligence Agency's Missile and Space Intelligence Center, as the director of AARO.

It's a problem because it seems like NASA and the UAP task force / AOIMSG are being advised based on bad science. The SCU Aguadilla report shows an entirely erroneous understanding of parallax. Their Nimitz report claims extreme acceleration where there is none.

The new FOIA drop also contains an invite to a virtual event entitled "Extreme Acceleration by UAPs," scheduled for October 6, 2020, that was forwarded between NASA employees. The invite said the presentation would be delivered by Robert Powell, Executive Board member of the Scientific Coalition for UAP Studies (SCU), with an introduction from Chris Mellon, former Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense for Intelligence.

"During our session, Robert will be discussing 'Extreme Acceleration by UAPs and Sensors for Detection,'" according to the invite. "He will also be exploring a few relevant cases, including Stephenville and Puerto Rico. Robert has been an important leader, for some years now, among those seeking to bring serious scientific expertise and processes to bear on the UAP phenomenon."

@TheGuitarPhilo1 @ExploreSCU @rpowell2u @alejandrotrojas The issue here is the fact that Appendix L in the SCU Aguadilla report is 100% incorrect and should have been removed years ago. Its continued publication reflects badly on SCU.

I thought I was being generous giving SCU a year to fix their Appendix L issue (i.e it being entirely wrong). But it turns out the problem was explained to them SEVEN YEARS AGO, by Tim Printy of SUNLite magazine.

How can anyone consider this acceptable? http://pbs.twimg.com/media/FX-SuPYUUAA1ukm.jpg

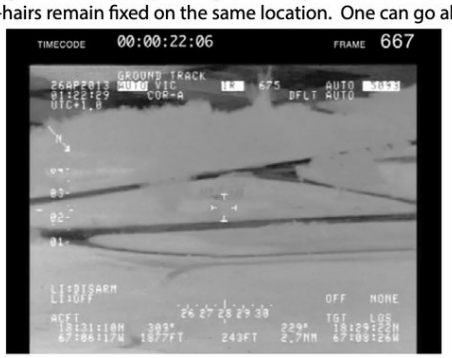
The SCU report devoted a section, appendix L, to demonstrate that the object was not a balloon. The arguments presented in this section are essentially based on one measurement that appears to be flawed.

The SCU team picked frames 711 and 712 from the video to make their main argument.[13] According to them, the background is stationary, which means the object is the only thing moving. I thought this calculation made a bad assumption because it did not appear to account for the plane's motion. The plane was moving so the only way the background could be stationary is for the camera to compensate for this motion by rotating. Mr. Michaud pointed out to me that when one examines the relative bearing reading on the video clip during the time period, the relative bearing indicator and the azimuth on the display changed while the cross-hairs remain fixed on the same location. One can go all the way back to frame 667 to see this.[14]



If the camera is moving to compensate for the plane's movement, then any motion of the UAP in the video could be related to the motion of the camera/plane and not the UAP itself. If the UAP were closer to the plane than the background and stationary (or relatively stationary), then the UAP would appear to move. The closer the object is to the camera, the greater amount of motion. The concept is called parallax and one can see it illustrated in this image (I exaggerated the angles in order to demonstrate the effect):

https://twitter.com/_/status/1549113178881028097

A year later I asked Powell about it again, and he denied it was wrong!

It's wrong. The entire appendix needs to be deleted. This does not reflect well on the rest of the report or the validity of their peer review process. Or SCU's general academic rigor

https://twitter.com/rpowell2u/status/1547297916758409216

2022-07-18T19:19:22+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/1549111604947537921

A bunch of 10th-grade level math, all essentially correct, but with one error in the inputs. This makes the ENTIRE appendix wrong, numbers off by an order of magnitude (8Â° vs. 68Â°)

Why has it not been removed? Was there no peer review? I pointed this out a year ago.

2022-07-18T19:14:18+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/1549110330172645377

However, SCU uses the incorrect claim that there's zero parallax across those frames to calculate a distance to the object of 1250 feet, based on a maximum wind speed of 18mph. They then show this is impossible based on azimuth changes.

2022-07-18T19:11:57+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/1549109739694395392

@ExploreSCU @rpowell2u @alejandrotrojas The mistake is the claim that since the background does not move from frame 711 to 712, then all the motion of the object is its own motion, not parallax.

But the plane does not stop in mid-air, the parallax component is the same from frame to frame. It's not zero. http://pbs.twimg.com/media/FX-K3nVUcAAACK0.jpg

Introduction

Some arguments have been advanced that the object could be a balloon and that the motion of the balloon relative to the background is an illusion created by the motion of the plane circling the balloon. This is incorrect. There are some frames of video having no background motion at all and the UAP can be seen changing locations relative to the background. Consider Frames 711 and 712 of Figure 1:

Figure 1 clearly demonstrates the intrinsic motion of the UAP and that the motion of the plane from one frame to the next contributes nothing to the difference in the location of the UAP. This, in itself, does not eliminate the possibility of a balloon since a balloon could have drifted into the frames due to its own motion.

Question for @exploreSCU, @rpowell2u, @alejandrotrojas,

Appendix L of your Aguadilla report is objectively wrong, built upon a mistake, and GIGOed from there.

So why has it not been removed? Why no corrections? And how did it pass peer review?

@FoxCrow5 Yes, that's what the video is about, the specific case I describe from Twitter.

@uelbus It was actually somewhat new to me - the key thing seems to be digital image stabilization keeping the tree from moving. I might make a video about how that works later.

@JLuvin @therealpmoney If you "Save page as", "HTML Only" you'll get a local file, looking like the attached image. You can edit this, and load it locally into your browser (and set a bookmark). You will have to adjust the zoom level and have the Ignore X-Frame extension.

@Itsaufobro If you see what looks like a featureless white blob moving in a plane-like manner, then don't you ASSUME it's a plane?

It's a perfectly good assumption of course, but a lot of people don't have your experience, @Itsaufobro This isn't about Fravor's sighting. I open with that to explain the prevalence of the term "Tic-Tac" for UFOs like this.

That was a mistake on my part, I forget most people don't watch the video. I should have opened with a plane-behind-tree video.

> County registrars and absentee ballot clerks are required, upon receipt of each mail-in absentee ballot, to compare the signature or mark of the elector on the mail-in absentee ballot envelope with the signatures or marks in eNet and on the application for the mail-in absentee ballot. If the signature does not appear to be valid, registrars and clerks are required to follow the procedure set forth in O.C.G.A. § 21-2-386(a)(1)(C). When reviewing an elector's signature on the mail-in absentee ballot envelope, the registrar or clerk must compare the signature on the mail-in absentee ballot envelope to each signature contained in such elector's voter registration record in eNet and the elector's signature on the application for the mail-in absentee ballot. If the registrar or absentee ballot clerk determines that the voter's signature on the mail-in absentee ballot envelope does not match any of the voter's signatures on file in eNet or on the absentee ballot application, the registrar or absentee ballot clerk must seek review from two other registrars, deputy registrars, or absentee ballot clerks. A mail-in absentee ballot shall not be rejected unless a majority of the registrars, deputy registrars, or absentee ballot clerks reviewing the signature agree that the signature does not match any of the voter's signatures on file in eNet or on the absentee ballot application. If a determination is made that the elector's signature on the mail-in absentee ballot envelope does not match any of the voter's signatures on file in eNet or on the absentee ballot application, the registrar or absentee ballot clerk shall write the names of the three elections officials who conducted the signature review across the face of the absentee ballot envelope, which shall be in addition to writing "Rejected" and the reason for the rejection as required under OCGA 21-2-386(a)(1)(C). Lana Del Rey album Chemtrails Over The Country Club got 3 million views in a day. Will this be a publicity boost to "chemtrails" as a conspiracy theory, or just make it seem sillier.

And will the theorists think Lana Del Rey is like, CIA, or something.

Trump uses "what other people have said" as a plausible deniability method of saying what he thinks, or wants people to think he thinks. It's such a pervasive and effective disinformation tool that @Nlrosenblum and Russell Muirhead wrote a book about it.

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/ErjQs3LVcAA7WeA.jpg

Answering questions from reporters for the first time since the violence at the Capitol on Wednesday, the president sidestepped questions about his culpability in the deadly riot that shook the nation's long tradition of peaceful transfers of power.

"People thought what I said was totally appropriate," Mr. Trump told reporters at Joint Base Andrews, en route to Alamo, Texas, where he was set to visit the border wall. Instead, Mr. Trump claimed that racial justice protests over the summer were "the real problem."

"If you look at what other people have said, politicians at a high level about the riots during the summer, the horrible riots in Portland and Seattle and various other places, that was a real problem," he said.

Mr. Trump's defiance came despite near universal condemnation of his role in stoking the assault on the Capitol, including from within his own administration and some of his closest allies on Capitol Hill.

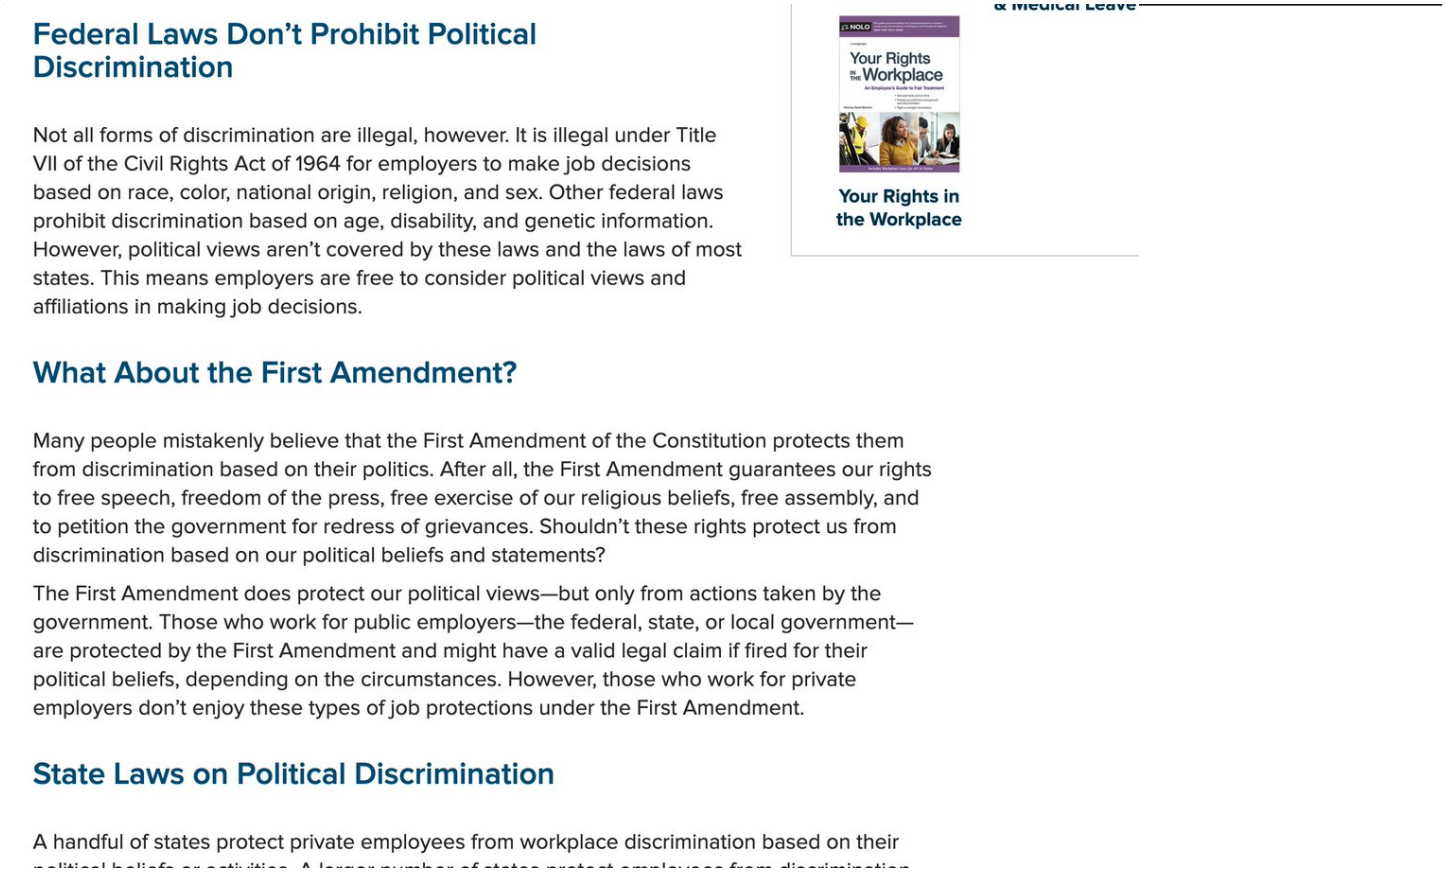
@Scott_Tolar @nate_vliets @BobMcGwier_N4HY Political affiliation is not a protected class at the Federal level, but it is (somewhat) in some states. e.g. with employment https://www.nolo.com/legal-encyclopedia/can-employers-discriminate-based-on-political-beliefs-or-affiliation.html http://pbs.twimg.com/media/ErjL5c9VoAEoswr.jpg



Federal Laws Don't Prohibit Political Discrimination

Not all forms of discrimination are illegal, however. It is illegal under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 for employers to make job decisions based on race, color, national origin, religion, and sex. Other federal laws prohibit discrimination based on age, disability, and genetic information. However, political views aren't covered by these laws and the laws of most states. This means employers are free to consider political views and affiliations in making job decisions.

Your Rights in the Workplace

What About the First Amendment?

Many people mistakenly believe that the First Amendment of the Constitution protects them from discrimination based on their politics. After all, the First Amendment guarantees our rights to free speech, freedom of the press, free exercise of our religious beliefs, free assembly, and to petition the government for redress of grievances. Shouldn't these rights protect us from discrimination based on our political beliefs and statements?

The First Amendment does protect our political views—but only from actions taken by the government. Those who work for public employers—the federal, state, or local government—are protected by the First Amendment and might have a valid legal claim if fired for their political beliefs, depending on the circumstances. However, those who work for private employers don't enjoy these types of job protections under the First Amendment.

State Laws on Political Discrimination

A handful of states protect private employees from workplace discrimination based on their

The ACLU said the unity of Silicon Valley monopoly power to destroy Parler was deeply troubling. Leaders from Germany, France and Mexico protested. Only US liberals support it, because the dominant strain of US liberalism is not economic socialism but political authoritarianism.

Even the ACLU — which has rapidly transformed from a civil liberties organization into a liberal activist group since Trump's election — found the assertion of Silicon Valley's power to destroy Parler deeply alarming. One of that organization's most stalwart defenders of civil liberties, lawyer Ben Wizner, told The New York Times that the destruction of Parler was more "troubling" than the deletion of posts or whole accounts: "I think we should recognize the importance of neutrality when we're talking about the infrastructure of the internet."

Yet American liberals swoon for this authoritarianism. And they are now calling for the use of the most repressive War on Terror measures against their domestic opponents. On Tuesday, House Homeland Security Chair Bennie Thompson (D-MS)

Nobody raises hell about "No Shoes, No Service"

There's a clear line between the things a private (but semi-public-space) restaurant can refuse service for, and the things that it cannot.

Twitter isn't banning white people. Or Conservatives. Just some conspiracy theorists.

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/ErWlCGDVgAEkBsI.png

Future Of Information Warfare

Citizens will find themselves in the digital crossfire of international conflicts that exploit online platforms with convincing disinformation campaigns.

CBINSIGHTS

1 Reconnaissance

An adversary identifies target attributes and monitors online platforms.

2 Weaponization

Realistic false content is created with AI-enabled software.

3 Attack

False content is planted in promising online venues (e.g., groups, hashtags, messages).

4 Infection

Bots and algorithms share and drive engagement with false content.

5 Impact

False narratives overcome factual ones and spur beliefs and actions favorable to the adversary

@Sloppyjaloppy2 @HeadRushV2 @knightsabers01 It's an interesting issue, because the solution would seem to be government enforced lack of content moderation. A curious mixture of authoritarianism and libertarianism.

@BubbleInvestor The depends on how you define "election interference" Many media outlets have an overt pro or anti Trump bias, and this reflects in their reporting. Is this "election interference"? I'm not sure if "actively tried to win it for Biden by suppressing stories" needs parsing.

@PstarmanUa @physicsufo @samkimahri @TheProjectUnity It is by far the simples explanation and in keeping with other, more obvious movements of the camera.

The apparent motion is PERFECTLY explained by parallax, so you really need evidence that it's not parallax if you want to posit an advanced technology craft.

@BubbleInvestor And the issue of election fraud should not be driven by partisanship, but by facts. I've looked into the claims extensively, they do not hold up to scrutiny. At this point it's basically a false conspiracy theory. Unless new GOOD data arrives, it should be seen as such.

@PstarmanUa @physicsufo @samkimahri @TheProjectUnity You see the cameraperson attempting to keep the plane in shot as it moves a constant speed to the right.
It goes behind the tree, so they move the camera to the left. This reaches its limit, so they take a step or two to the left. All while trying to keep the plane in shot.

@PstarmanUa @physicsufo @samkimahri @TheProjectUnity The trees are near (30 feet), the plane is far away (30,000 feet). The effect of things apparently moving differently at different distances is called "parallax".

@_olligo_ @ufoofinterest @ExoExplorer3 @TheProjectUnity No, it's a plane (oat 0:30). Moving fast, high up, low resolution. The cameraperson takes a step to one side, keeping the plane in shot, so it moves relative to the branches. I'll see if I can find my example.

@JLuvin It's not a cop. There were a variety of types of people there. This is a milita type.

There was talk reported before all this of taking hostages, even executions.

I guess it's also possible he just picked those up off the floor.

@stopthestealll ABC's on-screen display is hardly the official vote count.

Early media reports of vote totals often change, this is nothing new. Final certified count is what matters. Recount verified it for 2020 and would here too.

@ufoofinterest @ExoExplorer3 @TheProjectUnity Yeah, it's not "difficult to fake", it's difficult NOT to get that motion if you are walking around with the camera while filming a distant plane with some trees in the foreground. Just another parallax effect

@timshie89740794 @stang289 In many instances police avoid confrontations with large angry groups. It's standard practice, dating back to Waco. The police don't "tolerate" burning buildings down, but they are not always immediate able to stop it in the middle of a riot without the risk of deaths

@AdmiralQuality The New York Times, has a very detailed county-by-county analysis, and they never expected a swing to Republicans. I don't know why anyone would think that, it really makes no sense.

@AdmiralQuality All mail-in votes swing democrats (compared to election-day votes in the same precinct). The late ones just swing much more because they are from the large counting centers.

https://twitter.com/_/status/1346693978012274695

@AdmiralQuality Well unless you can quote what you think you saw, then all I'm seeing is what was expected, the only question was who would end up winning. The R lead would always be eroded either way.

https://twitter.com/_/status/1346693709757259781

@AdmiralQuality It wasn't unexpected. Blue shift is a well known thing. It was ESPECIALLY expected in the Nov 3 election as Trump told people to vote in person.

I'm questioning if you are comparing like with like.

The idea of vote "dumps" will be recycled again. But the large batches of votes favor Dems because they are from cities. They were all largely as expected, and did not change the predicted winner. http://pbs.twimg.com/media/ErBi_roUwAYU6v8.jpg

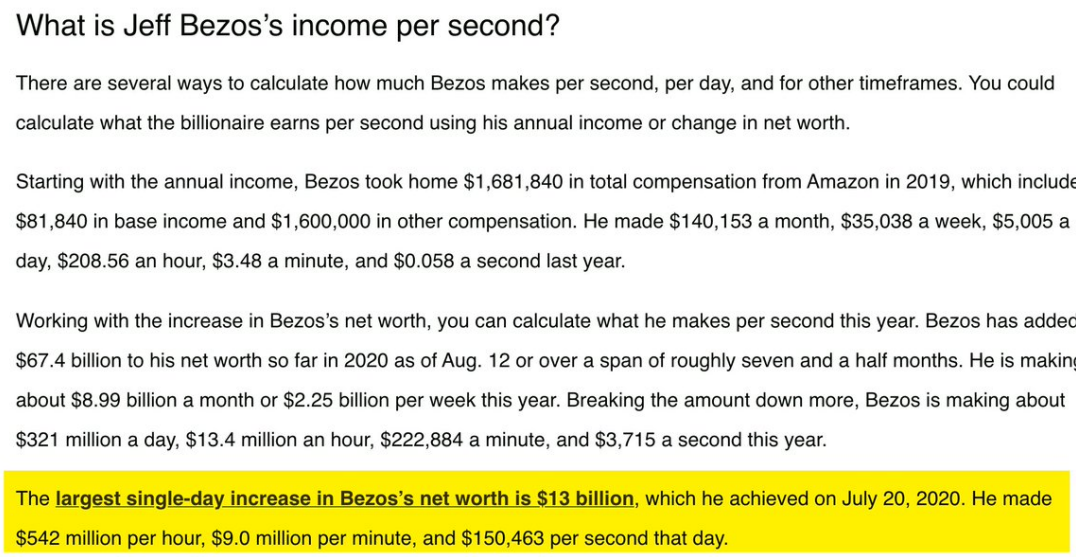
http://pbs.twimg.com/media/Eq6FFJ4VEAAX5XF.jpg



What is Jeff Bezos's income per second?

There are several ways to calculate how much Bezos makes per second, per day, and for other timeframes. You could calculate what the billionaire earns per second using his annual income or change in net worth.

Starting with the annual income, Bezos took home $1,681,840 in total compensation from Amazon in 2019, which included $81,840 in base income and $1,600,000 in other compensation. He made $140,153 a month, $35,038 a week, $5,005 a day, $208.56 an hour, $3.48 a minute, and $0.058 a second last year.

Working with the increase in Bezos's net worth, you can calculate what he makes per second this year. Bezos has added $67.4 billion to his net worth so far in 2020 as of Aug. 12 or over a span of roughly seven and a half months. He is making about $8.99 billion a month or $2.25 billion per week this year. Breaking the amount down more, Bezos is making about $321 million a day, $13.4 million an hour, $222,884 a minute, and $3,715 a second this year.

The largest single-day increase in Bezos's net worth is $13 billion, which he achieved on July 20, 2020. He made $542 million per hour, $9.0 million per minute, and $150,463 per second that day.

@mvpispi And $600 million? He does not actually GET $600 million, that's revenue for Amazon. They make maybe $100 million profit on that over 10 years. $10 million a year. Of which Bezos might get $1 million a year tops. You can't buy him for that.

@JBocquee @ianbillmorris @EcoWarrior1980 @BathroomExpense Quantum dots are just a proposed tattoo used to indicate if some had already got a vaccine in countries with poor health-care records. There's nothing especially "quantum" about them, it's just a type of invisible ink that glows under UV light.

@JohnStr32001015 @xLGxKillSwitch @TalbertSwan @realDonaldTrump There are not two tiers. There's scanning a batch and then there's the adjudication process for that batch where they adjudicate the flagged ballots.

It's just two stages per batch. Scanning, then adjudicating. All batches go through both stages.

2021-01-03T22:36:26+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/1345861608031993856

@JohnStr32001015 @xLGxKillSwitch @TalbertSwan @realDonaldTrump Yes all batches have the flagged ballots manually adjudicated. Only the flagged ones.

For a batch, this is the adjudication step. Could be zero ballots.

2021-01-03T21:15:48+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/1345841313900466181

@xLGxKillSwitch @JohnStr32001015 @TalbertSwan @realDonaldTrump No, all BATCHES go through the adjudication step, where any flagged ballots are reviewed.

@bosma2002 The claim is based on something he said, but listening to then entire press conference he explains that adjudication only applies to the flagged ballots in a batch.

ALL the batches go through adjudication. Not 94%, 100%. It's a key step of the process.

https://twitter.com/_/status/1345837959132532736

@JohnStr32001015 @TalbertSwan @realDonaldTrump I subtracted the two numbers. 106,000 is divisible by 50. It's a total of the ballots in batches that have gone though the adjudication step.

It says nothing about how many ballots needed manual review.

2021-01-03T21:00:43+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/1345837517069697024

@AmericanDad757 @KanekoaTheGreat That appears to be a different topic. Perhaps you'd like to present the evidence for it.

2021-01-03T20:49:19+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/1345834651303088128

@JohnStr32001015 @TalbertSwan @realDonaldTrump No. 106,000 ballots were, at 7PM, in batches that had gone through adjudication process.

Only flagged ballots were manually reviewed.

2021-01-03T20:48:08+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/1345834353461399553

@JohnStr32001015 @TalbertSwan @realDonaldTrump That's because 113,130-106,000 = 7130 ballots are in batches that have not yet gon though adjudication.

Adjudication is a process that ALL batches go through, to manually review flagged ballots.

2021-01-03T20:46:02+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/1345833821254553600

@JohnStr32001015 @TalbertSwan @realDonaldTrump No, adjudication happens AFTER scanning. It's the scanner that marks then as needing adjudication.

The batch then goes to adjudication, when any flagged ballots are reviewed.

The 106,000 is the ballots in the batches that have gone through adjudication.

It's not the ballots that were flagged (typically <1% of each batch)

https://twitter.com/_/status/1345831596146847745

https://twitter.com/_/status/1345831335697420288
@AmericanDad757 @KanekoaTheGreat No, that's how many ballots are in the batches that have gone through the adjudication process at that point (7PM) on Nov 4. Later it would be 100%

Because all batches go through adjudication, so the flagged ballots (if any) in that batch can be reviewed. As he says.

Debunked: 94% of Fulton County Ballots Manually Adjudicated.

ALL (100%) of THE BALLOTS go through the batch adjudication process. This process is the manual review of ONLY the scanner-flagged ballots (if any) in the batch.

Lawyers, by trade, do not seek objective truth, but rather to frame some facts in a way that best helps their client.

Perhaps overlooked: after two recounts Georgia also did a much requested signature audit using cops to check a sample of 10% of the ballots in Cobb County.

Bottom line "No fraudulent absentee ballots were identified during the audit."

Findings

- 15,118 ABM ballot oath envelopes were evaluated by the inspection teams. On six occasions, referees were called upon by the inspection teams as the third vote to decide to accept the signature/identifying information as valid or refer the envelope to the investigation teams.
- The inspection teams submitted 396 envelopes to the investigation teams for comparison with additional documents or follow-up with the elector.
- After evaluation of the inspection teams' envelopes, 386 were accepted as valid. The remaining ten envelopes were referred for contact with the elector for the following reasons:
    - 8 – Elector's signatures/identifying information did not appear to be consistent with documents on record.
    - 1 – Contained no signature or mark
    - 1 – Contained a signature, but was not the signature of the elector
- All ten electors were located, positively identified, and interviewed. Those interviews found the following:
    - All eight electors whose signatures were deemed valid by Cobb County Elections Department staff but not consistent by the LEOs conducting the audit, acknowledged completing and signing the ABM ballot oath envelope in question, verifying that the initial Cobb County Elections Department initial determination of validity was correct.
    - The elector whose envelope contained no signature or mark, acknowledged submitting the ABM ballot oath envelope in question, but reported signing the front of the envelope only. The final envelope in question was found to be mistakenly signed by the elector's spouse. The elector confirmed that he filled out the absentee ballot himself.
- Of the 15,118 envelopes sampled, the following was found:
    - Two of the ten previously identified ABM ballot oath envelopes should have been identified by the Cobb County Elections Department as requiring an opportunity for the voter to cure the ballots prior to acceptance.
    - No fraudulent absentee ballots were identified during the audit.

@xLGxKillSwitch @Oswald1160 Georgia did three recounts, a full hand recount, a full machine recount, and a Cobb-County signature audit.
http://pbs.twimg.com/media/EqxN0aFVoAAKQvs.jpg

A signature audit of the presidential election results in a key Georgia county confirmed there was no fraud, the third review to confirm that President-elect Joe Biden won the Peach State in November.

Georgia Secretary of State Brad Raffensperger (R) said in a press release that the review in Cobb County, which Biden won by more than 14 percentage points, found that the election board there achieved "a 99.99% accuracy rate in performing correct signature verification procedures."

The signature audit of ballots submitted followed a hand recount of statewide votes and a subsequent machine recount that also affirmed Biden's victory in the Peach State. President Trump has made Georgia a top target of his claims that widespread voter fraud and irregularities cost him a second term, though lawsuits over such claims have been tossed for lack of evidence and standing.

@Oswald1160 @xLGxKillSwitch The process for a batch seems to be:

1 - Scan the batch, flag ballots that need adjudicating.
2 - Adjudicate the batch (manually review the flagged ballots)
3 - Batch done.

The numbers he's giving are for the entire batch, not the ballots that needed manual review.

There seems to be some confusion about the new House Rules forbidding the use of gendered pronouns. They don't. All that happened was a simplification of the rules to remove those pronouns IN THE RULES

And it actually makes them a lot simpler. http://pbs.twimg.com/media/EqwCvFyU0AAdCoF.jpg

(3) In clause 8(c)(3) of rule XXIII, strike "father, mother, son, daughter, brother, sister, uncle, aunt, first cousin, nephew, niece, husband, wife, father-in-law, mother-in-law, son-in-law, daughter-in-law, brother-in-law, sister-in-law, stepfather, stepmother, stepson, stepdaughter, stepbrother, stepsister, half brother, half sister, grandson, or granddaughter" and insert "parent, child, sibling, parent's sibling, first cousin, sibling's child, spouse, parent-in-law, child-in-law, sibling-in-law, stepparent, stepchild, stepsibling, half-sibling, or grandchild".

U.S. NEWS

Feds probing whether Nashville bomber believed in lizard people conspiracy

Investigators are exploring several conspiracy theories as potential motives behind the Christmas Day bombing outside an AT&T building in Nashville, Tennessee, including evidence that the bomber believed in lizard people and a so-called reptilian conspiracy, two senior law enforcement officials said Wednesday.

In addition, investigators are aware of statements the suspect made about an internet conspiracy that powerful politicians and Hollywood figures are actually lizards or other reptiles who have extraterrestrial origins and are taking over society, the officials said.

Adherents of the unfounded conspiracy theory believe that politicians and other prominent people, including the Clintons and the comedian Bob Hope, who died in 2003, are actually lizard-like creatures sent to Earth and are responsible for a number of historic tragedies. Justin Bieber and the Obamas have also been named in the conspiracy theory.

Federal investigators have also asked associates and acquaintances of Warner whether he believed in equally unfounded conspiracy theories about AT&T and 5G mobile service and whether that was a motive for choosing the AT&T building as the site of the bombing.

The Nashville missile theory is pretty far-out. But some people think it's plausible, so it's worth debunking.
The trails show up 3 seconds after the blast, which is on the same side of the street as the RV.

@prentic4 @Oswald1160 @KetterStone @Disclos93884769 "I don't know" is always the simplest explanation when there's a tad of uncertainty.

Is that Nashville explosion trail from a missile? Given that it does not show up until THREE SECONDS after the explosion, then probably not.

FAST EAGLES 110/100 UPON TAKE OFF WERE VECTORED BY PRINCETON AND BANGER (1410L) TO INTERCEPT UNID CONTACT AT 160@40NM (N3050.8 W11746.9) (NIMITZ N3129.3 W11752.8). PRINCETON INFORMED FAST EAGLES THAT THE CONTACT WAS MOVING AT 100 KTS @ 25KFT ASL.

FAST EAGLES (110/100) COULD NOT FIND UNID AIRBORNE CONTACT AT LOCATION GIVEN BY PRINCETON. WHILE SEARCHING FOR UNID AIR CONTACT, FAST EAGLES SPOTTED LARGE UNID OBJECT IN WATER AT 1430L. PILOTS SAW STEAM/ SMOKE/CHURNING AROUND OBJECT. PILOT DESCRIBES OBJECT INITIALLY AS RESEMBLING A DOWNED AIRLINER, ALSO STATED THAT IT WAS MUCH LARGER THAN A SUBMARINE.

WHILE DESCENDING FROM 24K FT TO GAIN A BETTER VIEW OF THE UNID CONTACT IN THE WATEI FAST EAGLE 110 SIGHTED AN AIRBORNE CONTACT WHICH APPEARED TO BE CAPSULE SHAPED (WINGLESS, MOBILE, WHITE, OBLONG PILL SHAPED, 25-30 FEET IN LENGTH, NO VISIBLE MARKINGS AND NO GLASS) 5NM WEST FROM POSITION OF UNID OBJECT IN WATER.

CAPSULE (ALT 4K FT AT COURSE 300) PASSED UNDER FAST EAGLE 110 (ALT 16KFT). FAST EAGLE 110 BEGAN TURN TO ACQUIRE CAPSULE. WHILE 110 WAS DESCENDING AND TURNING, CAPSULE BEGAN CLIMBING AND TURNED INSIDE OF FAST EAGLE'S TURN RADIUS. PILOT ESTIMATED THAT CAPSULE ACHIEVED 600-700 KTS. FAST EAGLE 110 COULD NOT KEEP UP WITH THE RATE OF TUR AND THE GAIN OF ALTITUDE BY THE CAPSULE. 110 LOST VISUAL ID OF CAPSULE IN HAZE. LAST VISUAL CONTACT HAD CAPSULE AT 14KFT HEADING DUE EAST.

The motion is mostly from the motion of the drone itself. There's an illusion of slowness because it's high up. It's just zipping by something small.

I've been posting debunks of UFOs that are just short sunlit contrails for nearly ten years now. And people have been reporting them for 70+ years.

You'd think modern folk would be used to them. But vapor trails will get many excited for years to come

Vapor Trails Get Many Excited

Vapor trails formed by condensation of aircraft engines in cold or freezing temperatures put Peninsula residents in a tizzy late yesterday afternoon.

Ordinarily white, the vapor trails were scarlet and gold from the setting sun.

Police departments from San Jose to South San Francisco were flooded with calls between 5:15 and 5:25 with reports ranging from "a burning plane" and "meteors" to "flying saucers." However, it was only a B-50 bomber flying at 35,000.

https://twitter.com/_/status/1343622643631628289

@prentic4 @KetterStone @Disclos93884769 It's mostly mistakes, many of which are perfectly understandable and not a reflection on the character or skill of the individual. There's also equipment malfunction.

2020-12-28T18:11:48+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/1343620682228195328

With wider shot and a more persistent contrail, it's more apparent what is going on. But from a distance people often think these are meteors, or (if going the other way) missiles. In reality they are in level flight, or very close to level. It's perspective.

@b5t1an @TheProjectUnity My hypothesis (arrived at by many over the years) is that it fades out of visibility due to a combination of the heat source being obscured and the highly compressed video.
Look at the numbers on screen when it's going "underwater". Bits of them nearly vanish too.

A common "UFO" is a short sunlit contrail at dusk, flying away from the camera. They look odd because they are far away (often 50-100 miles) and perspective compression magnifies the sweep of the contrails, especially with 4-engine planes. Here's a "UFO" and an A340

Here's the Nashville explosion, corrected for camera motion, and in 1/4 time.

The explosion looked like it was across the road from the RV because A) it's blocked to the left by the building, and B) the epicenter is obscured by the cloud of smoke

The smoke ends up at the RV.

@QSimpleAnswers @LoneStrWizard @OurAmericanLife @Michael27452 Contrails are clouds.

Clouds form just in the plain old sky. There's plenty of cloud condensation nuclei in the air, and the aircraft exhaust contains more. The water in the exhaust raises the humidity enough so clouds form.

I've discussed SRM with David Keith.

@TravisTruth3 What you refer to as "the nonsense" is actually science. COVID-19 is spread via respiration, especially indoors. They were all "fine" that day, but are they all fine now they symptoms are starting to show? How about next week? How about their relatives?

@QSimpleAnswers @LoneStrWizard @OurAmericanLife @Michael27452 Clouds are condensation. Cloud do not instantly vanish.

Why not? It's because they are in air that's supersaturated.

Contrails are a type of cloud. They persist when the air is ice-supersaturated.

Try breathing out at 30,000 feet.

@QSimpleAnswers @LoneStrWizard @OurAmericanLife @Michael27452 But the contrails are formed by the exhaust gasses. The bypass air is just air, like air flowing past the engines. It makes not difference.
High bypass engines actually make slight MORE contrails, as the exhaust gas is cooler.

@atlas_grip @stang289 I'm not feigning anything. Liberal democracy is what I want.

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/EqNXWYeVgAAXAyC.jpg

Liberal democracy, also referred to as Western democracy, is a political ideology and a form of government in which representative democracy operates under the principles of liberalism. It is characterised by elections between multiple distinct political parties, a separation of powers into different branches of government, the rule of law in everyday life as part of an open society, a market economy with private property, and the equal protection of human rights, civil rights, civil liberties and political freedoms for all people. To define the system in practice, liberal democracies often draw upon a constitution, either codified (such as in the United States)[1] or uncodified (such as in the United Kingdom), to delineate the powers of government and enshrine the social contract. After a period of sustained expansion throughout the 20th century, liberal democracy became the predominant political system in the world.

But perhaps I’m wearing rose-tinted glasses here. When I returned to Australia, my family and friends were struck by how different I had become. I was intense and evangelical, and devoting most of my spare time to Falun Gong activities. My former curious interest in the many experiences the world had to offer had vanished. My social beliefs had transformed from those typical of a left-leaning family to take on a very conservative hue. I had a lot of explaining to do before people reluctantly came to accept the new me. I later observed other new Falun Gong practitioners go through a similar process. They would begin by shocking their family at their sudden change, then gradually learn to live the kind of double life typical of most practitioners. Many would get normal jobs. Most would find they had little in common with non-practitioners (“ordinary people” in Falun Gong parlance) but would maintain cordial relations with friends and family nonetheless, and think of various ways to explain the edge off some of Falun Gong’s less palatable teachings about aliens, how heaven views gay people, the inferiority of other religions and Master Li’s role in saving the universe.

NEW YORK TIMES, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 14, 1944.

ARMY CUTS OUTPUT OF WARPLANE GUNS

Canceling Contracts in Detroit and Up-State New York Allows Shift of Workers

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

DETROIT, Dec. 13—Cancellation of a contract for machine guns for warplanes at the Plymouth plant of the Kelsey Hayes Wheel Company was announced today by the Detroit ordnance district.

Edward L. Cushman, regional director of the War Manpower Commission, said that about 2,300 workers would be laid off by Feb. 28.

Army officials stated that the cancellation was due to the fact that production was running ahead of schedule. The plant will be kept in a stand-by condition.

A spokesman for the company said it hoped to be able to re-

Floating Mystery Ball Is New Nazi Air Weapon

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, Allied Expeditionary Force, Dec. 13—A new German weapon has made its appearance on the western air front, it was disclosed today.

Airmen of the American Air Force report that they are encountering silver colored spheres in the air over German territory. The spheres are encountered either singly or in clusters. Sometimes they are semi-translucent.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, Dec. 13 (Reuter)—The Germans have produced a "secret" weapon in keeping with the Christmas season.

The new device, apparently an air defense weapon, resembles the huge glass balls that adorn Christmas trees.

There was no information available as to what holds them up like stars in the sky, what is in them, or what their purpose is supposed to be.

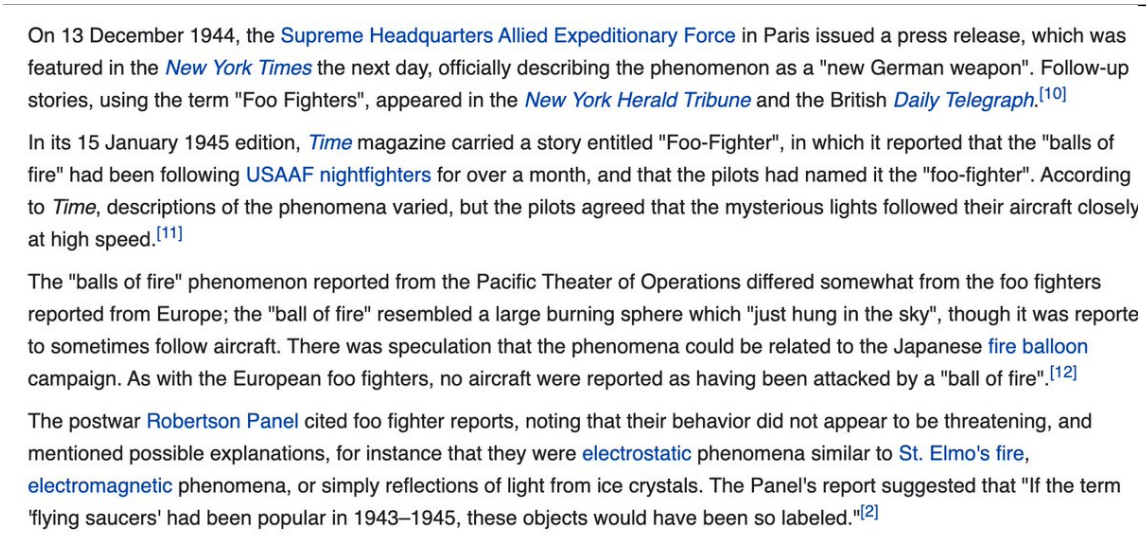
Same thing.

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Foo_fighter http://pbs.twimg.com/media/EptYGdGUUAAdmtM.jpg



On 13 December 1944, the Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force in Paris issued a press release, which was featured in the New York Times the next day, officially describing the phenomenon as a "new German weapon". Follow-up stories, using the term "Foo Fighters", appeared in the New York Herald Tribune and the British Daily Telegraph.[10]

In its 15 January 1945 edition, Time magazine carried a story entitled "Foo-Fighter", in which it reported that the "balls of fire" had been following USAAF nightfighters for over a month, and that the pilots had named it the "foo-fighter". According to Time, descriptions of the phenomena varied, but the pilots agreed that the mysterious lights followed their aircraft closely at high speed.[11]

The "balls of fire" phenomenon reported from the Pacific Theater of Operations differed somewhat from the foo fighters reported from Europe; the "ball of fire" resembled a large burning sphere which "just hung in the sky", though it was reporte to sometimes follow aircraft. There was speculation that the phenomena could be related to the Japanese fire balloon campaign. As with the European foo fighters, no aircraft were reported as having been attacked by a "ball of fire".[12]

The postwar Robertson Panel cited foo fighter reports, noting that their behavior did not appear to be threatening, and mentioned possible explanations, for instance that they were electrostatic phenomena similar to St. Elmo's fire, electromagnetic phenomena, or simply reflections of light from ice crystals. The Panel's report suggested that "If the term 'flying saucers' had been popular in 1943–1945, these objects would have been so labeled."[2]

Maneuverability The object's ability to maneuver at speeds of 80-100 miles per hour at low altitude is of interest. A notable characteristic of the object is its apparent tumbling as it moves through the air. This tumbling appearance ends prior to the object's entry into the water and as it moves through the water. At 01:23:37 hours in the video the object can be seen to disappear behind a tree momentarily, placing its altitude at below 40 feet. The ability to fly at that altitude at night and between trees requires precise control and a highly responsive propulsion system particularly given the apparent lack of control by aerodynamic devices (like wings). In terms of current technology, advanced GPS satellites and sophisticated vision pattern recognition in communications with an on board microprocessor might partially explain such maneuvers. More difficult to explain would be the willingness of any government or organization to expose this capability by traversing a residential area where malfunctions during flight could result in harm to the civilian population as well as compromise an advanced military technology.

North Carolina state Senator Bob Steinburg claims to be "not nuts" and "not a conspiracy type person" while spreading conspiracy theories and calling for martial law.

https://www.washingtonpost.com/nation/2020/12/16/north-carolina-republican-trump-insurrection/ http://pbs.twimg.com/media/EpecVVdWMAAOIsF.jpg

Steinburg also suggested in the Facebook post that the president suspend habeas corpus, which allows people to challenge unlawful imprisonment, “as Lincoln and FDR have both done in times of war.” (President Abraham Lincoln did so during the Civil War; President Franklin D. Roosevelt did so during World War II so that officials could force Japanese Americans into camps.)

Steinburg stood by the post speaking to WRAL on Tuesday, while referencing a number of conspiracy theories about the election.

The state senator claimed that the Supreme Court justices had declined to hear the challenge last week because “somebody’s got something” on the highest judicial officers in the nation. He claimed that unnamed FBI and CIA agents who live in his district had told him so. He also alleged that federal law enforcement officials have refused to intervene in a “coup d’etat.”

He also offered, unbidden, to take a psychological evaluation to prove that he is sound of mind.

“I’m not nuts,” he told the outlet. “I’m not a conspiracy theory person.”

No, Sweden's Covid approach didn't work. They are basically the same as the US in the current surge, and the US is worse than anywhere except Eastern Europe.
The only reason they match the US is that most Swedes followed medical advice.

I don't know what the "fleet" was.

@AFSUnidentified @PostDisclosure @JLuvin He appears to be talking about it in the context of the entire universe. Basically, he's simply not dismissing the existence of aline life, just like most people.

There's nothing to indicate he has special knowledge of aliens.

COWEN: At the end of all that sifting and interpreting, what do you think is the most likely hypothesis?

BRENNAN: [laughs] I don't know. When people talk about it, is there other life besides what's in the States, in the world, the globe? Life is defined in many different ways. I think it's a bit presumptuous and arrogant for us to believe that there's no other form of life anywhere in the entire universe. What that might be is subject to a lot of different views.

But I think some of the phenomena we're going to be seeing continues to be unexplained and might, in fact, be some type of phenomenon that is the result of something that we don't yet understand and that could involve some type of activity that some might say constitutes a different form of life.

The Authors

The six authors of this report all have scientific backgrounds including degrees in chemistry, physics, mathematics, and environmental science. Their work backgrounds are also scientific with experience in the air defense industries, semiconductors–as well as various patents. Together they have 86 years combined experience studying the UFO phenomenon. A copy of their backgrounds is listed in Appendix A.

A minimum of 1000 man hours were spent in the analysis of this video over the course of one and a half years. Every effort was made to objectively evaluate the data obtained and ensure the protection of the source's identity, according to his wishes. Non-Disclosure Agreements were signed by all parties which stipulated details would remain secure.

Conclusion

The object witnessed by CBP and tower personnel and recorded on the CBP DHC-8 aircraft's thermal imaging system is of unknown origin. There is no explanation for an object capable of traveling under water at over 90 mph with minimal impact as it enters the water, through the air at 120 mph at low altitude through a residential area without navigational lights, and finally to be capable of splitting into two separate objects. No bird, no balloon, no aircraft, and no known drones have that capability.

The authors are open to any reasonable explanation that addresses the various characteristics displayed by this object. The full analysis and associated appendices can be read for the detailed analysis that contributed to the above summary conclusions.

Keutsch Group at Harvard Home Frank Keutsch Research SCoPEx More

December 15, 2020

Press Release

The SCoPEx research team has asked the independent SCoPEx Advisory Committee to review our plans for a proposed platform test in Sweden in June 2021. This test would not be the experiment itself, but rather a test of the SCoPEx platform without the release of any particles.

This balloon flight would be managed by Swedish Space Corporation (SSC), flying out of Esrange Space Center in Kiruna, Sweden. As mentioned, the goal of this flight is to test the SCoPEx platform. Specifically, we would like to test the gondola's horizontal and vertical control using the winch system and propellers as well as the power, data, navigation, and communication systems. We would not release any aerosols, nor fly an aerosol injection/release system. Still, we will not proceed with this flight without a formal recommendation authorizing the flight from the Advisory Committee to Harvard management. We have asked the Advisory Committee if they can complete their review and reach a decision—be it positive or negative—about this platform test by February 15, 2021, of course, contingent on the experiment team providing them with timely access to materials needed for the review. (As a reminder, the independent Advisory Committee was established to provide advice on the research and governance of SCoPEx. They have already begun to carry out important work. For more information about the Advisory Committee, please visit their website or contact Sally Klimp (sklimp@g.harvard.edu).)

A platform test is needed before the science experiment because SCoPEx will use a new flight platform that has not flown before. In other words, there are significant technical challenges in developing it as an operational vehicle @rpowell2u @habemuspapadam The LOS sweep out a surface that the object could theoretically traverse in a variety of ways. By far the physically simplest is something drifting in the wind, over land. Only the video artifacts give the illusion of if going underwater (and behind objects, when it does not).

Hi Riccardo,

So I presented this to the SCU's Rich Hoffmann's MUFON group and offered to give the simulation to anyone who wanted it (one of his members did ask for and was given a copy). The SCU's entire approach is to just pretend that no one has challenged them, which is simply not true. They have not asked me any questions about it because I submit that if it ain't flying saucers, they aren't interested.

Here's a link to how our simulation was made:

https://www.dropbox.com/s/o1cfxw2ycn6xmdo/How the Simulation was Made.mp4?dl=0

Note that I think you have to download it to see the whole thing--Dropbox has a preview time limit.

Their paper offers several points of data for several different potential tracks. but nowhere near enough to easily figure out the speeds and full path. At least one of their paths is flatly impossible. The rest certainly require speed ups and slow downs, while our little balloon-like object just floats along at wind speed. They don't present enough data to create a path (and with all the speeding up and slowing down, it's all sort of cheating anyway).

Best,

Lance

Most conspiracy theories are have foundational misunderstandings.

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/FX51xrOUYAAtxWG.jpg

According to ex-fighter pilot Ryan Graves, the "Gimbal" aircrew conducted a "stern conversion" (a basic maneuver).

around us. And you can hear him in the video, as I look at the SA page, there's a whole fleet of them, that's what he's referring to. And on the radar tapes, and on SA page, you could see that there was about five to six, in my memory serves me now, of the smaller objects that we're used to seeing, and they're kind of flying in a web formation in front of that larger object, and then those turned around with some radius of turn started flying in the opposite direction, that large object just kind of stopped and waited for those to kind of come back around then you see kind of do that, that gimbal II shift, right. And then it started going back in the direction falling behind the wedge formation. So you know, that was strange for us, but we haven't seen that object before. Because you could actually make some structure on that right? I mean, it that looks like a top almost. Whereas other ones look like someone was shining a flashlight into our sensor.

@dsmethurst66 @TheZignal I identify inconsistencies that we can attempt to resolve. For example, Graves description of the Gimbal stopping while the fleet turned did not seem possible in the lines of sight analysis. So I coded an SA page/fleet simulator to try to resolve it https://www.metabunk.org/sitrec/

Travis has since admitted that the video shows stars, and hence bokeh.

@the_cholla @SabersKnight @Spectre67904513 @Oswald1160 @ADelarge60 Yes, and I think that "Curving" is simply an artifact of the distant straight line path projected onto the path of the chasing plane. That seems to be by far the simplest explanation. Pretty bizarre coincidence otherwise.

@dsmethurst66 @TheZignal Travis just checked one common NV, not the one actually used by the Snoopie team leader. Besides it's OBVIOUSLY bokeh, denying it after seeing the new videos is not a sustainable position - so he didn't.

And my strategy is to figure things out with total clarity.

@the_cholla @SabersKnight @Spectre67904513 @Oswald1160 @ADelarge60 The glare theory is still solid. Even if you shoehorn the location into within 10 NM, it still looks and acts like a glare that's rotating because of the gimbal system of the camera. And, as you know, there are significant problems in fitting the "fleet" and the "stop" in there.

@Spectre67904513 @Oswald1160 @ADelarge60 Several people, including Elizondo and Marik, continue to insist it's rotating.

If it is rotating, then that is a visual demonstration of unusual aviation technology. So would be highly significant. Otherwise, it's some slow-moving radar returns, and a slow-moving hot thing.

@the_cholla @Oswald1160 @Spectre67904513 The glare gets slightly bigger relative to the plane. There's several factors that contribute to the visual size of the glare on-screen.

@Oswald1160 @Spectre67904513 @the_cholla Glare does not scale like that. You need to account for the GSF (Glare Spread Function) and level/gain. GSF means it canâ□□t shrink to a point. The visual size is the physical source size PLUS spread. And GSF usually increases with distance.

@the_cholla No, it's the best example of a shaped glare. What is behind it is irrelevant. Something hot.

We see that on the ATFLIR, the glare can take on that shape. Same shape on Gimbal and FLIR1, a product of the camera.

@the_cholla Why would the blob rotate?

It would not, because the shape is defined by the spacing of the engines, because we are close up.

And we know ATFLIR glare can look saucer-shaped because the glare at the start of FLIR1 looks saucer-shaped. That's the best example.

@the_cholla But he did not find any relevant examples, like actual ATFLIR footage of a plane at various distances flying more directly away, maybe with afterburners. Glare size isn't directly related to distance, it's a function of exposure and whatever is contributing to optical spread @dirtylib666 It does not "require" it, but people have talked about crew wiping the screen with a sleeve or similar, and that causing a similar glare pattern. I don't know if that happened, but I thought this video was interesting. It shows a rare close-up of the ATFLIR front window.

One hypothesis regarding the Gimbal UFO video is that the front window of the AN/ASQ-228 ATFLIR might end up a bit streaked after being inappropriately handled. This could then contribute to the shape of the glare. Maybe something like this?

Summary

My guests this week are Mick West, author of Escaping the Rabbit Hole; and David Halperin, author of Intimate Alien. What is it that makes up our belief in the seemingly unexplainable, and how might we explain paranormal events and eyewitness accounts without an extraterrestrial or highly exotic explanation? DAVID HALPERIN was a professor of religious studies — his specialty, religious traditions of heavenly ascent. From 1976 through 2000, David taught Jewish history in the Religious Studies Department at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill. https://www.davidhalperin.net/ MICK WEST is a writer and a debunker. He used to be a video game programmer. His focus is on investigating and explaining conspiracy theories such as Chemtrails, 9/11 controlled demolition, and False Flags. He also covers more esoteric topics such as UFO's, pseudoscience, Flat Earth, photo analysis, and quackery. http://mickwest.com/ Alien Coffee Bean Discount Code: MYSTERY20 https://aliencoffeebean.com/ SKYPE CALL-IN: https://join.skype.com/invite/tJ6frTP2jYBP https://linktr.ee/CoffeeandUFOs TWITTER: https://twitter.com/Paranormal_Now INSTAGRAM: https://www.instagram.com/paranormalnow FACEBOOK: http://www.facebook.com/paranormalnowradio https://www.paranormalnow.net PATREON https://www.patreon.com/paranormalpop #uap #ufo @BrianSzy_PF @GarryPNolan Quite the opposite. I'm simply pointing out that an obnoxiously aggressive attitude towards skeptics might dissuade other people from engaging in the topic.

@GarryPNolan I don't indulge in snide derision. Even if I did, I'm pretty sure that the best response would not be more snide derision from you.

shall be their presiding officer. Two tellers shall be previously appointed on the part of the Senate and two on the part of the House of Representatives, to whom shall be handed, as they are opened by the President of the Senate, all the certificates and papers purporting to be certificates of the electoral votes, which certificates and papers shall be opened, presented, and acted upon in the alphabetical order of the States, beginning with the letter A; and said tellers, having then read the same in the presence and hearing of the two Houses, shall make a list of the votes as they shall appear from the said certificates; and the votes having been ascertained and counted according to the rules in this subchapter provided, the result of the same shall be delivered to the President of the Senate, who shall thereupon announce the state of the vote, which announcement shall be deemed a sufficient declaration of the persons, if any, elected President and Vice President of the United States, and, together with a list of the votes, be entered on the Journals of the two Houses. Upon such reading of any such certificate or paper, the President of the Senate shall call for objections, if any. Every objection shall be made in writing, and shall state clearly and concisely, and without argument, the ground thereof, and shall be signed by at least one Senator and one Member of the House of Representatives before the same shall be received. When all objections so made to any vote or paper from a State shall have been received and read, the Senate shall thereupon withdraw, and such objections shall be submitted to the Senate for its decision; and the Speaker of the House of Representatives shall, in like manner, submit such objections to the House of Representatives for its decision; and no electoral vote or votes from any State which shall have been regularly given by electors whose appointment has been lawfully certified to according to section 6 of this title from which but one return has been received shall be rejected, but the two Houses concurrently may reject the vote or votes when they agree that such vote or votes have not been so regularly given by electors whose appointment has been so certified. If more than one return or paper purporting to be a return from a State shall have been received by the President of the Senate, those votes, and those only, shall be counted which shall have been regularly given by the electors who are shown by the determination mentioned in section 5 of this title to have been appointed, if the determination in said section provided for shall have been made, or by such successors or substitutes, in case of a vacancy in the board of electors so ascertained, as have been appointed to fill such vacancy in the mode provided by the laws of the State; but in case there shall arise the question which of two or more of such State authorities determining what electors have been appointed, as mentioned in section 5 of this title, is the lawful tribunal of such State, the votes regularly given of those electors, and those only, of such State shall be counted whose title as electors the two Houses, acting separately, shall concurrently decide is supported by the decision of such State so authorized by its law; and in such case of more than one return or paper purporting to be a return from a State, if there shall have been no such determination of the question in the State aforesaid, then those votes, and those only, shall be counted which the two Houses shall concurrently decide were cast by lawful electors appointed in accordance with the laws of the State, unless the two Houses, acting separately, shall concurrently decide such votes not to be the lawful votes of the legally appointed electors of such State. But if the two Houses shall disagree in respect of the counting of such votes, then, and in that case, the votes of the electors whose appointment shall have been certified by the executive of the State, under the seal thereof, shall be counted. When the two Houses have voted, they shall immediately again meet, and the presiding officer shall then announce the decision of the questions submitted. No votes or papers from any other State shall be acted upon until the objections previously made to the votes or papers from any State shall have been finally disposed of.

The challenge cast a spotlight on divisions among Democrats, with party leaders and many in the rank and file distancing themselves from the effort, while black and liberal lawmakers embraced it. The Democratic presidential nominee, Senator John Kerry of Massachusetts, did not support the objection, nor was he on hand to witness it. He was in the Middle East, meeting with troops.

In the end, the House voted 267 to 31 against the challenge. In the Senate, where the vote was 74 to 1, Mrs. Boxer stood alone.

12th Amendment

Amendment XII

The electors shall meet in their respective states and vote by ballot for President and Vice-President, one of whom, at least, shall not be an inhabitant of the same state with themselves; they shall name in their ballots the person voted for as President, and in distinct ballots the person voted for as Vice-President, and they shall make distinct lists of all persons voted for as President, and of all persons voted for as Vice-President, and of the number of votes for each, which lists they shall sign and certify, and transmit sealed to the seat of the government of the United States, directed to the President of the Senate;--The President of the Senate shall, in the presence of the Senate and House of Representatives, open all the certificates and the votes shall then be counted;--the person having the greatest number of votes for President, shall be the President, if such number be a majority of the whole number of electors appointed; and if no person have such majority, then from the persons having the highest numbers not exceeding three on the list of those voted for as President, the House of Representatives shall choose immediately, by ballot, the President. But in choosing the President, the votes shall be taken by states, the representation from each state having one vote; a quorum for this purpose shall consist of a member or members from two-thirds of the states, and a majority of all the states shall be necessary to a choice. And if the House of Representatives shall not choose a President whenever the right of choice shall devolve upon them, before the fourth day of March next following, then the Vice-President shall act as President, as in the case of the death or other constitutional disability of the President. The person having the greatest number of votes as Vice-President, shall be the Vice-President, if such number be a majority of the whole number of electors appointed, and if no person have a majority, then from the two highest numbers on the list, the Senate shall choose the Vice-President; a quorum for the purpose shall consist of two-thirds of the whole number of Senators, and a majority of the whole number shall be necessary to a choice. But no person constitutionally ineligible to the office of President shall be eligible to that of Vice-President of the United States.

Or are you saying Mitch is trying to TRICK her into doing it? That's silly.

@UFOi1973 Even highly trained pilots and teams of experts make mistakes sometimes. For example, these Navy pilots saw a plane. http://pbs.twimg.com/media/EpS9m0GVQAAucQ0.jpg

The pilot tried several times to communicate with the UAP, using the multi-national, civilian bandwidth designed for this purpose. He received no reply.

The technician filmed the object for nine minutes and five seconds, mainly in IR. This sensor produces a black and white video in which the black, white and grey tones are directly related to the temperature of objects being filmed, the darker it appears on the image. The officers stopped the camera when they had to return to the base and the object disappeared behind the clouds.

THIS WAS A PLANE (IB6830)

The Navy immediately turned over the footage to the CEFAA, and General Bermúdez, accompanied by nuclear chemist Mario Avila, a CEFAA scientific committee member, conducted interviews with the two officers at their Navy base. “I was very impressed by these witnesses,” Avila told me. “They were highly trained professionals with many years experience, and they were absolutely certain that they could not explain what they saw.” Both offiicers also provided written reports at the base, as is required, and for CEFAA.

The Navy Captain stated that the object was a “flat, elongated structure” with “two thermal spotlights like discharges that did not coincide with the axel of motion.” The technician described it as as “white with a semi-oval shape on the horizontal axis.”

were the months during which Belgium, whose capital, Brussels, houses NATO's headquarters, experienced its great UFO wave.

Can this be coincidence?

Of course it can. Wilder coincidences happen every day. But Ouellet has called attention to a symbolic link that brilliantly answers the question of the meaning of the Belgian UFOs and makes the idea of random coincidence entirely unappealing.

Think about what people were seeing in the skies: three brilliant white lights, surrounding and enclosing a dimmer red light. Aha, Jung would have said: that's the "quaternity," the archetype that manifests as a group of four, of which the fourth is in some way different from the other three. (We'll soon take a closer look at the quaternity and its role in Jungian thought.) But substitute star for light, and a more concrete historical symbolism begins to emerge. The red star, as Ouellet points out, was a symbol for Communism. The white star was and remains the symbol of NATO.

@River_Advntures @rothschildmd Your article suggests a very high degree of high-level coordination with multiple people. I'm not saying there isn't some truth here, but it seems a bit speculative. http://pbs.twimg.com/media/EpE9lpUUcAAGxGU.jpg

So, to sum up, here is how likely to have happened. People like Roger Stone, Paul Manafort, Steve Bannon, Michael Flynn, William Binney, Steve Pieczenik, Robert David Steel, (and/or Jared Kushner, Dan Scavino, and Brad Parscale), drawing on strategies outlined by Jeff Giesea, Chuck Johnson, and Micheal Aquino, used companies like Psy-Group, WikiStrat, Black Cube, and Cambridge Analytica, to develop a strategy to drive support for Donald Trump. That involved a lot of things, including this project called "Q". They used people like Thomas Schoenberger and Lisa Clapier, who used used puzzle-like strategies and cult-like recruitment techniques, along with a small battalion of passionate trolls, to create an ARG style Psy-Op, based a military-thriller conspiracy-core wrapped in a New-Age outer facade. It played right into pre-existing sociological conditions and psychological frameworks. People like Tracy Beanz, Coleman Rogers, Paul Furber, Joe M, Jordan Slather, and Ron and Jim Watkins, were either knowingly or unknowingly used to take the Operation to a wider audience. From there, various influencers built significant and monetizable audiences by posting content from the Q Universe, and a self affirming community began to grow. Companies like Cambridge Analytica and Gloo then used big data to target the content exactly where it would make the most difference, which was further fuelled by algorithms designed to keep people on platforms for profit, by recommending compelling content. It's all supported and amplified by outlets like OANN and Breitbart, and whoever else has an interest in a Trump administration.

This might be useful perspective on descriptions of flying past a UFO in a jet.

@jonglau @TomSuesss @FettuccineSplit @MiddleOfMayhem Nothing suspicious here, with the "squares". It's how jpeg compression works. It splits an image into 8x8 blocks, and each block is encoded in a way that incorporates all the pixels. With higher compression settings, this means things leak into other pixels in the 8x8 http://pbs.twimg.com/media/Eo54B26UcAIrI4U.jpg

Lots of data also means LOTS of false positives - especially if your criteria is "unidentified". There will simply be lots of UFOs in the LIZ.

@JLuvin @RichardGHopf @nibbleshift You are assuming a so-far mythical set "these" things exists that needs observing and explaining.

UFOs exist in a low information zone. Better observations push that zone back. Historically the UFOs have not been uncovered with better observations, but have moved with the zone.

@swimslider @JLuvin @Oswald1160 @Debriefmedia Here's a normal party balloon using helium that went to 30,000 feet.
http://www.aprs.org/balloons/Balloon2018/Pico-Anika-summer/Pico%20Balloon%20Report%20paper%20rev12a.docx http://pbs.twimg.com/media/EogIyalU0AAetgP.jpg

GPS signal. Inside, it will only display the red LED which flashed "hi" in Morse code. The system current was verified with a bench supply set to 4.5 volts.

Filling the Balloon: To fill the 36" Mylar balloon with the correct amount of helium, we inserted a 12" white straw-like tube into the opening of the balloon. The 12" length is needed to get past the self-sealing neck of the balloon. Then we attached a weight onto the balloon that along with the white tube weighed 3 grams more than the Skytracker. We filled the balloon until it was neutrally buoyant with the test mass, then took out the tube and unhooked the test mass and taped the balloon filling hole shut. We attached the Skytracker to the balloon with a fishing swivel. To verify the 3g free lift, we taped a nickel (5g) and verified the balloon sank. Then tried a penny (2g) and the balloon rose, thus verifying we had about 3g of free lift.

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/EogIszzUUAEdGQF.jpg

Tracking and Data: All of the data from APRS.FI was pasted into Notepad so we could remove all extraneous non-telemetry and duplicate packets. Then the telemetry was imported into Excel selecting delimited format to align all the columns. Then we converted the time stamps into seconds, and graphed it with altitude. The graph in Figure 5 shows that the early altitude increased and steadily approached a constant value of about 27,000 ft. .

There were variations and the highest altitude reached during the flight was 30,506 ft, but the average was around 28,000ft, the lowest temperature was reported at 8°C, the highest voltage recorded was 6.34V, the average number of GPS satellites being tracked by the payload was about 10, and the transmitting frequency stayed the same at 144.390MHz and 144.340MHz since unfortunately, the balloon never left the United States as shown in Figure 6.

Saying that none of the specific incidents are key indicates none of them really hold up to scrutiny. There are zero compelling examples. Lots of uncompelling examples does not make a good pattern.

> In a video posted to a DLive account run by someone with the username CultureWarCrimnal, the group of men claims to have driven for over 5 hours to get to the statue's site, streaming most of the time. The man who appears in the later video is wearing military fatigues and camo face paint. He's vaping while saying things like, "I will fuck you to death if you don't sing." The group goes on to sing "Battle Hymn of the Republic" and other military-centric songs, all while greeting his viewers with vulgar, racist commentary. Two other members in the back of the car have combat helmets on with night-vision goggles attached.

A senior source in Raffensperger's office told Fox News that the video has been investigated and claims that it showed ballot fraud deemed unfounded, adding that Fulton County election officials had a designated observer at the location the entire time -- a practice that has been in place since June.

Raffensperger's office also debunked allegations that the ballots were stuffed in a pair of "suitcases" that one election official pulled out from beneath a table in the video, saying footage shows the ballots in the cases that they were supposed to be kept in.

The West Georgia Amateur Radio Society is in the very beginning stages of planning to launch a pico balloon. These are Mylar balloons (just like the silver party balloons) with an incredibly light payload transmitting its location using APRS or WSPR. These balloons are inflated just enough to reach the jet stream and then stall out there, allowing them to travel thousands of miles. Some have even traveled around the world.

WX4BK gave a presentation at our last club meeting about the WSPR mode that our balloon will be using. You can view it as a PDF here, and as a PowerPoint here.

We will keep you updated on the progress of our project and the information to track it once it's in flight.

@c64f7e94 @blackvaultcom @Debriefmedia It was described as montionless. Like a balloon.

@lumendrift @Debriefmedia Because it looks like one, and appears motionless, which is what they appear like, from a moving plane.

@JLuvin @Debriefmedia The pilots would see the same thing. They would not be able to determine the groundspeed of a drifting balloon at 30,000 feet.

What radar are you referring to?

@danieljmedeiros @Debriefmedia Yes, but mostly PA-28s.

The thing is, there's no real need for mental gymnastics here (not that there's anything wrong with that). It's really really simple.

Does it not look like a balloon?

What would it look like if "affected by ambient air currents" as opposed to "stationary"?

2020-12-03T18:26:20+00:00
https://twitter.com/_/status/1334564641565917185
@ExoExplorer3 @Debriefmedia I stand by my initial assessment. It's obviously a balloon. And describing it as not affected by the air currents is ridiculous.

@bartjpx @ExploringLife42 You'd think they could be a bit more specific than "large". What's that? 1 foot? 10 feet? 1000 feet?

https://twitter.com/_/status/1334563640016396288

@swimslider @Debriefmedia No, this is all stuff that was immediately apparent. I did not need to make anything up. Balloon relative motion is a commonly misunderstand thing I've looked at in-depth for years.

2020-12-03T18:21:06+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/1334563326634782720

@Rahzsah @Debriefmedia I don't think they do see them often at that altitude. And it's a cool looking shape. They didn't recognize it as a balloon.

2020-12-03T18:19:32+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/1334562929899753472

@ExploringLife42 @Debriefmedia They move with the air, 30-100 knots. But as there's no fixed frame of reference from a plane, you can't tell what their groundspeed is.

@JLuvin @Debriefmedia Stationary relative to what? The rationale given attributed to "pilots" of "seemingly unaffected by ambient air currents" is ridiculous.

All balloons above a few hundred feet look "stationary" from a plane

https://twitter.com/_/status/1334560371227516928

@Debriefmedia It's obviously a balloon. At that altitude, they look motionless because there's no frame of reference and the air flow is largely non-turbulent. How on earth would a pilot detect the slow drifting motion?

2020-12-03T18:07:42+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/1334559952149471233

@Debriefmedia "pilots who encountered the object described that, unlike a balloon under similar conditions, the object was completely motionless and seemingly unaffected by ambient air currents."

So they often see balloons in similar circumstances then?

Ridiculous.

There's a few tranmedium or multi-modal patents. Here's one with the trifecta!

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/EoRneLpVoAEhjTW.jpg

(54) Title : VERTICAL TAKE-OFF AND LANDING MULTIMODAL, MULTIENVIRONMENT, GYROPENDULAR CRAFT WITH COMPENSATORY PROPULSION AND FLUIDIC GRADIENT COLLIMATION

(54) Titre : ENGIN GYROPENDULAIRE À PROPULSION COMPENSATOIRE ET COLLIMATION DE GRADIENT FLUIDIQUE, MULTI-MILIEUX, MULTIMODAL, À DÉCOLLAGE ET ATTERRISSAGE VERTICAL

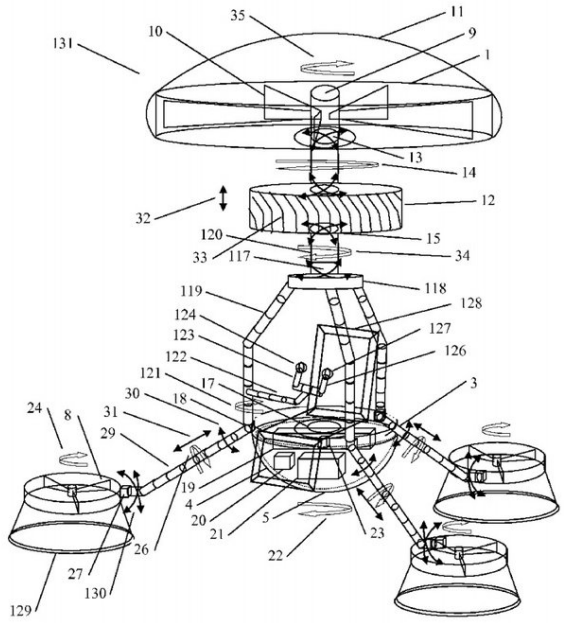

FIG. 18

(57) Abstract : The invention relates to a vertical take-off and landing gyropendular craft or drone device (FIG. 18) able to move around in the fbllowing différent physical environments: in the air, on land, at sea, underwater or in space, comprising upper and lower propulsion units, equipped with an annular fairing accommodating a certain number of electronically slaved wing or gas-powered drive or propulsion units situated in the continuation of the axis of this device, mounted on 3-D swivels at the ends of a certain number of telescopic rods, for example set at 120° apart at the periphery of the platform and orientable about the three axes according to the plane of flight of the multimodal multi-environment craft, a vertébral structure by way of a 3-D articulated central body of solid or hollow cylindrical shape for forming a stabilized function of stabilizing, maintaining the position and heading, and of an inertial rotary dise platform equipped underneath with a cabin of hemispherical shape extending from the vertébral structure, accommodating a payload or a useful application, designed for various fields of application e.g. the sector of defence or civil security, so as to perform fonctions of search and rescue, exploration, navigation, transport, surveillance and télécommunications infrastructure deployment in free space.

Eccentric old general McInerney spins crazy conspiracy theories about the army raiding CIA servers in Germany.

So the army debunks him.

https://www.militarytimes.com/news/your-army/2020/12/01/this-retired-three-star-falsely-claims-us-soldiers-died-attacking-a-cia-facility-in-germany-tied-to-election-fraud/
http://pbs.twimg.com/media/EoRiy1JUUAcMTr-.jpg

U.S. military officials did not mince words about the veracity of McInerney's claims.

"The allegations are false," a USASOC spokesman told Military Times. The command has not had a fatal incident since two soldiers died in a helicopter crash in California this August, and the most recent Special Forces combat deaths resulted from an insider attack that killed two in Afghanistan on Feb. 8.

An Army spokesman also denied this theory when reached by Military Times, describing the allegations as "definitely false."

“Ms. Jacob’s information is generalized. It asserts behavior with no date, location or frequency or names of employees,” he wrote. “In addition, [she] offers no indication of whether she took steps to address the alleged misconduct or to [alert] any supervisor about the alleged voter fraud. Ms. Jacob only came forward after the unofficial results of the voting indicated former Vice President Biden was the winner in the state of Michigan.”

Jacob is not a party to the lawsuit, which was filed by Wayne County voters Cheryl A. Costantino and Edward P. McCall Jr. The complaint, relying on affidavits from Jacob and others, alleges poll workers were instructed by election officials to not verify signatures on absentee ballots and process them regardless of their validity.

Kenny rejected Jacob’s assertion of a “sinister motive” on the part of election officials, pointing specifically to her claims that supervisors told her not to compare signatures to verify voter eligibility and directed her to pre-date absentee ballots received at Detroit’s TCF Center the day after Election Day.

“Evidence offered by long-time State Elections Director Christopher Thomas, however, reveals there was no need for comparison of signatures at the TCF Center because eligibility had been reviewed and determined at the Detroit election headquarters,” the ruling states. “As to the allegation of ‘pre-dating’ ballots, Mr. Thomas explains that this action completed a data field inadvertently left blank during the initial absentee ballot verification process.”

Senate panel backs assessment that Russia interfered in 2016

Senate Intelligence Committee Chairman Richard Burr, R-N.C., said in a statement that his panel "found no reason to dispute" the intelligence community's conclusions, saying they reflected strong tradecraft and analytical reasoning.

He said the agencies' conclusion that such election interference is "the new normal" has been borne out in the three years since it was published.

"With the 2020 presidential election approaching, it's more important than ever that we remain vigilant against the threat of interference from hostile foreign actors," Burr said.

The Senate report calls the agencies' assessment an "impressive accomplishment" and endorses its core conclusions that Russia had interfered on a grand scale in the election and that Putin directed the interference.

"The Committee found that specific intelligence as well as open source assessments support the assessment that President Putin approved and directed aspects of this influence campaign," the Senate report states.

@JLuvin They are concerned about airspace incursions. That is actually quite normal and expected.

Where did they say there were concerned about "identifiable objects which perform maneuvers like nothing in human inventory" @PostDisclosure @uelbus @OceanUAP No, I'm repeating the position of the Pentagon spokesperson.

"DOD does not discuss publicly the details of either the observations or the examination of reported incursions ... including those incursions initially designated as UAP "

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/EoQukpKVEAEOayw.jpg

1) What are each of the three videos (FLIR1, GOFAST, and GIMBAL) currently classified as?

A: The objects in the videos remain characterized as "unidentified." Unidentified means we cannot definitively determine what they are.

2) If, after examination, it was determined that a video had a plausible explanation as an aircraft or balloon, then would that classification publically change?

A: The official designation would change if we definitively identify the objects. However, any report generated as a result of these investigations will, by necessity, include classified information on military operations. Therefore, no release of information to the general public is expected.

3) Would it change if the exact aircraft was identified?

A: The official designation would change if we definitively identify the objects. However, any report generated as a result of these investigations will, by necessity, include classified information on military operations. Therefore, no release of information to the general public is expected.

4) Has the military determined that
4a) FLIR1 shows an object essentially in level flight, making no sudden maneuvers
4b) GIMBAL shows an IR glare that rotates due to the camera's gimbal rotation.
4c) GOFAST shows an illusion of speed, a high slow object appearing to be a low fast one.
A: To maintain operations security and to avoid disclosing information that may be useful to our adversaries, DOD does not discuss publicly the details of either the observations or the examination of reported incursions into our training ranges or designated airspace, including those incursions initially designated as UAP.

5) Other than being designated UAP's What more can you tell me about what is thought to be show in each video?
A: To maintain operations security and to avoid disclosing information that may be useful to our adversaries, DOD does not discuss publicly the details of either the observations or the examination of reported incursions into our training ranges or designated airspace, including those incursions initially designated as UAP.

6) Have any of the videos been used in pilot training?
A: No.

[Second email]
One follow up regarding question #1:
7) Would a distant plane of undetermined type and origin "remain characterized as 'unidentified'" even if could be determined that it was a plane.
A: To maintain operations security and to avoid disclosing information that may be useful to our adversaries, DOD does not discuss publicly the details of either the observations or the examination of reported incursions into our training ranges or designated airspace, including those incursions initially designated as UAP.

II. SUMMARY OF THE SYSTEM

The DS 5.10A computers represented in this system are all operating on Microsoft Windows 10 systems that were patched current at the time the trusted build was created by Pro V&V for the functional testing. Currently, Microsoft is scheduling Extended Support for Windows 10 until October 14, 2025. Microsoft is currently scheduling Extended Support for Server 2016 until January 1, 2027.

The network protocol used in the DS5.10A is Transmission Control Protocol/Internet Protocol (TCP/IP) using Dynamic Host Configuration Protocol (DHCP) for addressing. The DHCP service runs on both Election Event Designer (EED) and Results Tally Reporting (RTR) servers. Domain Name Service (DNS) is used for address resolution and runs on both servers. Unused ports are closed on all machines, and services that are not needed are disabled. The system is setup in a client server configuration, with all election data stored on the servers. This facilitates backups, and the server drives are encrypted. The Election Management System (EMS) and RTR servers utilize Dell Self Encrypting Drive (SED) Technology. These drives are provisioned with a key at installation time, and the EMS database files are stored under the encrypted disk drives. The encryption platform utilizes a National Institute of Standards and Technology (NIST) certified hardware-based cryptographic engine which provides real-time encryption and decryption of data using AES-256 algorithms. In addition, the encrypted storage platforms provide the access control through using iButton security keys.

The default storage configuration on the servers is two drives in a RAID 1 (Disk Mirroring) configuration for the operating system, and four drives in a RAID 10 (mirroring and striping) configuration for data storage.

The system does not include modems, or telecommunications devices, and there is no provision for accessing external networks. No failover/redundant configuration was tested, however, the servers each run both EED and RTR providing redundancy.

The Democracy Suite 5.10A voting system consists of eight major components.

1. Election Management System (EMS), v. 5.10.50.83

EMS is a set of the following applications that are responsible for pre-voting and post-voting activities, including ballot layout, generation of audio files, programming media for voting equipment, importing results data, and accumulating and reporting results.

a) EMS-Election Data Translator (EDT), v. 5.10.50.83

What the heck is wrong with exporting excel files? That's how you get the reports out. See page 90.

13.3 Defining Transfer Points and Exporting Results

Transfer points represent locations accessible via the network. Accumulated election results can be transferred to these locations and used for presentations and reporting. This feature not only presents results, but it also provides detailed reporting and analysis of these results. Election results appear in XML or XSLT transformed data formats (HTML, TXT, XHTML, SVG, etc.) that are created by using Election Results Transformation functionality in EMS Results Tally & Reporting to transform the election results data.

1. Expand the Settings menu and click the Transfer points menu item.
2. The Transfer Points List screen appears.
3. To add a new transfer point, click Add.
4. The Transfer Point Editor screen appears allowing you to define the Local and Global locations where you wish to send the results.
5. The Local refers to the location on the local drive, whereas the Global transfer point is defined within the EMS Database and is applicable for all EMS Results Tally & Reporting installations for a given election project.
6. In the Browse for Folder screen, click Browse to select the location of the Local folder.
7. To set the Global folder location, type in the full path of the target folder on the network.

   NOTE: If some mandatory fields are empty, an error message will appear, reading, "Not all mandatory fields are set". Click OK and enter all necessary information.

And it only shows exporting reports to a local location (13:50). There's a "global" option, but it's not clear what that means. Possibly remote server if local regs allow it.

But they've gone further. Attorney Sidney Powell has spun fictional tales of election systems flipping votes, German servers storing U.S. voting information and election software created in Venezuela "at the direction of Hugo Chavez," – the late Venezuelan president who died in 2013. Powell has since been removed from the legal team after an interview she gave where she threatened to "blow up" Georgia with a "biblical" court filing.

Barr didn't name Powell specifically but said: "There's been one assertion that would be systemic fraud and that would be the claim that machines were programmed essentially to skew the election results. And the DHS and DOJ have looked into that, and so far, we haven't seen anything to substantiate that."

The actual increase in Frankfurt's traffic was from 8.3 Tbps in Febuary, to 10 Tbps in November.

This is nothing at all to do with Dominion.

He said there was a jump from 7 TB/s to 10 TB/s.

But the Frankfurt "spike" was just part of a continual increase in bandwidth usage, unrelated to Dominion, that had been happening for weeks.

An "expert" witness at the Arizona election hearings claims there was increased traffic at a Dominion server from, but fails to explain how this was measured, and seems to conflate it with ALL the internet traffic in Frankfurt (peak 10 Tbps.)

Rather weak "evidence"

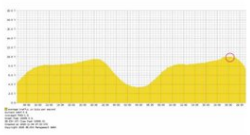
DE-CIX Frankfurt hits 10 Tbps peak traffic

This page is also available in: German



Last night, for the first time, we reached 10 Terabits per second peak traffic at DE-CIX Frankfurt.

We cannot say for sure what caused the peak (might be a combination of the Champions League, the US election, software upgrades, lockdown in Germany), but the traffic developments this year have been extraordinary due to the unpreceded situation we are living in. When we hit 8.3 Tbps in February, we predicted that we would reach 9 Tbps towards the end of the year. Instead, we exceeded that mark a mere two weeks later. And now we are at 10 Tbps – and what is usually the peak season in winter when people spend more time indoors is just around the corner.

Steady growth

Just under a year ago we topped 8 Tbps for the first time at DE-CIX Frankfurt. This year's constant traffic peak records at Frankfurt, and also at other DE-CIX Internet Exchanges like New York and Madrid, have been accompanied by a steady growth of our interconnection ecosystem.

In August we connected the 1,000th network in Frankfurt and at the moment, there are 1,016 networks connected. Currently worldwide, there are over 2,100 networks connected to our Internet Exchanges.

@GuessingJester @Oswald1160 @gummibear737 It was exaggerated. I saw reports of a "water main break", when it was just a leaking pipe in the ceiling. But that's irrelevant as ANY water dripping into a room is going to stop operations. That's what happened. Fixed leak, cleaned up, continued, about 4 hour delay.

h. The data variance favoring Vice President continues to accelerate after 4:30 AM EST on November 4, 2020 and continues until it momentum through November 9, 2020. This abnormality in variance is evident by the unusually steep slope for Vice President Biden in all battleground states on November 4, 2020. A sudden rise in slope is not normal and demonstrates data manipulation by artificial means. For example in PA, President Trump's lead of more than 700,000 count advantage was reduced to less than 300,000 in a few short hours, which does not occur in the real world without an external influence. I conclude that manually feeding more than 400,000 mostly absentee ballots cannot be accomplished in a short time frame (i.e., 2-3 hours) without illegal vote count alteration. In another case for Edison County, MI, Vice President Biden received more than 100% of the votes at 5:59 PM EST on November 4, 2020 and again he received 99.61% of the votes at 2:23 PM EST on November 5, 2020. These distributions are cause for concern and indicate fraud.

Navid-Keshavarz-Nia's affidavit seems to boil down to:
1) Election fraud is possible, and has happened in the past.
2) Based on stuff he's read on the internet, he thinks it's happened here.

Am I missing something, where is his actual analysis?

@InsingaMarc @gummibear737 This is only 2020 intent to vote absentee compared to actual 2016, but it gives a sense of the complex variations between states. AZ vs. PA, for example.

@InsingaMarc @gummibear737 AZ was 88% absentee votes (2,987,747/3,385,845)

PA was 38% ((1995691+595538+24783)/(3459923+3378263+79397))

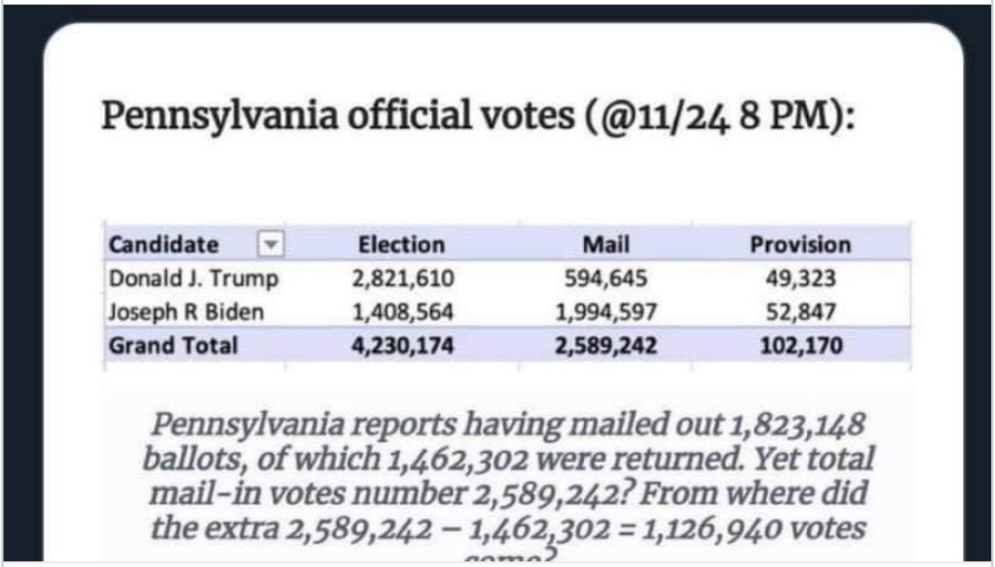
Donald J. Trump @realDonaldTrump · 15h

The 1,126,940 votes were created out of thin air. I won Pennsylvania by a lot, perhaps more than anyone will ever know. The Pennsylvania votes were RIGGED. All other swing states also. The world is watching!

Multiple sources called this election differently

Senator Doug Mastriano @SenMastriano · Nov 27

This was posted on our Department of State dashboard but had since been deleted.



Pennsylvania official votes (@11/24 8 PM):

Candidate	Election	Mail	Provision
Donald J. Trump	2,821,610	594,645	49,323
Joseph R Biden	1,408,564	1,994,597	52,847
Grand Total	4,230,174	2,589,242	102,170

Pennsylvania reports having mailed out 1,823,148 ballots, of which 1,462,302 were returned. Yet total mail-in votes number 2,589,242? From where did the extra 2,589,242 – 1,462,302 = 1,126,940 votes

Multiple sources called this election differently

The deadline for requesting mail-in ballots was several days later (Oct. 27), and by then over 3 million mail-in ballots were requested, of which over 2.6 million were ultimately returned by the specified deadline for ballot counting:

Mail Ballots Returned: 2,629,183

Mail Ballots Returned by Party Registration

Party	Returned Ballots	Freq. Distribution	Requested Ballots	Return Rate
Democrats	1,702,623	64.8	1,941,436	87.7
Republicans	623,098	23.7	785,083	79.4
Minor	20,090	0.8	25,369	79.2
No Party Affiliation	283,372	10.8	336,235	84.3
TOTAL	2,629,183	100.0	3,088,123	85.1

The numbers reiterated by Trump and his supporters in an attempt to prove election fraud in Pennsylvania bore no relationship to the total of mail-in votes recorded in that state and were not proof of any type of malfeasance or major error in vote-counting.

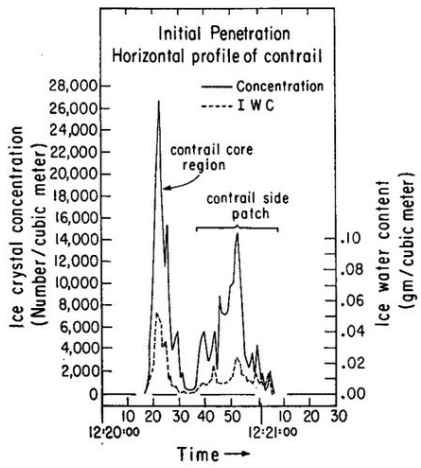

FIG. 6. Concentration and ice water content horizontal profiles in contrail 18 min after generation.

data are given in Figs. 8 and 9. The upper passes in these cross sections were within 100 m of the top of the contrail core and the estimated IWC isopleths should be reasonably good. The lower levels are less certain.

The size distributions in regions of high IWC are similar in appearance to those in low IWC, the change in IWC following the change in concentration very closely and not strongly influenced by crystal size (see Figs. 8 and 9). Many of the distributions in these that there is a limited supply of ice crystals, and as growth proceeds the larger crystals fall out leaving smaller crystals to grow until the entire supply is exhausted. Both cross sections show the highest IWC in the region of the lowest passes which is probably the result of continued growth during fallout. The final pass in the same region as the upper pass in cross section A, but 12 min later (1247) revealed only a few crystals remaining at this level. The entire region rapidly decayed and completely disappeared by 1300.

Since the contrail core was a fairly continuous segment, computations of total ice per meter of flight path should be suitable for comparison with the exhausted water from the aircraft. Only the region between the passes was integrated. The values computed were 4.12×10^4 gm m^{-1} and 2.07×10^4 gm m^{-1} for cross sections A and B. There are at least four orders of magnitude more ice present in the contrail core than the Sabreliner originally exhausted! Furthermore, these values are underestimates for the following reasons:

1) The IWC above and below the pass levels wasn't added to the total ice m^{-1}.
2) The IWC in satellite patches such as that in Fig. 6 obviously arose from the contrail and once added would increase the ice m^{-1}.
3) During the course of the experiment (45 min) a continuous flux of crystals was falling out to lower levels and evaporating.
4) The spectrometer measured no IWC from crystals smaller than 75 μ.

Detroit Can't Be Certified, but Livonia Can

One area that caused criticism for the Republican canvassers was the racial motivation seemingly behind the decision to discount Detroit's votes while not discounting those of Livonia, which had a similar rate of out-of-balance districts. The key difference between Detroit and Livionia, besides scale, is racial diversity.

"Republican Board of Canvassers' refusal to certify Wayne County election results is a racist attempt to disenfranchise Black voters in Detroit—Monica Palmer said it herself when she suggested they certify all results except for Detroit," said the group Progress Michigan in a statement to The 'Gander. "Livonia, which is primarily white, was mentioned by staff as having the second highest number of out of balance precincts, but Palmer said she would still certify their results. This is a racist, right-wing power grab fueled by partisan politics and Trump's last-ditch efforts to ignore the will of the people."

For Detroiters, that distinction between them and Livonia was disappointing, but not surprising. Detroit attorney Jamonte Cannon told The 'Gander that race was central to the desire to certify one city and not the other.

@fylth1 @PostDisclosure @BobMcGwier_N4HY @LtTimMcMillan I have an explanation.

UFOs in photos are probably just ordinary objects that are too far away to see clearly.

Close-up eyewitness accounts are not backed up with photos, so might not be as interesting as they seem.

@mattjdavidson @Oswald1160 Wait, what extent am I claiming?

The percentage of UFO fans who are QAnon supporters is probably similar to the percentage of Football Fans who are QAnon supporters. That does not make them entwined.

@mattjdavidson @Oswald1160 Who said that?

Obviously, lots of the searches for a term reflect public interest (driven by the media), not public belief.

Qanon encompasses a lot of the traditional conspiracies as a kind of generally agreed-upon substrate. Few hardcore anons would doubt UFOs are aliens.

UFOs got a nice spike in 2020 with the "official" Navy videos, but that's rapidly fading away. JFK is a perennial, but not super exciting. The 2013 JFK spike was for the 50th anniversary.

They will all survive, of course. But QAnon is rapidly becoming an encompassing framework.

TRUMP LEGAL TEAM DISTANCES FROM SIDNEY POWELL

President Donald Trump's legal team distanced themselves from attorney Sidney Powell on Sunday evening, noting that she did not represent the president, either as part of the team or in his personal capacity.

In a statement attributed to Trump attorney Rudy Giuliani, and Trump legal adviser Jenna Ellis, the team said: "Sidney Powell is practicing law on her own. She is not a member of the Trump Legal Team. She is also not a lawyer for the President in his personal capacity."

A source who spoke to Breitbart News on background suggested that the team had hoped to work with her, but that Powell's public claims had gone beyond the scope of the evidence they had seen and believed they could prove in court.

@SGMTweetings Seems like he just does not know what he's talking about, at the state level, where the elections happen. http://pbs.twimg.com/media/EnVDPMOXUAQ_Axq.jpg

"States typically have primary responsibility for making decisions about the rules of elections (policymaking)," the report explains. "Localities typically have primary responsibility for conducting elections in accordance with those rules (implementation)."

In fact, in his appearance on Newsmax, Trainor acknowledged that he had not been briefed on the matter.

"We really haven't been briefed on any of it given that we don't — you know, the states control the elections and the FEC really doesn't have any jurisdiction over how these are being handled at the state level," he said. "For the federal level, they would communicate through the Election Assistance Commission."

(U.S. Election Assistance Commissioner Ben Hovland called false claims about the election "baffling," "laughable" and "insulting," per CNN.)

Trainor is a Republican lawyer who advised Trump in 2016.

He was nominated by Trump in 2017, though he was not confirmed by the Senate until May 2020, according to the Washington Post.

In September, Trainor called the upcoming contest between Trump and former Vice President Joe Biden a "spiritual war."

TRUMP LAWYER SIDNEY POWELL RESPONDS TO TUCKER CARLSON: 'HE WAS INSULTING, DEMANDING AND RUDE'

by JEFF POOR | 20 Nov 2020 | 3,993

Friday on Fox Business Network's "Morning with Maria," Trump lawyer Sidney Powell responded to Tucker Carlson, who a night earlier had said his show had asked for evidence from Powell to back up allegations electronic voting machines had changed millions of votes that went for President Donald Trump.

Powell called Carlson's requests "insulting, demanding and rude."

"I didn't get angry with the request to provide evidence," she said. "In fact, I sent an affidavit to Tucker that I had not even attached to a pleading yet to help him understand the situation, and I offered him another witness who could explain the math and the statistical evidence far better than I can. I'm not really a numbers person."

"He was insulting, demanding and rude," Powell added. "And I told him not to contact me again, in those terms."

@TDBrigham I suspect here have been investigations, the results of which are classified (just by default, not necessarily because of anything amazing).

Their motivations are that they have more important issues to deal with.

@MarkWal06578936 @Oswald1160 @SoluKat @oncetfil @ConceptualJames I've been looking for it. I've looked at many claims, and written numerous posts, done extensive analysis, built detailed models, dug deep.

The claims of evidence collapse under scrutiny.

So what do you think is the best evidence. Pick one.

@politicsobserv5 @Oswald1160 And to the "so, not debunked" point. I was asking for old claims. You linked to a new one.

Regardless, it did not stand the test of time, it was debunked. Just like what seems like everything else.

@politicsobserv5 @Oswald1160 No, it's more that cities have lots of voters in, and the cities here are VERY Democrat leaning. The City of Detroit has historically been 96% (or more) D for decades.

Trump though this drop of mail-in votes from Wayne County was suspicious because he only got 4% of it.

Turns out that's more than the 2.5% he got there in 2016, like Romney (2012) and McCain (2008).

So 4% is actually high. http://pbs.twimg.com/media/EnQGKNvVQAIEKFc.jpg

What Giuliani is doing is a Bannon strategy called "Flooding the zone with shit." It's designed to force the media to keep changing topics so that people can't tell what's real and what's a lie.

https://www.wxyz.com/news/whitmer-kidnapping-plot/alleged-ringleader-in-whitmer-kidnapping-plot-planned-to-take-hostages-at-capitol-building-set-it-on-fire

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/EnOdiwUVkAAL3Ds.jpg

In a chat thread on an encypted platform following that day, Musico declared that he was attempting to get the State Troopers to touch him.[17]

There was a 2nd Amendment rally at the Lansing Capitol Building on June 18, 2020. Joe Morrison, Pete Musico, Ty Garbin, Paul Bellar, Daniel Harris, Adam Fox and Amanda Keller were all in attendance. When Adam Fox met the Wolverine Watchmen, he immediately put his hands on their chest and back checking for "wires".[18]

Adam Fox spoke to them regarding his current strategy, which consisted of a primary plan and a secondary plan.[19] Plan A consisted of recruiting 200 men and then storm the Capitol building in Lansing while Congress was in session. They were to take hostages, execute tyrants and have it televised. It would take about one week and that no one is coming out alive.

The secondary plan was to storm the Capitol building in Lansing when Congress was in session. They would then lock the entrances/exits to the structure. They would then set the building on fire.

Defendant Musico suggested that there were tactical difficulties with the main strategy, stating it was a "fishbowl" around the Capitol building. Musico, referring to the politicians, stated "everyone has addresses" and then suggested they look up the addresses of the politician's residences and execute the secondary plan at the politician's residences. Adam Fox also referenced a meeting/training event in Wisconsin on the second weekend of July and invited the Wolverine Watchmen to attend. Both Joe Morrison and Pete Musico indicated they were interested in attending.[20]

The above information is just a small portion of the statements and actions of this defendant. The Court should be aware that the people have hours of conversations of this defendant on tape expounding his terroristic views.

MCR 6.106(F) also allows the Court to consider a defendant's past record:

(F) Decision; Statement of Reasons

(1) In deciding which release to use and what terms and conditions to impose, the court is to consider relevant information, including
(a) defendant's prior criminal record, including juvenile offenses.

@markocheese @EireScientist "It was at 8NM and all-bets-are-off weird" isn't really a testable hypothesis.

"It was a jet, flying away about 35NM distant" is testable. So getting footage of a jet at that distance, to test the hypothesis, would be ideal.

It's tricky, I know, as accounting is more complicated than we think it is. But accounting also makes it VERY hard to lose trillions.

ATFLIR is a $20 Million targeting pod.

@markocheese @EireScientist Indeed, one wants to change as few things as possible. It's not like you can just point a hot knife at a wall or something.

It does not need to be at a known distance. Just small on-screen would be a great start.

However, NAR would be ideal, as the optical path affects glare.

This would be very useful.

There's no better public footage of an ATFLIR in operation than the Gimbal/Gofast videos. Presenting a bunch of duplicated crops from WORSE videos does not change that fact.

The military is saying releasing new footage damages national security. It's not complicated.

Don’t tell us releasing ATFLIR footage damages national security.

Every single one of these images is ATFLIR.

@MickWest is full of it when he says there’s no good public ATFLIR footage.

(Also, per the AFOSI investigation, ATFLIR symbology is not inherently classified)

In the course of processing your FOIA request, our office contacted the Unidentified Aerial Phenomena Task Force (UAP Task Force) to conduct a search for applicable records. Accordingly, that office searched their local files for records relating to "a copy of records, electronic or otherwise, of all videos with the designation of "unidentified aerial phenomena" or UAP, as archived by the U.S. Navy...". The UAP Task Force has responded back to DNS-36 and have stated that the requested videos contain sensitive information pertaining to Unidentified Aerial Phenomena (UAP) and are classified and are exempt from disclosure in their entirety under exemption 5 U.S.C. § 552 (b)(1) in accordance with Executive Order 13526 and the UAP Security Classification Guide. The release of this information will harm national security as it may provide adversaries valuable information regarding Department of Defense/Navy operations, vulnerabilities, and/or capabilities. No portions of the videos can be segregated for release. While three UAP videos were released in the past, the facts specific to those three videos are unique in that those videos were initially released via unofficial channels before official release. Those events were discussed extensively in the public domain; in fact, major news outlets conducted specials on these events. Given the amount of information in the public domain regarding these encounters, it was possible to release the files without further damage to national security.

The release of this information will harm national security as it may provide adversaries valuable information regarding Department of Defense/Navy operations, vulnerabilities, and/or capabilities. No portions of the videos can be segregated for release. While three UAP videos were released in the past, the facts specific to those three videos are unique in that those videos were initially released via unofficial channels before official release. Those events were discussed extensively in the public domain; in fact, major news outlets conducted specials on these events. Given the amount of information in the public domain regarding these encounters, it was possible to release the files without further damage to national security.

I signed this petition because I want to figure out what the Gimbal video actually shows. There's probably more of it (and other videos) that can be released without jeopardizing national security. Crowdsourcing investigations might figure it out.

In the course of processing your FOIA request, our office contacted the Unidentified Aerial Phenomena Task Force (UAP Task Force) to conduct a search for applicable records. Accordingly, that office searched their local files for records relating to "a copy of records, electronic or otherwise, of all videos with the designation of "unidentified aerial phenomena" or UAP, as archived by the U.S. Navy...". The UAP Task Force has responded back to DNS-36 and have stated that the requested videos contain sensitive information pertaining to Unidentified Aerial Phenomena (UAP) and are classified and are exempt from disclosure in their entirety under exemption 5 U.S.C. § 552 (b)(1) in accordance with Executive Order 13526 and the UAP Security Classification Guide. The release of this information will harm national security as it may provide adversaries valuable information regarding Department of Defense/Navy operations, vulnerabilities, and/or capabilities. No portions of the videos can be segregated for release. While three UAP videos were released in the past, the facts specific to those three videos are unique in that those videos were initially released via unofficial channels before official release. This story begins on April 28, 2020, when The Black Vault filed FOIA case DON-NAVY-2020-007226 (later renumbered in November of 2020 after a bogus rejection and given new case number DON-NAVY-2021-001457) to the Naval Air Systems Command (NAVAIR), the same command that officially released the three UAP videos one day prior.

Dear John Greenwald,

SUBJECT: FOIA CASE DON-NAVY-2021-001457

This responds to your Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) request of 11/25/2020 in which you seek "a copy of records, electronic or otherwise, of all videos with the designation of "unidentified aerial phenomena" or UAP, as archived by NAVAIR. The responsive records, would also include those that were released officially on 4/28/20 via NAVAIR's FOIA reading room. I am seeking a copy of all other videos which would contain the same designation of UAP or "unidentified."

Our search for records included files maintained by our program office however, despite this diligent search, we were unable to locate responsive documents.

NAVAIR's official denial wherein they stated they had no additional UAP videos to release

The request was simple. It asked for all videos that were designated "Unidentified Aerial Phenomena", just like the FLIR1, Gimbal and GoFast videos that they had previously released and labeled as "UAP". The FOIA case filed sought ALL of them.

Is Coulthart pretending not to understand this?

The Navy isn't saying they are holding back UAP videos because they show aliens.

The are saying the videos reveal sensor technology and Navy capabilities and vulnerabilities.

i.e. it's about the ATFLIR, not the Gimbal object.

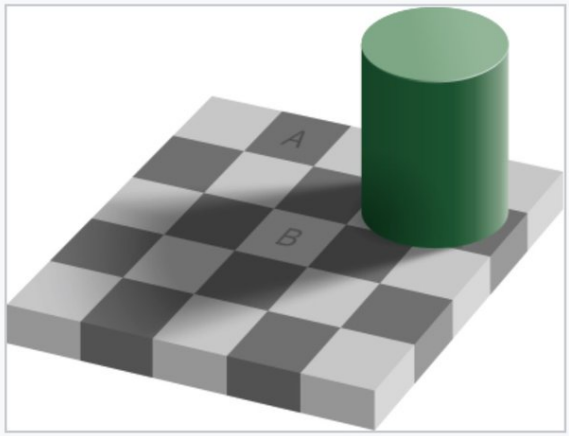
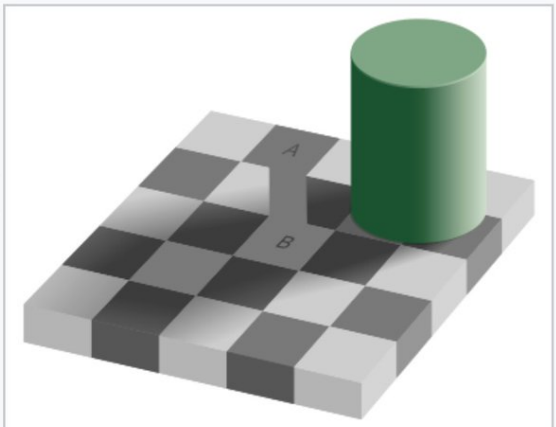
@ZimRavens @ufouapam There IS an optical illusion (better called a visual illusion). The Moon is perceived as being bigger by the brain, just like how square A and B SEEM like they are different colors, even though they are actually the same color.

The brain is not changing the image of the Moon.
http://pbs.twimg.com/media/FcNNjdHagAAQhiS.jpg



The checker shadow illusion. Although square A appears a darker shade of gray than square B, in the image the two have exactly the same luminance.



Drawing a connecting bar between the two squares breaks the illusion and shows that they are the same shade.

2/2. I've got thick skin. It's not affecting me, and I know a lot of it comes from personal experiences.

But are you (#ufotwitter) possibly contributing to the very thing you bemoan? Will scientists come into a field where they get attacked if they give the "wrong" answer?

@OiOcha_Dark I'm asking because it's the type of thing a UAP task force or the AOIMSG should ask, because it gives an idea of possible object density in the airspace.

@CattinDaniel The point is that it would give us a good idea of the density of UAPs in Navy operating areas.
If 50% of pilots saw one every week, then that's very different from 0.1% of pilots seeing one in their entire career.

@TheGuitarPhilo1 @jplatte11 @Cernunnos69 The camera motion is responsible for all the big moves. It's not moving fast in the sideways direction, and that might just be the ship.

@TheGuitarPhilo1 @jplatte11 @Cernunnos69 Like I said in the video, the slight sideway motion is likely parallax or just a small component of the velocity of something flying away. Like with FLIR1 moving slowly left.

@BrianDunning @marcbel19406167 This is the introduction to my book.
http://pbs.twimg.com/media/FXpAkvVUYAgybc3.jpg

Introduction

Conspiracies are very real, of course. The fact that powerful people make secret plans at the expense of the general public should come as no surprise to anyone. Nixon conspired to cover up Watergate. The CIA staged "false flag" operations in 1953 to bring down the Iranian government. Powerful men in the Reagan administration conspired to illegally trade arms with Iran to finance the Nicaraguan Contras. Enron conspired to shut down power stations to raise the price of electricity. Executives from Archer Daniels Midland conspired to fix the price of animal feed.[1] People within the second Bush administration conspired to present sketchy evidence as conclusive proof of WMDs to justify the invasion of Iraq. Politicians tacitly (and sometimes overtly) conspire with wealthy individuals and corporations, helping pass favorable legislation in exchange for campaign contributions, or sometimes just bribes.[2] The prison industry conspires to get those politicians to incarcerate more people simply to maximize their profits.[3]

Nobody sensible is denying that conspiracies happen. These are well documented and undisputed facts. Conspiracies very clearly have happened and will continue to happen. Nobody is asking you to trust that the people in power always have your best interests at heart, because they clearly do not. Nobody is asking you to blindly trust the government, or big pharma, or any large entity with a gross amount of power, wealth, and influence. A key aspect of a well-functioning democracy is that the government should be subject to scrutiny.

Conspiracies are real, but with every one of these very real conspiracies and plausible potential conspiracy there's a slew of false conspiracy theories.

@SimonTemplar741 I think I help a little in accurately understanding what we are looking at in some videos.

Investigating and explaining the green pyramid video might have hurt the feelings of the person who filmed it, and Jeremy Corbell. But that does not mean I should have ignored it.

@CDVilsack @PThegermandude And I use the word "champion" in a very positive sense. Everyone could do with someone championing their cause. I got my book deal, and it was on the shelves of B&N because I had a champion (my editor) who believed in me. Before that Joe Rogan championed my skepticism somewhat.

@droneologists I think the argument is that I have an indirect influence via things like a year-old opinion piece in USA-Today, or my minute share of the "expert" interviews that get shown on mainstream TV.

Also, I stand by what I say in those pieces, maybe with an occasional word change.

@VXxXZODXxXV I don't know of any cases that I would describe as "the real deal." Like the UAP report said, there are some reported unusual flight characteristics, but that could be other things. http://pbs.twimg.com/media/FXo0hXVVUAM2YZm.jpg

- As a result, the UAPTF concentrated its review on reports that occurred between 2004 and 2021, the majority of which are a result of this new tailored process to better capture UAP events through formalized reporting.
- Most of the UAP reported probably do represent physical objects given that a majority of UAP were registered across multiple sensors, to include radar, infrared, electro-optical, weapon seekers, and visual observation.

In a limited number of incidents, UAP reportedly appeared to exhibit unusual flight characteristics. These observations could be the result of sensor errors, spoofing, or observer misperception and require additional rigorous analysis.

There are probably multiple types of UAP requiring different explanations based on the range of appearances and behaviors described in the available reporting. Our analysis of the data supports the construct that if and when individual UAP incidents are resolved they will fall into one of five potential explanatory categories: airborne clutter, natural atmospheric phenomena, USG or U.S. industry developmental programs, foreign adversary systems, and a catchall “other” bin.

@SDiver500 @FullStackLogan @conterammundi @DietrichVFA41 @ThanosAlpha @Falkyrs @DavidJayB @1_2_of_Rodney I personally was referring to government disclosure (in the context of the UAP report) when I wrote that. I was not considering individual experiences to be part of that. I was not referring to some truth about the universe.

Just what the government has. http://pbs.twimg.com/media/FXlVqSiVQAEh_MY.jpg

Given the disappointing mundanity of the video evidence, what are we to expect from the upcoming UAP report, due in June? Well, UAPs represent a serious issue for the military. If aircraft incursions cannot rapidly be identified, or if a pilot cannot make sense of what they are seeing, or if radar returns show what looks like super-fast moving objects, then those are real problems. There's also the inevitability that foreign adversaries are developing novel forms of drones for spying and combat purposes, which we will need to detect and counter. These are all real issues, and that's what a comprehensive report should discuss, along with suggestions for better tracking and investigating such incidents.

Mysteries remain. What the pilots who reported engaging a giant flying Tic-Tac saw is still unidentified, as are the objects in several other incidents. The causes of ghostly or rapidly-moving radar returns are likewise, in many cases, unknown—although since the system is classified, if it's a system glitch or inadequacy, then the DoD isn't going to tell us. We'll also continue to have no good answer for many photos and videos, simply because the object shown is too far away for whatever camera is being used. But "unidentified" means just that. It does not mean advanced technology.

If the quality of the leaked evidence is any indicator (and it probably is) then there's not going to be any significant revelations about the existence of physics-defying craft, and certainly no strong evidence of visiting aliens. While the genuine issues that Obama raised deserve serious examination, there will be no disclosure because there is nothing to disclose.

@ZackCrainSinger Videos (like, say, Gimbal) are valid evidence (unless they are fake, which I don't think Gimbal is). Now if someone makes a claim that they say is supported by some evidence, but isn't, then it's their interpretation of the evidence that's not valid.

@ScottAdamsSays @The1stDeadman And yet here both the quantity and the ratio of the Milwaukee City votes were not unexpected. I 2012: 227K Obama, 56K Romney.

2016: 188K Clinton, 45K Trump
2020: 194K Biden, 48K Trump

They all had similar reporting spike.

Dean Knudson, the chairman of the state Elections Commission, said the law's provision for confined voters was meant to ensure shut-ins could cast ballots. Now that the state is reopening, voters whose movement is no longer limited should change their status on the voting rolls, he said.

"I think they should follow the law and notify their clerk that they're no longer indefinitely confined," said Knudson, a Republican.

Ann Jacobs, a Democrat who sits on the bipartisan commission, said she was not surprised to see so many people had called themselves confined given the public health threat the coronavirus presents.

"An otherwise healthy person who is now basically housebound is indefinitely confined," she said.

Some clerks are now getting in touch with voters to determine if they should still be considered confined. The state Elections Commission told clerks they could do

The alt-right Twitter alternative, Gab, seems to be calling for some kind of masculine Christian Crusade against Silicon Valley, Critical Race Theory, and inadequately godly churches.
http://pbs.twimg.com/media/EnEQrv1VQAQhhWX.jpg

This means, therefore, that we are supposed to get involved in life. God wants us to apply Christian standards everywhere, in every area. Spirituality does not mean retreat and withdrawal from life; it means dominion. The basic Christian confession of faith is that Jesus is Lord (Rom. 10:9-10) – Lord of all things, in heaven and on earth. As Lord, He is to be glorified in every area (Rom. 11:36). In terms of Christian Spirituality, in terms of God's requirements for Christian action in every area of life, there is no reason for retreat." – David Chilton

The time for emasculated, retreatist, "tolerant" Christianity is over.
We will not tolerate our destruction and persecution in our own countries.

The time for being Christian in name only is over.
Practice what you preach and live it. Lead by example.

The time for attending a church that compromises on the Gospel and the work and life of Jesus Christ is over.
Get yourself in a church that glorifies God instead of glorifying the world.

The time for being a Christian wimp is over.
Now is the time for a masculine, patriarchic, crusader "Jesus is King" Christian revival.

All heathen cultures have been statist and tyrannical, for a people who reject God will surrender themselves and their property to a dictator. (1 Sam. 8:7-20) -David Chilton

“Freedom cannot be exported to a nation that has no marketplace for the Gospel.“ -David Chilton

Freedom is rooted in the Christian worldview. There’s no denying this fact. As Christians our faith in Christ frees us from the chains of slavery to sin in a wicked, corrupt, and fallen world.

History shows us that Christians are the forefathers and defenders of all types of liberty including but not limited to freedom of speech, religious freedom, private property, and the creation of freest nation in the history of the world: the United States of America. Bible-believing Christians have always been defenders of the right to say “no.” We have a sacred duty as Christians to dissent against all forms of evil, wickedness, and terror be it from kings, demagogues, tyrants, or even from within the church itself.

6.4 CHANGE AND CONTINUITY

On November 7, 2000, American voters went to the polls in what turned out to be one of the closest presidential contests in U.S. history—an election campaign during which there was a notable absence of serious discussion of the al Qaeda threat or terrorism. Election night became a 36-day legal fight. Until the Supreme Court's 5–4 ruling on December 12 and Vice President Al Gore's concession, no one knew whether Gore or his Republican opponent, Texas Governor George W. Bush, would become president in 2001.

The dispute over the election and the 36-day delay cut in half the normal transition period. Given that a presidential election in the United States brings wholesale change in personnel, this loss of time hampered the new administration in identifying, recruiting, clearing, and obtaining Senate confirmation of key appointees.

permit. The only sure way to detect them is to seize the form before it can disappear in the cabinet, and while it is clad in its disguise. The most satisfactory method of proving the genuineness of the medium's work is to have him or her come to your own house, or to one that you know is not "fixed." Have a wooden cabinet or strong wire cage made, under your own direction, that can be securely locked. Then have the medium thoroughly searched and locked in the cabinet, and prevent any person who can possibly act as

How is it possible to think that ectoplasm, levitation, and voices out of nowhere have been "proven time and time again", and yet not be sure about life after death?

Maybe it's because NONE of those physics-defying things things have actually been proven.

@lesliekean http://pbs.twimg.com/media/Em2Uk01VcAAl_Bw.jpg

You reported observing some very mind-boggling phenomena in your investigation of Stewart Alexander, including ectoplasm materializing into a "living" hand, the levitation of objects, and independent voice. You also witnessed communications from loved ones and successful book tests. Is there any doubt in your mind today that these phenomena were genuine and not some kind of magic trick?

I have absolutely no doubt, not one iota. I did my due diligence. When I began sitting with Stewart's small circle in 2015, I thoroughly checked the seance room to make sure there was no way to sneak in or out, nothing hidden in the room, and nothing strange about Stewart's chair or seance room table. I brought my own cable ties which were pulled tightly around his bare wrists, the thinnest part of his arm, locking his wrists through a loop under his chair arms. The straps could only be removed with wire cutters.

Do you think 'absolute certainty' on this matter is possible or is even a good thing?

No, I don't think we can prove beyond a shadow of a doubt that we survive death. As a journalist (not a scientist), I'm looking rationally at the most compelling and reliable data, and presenting it in an accessible form so that readers can make up their own minds. For me, this is an ongoing journey, an exploration, a journalistic and personal foray into unchartered waters. Proof of any kind of afterlife is not the goal. However, the unusual phenomena described in my book actually do exist—this has been proven time and time again in published papers and through observation under controlled conditions. We cannot explain what the causative forces are or what they mean. I think the state of uncertainty - of never knowing and simply dwelling in the unknown - is a good thing.

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Advanced_Aerospace_Threat_Identification_Program

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/EmzjwPtVEAEcxX8.jpg

The Advanced Aerospace Threat Identification Program (AATIP)[1] was an unclassified but unpublicized investigatory effort funded by the United States Government to study unidentified flying objects (UFOs) or unexplained aerial phenomena (UAP).[2] The program was first made public on December 16, 2017. The program began in 2007, with funding of $22 million over the five years until the available appropriations were ended in 2012.[3][4][5] The program began in the U.S. Defense Intelligence Agency.[6]

According to the Department of Defense, the AATIP ended in 2012 after five years, however reporting suggested that U.S. government programs to investigate UFOs continued.[7] This was confirmed in June 2020 with the acknowledgement of a similar military program, the unclassified but previously-unreported Unidentified Aerial Phenomenon Task Force.[8]

@SGMTweetings @LtTimMcMillan @realDonaldTrump @FoxNews There's an active thread on Metabunk. But essentially the downward slope is expected as the effect of increasing the straight-ticket votes magnifies the Presidential split-ticket vote.
The slope of the scatterplot trend indicates the amount of split-party presidential votes.

@HighHeeledSue @hoaxeye It's only true in a weird abstract world where everyone knows exactly what the infection status of everyone else is at all times.

That world does not exist. In the real world, it's true but impossible. Hence "true".

We have to be pragmatic here, not argue over words.

https://twitter.com/_/status/1326960360784498689
@SeeingFive @hoaxeye That's an analogy. Meaning it's a different scenario that illustrates the issue.

Here, it illustrates that something being "your choice" does not make it acceptable if your choice puts others at risk.

Both going maskless and speeding are analogous in that context.

@HighHeeledSue @hoaxeye You said "â□□Maskless huggingâ□□ remains perfectly fine for every human being that isnâ□□t infected with the virus, which just happens to be the majority of the planet."

Which is "true", two uninfected people hugging is fine. But bullshit, because they don't know who is infected.

@SeeingFive @hoaxeye But it does not just affect them.

If you do something, like drive very fast down a street where children are playing, then that's your choice.

But it's frowned upon, discouraged, and illegal. Because it affects other people.

@HighHeeledSue @hoaxeye Driving without a seatbelt is perfectly fine for people who don't crash their cars.

You don't know if you have it. You don't know if the person you are hugging has it. If you roll the dice it's not just your life being put in danger. Or theirs. You have friends and relatives.

Growing Discomfort at Law Firms Representing Trump in Election Lawsuits

https://www.nytimes.com/2020/11/09/business/jones-day-trump-election-lawsuits.html?smid=tw-share http://pbs.twimg.com/media/EmbELnyU0AE_Jex.jpg

Some senior lawyers at Jones Day, one of the country's largest law firms, are worried that it is advancing arguments that lack evidence and may be helping Mr. Trump and his allies undermine the integrity of American elections, according to interviews with nine partners and associates, who spoke on the condition of anonymity to protect their jobs.

At another large firm, Porter Wright Morris & Arthur, based in Columbus, Ohio, lawyers have held internal meetings to voice similar concerns about their firm's election-related work for Mr. Trump and the Republican Party, according to people at the firm. At least one lawyer quit in protest.

@Louisemsugar @RBReich I don't think Real Clear Politics ever called PA. They are just an aggregator, not a media organization.

Repeated investigation (and litigation) has turned up nothing and probably will continue to do so.

If there WAS something, Trump's team would be all over it.

@BiscAnenome @MJMYuk @DineshDSouza I don't think this is something they generally announce, as it's irrelevant to the result. The registered voter totals in WI are released on the 1st of every month. The number out there is for Nov 1.

https://twitter.com/_/status/1325915244456157184

@ConceptualJames "arbitrary because it's symbolic" is an oxymoron. Symbolism is not arbitrary. Rituals, like shaking hands, anniversary parties, graduation ceremonies, etc., have meaning because they symbolize something tangible. The choice of ritual is not random either.

You need an example.

https://twitter.com/_/status/1325912017681616898

@hadrianwill @bstragnell @DineshDSouza The issue is that there's no evidence that he lost. Trump can pay for lawsuits and recounts. Why would Biden? He's so far ahead that nothing will change.

2020-11-09T21:13:59+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/1325909522389495808

@MJMYuk @DineshDSouza How would that help? Previous years have not calculated voter turnout as a percentage of registered voters. So if you are comparing against previous years, you should use the same method to calculate the numbers.

It had 73%, the same as in 2004.

@AbbyHartman @psychunseen @LymeScience @CultExpert @travis_view @_MAArgentino So maybe we do need to be a bit more specific here. QAnon (mostly) isn't like NXIVM.

Trump is suing because poll workers were allegedly letting through overvotes (possibly Sharpie created).

HOWEVER, analysis of previous shows there were FEWER overvotes this year. And fixing them would probably help Biden.

So basically, Trump is either lying, or he's got no real idea what is going on and is just repeating things that sound good him.

What it really boils down to is stuff like 10' or 6'.

Arguments over details are the death rattle of conspiracy theories.

> “The Clerk’s Office has traced the cause of the original errors on the posted unofficial election results. Late in the election preparation process, a minor correction was made to a ballot that caused additional compounding changes to how the software totals and presented the data. The skewed unofficial results were a result of procedural misunderstanding that the Clerk’s Office had never before experienced. At no point did these skewed, unofficial results have any bearing on the Official numbers currently being reviewed by the Board of Canvassers. Both the Antrim County Clerk and ElectionSource have taken steps to adjust policies and procedures to ensure that a similar situation does not happen in the future.

O'Keefe moved for summary judgment in his favor, arguing that the plaintiff had no reasonable expectation that the conversation would be private. In August 2012, the federal judge hearing the case denied O'Keefe's motion for summary judgment. The judge ruled that O'Keefe had "misled plaintiff to believe that the conversation would remain confidential by posing as a client seeking services from ACORN and asking whether their conversation was confidential."[62] On March 5, 2013, O'Keefe agreed to pay $100,000 to former California ACORN employee Juan Carlos Vera for breaking state law prohibiting surreptitious recording, and acknowledged in the settlement that at the time he published his video he was unaware that Vera had notified the police about the incident. The settlement contained the following apology: "O'Keefe regrets any pain suffered by Mr. Vera or his family."[63]

On June 14, 2010, the U.S. Government Accountability Office (GAO) published its report finding no evidence that ACORN, or any of its related organizations, had mishandled any of the $40 million in federal money which they had received in recent years.[12][13]

Claims of impossibly high turnout in Wisconsin continue to circulate. It's just 72.5%, lower than in 2004 (73.2%). But how can you verify this yourself?

@MJMYuk The issue is that in other states turnout is sometimes calculated as a percentage of registered voters.

They don't do that in WI. But people calculated it anyway, and then compared it against the older percentage of eligible voters, and were amazed at the (false) difference.

James Hirsen does not do Math, or Fact Checking, and assumes his followers won't either.

Actual WI turnout is high, but not astonishingly so. The key thing is same day voter registration, so turnout is a % of eligible voters, not registered.

https://www.usatoday.com/story/news/factcheck/2020/11/05/fact-check-wisconsin-voter-turnout-line-past-e http://pbs.twimg.com/media/EmK7SmkU0AALJnd.jpg

> Even more important, registered voters is the wrong figure entirely for calculating turnout. Voter turnout in a same-day registration state is based on the percentage of eligible voters who cast a ballot.
> So when you divide the number of votes cast in Wisconsin — 3,278,963 as of Nov. 5 — by the voting-age population in Wisconsin (4,536,293 as of 2019, according to the elections commission), you get a turnout rate of 72.3%.
>
> That's the highest rate ever behind the 2004 election, but solidly in the range of past presidential contests here.
> Recent presidential election turnouts in Wisconsin:
> - 2020 — 72.3%
> - 2016 — 67.3%
> - 2012 — 70.4%
> - 2008 — 69.2%
> - 2004 — 72.9%
> - 2000 — 67%

WI turnout 89% for Biden?

5.5 standard deviations above the average.

The odds = 0.00000189% (1 in 52,910,052).

The 6,000 vote discrepancy in Antrim County, Michigan, appears so far to be a one-off problem, a combination of human error and a software issue. It has been fixed, recounted, and the numbers in MI now reflect this. Biden still 146,123 votes ahead.

This is big. The software used to tabulate the votes in one county sent at least 6,000 Trump votes to Biden. 47 counties used the software. Other states may have, too. Was it a glitch or a "feature"?

Nebraska Sen. Ben Sasse, a conservative Republican who has distanced himself from Trump before, issued a blistering denunciation of the president's unfounded allegations.

"Voter fraud is poison to self-government, so these are major allegations. If the President's legal team has real evidence, they need to present it immediately to both the public and the courts," he said.

Sen. Pat Toomey, a Pennsylvania Republican, rejected Trump's aspersions on the integrity of ballot-counting in his state.

"The president's allegations of large-scale fraud and theft of the election are just not substantiated. I'm not aware of any significant wrongdoing here," Toomey said on NBC's "Today" show.

DUPLICATING BALLOTS: Ballots must not be duplicated until after the close of the polls. Exception: If the duplication of absent voter ballots will be carried out at an absent voter counting board precinct, ballots may be duplicated and tabulated throughout Election Day; it is not necessary to wait until after the close of the polls to begin the duplication process.

The procedures for duplicating ballots are detailed below:

- After identifying the ballots which must be duplicated, count out an equal number of unused ballots and remove the ballot stubs. At the top of the first "original" ballot to be duplicated write "1"; at the top of the blank ballot that will be used to create the "duplicate" write "Dup 1." Follow the same numbering system for the remaining ballots which must be duplicated, e.g.: "2" – "Dup 2"; "3" – "Dup 3"; etc.

- Duplicate the ballots using a reader-checker process with two election inspectors who have expressed different political party preferences. One election inspector calls the valid votes from the "original" ballot as the second election inspector records the votes to the "duplicate" ballot.

- After completing the duplication process, the election inspectors who handled the procedure must verify that:

  1) the "original" ballot is labeled at the top with a number "1" and the corresponding "duplicate" ballot is labeled at the top with "Dup 1" and

  2) that all valid marks have been transferred from the "original" ballot to the corresponding "duplicate" ballot.

As explained above, this same numbering scheme is continued for all ballots requiring duplication. The second "original" ballot to be duplicated is numbered "2" and the "duplicate" ballot is labeled "Dup 2," etc.

After the work is verified for accuracy, all "duplicate" ballots are tabulated. All "original" ballots are placed into a special envelope labeled "Original ballots for which duplicates were made and tabulated." The special envelope is sealed into a ballot container along with all other used and unused ballots following the close of the polls.

Why were those windows covered? What were they hiding?

They were hiding voter's private information from people taking photos though the window.

There were many observers inside the room.

Here's a typical procedure for duplicating damaged ballots. Note the voided ballots are stored and can be checked if there's a recount.

https://www.marincounty.org/depts/rv/election-info/election-policies-and-procedures/post-election-canvass/duplicating-damaged-ballots http://pbs.twimg.com/media/EmKAQ5KUcAIrPRd.jpg

Procedures — Two People Work as a Team

1. Sort ballots to be duplicated by precinct number.
2. Pull blank ballots to match the number of ballots to be duplicated within each precinct. Tear off voter receipt at top of ballot as needed.
3. Assign a serial number to use on the damaged and blank ballots. The format of the number is a combination of type of ballot, precinct number and sequential number, VBM 1-X. Example: VBM-1001-1, VBM-1001-2, etc.
   FED — outside the United States indefinitely (federal offices only) OSM — outside the United States temporarily or in the military POL — polling place or provisional ballot
   VBM — vote-by-mail or "all mail" precinct
4. Write the serial number, in red ink, in the upper right corner of both the damaged and blank ballot.
5. Stamp VOID on the damaged ballot.
6. Stamp DUPLICATE on the blank ballot.
7. One team member reads from the damaged ballot while the other team member marks the blank ballot.
8. Fill out the duplication log sheet for each ballot being duplicated and check the reason for the duplication.
9. Both team members initial the voided and the duplicated ballot.
10. Store the VOIDED ballots boxes marked as follows: VOID DAMAGED BALLOTS, type of ballot (VBM, POLLS, etc.), and the name and date of the election. Number the boxes 1 of 2, 2 of 2, etc. as needed.
11. Store DUPLICATE ballots, rubber-banded together in precinct order, in boxes that correspond to the boxes of voided ballots and mark in center of box, no more than 4" wide, as follows: DUPLICATES TO BE COUNTED, type of ballot (VBM, POLLS, etc.),date of the election and precinct range. Number the boxes 1 of X, 2 of X, etc. as needed.

Count the duplicate ballots together by type of ballot (VBM, POLL, etc.). Mark box of counted duplicated ballots as follows: COUNTED DUPLICATE BALLOTS, type of ballot, batch number, and date of election.

Store voided ballots in ballot room in case they have to be matched up with the duplicated ballots during a recount after the election.

Georgia and Arizona are Republican states. Their state Senates and Houses are Republican led. Their Attorneys General are Republicans.

There's no Democrat voter fraud that's going undetected there.

@SGMTweetings I know, I linked the ADL article that explains that. It also explains how it was adopted as a trolling tactic, and then evolved into (sometimes) a genuine expression of white supremacy. http://pbs.twimg.com/media/EmH77bRVMAArShi.jpg

In the case of the “okay” gesture, the hoax was so successful the symbol became a popular trolling tactic on the part of right-leaning individuals, who would often post photos to social media of themselves posing while making the “okay” gesture.

Ironically, some white supremacists themselves soon also participated in such trolling tactics, lending an actual credence to those who labeled the trolling gesture as racist in nature. By 2019, at least some white supremacists seem to have abandoned the ironic or satiric intent behind the original trolling campaign and used the symbol as a sincere expression of white supremacy, such as when Australian white supremacist Brenton Tarrant flashed the symbol during a March 2019 courtroom appearance soon after his arrest for allegedly murdering 50 people in a shooting spree at mosques in Christchurch, New Zealand.

Since 2010 there have been 22 voting fraud cases prosecuted in Arizona. Mostly people voting in more than on state. There were ZERO prosecutions in Arizona in 2018.

There were 30+ in Texas in 2018, but that's a red state this time, so no problem.

Arizona AG gets $530,000 to investigate election fraud

"They said that they want to show that the system is not plagued by fraud," Hobbs said. "So I'm taking that at face value."

Since 2010, the attorney general's office has successfully prosecuted 22 voting fraud cases, most of them people who voted in more than one state. The office received a handful of specific allegations of potential fraud from the 2018 election, but no charges have been filed, Anderson said.

Texas has an election fraud unit in the attorney general's office that prosecuted nearly three dozen people in 2018 over alleged election fraud.

Arizona AG gets $530,000 to investigate election fraud

PHOENIX (AP) — Arizona's attorney general is hiring four people dedicated to investigating alleged voter fraud amid accusations of widespread malfeasance in elections leveled without evidence by President Donald Trump and other Republicans.

Republican Attorney General Mark Brnovich isn't setting out to find support for those claims, his spokesman said, but rather to give people confidence in the outcome of elections — even if that means his new investigators find little or no wrongdoing. The budget signed this week by Republican Gov. Doug Ducey gives Brnovich $530,000 for the project.

"Consider us the 'MythBusters' of election fraud claims and rumors," said Ryan Anderson, a spokesman for Brnovich.

"If there is fraud, let's investigate it, let's prosecute it and work to eradicate it," Anderson said. "If there's not fraud, then let's give the public the confidence they deserve in their elections."

@star_bonez @murnut Sure, and that's why the election process is so rigorous, with so many checks. It's a lot of work, not without issues, but generally agreed to be safe and reliable. Several different agencies work on it. Election fraud is very serious. Law enforcement investigates.

Tossup Wisconsin won't be tipped by cheaters: Just 19 suspects in two years

By David Hawkings Sept. 17

Fresh numbers about voting fraud in Wisconsin, one of the essential tossup states in the presidential race, offer the latest evidence underscoring how wrong President Trump is about widespread cheating delegitimizing the election.

Nineteen. That's the grand total of instances of suspected fraud statewide during the past three elections: the 2018 midterm, the presidential primary in April and the regular primary last month. That's out of more than 5.2 million ballots cast in those elections.

And just three of the cases involved misuse of mailed ballots, the report Wednesday from the state Elections Commission said, even though voters have smashed previous records for Wisconsin's no-excuse absentee voting system amid the coronavirus pandemic.

Trump has asserted dozens of times that such a rapid expansion of mail voting will assure "massive" fraud this fall, and recently he's been arguing that's the only reason he could lose. Polling suggests otherwise — including a series of recent surveys showing former Vice President Joe Biden narrowly but consistently ahead in the race for Wisconsin's 10 electoral votes. Trump carried them by a sliver of 1 percentage point last time, breaking a seven-election winning streak by Democratic nominees.

The Elections Commission report detailed these cases of fraud, irregularities or violations (in Milwaukee and just eight of the state's other 71 counties) that municipal clerks in charge of election administration have sent to district attorneys in the past two years:

Darn Sky Riders

Jet Trails Dim Sun, Palm Springs Gripes

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6. (UPI)—The air force is long since resigned to the fuss about noise from its jets. Now comes Palm Springs, Calif., with a new complaint—that jet trails overhead are so thick they are beginning to blot out the sun.

Jimmy Cooper, manager of the Palm Springs Chamber of Commerce, outlined this "most serious and urgent problem" in a telegram to Representative D. S. (Judge) Saund (D-Calif.), who has asked the air force what can be done.

"As you know," Cooper wired Saund, "our entire economy is dependent upon the tourist trade, which is predicated on our bright sunshine and warm climate. Recently our sky has resembled a mob of exuberant sky riders performing an aerial circus.

"The 'contrails' are not disappearing but are breaking down into a haze and creating a cloud-like appearance in the sky.

"With the unlimited expanse of barren, uninhabited land in the west, does such activity have to be centered over a resort area, which is offering the visitor cloudless skies and unlimited sunshine?"

The air force, so far, is flabbergasted. No doubt in time it will recover its aplomb sufficiently to give Saund the usual answer to all congressional inquiries—that the matter will be investigated.

The air force figures its jets couldn't blot out the sun short of a wing-to-wing mass flight like the European bombing raids of World war II. If anything like that is going on out of March air force base at Riverside, Calif., the nearest jet base to Palm Springs, air force officials here want to know all about it.

Shill Ousted by Minister

TOPEKA, Kan., Dec. 6. (AP)—Maurice D. Tulloch, who gave up the life of a Baptist minister to become a shill in a Las Vegas gambling casino, was stripped of his ministerial standing yesterday.

The action was taken by the executive committee of the Kansas Baptist convention.

Tulloch, a graying, spectacled man with crew-cut hair who looks closer to 40 than his 50 years, was pastor of the First Baptist church of Sabetha, Kan. Last September 29, he walked out of a meeting of Baptist pastors in Hutchinson, Kan., and disappeared.

On November 26 he was located in Las Vegas, working as a shill—a gambling casino employee who poses as a customer to drum up trade.

Cloud Formation by Supercharged Plane

An altitude flight was made in the morning at McCook Field, recently, by Lieut. J. A. Macready in a LePere with supercharged Liberty. When the airplane reached a height of 26–27,000 feet at 11.50 a. m., a long feathery white streamer was observed forming behind a rapidly moving dark speck. The cloud was of the cirrus variety, well defined at its edges and apparently ten to fifteen times the width of the plane. The sky behind the first portion was clear blue with no other clouds in the near neighborhood. The first streamer seemed perhaps two miles long. Then a gap of one-quarter mile. The second streamer formed with a background of light cirrus cloud and after two or three miles the plane seemed to go into the cirrus background for the streamer formation ceased while an apparent path of blue continued beyond for a way in the cirrus cloud. The whole streamer may have been three miles long. After twenty minutes the streamer had drifted and spread until it merged indistinguishably with the other cirrus clouds visible. The weather conditions at the time were generally very clear, warm, with perhaps 0.1 of the sky in cirrus clouds.

The observer reported as having observed nothing unusual; occasionally the motor would give a burst of black exhaust gas. The pilot thought he remembered having passed through a stratum that felt damp. Clouds at this altitude are necessarily ice crystals, or needles, and it is difficult to determine the cause of the cloud formation under consideration. Possible contributing causes are: Water in exhaust; dust and carbon particles in exhaust serving as cloud nuclei; convective currents due to disturbance caused by passage of plane. Conditions of humidity were undoubtedly ideal for the formation of cloud at that altitude.

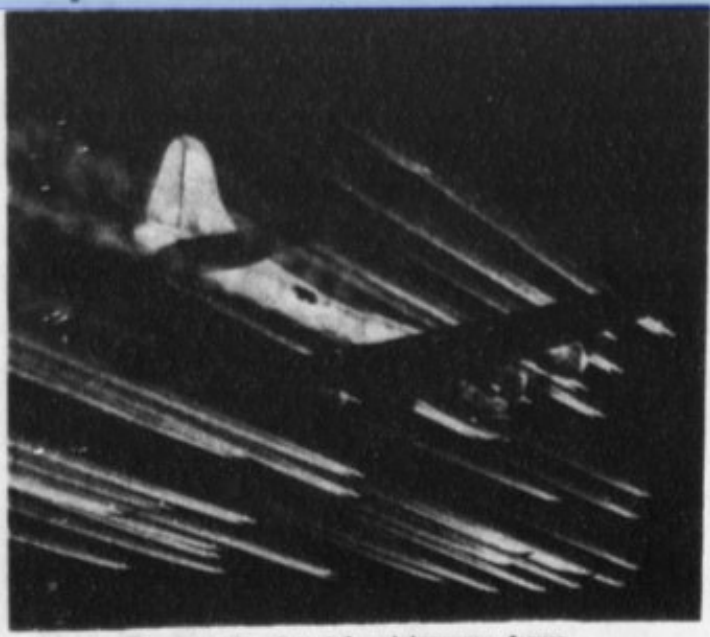
32 Spokane Daily Chronicle, Thursday, July 7, 1955.

Vapor Trails, Scenic From Ground, Pos



Vapor trails often take picturesque forms.

Condensation trails made by high-flying planes over the Inland Empire have professional significance to pilots who fly jet fighters and bombers.

Bomber pilots consider the "con trail" a disadvantage in that it would help people on the ground detect their presence overhead.

B-47 all-jet bombers can make practice runs over the area at extreme high altitude without detection by sound or sight when vapor trails are not forming, the air force pointed out.

The engines of the heavy B-36s can be heard more readily. The B-36s leave a number of con trails that merge into one long string-like cloud. Sometimes they make eight or so trails, one for each of six propeller-driven engines and one for each jet pod, Maj. Lawrence W. Ertner, Fairchild weather detachment commander, pointed out.

To a fighter pilot, the trails provide a means of locating "hostile" fighters or bombers.

In either case, it's a sure bet that the plane making the "con trails" or ice clouds is too high to hit with a rock. Air force weathermen say the trails seldom occur below 20,000 feet and normally are much higher than that.

In a 20-hour flight at high altitude Fairchild B-36 crews normally see trails some time during the flight.

Con trails seen lately over the Inland Empire have been classed as "moderately persistent." Persistent con trails are those that stay a while. An extremely persistent con trail might stay in the sky all day.

Weather briefings for fliers usually include the altitudes at which the weatherman thinks con trails will occur.

Air force weathermen at Geiger and Fairchild said there are two general theories as to why they form. One is that any moving object at a high altitude creates trails when weather conditions are right.

The second theory is that trails are caused by temperature changes of exhaust gas. Indications are that both are true under varying circumstances.

A cirrus cloud layer or overcast that marked Inland Empire

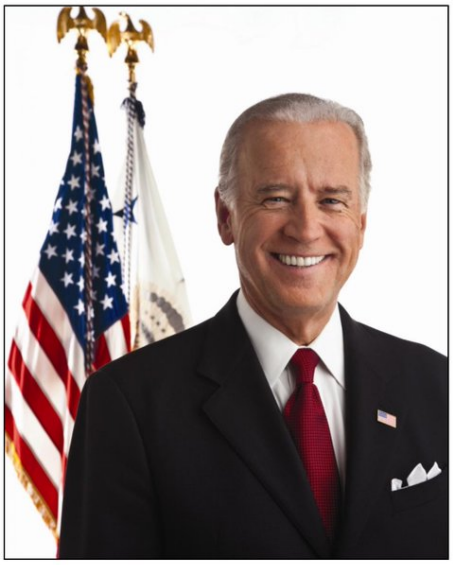
During a CNN town hall, former Vice President Joe Biden discussed stuttering. Here are some of his remarks from the event:



"It has nothing to do with your intelligence quotient. It has nothing to do with your intellectual makeup," Biden said. "You know, stuttering, when you think about it, is the only handicap that people still laugh about. That still humiliate people about. And they don't even mean to."

The former vice president credited his mother when it came to not letting his stutter define him. He said his mother would tell him, "Joey, don't let this define you. Joey, remember who you are. Joey, you can do it. So every time I would walk out, she would reinforce me. I know that sounds silly, but it really matters."

Biden's slip of the tongue when discussing his voter fraud prevention program has bizarrely been taken out of context as him "admitting" voter fraud.

Even more bizarre, some people believe it.

Minor difference in % reporting probably due to AP focussing on update President race.

PHOENIX – Arizona elections officials say there was nothing nefarious about providing Sharpie markers at polling stations, but the state's attorney general is asking questions about their use.

Maricopa County Recorder Adrian Fontes chuckled at the idea of a "Sharpie-gate" conspiracy to impact the election, because the permanent markers are ideal for the job.

"Sharpies are by design part of the system that we brought into being" because of how well tabulation machines read their fast-drying ink, he told KTAR News 92.3 FM's The Mike Broomhead Show on Wednesday.

I think here there was no point because they were unable to process all the mail-in ballots and declare a quick result. So they let people sleep. Partly due to shenanigans.

> The increase in the chart simply shows when the City of Milwaukee reported its absentee ballot results. We knew well before the election that Democrats were much more likely than Republicans to vote absentee, that it takes longer to count such ballots, and that Milwaukee is a Democratic stronghold.
> So, predictably, the mail-in results from that area led to a spike in the number of Democratic votes when the Associated Press added that count -- reported all at once -- to its vote tally about 3:30 a.m.
> From 3:26 to 3:44 a.m. in the Associated Press election reporting stream, the vote for former Vice President Joe Biden jumped by 149,520 (9.2% of Biden's total votes) and Trump's vote jumped by 31,803 votes (2% of his total votes). Milwaukee County accounted for most but not all of that jump.
> These votes were all reported together because Milwaukee and 38 other communities used a central count location. Other communities counted absentee ballots at the polling places, and reported them along with their in-person vote totals.

Maricopa has new machines and ballots that actually work BETTER with Sharpies. It's not a conspiracy.

Re: Use of Sharpie Brand Markers at Maricopa County Voting Centers

Dear Mr. Jarrett:

The Attorney General's Office ("the Office") is responsible for enforcing provisions of Title 16 of the Arizona Revised Statutes and the 2019 Elections Procedures Manual ("Manual"). See A.R.S. §§ 16-452(C); 16-1021. In connection with that statutory authority, the Office accepts electronic election-related complaints from voters, as well as complaints mailed to the Office. We have received hundreds of voter complaints regarding the use of Sharpie brand markers ("Sharpies") to fill out ballots on Election Day at voting centers in Maricopa County. Voters are concerned that the use of Sharpies may have caused ballots to be rejected, spoiled, or cancelled. To investigate these complaints, the Office requests the following information in writing by noon on November 5, 2020. If you are unable to provide specific answers to the below questions by that deadline, we request a narrative explanation of what steps you are taking to obtain answers:

- In which voting centers were Sharpies provided or made available to voters and where were those voting centers located?
- In each voting center where Sharpies were provided or made available to voters, to what extent were Sharpies used? Were other types of markers or pens provided or used and to what extent?
- How many ballots cast at each voting center were rejected? Of those ballots, how many were rejected because of over-votes? Of those ballots rejected because of over-votes, how many were rejected because ink from a marker bled through to the reverse side of the ballot?
- Were the ballot tabulation machines utilized at voting centers on Election Day programmed to reject over-voted ballots?

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/EmAxslJUYAAPysj.jpg

- Of the ballots rejected at voting centers, how many of those ballots were spoiled on site such that the voter could choose to vote a new ballot? In the instances where ballots were spoiled on site, how many voters chose not to cast a ballot rather than voting a new ballot?

- What is the process for cancelling a voter's ballot? If a ballot is reflected as "cancelled" on the Secretary of State's website, what does that mean for the voter?

Thank you for your prompt attention to this matter.

Sincerely,

Michael S. Catlett
Deputy Solicitor General

@CalgaryPatty http://pbs.twimg.com/media/EmAPnz8VoAE7x5u.jpg

> The increase in the chart simply shows when the City of Milwaukee reported its absentee ballot results. We knew well before the election that Democrats were much more likely than Republicans to vote absentee, that it takes longer to count such ballots, and that Milwaukee is a Democratic stronghold.
>
> So, predictably, the mail-in results from that area led to a spike in the number of Democratic votes when the Associated Press added that count -- reported all at once -- to its vote tally about 3:30 a.m.
> From 3:26 to 3:44 a.m. in the Associated Press election reporting stream, the vote for former Vice President Joe Biden jumped by 149,520 (9.2% of Biden's total votes) and Trump's vote jumped by 31,803 votes (2% of his total votes). Milwaukee County accounted for most but not all of that jump.
> These votes were all reported together because Milwaukee and 38 other communities used a central count location. Other communities counted absentee ballots at the polling places, and reported them along with their in-person vote totals.

@hatboxghost2 "Calling" isn't some official thing. It varies by news outlet, and they have different criteria.

It's also largely irrelevant once all the polls are closed. "Calling" is still a projection. The final vote count tells the story.

Abstract

Nearly 17% of people in an international survey said they believed the existence of a secret large-scale atmospheric program (SLAP) to be true or partly true. SLAP is commonly referred to as 'chemtrails' or 'covert geoengineering', and has led to a number of websites purported to show evidence of widespread chemical spraying linked to negative impacts on human health and the environment. To address these claims, we surveyed two groups of experts—atmospheric chemists with expertize in condensation trails and geochemists working on atmospheric deposition of dust and pollution—to scientifically evaluate for the first time the claims of SLAP theorists. Results show that 76 of the 77 scientists (98.7%) that took part in this study said they had not encountered evidence of a SLAP, and that the data cited as evidence could be explained through other factors, including well-understood physics and chemistry associated with aircraft contrails and atmospheric aerosols. Our goal is not to sway those already convinced that there is a secret, large-scale spraying program—who often reject counter-evidence as further proof of their theories—but rather to establish a source of objective science that can inform public discourse.

@TaterTo74406292 Gosh no, I'm a huge fan of the scientific process.

I'm not a fan of ignoring things that are demonstrably true just because they are not in PDF format. Especially when video is actually a far better explicatory medium.

@foiaboi That's not what I said.

The whole scientific/academic process is wonderful, but it has known flaws.

The specific problem here is when people use a false facade of being a serious part of that process when they are simply adopting the trappings and exploiting the flaws.

@TheAntiDisciple The point is that for some people the choice of what to believe does not come from any understanding of the subject material, but rather a misguided belief that if it's properly formatted into a PDF then it's more likely to be correct. It's the laziest argument from authority.

2020-11-01T17:40:55+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/1322956803366285312

@TheAntiDisciple And even top tier journals have a good percentage of bad papers.

https://retractionwatch.com/category/by-journal/nature-retractions/

Journal peer-review is very useful. The problem is the public does not understand the failings of the system. You can argue retractions mean the system works. But that's not the point here.

https://twitter.com/_/status/1322954719124357126

@TheAntiDisciple No, I'm pointing out the danger of blindly accepting ANY journal publication and peer review as a gold standard for truth. The constant refrain of "submit your work to a journal" backfires when the pseudoscientists actually do, and you're left with a weak "wait, not THAT journal"

https://twitter.com/_/status/1322949966680125440

@CrewCutYoutube But total crap also proceeds through what looks like scientific papers and peer review.

And statistically dubious interpretations, like that "life on Venus" thing, get published in Nature.

Good quality replication is what's important.

https://twitter.com/_/status/1322943248202039296

People say they don't take me seriously because I don't format my work into PDFs and submit it to scientific journals for peer review.

I don't do this, in part, because ANYONE can pay to get their work published. Like 9/11 folk, or this chemtrail guy.

state and weather systems of Earth would benefit globalist elites and their United Nations cohorts who want a one world government. And what better way to accomplish that than by having devised a scheme, ENMOD [9], wherein militaries of sovereign states would be co-opted to inflict harm on their own citizens and their means to produce food.

UNITED STATES DEEP STATE COMPLICITY

Poisoning the air we breathe, the water we drink, perverting the natural processes that make life on Earth possible, and deceiving the public on matters of health, we submit, is diabolically contrary to American principles expressed in the Declaration of Independence as "Safety and Happiness" and in the U. S. Constitution as "general Welfare" and should be prohibited [93]. But it takes place systematically, at great public expense, and is orchestrated by Deep State operatives, as we disclose in the following non-exhaustive evidentiary examples. Of these, the first is clearly the most disturbing. No one should deceive the public of health risks including, and especially, the U.S. National Institutes of Health.

- Commentaries warning of the global health risks of the tropospheric particulate aerial spraying were rejected without review by Environmental Health Perspectives, a publication of the U.S. National Institutes of Health [94], but eventually it was published elsewhere [41].
- Disinformation websites, metabunk.org and contrailscience.com, operated by Mick West, allegedly an intelligence-agency operative, deceive the public and are used to smear the reputation of one of us (JMH).
- Misleading claims were made in the scientific literature that the aerial particulate-trails are just harmless ice-crystal contrails by non-scientist Mick West and three scientists [95]. When a rebuttal of this claim was submitted, the journal refused to publish it, in defiance of scientific norms [96].
- One of us (JMH) submitted a manuscript to the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences (USA) [PNAS] entitled "New Evidence of Aerosolized Toxins in the Lower Atmosphere." The PNAS Editorial Board rejected the paper without review because it "lacked the broad appeal necessary for further consideration by the journal" [97].
- Intelligence-agency operatives were responsible for coercing two faculty members of U. S. universities, serving as editors of public health journals, to retract two peer-reviewed, published public health articles without ever allowing the author (JMH) to see and respond to their allegations in flagrant disregard of scientific publishing norms [98, 99] and with wanton lack of concern for public health.
- One of us (JMH) wrote lyrics to music in order to educate the public about the dangers of the aerial spraying. These were beautifully performed, and posted on YouTube [100]. But then Google added below each the definition of contrail, the same lie promulgated by the U.S. Air Force, Mick West, and others [101].
- The Wikipedia page of one of us (JMH) has been minimized and corrupted by Deep State operatives, and bears no resemblance to his scientific and humanitarian accomplishments [102].

The Deep State and the globalist cabal benefit from the so-called "peaceful" "environmental modification" by being able to play God with the Earth's natural weather systems, causing chaos and devastation that can be used to foment misery and economic devastation, a sure way to keep the United States in a state of constant conflict. Figure 3, for example, shows evidence of covert 1978 L. BLOCH in Guardian 23 May 10/2 Perhaps I ought to explain that 'whataboutism' is a condition of the progressive mind which does not tolerate any criticism of Communist autocracy unless those who criticise wear sackcloth and put ashes on their heads for the sins of all non-Communist dictatorships.

1993 in T. Parker May Lord in His Mercy be Kind to Belfast ix. 136 And I'd no time at all for 'What aboutism'—you know, people who said 'Yes, but what about what's been done to us? What about Bloody Sunday in Derry, what about the shooting of three defenceless people in Gibraltar by the SAS?'

1996 Spectator 20 Jan. 21/1 'Whataboutism' used to be frequently a communist technique whereby any criticism of the Soviet Union was countered by reference to some Western imperfections.

2017 www.teenvogue.com 28 Apr. (Internet Archive Wayback Machine 28 Apr. 2017) Through a brutal combination of gaslighting, whataboutism, and blatant lies, this administration has exacerbated the national divide.

> Was Randi a saint? Obviously not. He was flawed, possibly more so than the average person. He definitely had a few major blind spots. It is also true that JREF had problems, examples of which Horowitz cites in his article. Randi's legacy will no doubt be complicated for many, particularly women in the skeptical movement. However, for better or for worse, The Amazing Randi was one of the primary creators of the modern skeptics movement, and I also would argue that in creating the modern skeptics' movement he did far more good than harm, particularly through his showman's talent for popularizing skeptical takes on psychic and faith healing grifters, as well as flim-flam artists like Uri Geller. More importantly, he did not "destroy" skepticism because he contributed to making pseudoscientific "disciplines" disreputable. Quite the contrary.

The tale of Tucker Carlson raging about UPS losing his thumb drive full of dirt on Hunter Biden, and then getting it back from them, and then deciding Hunter was a nice guy who does not deserve this harassment any more, is fascinating and bemusing.

We'll see, there are still various opinions on the actual effects of the 2009 stimulus package.

That's what a stimulus does, give people money so they spend it.

@stang289 Trump is now spending essentially what the Dems asked for - he's even boasted about spending more. He's a populist, thinking short term. It's the congressional Republican who balk at huge spending because they don't have the tax revenue to pay for it.

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/ElghI0JU4AA0f3g.jpg

The standard formula for calculating GDP in the U.S. annualizes the quarterly changes, which can exaggerate the changes. Absent annualization, the economy grew at 7.4 percent in the third quarter, by far the largest quarterly gain in records that began just after World War II. The previous record was 1950's 16.7 percent rate of growth, a 3.9 percent quarterly gain.

The third-quarter growth follows a 31.4 percent decline in the second quarter, a 9 percent contraction on a quarterly basis, and a five percent annualized contraction in the first quarter.

The economy is still expanding, albeit at a slower pace. Economists expect the economy will grow in the fourth quarter but still register a contraction for the full-year.

@Lopati Percentages in different quarters are percentages of different things. If you lose 50% of $100 you'll have $50. If you then gain 90% of that remaining $50, you end up with $95.

-50% * +90% = +95%, not the +40% people might intuit.

But that's not even what's going on here.

It's high school math that most people have forgotten. Percentages are not a unit. When someone tells you a percentage, always ask "a percentage of what?"

It swiftly becomes too complicated, so most people don't bother and just go with the headlines.

+33.1% growth in GDP sounds amazing. Even sounds like we recovered everything, as the last quarter was -31.4%. But it's misleading to use annualized rates here. What we actually got was +7.4% following -9.0%. See the graph. We are still down significantly.

@stang289 That's an old conspiracy theory. I've got a chapter on it in my book. Chapter One, actually. http://pbs.twimg.com/media/Ek3UHj0U0AA6NyV.jpg

CHAPTER ONE

The “Conspiracy Theory” Conspiracy Theory

“Conspiracy theory” is a term that I’ve used extensively for a long time, and yet I initially struggled with it, and constantly tried to find alternatives.

The problem is that “conspiracy theory” (and “conspiracy theorist”) is considered by many to be deliberately derogatory. The fact that “conspiracy theory” is on the cover of this book might lead some people to dismiss the book as an attempt to mock or belittle the people who believe such things. But if you look at a typical dictionary definition it will be something like:

> A theory that explains a situation or event as resulting from a secret plot by some powerful group.

“Conspiracy theorist” is being simply defined as a person who believes a conspiracy theory. This is a perfectly reasonable definition that fits what 9/11 Truthers believe, or what JFK conspiracists believe, and what Chem-trailers, Moon landing hoaxers, Sandy Hook False Flaggers, and alien base @russian71805090 The media has historically NOT ignored child abductions. Some of the largest stories in media history are about kidnapped or murdered children. From Lindburn to McCann - it's a popular story because people care.

@JamesGDAngelo We're on the same team here. Monied interests have a negative influence on politics.

But why would a politician be, since birth, a fan of big oil if they were not contributing to (or supporting in some other way) his (or historically his father's) campaign?

"Save the Children" is QAnon in disguise. It's also mostly baseless, playing off old misunderstandings like the false idea that 800,000 children are kidnapped every year.

@JamesGDAngelo So why do lobbyists donate to campaigns? It's not "full-blown bribery", but it still an indirect quid-pro-quo.

Your quote from Edgar Lane combines two paragraphs as if they were contiguous. The original talks first about campaign contributions as part of the problem.
http://pbs.twimg.com/media/EkyGnG_VcAEM5MO.jpg

But these activities were trivial, except for the moral turpitude involved;[16] the NAM placed far heavier reliance on more subtle and tangential avenues of approach. The committee found that the Association contributed through its agents to the election campaigns of properly-disposed Congressional candidates; that it carried on a "disguised propaganda campaign" through newspapers, publicists, speakers, and literature in schools, colleges, and civic organizations throughout the country; and that it had promoted employee alliances for use in opposing pro-labor Congressional candidates.[17]

These activities may have been less than forthright; they were certainly concealed as carefully as possible. But, withal, there was a notable absence of the widespread and systematic bribery which had disgraced Congresses in the past. If the report proved only that outright corruption was no longer a principal instrument of the lobby, it had served an important purpose.[18] want online—it doesn't make it true. Stick it out until day three," he said. "Then decide for yourself. Be critical thinkers."

Until day three, I kept letting my white sash slip off during class. Incidentally, we received a lesson that third day about "suppressive" people, basically anyone who questioned any of the principles of the organization or wouldn't pay "tribute" to the founder Keith Raniere—Vanguard. Anytime you refused to acknowledge someone in a positive way or even go so far to take pleasure in their suffering, that was what ESP considered suppressive. In the real world, another word for suppressive would be "mean," like making jokes at another's expense or taking someone down

Suppressive Person

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

Suppressive Person, often abbreviated SP, is a term used in Scientology to describe the "antisocial personalities" who, according to Scientology's founder L. Ron Hubbard, make up about 2.5% of the population. A statement on a Church of Scientology website describes this group as including notorious historic figures such as Adolf Hitler.[1]

The term is often applied to those whom the Church perceives as its enemies, such as those whose "disastrous" and "suppressive" acts are said to impede the progress of individual Scientologists or the Scientology movement.[2]

The conspiracy promoters "Architects and Engineers for 9/11 Truth" seem to negate the reason for their own existence. Why do we need these "experts" if deducing the use of explosive on 9/11 only needs "eyes and a brain."

It's just a sad story of guys who misunderstand physics.

Do you think that the object is moving really fast, or are you just making a semantic point?

a. Difference or change in the apparent position or direction of an object as seen from two different points; (Astronomy) such a difference or change in the position of a celestial object as seen from different points on the earth's surface or from opposite points in the earth's orbit around the sun. Also: (half of) the angular amount

@Fibonacci222 I don't claim to debunk the parent topic. I often make a point in my videos saying that debunking one thing does not debunk another. Example: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=U1di0XIa9RQ&feature=youtu.be&t=305

@of_skeptical @5X5_NEWS @TTSAcademy @LueElizondo Remember the camera is looking to the left of the jet, so it's kind of flying past the object.

@of_skeptical @5X5_NEWS @TTSAcademy @LueElizondo Hmm. You might need to take a bit of time and think about that.

If the camera was locked on the ocean, and the object was not moving, and it was half way between the ocean and the plane. Then what would that look like?

@Fibonacci222 The point is that it initially SEEMS like a thankless task. But when I hear someone got out of the rabbit hole starting with a debunk like this, then it reminds me that I am actually helping people - even when it does not seem like it.

But there was one particular piece of "proof" he was still holding on to.

It went like this: A QAnon follower had supposedly asked Q to tell President Trump to use the phrase "tip top" in a speech. Then Trump did.

To Jadeja, that had been proof that Q existed and had the ear of the president.

But then, as his doubts mounted, he decided to research it further and came across a YouTube video that showed other times Trump had previously said the phrase or something similar. Suddenly "tip top" was no longer irrefutable proof, it was probably just coincidence.

For others, that might have easily been glossed over, a blip easily dismissed in their belief. But for Jadeja, who was nearing a break with QAnon, it was a turning point.

"It was the worst feeling I had in my life," Jadeja said.

That's when he went outside for a smoke.

@of_skeptical @5X5_NEWS @TTSAcademy @LueElizondo 2/2 Then the camera locks onto the balloon, it's now tracking that. The plane keeps going, so it looks like the ocean is moving. Parallax, just with tracking a different thing.

@of_skeptical @5X5_NEWS @TTSAcademy @LueElizondo 1/2 At the beginning of the video the jet is still moving at the same speed. Yet the ocean is not moving. The reason being is that the camera is in ground-track mode, it's essentially tracking a region of the ocean. The parallax effect is there, but it's backwards.

@SicCoP1 @Oswald1160 @LueElizondo @ChristopherKMe4 It doesn't change the issue. It just means if TTSA continues to use the video as evidence of a low fast object that is not a balloon, then they are being either incompetent or dishonest.

https://twitter.com/_/status/1316826459575447552
@Corey7999 @PredatoryPanic @LueElizondo But does it make it wrong?

Since you don't have this data, then you're just speculating.

That fact remains that given the data we have, then GOFAST is not low and not going fast.

@SicCoP1 @Oswald1160 @LueElizondo @ChristopherKMe4 I'm not trying to address the nebulous. I'm addressing the very specific claims made by TTSA about these videos. They are demonstrably wrong. They probably know this and are just stalling.

But maybe they don't know. Maybe they are really that clueless.

Prove me wrong Lue.

https://twitter.com/_/status/1316822173420408832
@Corey7999 @PredatoryPanic @LueElizondo We have the altitude of the plane, the distance to the object, and the angle the camera is pointing downwards.

That's sufficient to calculate the altitude, no?

He was asked about the task force on unidentified airspace incursions. He knew nothing about it so he he pivoted into giving a short stump speech on how great the military is. That's all.

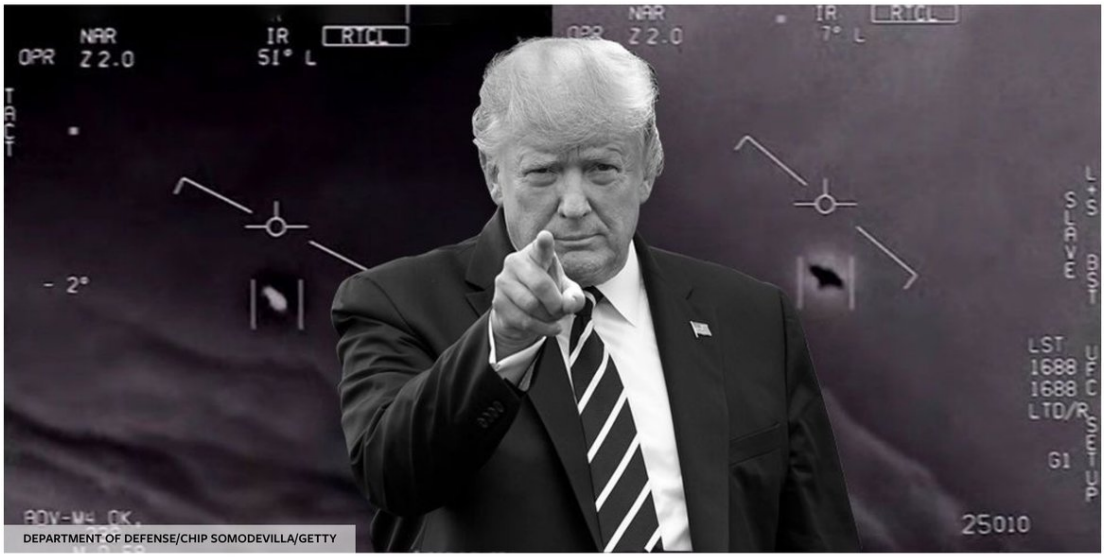
Trump Acknowledges UFOs, Threatens Aliens With Military Action

There's so much we need to unpack here.

// BY KYLE MIZOKAMI OCT 14, 2020



DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE/CHIP SOMODEVILLA/GETTY

- Earlier this week, Fox News anchor Maria Bartiromo asked President Donald Trump about the Pentagon's new UFO task force.
- Trump promised to look into the government's UFO program.
- The president also answered with a vague, somewhat threatening speech about the power of the U.S. military.

@DrewWilliamson4 @conorowens94 Nuclear weapon related information has a special classification all its own: "restricted data" and requires more hoops to be jumped through for declassification.

https://www.nrc.gov/docs/ML1327/ML13274A489.pdf

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/EkPNJYIUcAAfQtl.jpg

Sec. 142. Classification and Declassification of Restricted Data

a. The Commission shall from time to time determine the data, within the definition of Restricted Data, which can be published without undue risk to the common defense and security and shall thereupon cause such data to be declassified and removed from the category of Restricted Data.

b. The Commission shall maintain a continuous review of Restricted Data and of any Classification guides issued for the guidance of those in the atomic energy program with respect to the areas of Restricted Data which have been declassified in order to determine which information may be declassified and removed from the category of Restricted Data without undue risk to the common defense and security.

c. In the case of Restricted Data which the Commission and the Department of Defense jointly determine to relate primarily to the military utilization of atomic weapons, the determination that such data may be published without constituting an unreasonable risk to the

In the researching of other possibilities, weather was ruled out as a contributing factor in the incident.[81] (U)

A check with Communication maintenance verified that there was no unusual activity with EWO-1 or EWO-2 at the time of the incident.[82] (U)

Rumors of Unidentified Flying Objects (UFO) around the area of Echo Flight during the time of fault were disproven. A Mobile Strike Team, which had checked all November Flight's LFs on the morning of 16 March 67, were questioned and stated that no unusual activity or sightings were observed.[83] (U)

The 801st Radar Squadron, Malmstrom AFB, gave a negative report on any radar or atmospheric interference problems related to Echo Flight.[84] (U)

@RogueUAPTF @SenatorReid Thanks. But I think my point stands. There's no "official" account that says anything like: UFOs have interfered with our [nukes]"

@ufo_seekers People see flying lights in the sky all the time, for a variety of reasons.

Around nuclear missile sites, there's a culture of hyper-vigilance and caution. So the same events that happen everywhere else seem to hold special significance.

Especially during malfunctions.

IMHO

@yrraplliw @SenatorReid Yeah, they brush it off as not liking a paraphrasing. But it was a bit more significant than that. http://pbs.twimg.com/media/EkFcd1MVcAE1K6Z.jpg

The first version of the article that appeared in print was quite dramatic:

> Mr. Reid, the former Democratic senator from Nevada who pushed for funding the earlier U.F.O. program when he was the majority leader, said he believed that crashes of vehicles from other worlds had occurred and that retrieved materials had been studied secretly for decades, often by aerospace companies under government contracts.

Incredible news! The leader of the US Senate confirms the US Government is having bits of alien spaceships analyzed! Unfortunately, less than 24 hours later, that paragraph was changed to:

> Mr. Reid, the former Democratic senator from Nevada who pushed for funding the earlier U.F.O. program when he was the majority leader, said he believed that crashes of objects of unknown origin may have occurred and that retrieved materials should be studied.

And, even after this change was made, Senator Harry Reid forcefully issued a denial of any such thing on Twitter. [https://twitter.com/SenatorReid/status/1286770010086494208]

> I have no knowledge—and I have never suggested—the federal government or any entity has unidentified flying objects or debris from other worlds. I have consistently said we must stick to science, not fairy tales about little green men.

@TenoriThrowaway Hastings has been researching this topic for 47 years.

It reminds me of the Nimitz case. A bunch of cool stories, some interesting reports, but the secrecy wall means that's all you'll ever get. It also allows for endless speculation.

https://twitter.com/_/status/1315423855234543616

@conorowens94 And how reliable are those correlations?

The point I'm making here though is that Reid did not confirm anything at all that was not public knowledge.

2020-10-11T22:38:41+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/1315421592055234560

I think that claim (in the documentary "Phenomenon") misrepresents what @SenatorReid is saying, similarly to how he was misrepresented in the NYT regarding recovering crashed flying saucers. He angrily denounced that misrepresentation.

2020-10-11T22:35:41+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/1315420837793591297

Did Harry Reid ACTUALLY confirm that "UFOs have interfered with our [nukes]?"
I don't think he has. It is public record that sometimes nukes went offline due to equipment failure. There are also dubious stories of flying lights around that time. Reid shares no additional info.

But the real interesting thing is what is going on inside the building.

@gerrycan1 Failed? Well, it's not there anymore. I'm not sure if the section above that point was directly involved in the initiation of global collapse, or if the failure happened shortly after.

People often ask me if there are any conspiracies I think are real. Of course corruption and secret plots are an inescapable part of life. One of the more significant examples is where lobbying and bribery intersect. "The Swamp," as Trump once called it.

@gerrycan1 The same as any of the "upper part moves but the lower part does not" - i.e. the leading edge of the collapse is falling inside the walls. I think this is shown by the large chunk of wall on the right (NW corner) that remains long after the (two way) floors behind it are gone.

@BrainwashSyka @skinwalker_luke @DietrichVFA41 @ThanosAlpha @Falkyrs @DavidJayB @1_2_of_Rodney Quite the opposite. The waters ARE muddy with this uncertainly over the timeline and the actual maneuvers Fravor performed. So I'd like to try to resolve that. @kimball_23 @Jim87504388 @jamescarrion I don't act like people are nuts, and I strongly discourage other people from doing so. In fact, I wrote a book where not calling people nuts is a central theme, a fundamental piece of advice. It's in the context of talking to conspiracy theorists, but the same thing applies. http://pbs.twimg.com/media/FXktZyTVEAAu0Kq.jpg

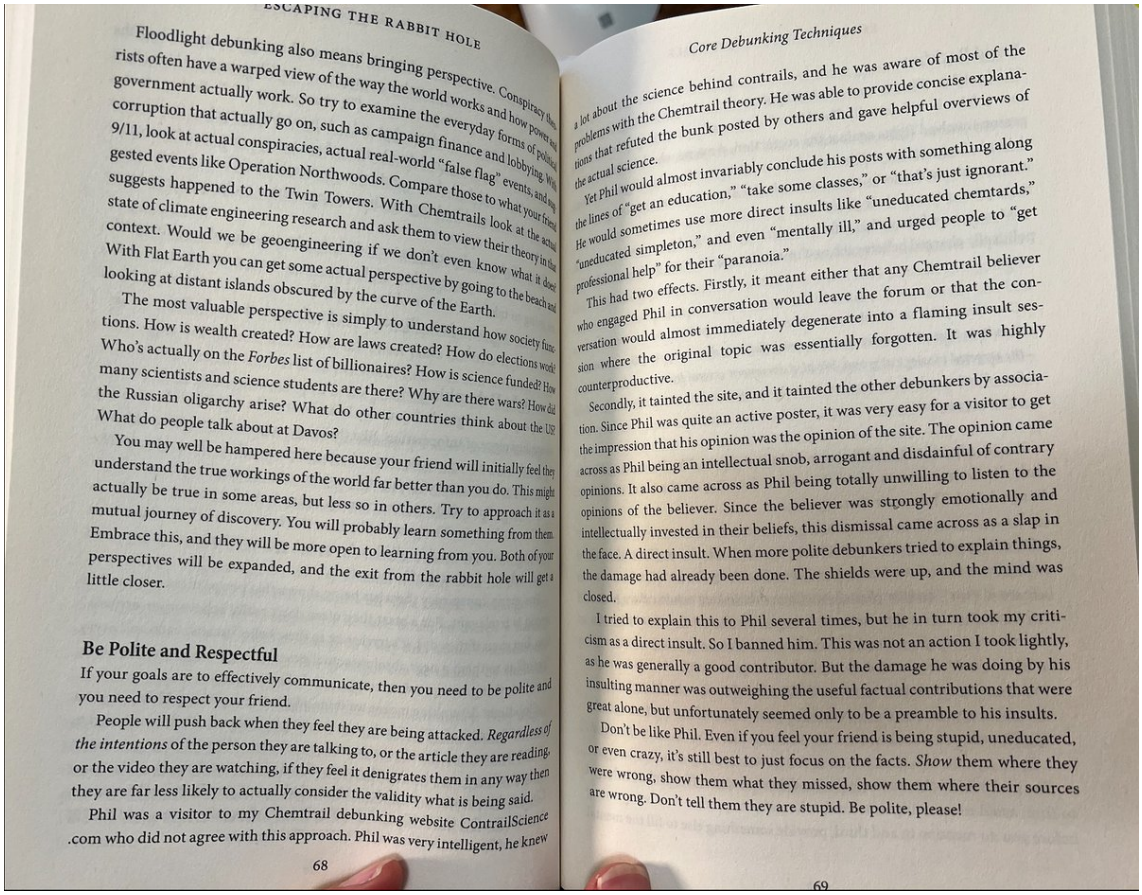
Be Polite and Respectful

If your goals are to effectively communicate, then you need to be polite and you need to respect your friend.

People will push back when they feel they are being attacked. Regardless of the intentions of the person they are talking to, or the article they are reading, or the video they are watching, if they feel it denigrates them in any way then they are far less likely to actually consider the validity what is being said.

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/FXktZyTVEAAu0Kq.jpg



ESCAPING THE RABBIT HOLE

Floodlight debunking also means bringing perspective. Conspiracy th rists often have a warped view of the way the world works and how power ac government actually work. So try to examine the everyday forms of politic corruption that actually go on, such as campaign finance and lobbying. Wh 9/11, look at actual conspiracies, actual real-world "false flag" events, and wh gested events like Operation Northwoods. Compare those to what your frien suggests happened to the Twin Towers. With Chemtrails look at the actu state of climate engineering research and ask them to view their theory in the context. Would we be geoengineering if we don't even know what it does?
With Flat Earth you can get some actual perspective by going to the beach and looking at distant islands obscured by the curve of the Earth.

The most valuable perspective is simply to understand how society func tions. How is wealth created? How are laws created? How do elections work?
Who's actually on the Forbes list of billionaires? How is science funded? How many scientists and science students are there? Why are there wars? How did the Russian oligarchy arise? What do other countries think about the US?
What do people talk about at Davos?

You may well be hampered here because your friend will initially feel they understand the true workings of the world far better than you do. This might actually be true in some areas, but less so in others. Try to approach it as a mutual journey of discovery. You will probably learn something from them.
Embrace this, and they will be more open to learning from you. Both of your perspectives will be expanded, and the exit from the rabbit hole will get a little closer.

Be Polite and Respectful

If your goals are to effectively communicate, then you need to be polite and you need to respect your friend.

People will push back when they feel they are being attacked. Regardless of the intentions of the person they are talking to, or the article they are reading, or the video they are watching, if they feel it denigrates them in any way then they are far less likely to actually consider the validity what is being said.

Phil was a visitor to my Chemtrail debunking website ContrailScience
.com who did not agree with this approach. Phil was very intelligent, he knew

68

Core Debunking Techniques

a lot about the science behind contrails, and he was aware of most of the problems with the Chemtrail theory. He was able to provide concise explanations that refuted the bunk posted by others and gave helpful overviews of the actual science.

Yet Phil would almost invariably conclude his posts with something along the lines of "get an education," "take some classes," or "that's just ignorant."
He would sometimes use more direct insults like "uneducated chemtards," "uneducated simpleton," and even "mentally ill," and urged people to "get professional help" for their "paranoia."

This had two effects. Firstly, it meant either that any Chemtrail believer who engaged Phil in conversation would leave the forum or that the conversation would almost immediately degenerate into a flaming insult session where the original topic was essentially forgotten. It was highly counterproductive.

Secondly, it tainted the site, and it tainted the other debunkers by association. Since Phil was quite an active poster, it was very easy for a visitor to get the impression that his opinion was the opinion of the site. The opinion came across as Phil being an intellectual snob, arrogant and disdainful of contrary opinions. It also came across as Phil being totally unwilling to listen to the opinions of the believer. Since the believer was strongly emotionally and intellectually invested in their beliefs, this dismissal came across as a slap in the face. A direct insult. When more polite debunkers tried to explain things, the damage had already been done. The shields were up, and the mind was closed.

I tried to explain this to Phil several times, but he in turn took my criticism as a direct insult. So I banned him. This was not an action I took lightly, as he was generally a good contributor. But the damage he was doing by his insulting manner was outweighing the useful factual contributions that were great alone, but unfortunately seemed only to be a preamble to his insults.

Don't be like Phil. Even if you feel your friend is being stupid, uneducated, or even crazy, it's still best to just focus on the facts. Show them where they were wrong, show them what they missed, show them where their sources are wrong. Don't tell them they are stupid. Be polite, please!

@bingbangwham @ThanosAlpha @Falkyrs @DietrichVFA41 @DavidJayB @1_2_of_Rodney It does not, because the "time of visual engagement" includes everything that Fravor said took 5 minutes. Including what he took time to describe (and justify) as "nice easy descent" http://pbs.twimg.com/media/FXjvQWKUYAA4jgf.jpg

David Fravor 10:44

I'm at 20,000 feet, and it's right down on the surface, and right off our right side. So I'm probably maybe a couple miles lateral 20,000 feet, and we're just watching it move around. And

Joe Rogan 10:54

so it's very small in your eyes,

David Fravor 10:55

Um, not overly small, an airplane down that low it's 40 feet you can see it pretty well with it was pretty clear. So I'm like, okay, so I said, I'm gonna go check it out. That's what we're trained to do. The other pilot says, Hey, I'm gonna stay up here. And I'm like, that's perfect. So now what we'll get some separation, we'll get it from different views. And the other airplane will have kind of a God's eye view of everything that's going on as I go down and check this thing out. So I start driving around, and it's still doing its forward,back,left, right, it's still pointing north south.

David Fravor 11:24

We get to about the 12 o'clock position, I'm just in a nice easy descent, a reason, you know, because I've been asked that: can you go more aggressive? You can, but when you're out over water, the water looks the same at 20,000 feet, as it does it 2000 feet, you don't you know, so you can easily put yourself in a non recoverable position, if you're not paying attention, and you go into the water.

David Fravor 11:42

So I got this nice easy descent, I get to about 12 o'clock. And as I'm coming down, you know, I could guess probably about you know, 18,000 feet now a couple 1000 feet below the other airplane, the Tic Tac just kind of rapidly goes and turns. So now it's kind of point east west and out mirrors us. So it's above the surface, we're up high, we're coming down, it starts coming up. Well, this is getting interesting. So we kind of drive all the way around the circle, I'm descending, it's coming up, and I get over to about the eight o'clock position at nine o'clock. And it's over at about the two o'clock position. Well, the quickest way as we know, as kids to get someone you know, you can keep going around the circle, nothing's gonna happen. And you cut across the circle. Some about I don't know, probably two to 3000 feet above it. And I just kind of dropped my nose aggressively and I cut across the circle. And it's coming this way. Because I'm trying to fly to where it's going to be because I want to join on and I want to see how close I can get to. And as I'm pulling up, it's kind of starting to cross my nose and it starts to accelerate and within about less than a second is I start to pull nose on to it and it crosses right in front of me. It just goes poof, and it's gone. So I call the other airplane I said, Hey, you guys, you guys see that thing? And they're like, sir, it's gone. We don't see it at all. So I'm like, okay, that's kind of weird.

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/FXjvOc9UsAAXz8L.jpg unannounced, classified missile test by a U.S. Navy submarine. As such, she was concerned that the object could pose a threat, especially given the fact both F-18s were unarmed.

(Source Comment – I was scared because I never encountered as situation like this before and I felt that the object had yet to be identified and we were about to peruse it.) OK-2 conducted an aggressive banking maneuver and dropped his aircraft while turning at the same time in order to catch up with the object. I was worried for them because whatever this was, [redacted] didn't stand a chance against it! There is now way any aircraft or missile that I know of could conduct maneuvers like what we saw that day.) Source indicated that the object began to make deliberate changes in its altitude, attitude, and angle in response to OK-2's aircraft in a manner that seemed to defy the laws of flight physics. The object instantaneously but in a controlled, intelligent manner "tumbled" into nonsensical angles, that made any engagement by the F-18 impossible. OK-2 and OK-3 were approximately 1000 to 3000 feet from the object when the object turned and "pointed at them". OK-2 conducted one or two evasive turns in their F-18 but the object appeared to maintain positive and dominant control of the airspace.

At no time during the incident did either F-18 have radar contact with the object; however, OK-6 and the female air controller confirmed radar contact. After approximately 8 to 10 seconds, both Source and OK-2 lost visual contact with the object. When Source looked back at the area where the ocean was disturbed, the water was again smooth and calm with no signs of anything submerging. (Field Comment – Source used a pen to describe how the object behaved when OK-2 and OK-3 approached it. Source also drew a picture of the incident, see attachment.)

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/FXjvPfGUcAUpFph.jpg

As both F-18s approached the new operating area, the female controller announced "approaching merge plot". At this time, the female controller asked "what is your load-out?" (Field Comment – the request for load-out refers to the quantity and type of ordinance the aircraft is armed with.) OK-2 responded to the female controller "none, practice rounds only". (Source Comment – At this point I was frightened due to the fact that we were being asked if we had any weapons available. I became concerned because we were in a situation that we may have to use our aircraft itself as weapon. I was thinking to myself that this could be another September 11th – style attack that were being asked to intercept.) As both F-18s approached the target location, the female controller began to count down the anticipated intercept time, "two minutes to merge plot", etc. Finally, the female controller indicated "merge plot" and announced "you should have visual."

As Source looked down at the ocean from the cockpit, she noticed a small patch of water, approximately 60 feet wide by 80 feet in length that appeared choppy and turbulent amongst a calm sea. The disturbance was unusual in that there was no apparent cause. The area was generally the shape of an oval and appeared to be "roiling". Towards the center of the disturbance, the water appeared lighter color and smooth again as if an unknown object had recently submerged beneath the surface. Source opined she thought she was be witnessing a crash, perhaps that of an unidentified aircraft, as she made the mental transition from intercept mission to search and rescue.

Approximately two seconds after noticing the unusual water disturbance, Source described witnessing a small, unidentified areal system (UAS) cross over the turbulent area of water. The unidentified object was elongated, approximately 30 to 40 feet in length, white in color, and described resembling a "tic-tac" candy mint. The object had no distinguishable control surfaces, was uniformly smooth, with no windows, doors, or lights visible. The object was opaque with a solid, definable edge. The object did not appear to emit any noticeable light or radiation from its surface nor did it have any noticeable exhaust trail. The object traveled from left to right over the disturbed water at an altitude of approximately 1000 to 3000 feet. The object appeared to travel at a speed of approximately 300 to 500 knots in a straight line. Source was unaware of the origin of the object or its destination but believed the disturbed water below could have been related in some way to the object. Source immediately became alarmed and initially thought that perhaps this was an unannounced, classified missile test by a U.S. Navy submarine. As such, she was concerned that the object could pose a threat, especially given the fact both F-18s were unarmed.

@DietrichVFA41 @ThanosAlpha @Falkyrs @DavidJayB @1_2_of_Rodney What's hard is that both you and Fravor describe a full sequence of events that start at "Merge Plot," including seeing the object (in detail) down near the water disturbance, the Fravor's descent and attempt at intercept.

Upon noticing the object, OK-2 indicated over the radio "I'm in!" in which Source replied "I have high cover". (Source Comment – I was scared because I never encountered as situation like this before and I felt that the object had yet to be identified and we were about to peruse it.) OK-2 conducted an aggressive banking maneuver and dropped his aircraft while turning at the same time in order to catch up with the object. As OK-2 conducted the maneuver, Source noticed the object immediately respond to OK-2's change of direction. (Source Comment – the UFO turned on [redacted] as if it knew or somehow anticipated what they were going to do and even pointed towards them! I was worried for them because whatever this was, [redacted] didn't stand a chance against it! @uapreddit @ThanosAlpha @Falkyrs @DietrichVFA41 @DavidJayB @1_2_of_Rodney Both timelines start at the merge plot. Both include spotting the Tic-Tac over the water disturbance, and then Fravor descending from 20,000 to 10,000 feet, circling, and flying over.

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/FXjl0YcVUAADPde.jpg

David Fravor 10:44

I'm at 20,000 feet, and it's right down on the surface, and right off our right side. So I'm probably maybe a couple miles lateral 20,000 feet, and we're just watching it move around. And

Joe Rogan 10:54

so it's very small in your eyes,

David Fravor 10:55

Um, not overly small, an airplane down that low it's 40 feet you can see it pretty well with it was pretty clear. So I'm like, okay, so I said, I'm gonna go check it out. That's what we're trained to do. The other pilot says, Hey, I'm gonna stay up here. And I'm like, that's perfect. So now what we'll get some separation, we'll get it from different views. And the other airplane will have kind of a God's eye view of everything that's going on as I go down and check this thing out. So I start driving around, and it's still doing its forward,back,left, right, it's still pointing north south.

David Fravor 11:24

We get to about the 12 o'clock position, I'm just in a nice easy descent, a reason, you know, because I've been asked that: can you go more aggressive? You can, but when you're out over water, the water looks the same at 20,000 feet, as it does it 2000 feet, you don't you know, so you can easily put yourself in a non recoverable position, if you're not paying attention, and you go into the water.

David Fravor 11:42

So I got this nice easy descent, I get to about 12 o'clock. And as I'm coming down, you know, I could guess probably about you know, 18,000 feet now a couple 1000 feet below the other airplane, the Tic Tac just kind of rapidly goes and turns. So now it's kind of point east west and out mirrors us. So it's above the surface, we're up high, we're coming down, it starts coming up. Well, this is getting interesting. So we kind of drive all the way around the circle, I'm descending, it's coming up, and I get over to about the eight o'clock position at nine o'clock. And it's over at about the two o'clock position. Well, the quickest way as we know, as kids to get someone you know, you can keep going around the circle, nothing's gonna happen. And you cut across the circle. Some about I don't know, probably two to 3000 feet above it. And I just kind of dropped my nose aggressively and I cut across the circle. And it's coming this way. Because I'm trying to fly to where it's going to be because I want to join on and I want to see how close I can get to. And as I'm pulling up, it's kind of starting to cross my nose and it starts to accelerate and within about less than a second is I start to pull nose on to it and it crosses right in front of me. It just goes poof, and it's gone. So I call the other airplane I said, Hey, you guys, you guys see that thing? And they're like, sir, it's gone. We don't see it at all. So I'm like, okay, that's kind of weird.

@uapreddit @ThanosAlpha @Falkyrs @DietrichVFA41 @DavidJayB @1_2_of_Rodney It's as simple as changing a number. You have to fit a detailed sequence of movements and events into a period of time. Fravor describes relatively slow descent and circling. Dietrich's 10 sec does not seem to be.
So what actually happened?

@DietrichVFA41 @Falkyrs @DavidJayB @1_2_of_Rodney It would be great if you and Fravor could get together and construct a timeline of when the various events described happened. Event #1 - Merge Plot Event #2 - The Tic-Tac is spotted Event #3 - Tic Tac flies away very fast.

Time from Event #1 (or maybe event #2) to Event #3 is described as either five minutes or ten seconds.

@fin365 @xExist @TheUfoJoe @EricRWeinstein I have to stand by what I said. There are many examples of people who have what seem to them to be unambiguous memories or perceptions that actually did not happen the way they remember it. This is no reflection on you. Optical illusions and false memories affect us all.

@fin365 @xExist @TheUfoJoe @EricRWeinstein Other than "UFO stands for too far away" (A humorous version of the LIZ hypothesis) those are not mantras. Those are things (some paraphrased) I said a limited number of times about specific events or situations. They are context-sensitive, and you omit the context.

Obviously, not all memes are hate speech.

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/EjrX7mfVcAAH0RL.jpg

The irony, shocking humor, and plausible deniability that Auernheimer learned to cultivate in troll circles is now being put to use in white-supremacist recruitment. In 2017, HuffPost obtained the style guide for The Daily Stormer. "Generally, when using racial slurs," the guide advises, "it should come across as half-joking—like a racist joke everyone laughs at because it's true. This follows the generally light tone of the site. It should not come across as genuinely raging vitriol. That is a turnoff to the overwhelming majority of people." The site should draw people in through "naughty humor" before they are "slowly awakened to reality," the guide adds, before recommending that would-be contributors read chapter six of Mein Kampf.

Facebook's full ban of all QAnon groups is, on balance, a good thing.
There will be some intensification of individual beliefs as the censorship validates their world view, but that's dwarfed by the vast platform FB gave to them, which is now gone.

OPENMINDS.TV/CEFAA

General Ricardo Bermúdez has directed the CEFAA since its inception in 1997. He retired on Jan. 1, 2017, but will remain an advisor to the agency.

The CEFAA has been a world leader in official and open investigations of UFOs. I have been priviledged to work closely with the staff there for about five years, learning a great deal. At the end of December, General Bermúdez retired, and although he remains an external advisor to the agency, Lay has assumed the duty of interim director until another General is appointed by the DGAC. I am grateful to General Bermúdez for giving me access to the outstanding CEFAA case files, inviting me to attend meetings there, and for his time in answering my questions. He has left a tremendous legacy with regards to the serious study of UAP and the official recognition of a real unexplained phenomenon in our skies.

I was reminded of the Chilean UFO case recently. It was proven to be a plane. So reading the original "groundbreaking" article again is quite amusing. It's a valuable lesson in the dangers of "expert" analysis that any UFO researcher should study.

https://www.huffpost.com/entry/groundbreaking-ufo-video-just-released-from-chilean_b_586d37bce4b014e7c72ee56b http://pbs.twimg.com/media/EjLoVyQUMAEruZs.jpg

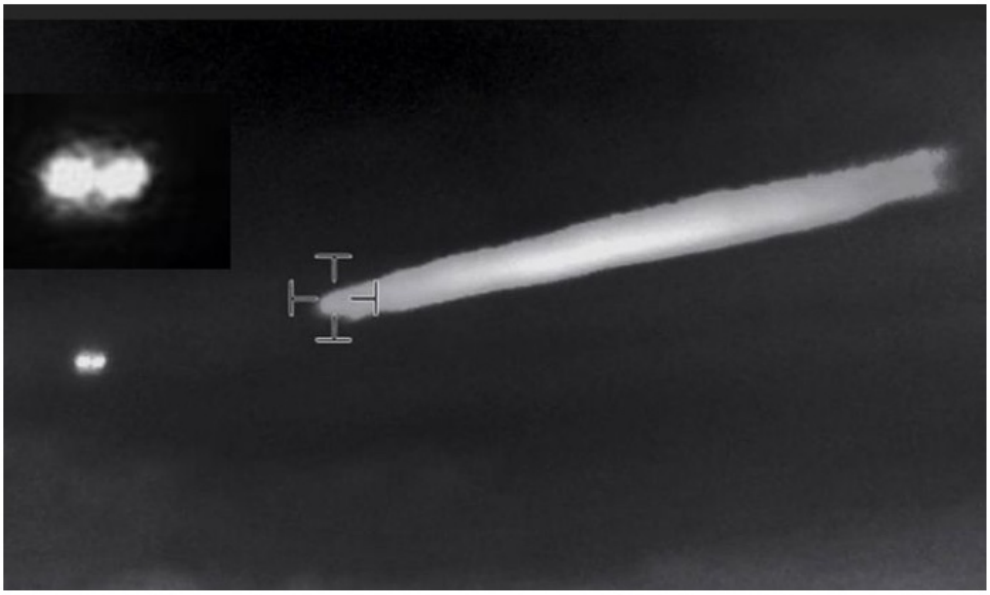
But there is one additional component that makes this footage particularly unique: “In two instances it discharged some type of gas or liquid with a high thermal track or signal,” the technician stated. After filming for about eight minutes, the stunning ejection of a massive plume of a very hot material is captured on the video, trailing behind the object. (The plume blended into the clouds when seen in HD.) Another ejection occurred moments later. It is indeed bizarre to watch this on the video.



COURTESY CEFAA

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/EjLn5MVVgAAsF8w.jpg

The Navy immediately turned over the footage to the CEFAA, and General Bermúdez, accompanied by nuclear chemist Mario Avila, a CEFAA scientific committee member, conducted interviews with the two officers at their Navy base. “I was very impressed by these witnesses,” Avila told me. “They were highly trained professionals with many years experience, and they were absolutely certain that they could not explain what they saw.” Both offiicers also provided written reports at the base, as is required, and for CEFAA.

The Navy Captain stated that the object was a “flat, elongated structure” with “two thermal spotlights like discharges that did not coincide with the axel of motion.” The technician described it as as “white with a semi-oval shape on the horizontal axis.”

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/EjLnqcQUMAAiAff.jpg

A rather somber meeting of the CEFAA scientific and military committee to discuss the Navy video. The DGAC Director presided (with his back to the camera).

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/EjLoVyQUMAEruZs.jpg

The French analysts proposed that the object was a “medium-haul aircraft” coming in for a landing into the Santiago airport, and “the effluent trail observed on two occasions probably results from dumping some cabin waste water, forming a plume oriented along the local wind blowing from the west.” They based this on their calculation that the distance between the two hot spots was “consistent with the standard distance between the two jet engines of a medium-haul aircraft.”

Chilean experts knew that this would have been impossible, for a number of reasons: This plane would have been seen on primary radar; it would have had to be cleared for landing in Santiago or at another airport; it would likely have responded to radio communications. Airplanes do not throw out water when landing. In fact, in Chile a plane wishing to eject any material must request permission from the DGAC before doing so; that regulation is widely known and respected. And, it seems unlikely that this experienced pilot would not have recognized this as an airplane, or at least kept that option open afterwards if it were a possibility.

In fact, if - hypothetically - water was expelled, it would have immediately plummeted to the ground given the warm air temperature. According to NASA, “Contrails are human-induced clouds that usually form at very high altitudes (usually above 8 km - about 26,000 ft) where the air is extremely cold (less than -40°C). Because of this, contrails form not when an airplane is taking off or landing, but while it is at cruise altitude.” The plume ejected from the object must have been some kind of gas or energy, and was not something tangible like water.

@sj3wufofish @DoctorKarl It "may be useful". It's not really useful here (compressed air), as the gradient is not well described by any equation, and it it fails when the direction of the light is perpendicular to the gradient.

altitude or a few thousand feet below," estimating the object to be between 15-20 thousand feet. The object, according to the FLIR, appeared stationary (Figure 3). There was no discernable movement from the object with the only closure being a result of the aircraft's movement. As LT [redacted] watched the object it began to move out of FLIR field of view to the left. LT [redacted] made no attempt to slew the FLIR and subsequently lost situational awareness to the object. The Flight continued with training mission with no further contact with object.

which for the accelerations we are considering, very rapidly approaches the speed of light to within a small fraction of a percent.

The main point is that not only are the observed accelerations of these UAVs consistent with those required for interstellar travel, but that some of these UAVs exhibit capabilities suggesting that they could be spacecraft with impressive interstellar capabilities.

Table 3. Distances and Travel Times to Various Star Systems. (For each system, the left column lists the travel time τ (24) experienced by the travelers in units of days (d) and the right column lists the travel time t (25) experienced by those in the galactic (rest) frame in units of years (y).)

anomalous craft are taking advantage of technology, engineering, or physics that we are unfamiliar with. For example, the Tic-Tac UAV dropping from 28,000 ft to sea level in 0.78 s involved at least 4.3×10^{11} J of energy (assuming a mass of 1000 kg), which is equivalent to about 100 tons of TNT, or the yield of 200 Tomahawk cruise missiles, released in $\frac{3}{4}$ of a second. One would have expected a catastrophic effect on the surrounding environment. This does not rule out the possibility that these UAVs have been developed by governments, organizations, or individuals on Earth, but it suggests that these UAVs and the technologies they employ may be of extraterrestrial origin. That being said, it should be strongly emphasized that proving that something is extraterrestrial would be extremely difficult, even if one had a craft in hand.

The purpose of this paper is to focus on the flight kinematics of these UAVs with the aim of building up a body of scientific evidence that will allow for a more precise understanding of their nature and origin.

As such, it is difficult to draw any useful conclusions at this point. We have characterized the accelerations of a number of UAVs and have demonstrated that if they are craft then they are indeed anomalous, displaying technical capabilities far exceeding those of our fastest aircraft and spacecraft. It is not clear that these objects are extraterrestrial in origin, but it is extremely difficult to imagine that anyone on Earth with such technology would not put it to use. Moreover, observations of similar UAPs go back to well before the era of flight [1]. Collectively, these observations strongly suggest that these UAVs should be carefully studied by scientists [9–13].

Unfortunately, the attitude that the study of UAVs (UFOs) is "unscientific" pervades the scientific

The Navy have been clear mostly in that they are not going to just tell people what the result of their investigation into these things are. It would likely require a declassification process that they don't care to do.

On Aug. 4, 2020, Deputy Secretary of Defense David L. Norquist approved the establishment of an Unidentified Aerial Phenomena (UAP) Task Force (UAPTF). The Department of the Navy, under the cognizance of the Office of the Under Secretary of Defense for Intelligence and Security, will lead the UAPTF.

The Department of Defense established the UAPTF to improve its understanding of, and gain insight into, the nature and origins of UAPs. The mission of the task force is to detect, analyze and catalog UAPs that could potentially pose a threat to U.S. national security.

As DOD has stated previously, the safety of our personnel and the security of our operations are of paramount concern. The Department of Defense and the military departments take any incursions by unauthorized aircraft into our training ranges or designated airspace very seriously and examine each report. This includes examinations of incursions that are initially reported as UAP when the observer cannot immediately identify what he or she is observing.

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/EiobqNsU0AAmvRo.jpg

$$= \int_{-\infty}^{\infty} dt\ P(y \mid a, t, \sigma_y, I) P(t \mid t', \sigma_t, I), \tag{3}$$ where the symbol I represents the fact that these probabilities are conditional on all prior information. Assigning Gaussian likelihoods we have that

The integrand is the exponential of a quartic polynomial in t, which was solved numerically. Assigning a uniform prior probability for the acceleration over a wide range of possible accelerations results in a posterior that is proportional to the likelihood (5) above resulting in a maximum likelihood analysis, which gave an estimate of $a = 5600\,^{+2270}_{-1190}$ g, as illustrated in Figure 1A.

As a second analysis, we employed sampling for which the change in altitude and the elapsed time were described by Gaussian distributions with $y \pm \sigma_y = 8530 \pm 90$ m and $t' \pm \sigma_t = 0.78 \pm 0.08$ s, respectively. The most probable acceleration was $5370\,^{+1430}_{-820}$ g while the mean acceleration was 5950 g (Figure 1B).

2.3. ATFLIR Video

Upon returning to the Nimitz, CDR Fravor requested that a crew equipped with the ATFLIR pod obtain videos of the Tic-Tac UAV. Two F/A-18Fs were launched under the guidance of an E-2 Hawkeye airborne radar plane. The two planes separated in search of the UAV, with one plane heading south toward the CAP point where the UAV was last seen on radar. That plane picked up a contact 33 miles to the south on the Range While Search (RWS) scan. This Tic-Tac UAV was filmed using the ATFLIR system, and the video was released to the public as the "Nimitz video" (Figure 3A).

We examined the last 32 frames of the Nimitz video in which the Tic-Tac UAV accelerated to the left and the targeting system lost lock. The video frame rate was 29.97 frames/s. As the UAV accelerates the image of the UAV becomes elongated and blurred. If the shutter speed was known, then this information could be used to better estimate the speed of the craft. This could be accomplished by treating the shutter speed as a model parameter, but such analysis is beyond the scope of this project. Instead, we concentrated on tracking the position of the right edge of the UAV and using those conduct maneuvers like what we saw that day.) Source indicated that the object began to make deliberate changes in its altitude, attitude, and angle in response to OK-2's aircraft in a manner that seemed to defy the laws of flight physics. The object instantaneously - but in a controlled, intelligent manner - "tumbled" into nonsensical angles that made any engagement by the F-18 impossible. OK-2 and OK-3 were approximately 1000 to 3000 feet from the object when the object turned and "pointed at them." OK-2 conducted one or two evasive turns in their F-18 but the object appeared to maintain positive and dominant control of the airspace.

At no time during the incident did either F-18 have radar contact with the object; however, OK-6 and the female air controller confirmed radar contact. After approximately 8 to 10 seconds, both Source and OK-2 lost visual contact with the object. When Source looked back at the area where the ocean was disturbed, the water was again smooth and calm with no signs of anything submerging. (Field Comment – Source used a pen to describe how the object behaved when OK-2 and OK-3 approached it. Source also drew a picture of the incident, see attachment.)

Upon losing visual contact with the object, both F-18s were low on fuel and returned successfully to the U.S.S. Nimitz without further incident. Upon recovery of both aircraft, Source, OK-1, OK-2, and OK-3 arrived for their routine intelligence debriefing only to find that no debriefing official was available. Furthermore, closed circuit television on-board the ship had movies involving aliens and paranormal activities playing. (Field @conorowens94 @b5t1an It's not just the fluff. There's some significant errors in there. They falsely say the FLIR1 UAV image is motion blurred at the end, and they say the camera is "fixed" at 8Â°L - which actually supports my hypothesis, not theirs.

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/EijVa8XU0AEkYH9.jpg

2.4.3. ATFLIR Video

Upon returning to the Nimitz, CDR Fravor requested that a crew equipped with the ATFLIR pod obtain videos of the Tic-Tac UAV. Two F/A-18Fs were launched under the guidance of an E-2 Hawkeye airborne radar plane. The two planes separated in search of the UAV, with one plane heading south toward the CAP point where the UAV was last seen on radar. That plane picked up a contact 33 miles to the south on the Range-While-Search (RWS) scan. This Tic-Tac UAV was filmed using the ATFLIR system, and the video was released to the public as the "Nimitz video" (Figure 5A) [25].

We examined the last 32 frames of the Nimitz video in which the Tic-Tac UAV accelerated to the left and the targeting system lost lock. The video frame rate was 29.97 frames/s. From 0.267 s (8 frames) before the analyzed segment of video through the end of the analyzed segment of video, the aircraft orientation was fixed and the ATFLIR orientation was fixed at a zenith angle of 5° above the aircraft axis and at an azimuthal angle of 8° left of the aircraft axis, so that the apparent motion of the UAV in the video frames is attributable only to the physical motion of the UAV. This means that, for the sake of this analysis, the UAV can be treated as if starting from rest with respect to the aircraft.

As the UAV accelerates, the image of the UAV becomes elongated and blurred. If the shutter speed was known, then this information could be used to better estimate the speed of the craft. This could be accomplished by treating the shutter speed as a model parameter, but such analysis is beyond the scope of this project. Instead, we concentrated on tracking the position of the right edge of the UAV and using those positions to estimate the kinematics. The left edge of the UAV was also estimated in the first frame to provide some information about the range, z_o, to the UAV given that the UAV was estimated to be at least 40 feet in length. However, since the orientation was not known, this is modeled as a uniformly distributed unknown parameter ϕ, which allowed one to at least put an upper bound on the range z_o. For clarity, it should be noted that the Tic-Tac UAVs were described as being about 40 to 50 ft in length or the size of the F-18, which is 56 ft. Here we assume that the UAV is 40 ft in length, which is probably an underestimate. As such, the estimated accelerations are expected to be underestimated, and thus more conservative.

"But how … why?" asked Andy quietly, greatly disturbed by what he had just heard.

"Because Andy, you're apparently an Ideal Observer. A See'r," replied Doctor Campbell. He had that same look of awe again.

"I … I don't understand how this is possible," Andy stuttered.

"Look, I know this sounds crazy but you were apparently able to see the twin set of quantum particles. It's a principle Albert Einstein once described as spooky behavior at a distance. Scientists have theorized that, at the quantum level, two paired particles, twins as they're sometimes called, maintain their relationship with each other even though they can be separated by light years in distance. We can only guess as to why, but a second set of quantum particles, the twins to our research objects, existed in unreal space above the real strike group even as their real twin particles existed over our mockup in the Nevada desert. Of course, the second set of unreal objects above your strike group were not actually there in the version of reality that was invoked at the moment," the scientist paused again. He knew the explanation was confusing and he didn't want to lose Andy.

"When you communicated an awareness of the alternate reality," the scientist continued as he searched for the right words, "at that precise moment, the tied realities changed places with each other! And, our objects in the desert instantly reappeared over your ships."

"So what does this mean, how am I involved with this now?" asked Andy after barely following what the doctor had described.

"Don't you understand? You apparently have a very powerful gift," the doctor replied.

"Andy, imagine the interest of the government in a person who is able to make quantum particle war machines suddenly appear in the enemy's backyard."

Andy sat on the log, completely speechless for several moments. He was thinking about everything he had just heard, and reviewing in his mind again the events from three years ago. The red sky in the west was barely visible now through the tall trees, the forest almost entirely engulfed in darkness. The heat of the warm June day was beginning to lose the fight to the coolness of the coming night. The scent of pine forest baked by the fullness of the day's sun was diminishing too. Or, perhaps he was just getting used to the once familiar pine smell again. The two hand, he had come this far hadn't he? This would probably be his only chance to get answers to questions that haunted him for years. He turned to face the scientists.

"Go ahead Doctor. I'm ready to hear what you have to say" replied Andy.

"Okay", the scientist paused, nodding his head slightly in agreement, "the objects you stumbled on were part of a research experiment. Out in the Nevada desert we have a complete mockup of the Nimitz Strike Group, or more precisely, all of the sensors and computer systems. We can track everything that the actual strike group can with our multiple radars, electronic support equipment, and identification gear. Even our Combat Information Center is similar," the scientist paused, shifting his seat on the log clearly uncomfortable speaking about this subject.

"The objects themselves were … are, highly advanced technology based on experimental quantum mechanics. We got the materials, a sort of metal, and other technology from … well, let me just say it's not from around here. Anyway, on December 17 and 18, 2005, we were using our mockup to continue with a series of experiments trying to determine how effectively a U.S. Navy armada would be able to detect and track the objects. Andy, somehow you alone were able to see the objects exactly as if they were flying over the real ships, your ships in the Pacific Ocean. I assure you Andy, no body else saw them because they really weren't there at the time" Doctor Campbell paused again searching Andy's face. He decided to just continue after seeing his blank stare.

"At exactly 0651 on December 18, 2005, our objects in the desert suddenly vanished," the scientist swallowed hard, "and reappeared over your ships in the Pacific, as we only later discovered. 0651 was the exact moment of your conversation with the Princeton TAO. We don't pretend to fully understand the quantum physics involved but somehow, the memories of your crewmates instantaneously adopted the memory of the objects as well. So did all of the ship's systems in the entire the strike group. Although we can't confirm it, the CEC War Diary likely did not record a thing until you verbalized your awareness of the objects. At that instant in time, a previously unproven theory in quantum physics invoked itself and an alternate reality simply copied itself over the past several hours."

"Andy, you were the only one to notice. Even though you could not have understood what happened at the time." The scientist then visibly relaxed as if a great burden had just been lifted from his shoulders.

to be asleep. He was fully dressed back in the clothing and personal possessions that he now knew to be bugged. The four members of the security force didn't say a word as they set up a defense perimeter at the door and in front of the couch where he lay.

"Are you Senior Chief Andy Cline, social security number 345-78-9911?" asked LT Colonel Ben Kennedy as he strode confidently into the room.

"Yes sir. Just who in the hell are you guys?" responded Andy.

"Don't play coy with me Senior Chief. We found the doctors in the forest. The cowards didn't even try to run," said the Air Force Officer dryly. "Get up, you're coming with us."

"Um, Colonel. My friend over there might have something to say about that," Andy replied with a broad smile looking in the direction of the water cooler.

"What fucking friend, get …" the officer started but stopped suddenly.

Preceded by the smell of ozone, a tall Gray suddenly materialized out of thin air in the corner of the room. The Air Force Officer immediately recognized the Gray, he was one of several aliens that worked alongside his government researchers.

"What are you doing here Onat?" the now nervous officer asked the alien.

"To make you a deal Ben," replied the Gray in perfect English. "Leave the See'r alone and we will remain hidden from the American public. We will continue to honor our contracts."

"But … but, we have a trade agreement! You can't do this!" yelled the furious officer.

"We can and we will. You have no idea what you're playing with Ben. Even Grays are afraid of God you fool!" Onat shot back in an unmistakable challenge.

The officer just glared, fully aware they were powerless to harm or interfere with the alien.

"Touch the See'r and the next place I materialize will be the floor of the United States Senate. I'm sure C-SPAN viewers will be very interested to hear what's been going on in their government."

Andy would later swear the alien's smooth featureless face actually formed a smile.

@DavidMu86437761 I think you can show people that calculating acceleration is pretty easy, and that the majority of their math is both pointless and uses arbitrary uncertainly brackets. Not for EVERYONE, but if you can grok that acceleration = change in velocity / time, then that's most of it.

@DavidMu86437761 It's more that their conclusions depend upon very shaky assumptions. Most specifically "it is assumed that the relevant details of the events were not fabricated or embellished [in at least one case]" (intro to section 2. Case Studies)

Also, their video analysis is nonsense. http://pbs.twimg.com/media/Eih7jzaVoAAO-gj.jpg

2. Case Studies

We consider a handful of case studies of encounters with UAVs. These encounters were selected from a subset of cases for which there were multiple professional witnesses observing the UAV in multiple modalities (including sight, radar, infrared imaging, etc.). This subset was selected based on the fact that there was sufficient information to estimate kinematic quantities such as speeds and accelerations. Due to the professional standing and expertise of the witnesses, and the fact of both qualitative and quantitative agreement among a significant number of witnesses employing different imaging modalities, it is assumed that the relevant details of the events were not fabricated or embellished. Of course, in most situations, one cannot rule out such possibilities. However, it is unlikely that this would occur with multiple independent witnesses. Assuming that any one of the cases we examine is based on accurate reports, we show that the UAVs exhibit unreasonably high accelerations ranging from 100 g to well over 5000 g.

To properly estimate lower bounds on the observed accelerations of the UAVs, we assign uncertainties to the observations. Unfortunately, such uncertainties are difficult to assign. We assign rather liberal uncertainties modeled by a Gaussian distribution. In some cases, to provide an even more conservative estimate, we integrate (marginalize) over all possible values of σ.

so that there are four model parameters: the UAV's acceleration a_x, its initial position x_o, its range z_o, and its orientation ϕ in the first frame, which helps to set the scale.

The second kinematic model considers constant acceleration in both the x and z directions:

$$\text{Model 2} \quad \begin{cases} x(t_i) &= \frac{1}{2}a_x {t_i}^2 + x_o \\ z(t_i) &= \frac{1}{2}a_z {t_i}^2 + z_o \end{cases} \qquad \text{constant acceleration in } a_x \text{ and } a_z. \tag{21}$$

The last two models describe the kinematics as acceleration followed by motion at constant velocity:

$$\text{Model 3} \quad \begin{cases} x(t_i) &= \frac{1}{2}a_x {t_i}^2 + x_o & \text{for } t_i < t_{16} \\ x(t_i) &= \frac{1}{2}a_x {t_{15}}^2 + a_x t_{15}(t_i - t_{15}) + x_o & \text{for } t_i \geq t_{16} \\ z(t_i) &= z_o \end{cases} \qquad \text{limited accel. in } a_x \tag{22}$$

and

in which we consider acceleration in both the x and z directions until Frame 16, at which time the UAV continues with constant velocity.

The models were analyzed using a nested sampling algorithm [17,26,27], which allowed for the estimation of the logarithm of the Bayesian evidence, logZ, as well as the logarithm of the likelihood, logL, and mean estimates of the model parameters. The analysis was performed for $N = 500$ samples and was run until the change in logZ from successive iterations was less than 10^{-5}, ensuring a reliable estimate of the log evidence. Tests were performed to ensure that the trial-to-trial variations in parameter estimates were within the estimated uncertainties.

The results of the nested sampling analysis are listed in Table 1. The uncertainties in the logZ estimates (not listed) were on the order of one or less. We see that Model 4, which describes the motion of the UAV as a constant acceleration to the left and away from the observer for the first

6) Will the public be informed about any findings from the UAPTF of the nature and/or origins of Unidentified Aerial Phenomena?

Thorough examinations of any incursion into our training ranges or designated airspace often involves assessments from across the department, and, as appropriate, consultation with other U.S. government departments and agencies. To maintain operations security and to avoid disclosing information that may be useful to our adversaries, DOD does not discuss publicly the details of either the observations or the examination of reported incursions into our training ranges or designated airspace, including those incursions initially designated as UAP.

7) If an observer initially characterize an observation as unidentified aerial phenomena, that he or she cannot immediately identify, and the observation cannot later be explained after an analysis by the UAPTF, or any other component, what will such observation be categorized as?

@TenoriThrowaway An unidentified plane is unidentified.

@Cresta2323 No, they won't. At least based on what people have told me who asked them - and the lack of response from the ones that I contacted directly.

@TenoriThrowaway I actually don't think they are lying. I think they are just wrong.

Here's the transcript of my discussion with an avionics system technician regarding the various ATFLIR UFO videos.

Briefly: He's seen the glare and rotation before. FLIR1 loses lock before the end. The aura is an unsharp mask. 99.9 means no radar range @steven_dor @Oswald1160 @dave_beaty You made a quite specific claim "the sharpness of the object in your vision" - it gets questioned, and you leave.

Answer it when you come back.

@steven_dor @dave_beaty Estimate? Based on what? What if your estimate is approximately 2x the actual size?

https://twitter.com/_/status/1307020482802143232

@steven_dor @Oswald1160 @dave_beaty Relative to what? And, sharpness? Not really because you have nothing to compare to it.

@hovebooks @cryptokeeper198 @katfisch21 @dave_beaty If you want to demonstrate everyone still has the exact same story, then you need a lot of current stories.

Where are these stories in written form? I'm not going to watch 3 hours of video. Just show me 40+ current short written descriptions of what happened. 40+ drawings also.

@thef14coomer @dave_beaty You could possibly get some data. http://FlightAware.com, for example says they have 22 years of data. It will cost money though. Maybe TTSA might like to do it?

@BobKurbel @Oswald1160 @physicsufo @dave_beaty Encountering something heâ□□d never seen before, this brain maybe tries to fit it into an existing framework.

@steven_dor @dave_beaty Walk me through that, how you use two sets of eyes to determine distance without getting close, in the case where itâ□□s 1/2 the size you think it is.

@physicsufo @dave_beaty So how do you use "shifting parallax" if you do not know how big the object is or how far away it is?

2020-09-17T21:17:01+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/1306703730293665793

@physicsufo @dave_beaty Stereo eyes do nothing at that distance.

@OVNI66 How would you translate "Escaping the Rabbit Hole" (the title of my book about helping people out of conspiracy thinking)?

@ConceptualJames You should also read the "About the cover" section, page vii.

Yeah, you think menstruation is funny. But there are actually some real issues here. the table of contents should give you some clues.

@katfisch21 @beamo31 @dave_beaty I guess the only reason is that I'm a sad lonely nut, desperate for attention, but doing a terrible job at it? No other possibility?

So why are you following me?

@OVNI66 What if someone had started to watch conspiracy theory videos, and was becoming fascinated and obsessed with them. We'd say "he fell down a conspiracy theory rabbit hole" would you say "il est entrÃ© dans une twilight zone de thÃ©ories du complot"?

2020-09-17T17:52:39+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/1306652299691921408

@katfisch21 @beamo31 @dave_beaty Why would I do such a thing? That makes no sense. What's in it for me to confuse people?

From my perspective, I'm trying to figure stuff out and then explain what I've figured out.

@MatusKC Some lights in the sky. I don't see them moving much. First guesses would be LED balloons, or a drone.

But "the abyss" is not like a rabbit hole.
