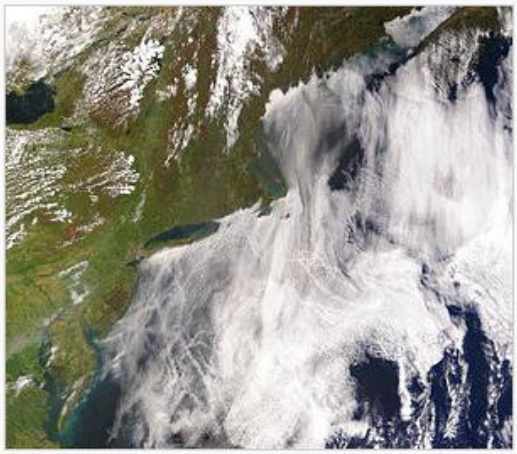
Ship tracks

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

Ship tracks are clouds that form around the exhaust released by ships into the still ocean air. Water molecules collect around the tiny particles (aerosols) from exhaust to form a cloud seed. More and more water accumulates on the seed until a visible cloud is formed. In the case of ship tracks, the cloud seeds are stretched over a long narrow path where the wind has blown the ship's exhaust, so the resulting clouds resemble long strings over the ocean.[1]



Ship tracks can be easily seen as lines in these clouds over the Atlantic Ocean on the east coast of the United States. May 11, 2005

Ship tracks study [edit]

In 1965, the first "anomalous cloud lines" were observed in images from the TIROS VII satellite. It was hypothesized that the most likely cause was from the exhaust from ships.[2] Many studies since have confirmed the cause, and they are now referred to as ship tracks. Scientists soon realized that the climatic impacts from aerosols could have a large effect on climate through the indirect effect,[3] and that ship tracks provided an excellent laboratory for their studies.

II.6.3

Condensation trails (contrails)

Contrails are clouds which form in the wake of an aircraft when the atmosphere at flying level is sufficiently cold and humid. When just formed, they have the appearance of brilliant white streaks; soon however they show pendant swellings like inverted mushrooms. Often they are short-lived, but especially when Cirrus or Cirrostratus is present, they may persist for several hours. Persistent trails spread progressively, frequently forming large patches of fluffy or fibrous clouds, having the appearance of Cirrus or patches of Cirrocumulus or Cirrostratus; in fact it is sometimes impossible to distinguish old contrails from these clouds.

Contrails may produce halo phenomena with exceptionally pure colours.

Aircraft condensation trails

Everyone has noticed the long, thin, white trails left by highflying aircraft. They sometimes disappear quickly, but on other occasions they persist for a long time, spread out and become a cirrus or altocumulus type of cloud. These condensation trails ('contrails') result from the condensation of water vapour contained in the exhaust gases of the aircraft engines. Their persistence depends on the temperature and humidity of the atmosphere at the flight level. Thus, when a warm front is approaching and the cirrus clouds are beginning to form, an aircraft trail will usually tend to persist and even grow, because the air at that level is already moist. Wind shear (the change of wind speed from one height and distance to another) will cause the trails to spread out and give a spectacular display (88).

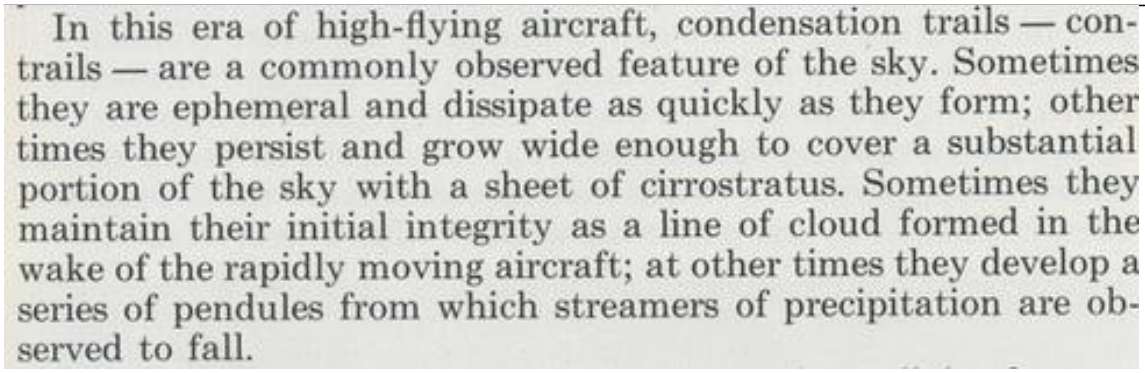
@AnonWorldView @OpChemtrails Here's an example of a book on clouds, Says "persist and grow wide" http://pbs.twimg.com/media/CB1z26_UoAE9DTB.jpg



In this era of high-flying aircraft, condensation trails — contrails — are a commonly observed feature of the sky. Sometimes they are ephemeral and dissipate as quickly as they form; other times they persist and grow wide enough to cover a substantial portion of the sky with a sheet of cirrostratus. Sometimes they maintain their initial integrity as a line of cloud formed in the wake of the rapidly moving aircraft; at other times they develop a series of pendules from which streamers of precipitation are observed to fall.

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/CBMKtbsUcAAt2tJ.jpg

Aircraft exhaust may lead to cirrus clouds where no clouds would have formed otherwise. Ice-supersaturated air is often free of visible clouds because the supersaturation is too small for ice particle nucleation to occur (Heymsfield et al. 1998b; Gierens et al. 1999b). Persistent contrails may last for hours and grow into a spreading cirrus cloud. Although aircraft flying through ice-supersaturated air masses trigger contrail formation by the increase of humidity within their exhaust trails, the ice formed in long-lasting contrails originates almost completely from ambient water vapor (Knollenberg 1972).

The threshold temperature for contrail formation in the Schmidt-Appleman criterion depends on ambient pressure, p, and ambient RH and on the parameters that determine the steepness, $de/dT = \mathrm{EI}_{\mathrm{H_2O}}\, c_p\, p/[0.622\, Q_{\mathrm{eff}}]$, of the mixing line (fig. 11.1) of excess partial water pressure, e, versus excess temperature, T, in the plume (Schumann 1996a). The parameters include the emission index (EI) of water mass per burnt fuel mass ($\mathrm{EI}_{\mathrm{H_2O}} \equiv 1.25$ for typical jet fuels with 13.8% hydrogen mass fraction), the specific heat capacity of air, $c_p \equiv 1004\,\mathrm{J/kg\,K^{-1}}$, and the effective amount of heat, Q_{eff}, released into the exhaust per unit fuel mass, where $Q_{\mathrm{eff}} = (1 - \eta)\, Q$ depends on the specific heat of combustion of the fuel in the engine ($Q \equiv 43\,\mathrm{MJ/kg}$) and the overall efficiency, η, of the aircraft propulsion system. The dependence on engine efficiency was noted by Schmidt (1941). The efficiency can be computed from $\eta = (F\,V)/(m_F\,Q)$ for given engine thrust, F, aircraft speed, V, engine fuel consumption rate, m_F, and Q (Schumann 1996a). Propulsion engineers call m_F/F the specific fuel consumption. Typical values of η are in the range 0.2–0.4, its value grew from older low-bypass to modern high-bypass engines. Some authors use "contrail factors" $\mathrm{EI}_{\mathrm{H_2O}}/Q_{\mathrm{eff}}$ explicitly depending on the by-pass ratio of engines (Coleman 1996; Ferris 1996; Mazin 1996; Schrader 1997).

@junksciencemyle So you think you were wrong then, about the deceleration? You agree it's like the F4, would not be noticeable?

@junksciencemyle Let's resolve the acceleration issue first.

2015-03-16T20:05:25+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577561324697202689

@junksciencemyle and the 2.5% slowdown calculation was only for a rigid object. As the F4 vid demonstrates, it does not apply here.

2015-03-16T20:02:55+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577560699368427521

@junksciencemyle I've answered that already. Now you tell me which live show you used.

https://twitter.com/_/status/577560174572937216

@junksciencemyle It has everything to do with it, as it is the answer to your question. The F4 does not slow down. So why would the 767?

2015-03-16T20:00:00+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577559964073402368

2015-03-16T19:57:18+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577559285166534656

@junksciencemyle A) it does not apply to a deformable object. B) It's not big enough. C) the F4 video shows no slowdown

2015-03-16T19:56:16+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577559022171131904

@junksciencemyle So clearly you must think the F4 video is a super high quality fake?

2015-03-16T19:55:49+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577558910107697152

@junksciencemyle Exactly like every other video in the world of planes flying into objects.

2015-03-16T19:53:09+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577558239040004097

@junksciencemyle Just like the F4, yes, so this is just what you would expect.

2015-03-16T19:52:39+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577558113361924097

@junksciencemyle So why is there no slowdown with the F4? Seems silly to expect one with the 767, but not the F4.

2015-03-16T19:51:35+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577557846646091776

@junksciencemyle For the same reason it's not there in the F4 videos. Do you know why it's not there in the F4 videos?

2015-03-16T19:44:27+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577556051806978048

@junksciencemyle Where is your analysis?

2015-03-16T19:42:18+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577555509542162432

@junksciencemyle So why is it not at 1000fps and 100% energy loss?

2015-03-16T19:39:47+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577554875380191232

@junksciencemyle No, the F4 footage is much higher than 60 FPS, it's more like 1000 fps.

2015-03-16T19:31:22+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577552759508996096

@junksciencemyle Why, if it's not visible in the F4 video?

2015-03-16T19:29:18+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577552238651969537

@junksciencemyle But no loss show up in the video. And the video is better than the 9/11 videos. And the energy loss is much higher.

2015-03-16T19:28:35+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577552055952240640

@junksciencemyle Do you agree the F4 video is at a much higher frame rate than the 911 videos?

2015-03-16T19:27:40+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577551828570640384

@junksciencemyle Do you think the F4 crash was fake then?

2015-03-16T19:27:28+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577551775470780416

@junksciencemyle But you have a video of the 767. It's the same thing.

2015-03-16T19:25:21+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577551244920651776

@junksciencemyle I showed you a video. https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=CZ8uvQk1H9I

2015-03-16T19:23:54+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577550877373775873

@junksciencemyle So if a 100% loss leads to no slowdown, why would a 5% loss lead to any?

2015-03-16T19:23:23+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577550750340943872

@junksciencemyle Indeed, enough to take 5% of the KE of the plane. But then the F4 lost 100% of its energy, but did not slow down at all?

2015-03-16T19:19:58+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577549888629530624

@junksciencemyle Why would the 767 slow down if the F4 did not? The F4 video is much higher frame rate.

2015-03-16T19:18:16+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577549461527785472

@junksciencemyle And what FPS do you think this F4 video is at?

2015-03-16T19:15:24+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577548738245234689

@junksciencemyle What are the frame rates you are talking about?

2015-03-16T19:13:27+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577548250397351936

@junksciencemyle What FPS do you think live TV is? What FPS do you think the F4 video is?

2015-03-16T19:13:01+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577548141496406016

@junksciencemyle You think the F4 video was not at a high enough FPS to detect the slowdown?

2015-03-16T19:11:48+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577547831633833984

@junksciencemyle And didn't you just say the WTC footage was too low an FPS to detect any change.

2015-03-16T19:11:05+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577547652050501632

@junksciencemyle Same as the F4

2015-03-16T19:09:39+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577547292837703680

@junksciencemyle Just like the F4.

2015-03-16T19:08:36+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577547028126826496

@junksciencemyle So the WTC footage is not at a high enough frame rate?

2015-03-16T19:08:07+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577546906345209856

@junksciencemyle If you think the 767 should have slowed down, then you need to explain why the F4 did not, when it lost 20X as much energy

---

2015-03-16T19:07:16+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577546692934799360

@junksciencemyle It's an accurate illustration of what happens. And what happens is the back of the plane keeps going at the same speed.

2015-03-16T19:06:11+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577546421567512576

@junksciencemyle It is directly related. It's a plane crashing into a wall and not seeming to slow down. How is that unrelated?

2015-03-16T19:02:28+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577545486376136704

@junksciencemyle How much of a change? What would that change look like exactly? 5% of the F4 change?

2015-03-16T19:01:18+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577545191055196161

@junksciencemyle "scaled"? What?

2015-03-16T19:00:59+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577545112164511744

@junksciencemyle No they don't There only "needs" to be a change in a perfectly rigid collision.

2015-03-16T19:00:05+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577544883528843266

@junksciencemyle Show me a 2.5% slowdown of the 767 plane. How many pixels is it?

2015-03-16T18:59:46+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577544803254063104

@junksciencemyle But the F4 loses 100% of its energy, with no visible slowdown.

2015-03-16T18:56:05+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577543879840305152

@junksciencemyle It would? Show me a video still of the impact that illustrates a 2.5% speed decrease

---

2015-03-16T18:54:34+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577543497902743552

@junksciencemyle Why are you ignoring the explanation? The 767 did not slow down for the same reasons the F4 did not slow down.

2015-03-16T18:53:53+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577543324631896064

@junksciencemyle The F4 video IS the explanation.

2015-03-16T18:52:38+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577543008217780224

@junksciencemyle So if the F4 broke through the concrete block in the first 10% of the impact, would there be any visible slowdown?

2015-03-16T18:49:36+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577542246595067905

@junksciencemyle Do you understand how this can happen without slowing down?

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/CAPXm88UIAEUGyE.jpg

2015-03-16T18:48:06+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577541868986077184

@junksciencemyle Exactly like with the F4, which lost 100% of its energy, but still does not slow down. Riddle me that.

2015-03-16T18:39:48+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577539781606842368

@junksciencemyle But it did not slow down. So what makes the WTC 767 slow down. What is different to the F4 situation?

2015-03-16T18:37:31+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577539206412574720

@junksciencemyle So you think it should slow down about 2% as much as the F4 did?

2015-03-16T18:36:57+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577539064120750080

@junksciencemyle So you don't think there's a "lack of physics" in the F4 video?

2015-03-16T18:36:01+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577538826630885376

@junksciencemyle Why would the F4 not slow down? Is it breaking the laws of physics?

https://twitter.com/_/status/577536902305214464

@junksciencemyle Why wold you expect any when the F4 also shows no slowdown?

2015-03-16T18:27:42+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577536735015383040

2015-03-16T18:22:47+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577535500086484992

@junksciencemyle It shows that you would not see any decrease. Why would you, if there's none visible in the F4 video?

2015-03-16T18:17:28+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577534158789951488

@junksciencemyle I'm sorry, but this clip demonstrates that zero (visible) speed is lost during the first 5% of the impact. Agreed?

2015-03-16T18:16:18+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577533864647639040

@junksciencemyle No, it's a BETTER analogy for your "it' should have slowed down" argument. Since it didn't during the first 5%

2015-03-16T18:15:36+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577533688298127360

2015-03-16T18:03:07+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577530546810531840

@junksciencemyle If the F4 uses 100% of its velocity, and you can barely tell, then why would you be able to tell with about 2%?

2015-03-16T18:02:09+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577530306300751874

@junksciencemyle No, why would it? 5% KE reduction is only a 2.5% speed reduction, and then only for a rigid body.

2015-03-16T17:46:51+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/577526454700785664

@junksciencemyle No, they show exactly what you would expect, the plane breaks the walls with 5% loss in energy.

@junksciencemyle yes, about 5% of the energy was lost. But compare to a 100% loss. https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=RZjhxuhTmGk @junksciencemyle Once the wall is broken, it offers no resistance. Before that point it's crushing the front of the plane.

@junksciencemyle Not zero, it's just 5% of the KE of the plane, and the plane is highly deformable, not rigid. e.g. https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=RZjhxuhTmGk

@junksciencemyle

http://web.mit.edu/civenv/wtc/PDFfiles/Chapter%20IV%20Aircraft%20Impact.pdf

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/CAPDXufUcAAywQG.jpg

$$E_{external\_column} = \left(\frac{2\sigma_{ext}}{\sqrt{3}} b^2 t_{ext}\right) 2 \cdot 23 = 20\text{MJ} \qquad (10)$$

This is only a small fraction of the available kinetic energy of the aircraft.

It is recognized that there is a momentum transfer during the cutting process and additional energy is lost during that process. Teng and Wierzbicki [2] estimated that this additional energy loss is approximately $\Delta E = E_{kinetic,wing} \frac{M_{column}}{M_{coumn} + M_{wing}}$ where M_{column} and M_{wing} denote the respective masses of the columns and the wings that are in contact. According to the calculation performed by Teng and Wierzbicki [2] the mass ratio is 0.0783, which means 7.83% of the initial kinetic energy of the wings (96MJ or 2.6% of the total initial kinetic energy) is lost in cutting the exterior columns. What can be concluded with full confidence is that the plastic work used for fracturing the top and bottom of flanges as well as two webs is significantly smaller than the kinetic energy lost during the process of momentum transfer.

@love4worldpeace @Furiousnurse But high bypass engines actually produce MORE contrails. http://elib.dlr.de/9247/1/aerscitech-2000.pdf http://pbs.twimg.com/media/B-TlFi1IMAAmDF-.jpg

For a direct test, a formation flight of two different large jet air- craft was arranged, wing by wing, during an ascent and a descent of the aircraft. Contrail formation and ambient conditions were observed simultaneously from a research aircraft. The two contrail forming aircraft were 1) a Boeing B707-307C built in 1968 and equipped with four jet engines of type PW JT3D-3B with bypass ratio of 1.4 and 2) an Airbus A340-300 built in 1998 with four jet engines of type CFM56-5C4 with bypass ratio of 6.8.

A contrail was observed to form during ascent first behind the A340 at 7:28:40, at flight level 33,300ft. The B707 continued to ascend nearby without a contrail (Fig. 2). About 50 s later, at altitude of about 33,700 ft, a contrail formed also behind the B707 at 7:29:30. The contrails were observed to be forming very suddenly and persisted thereafter. During descent from flight level 35,000ft, the contrails disappeared first behind the B707 and disappeared shortly thereafter behind the A340.

As documented in several photographs, an altitude range exists in which the A340 causes contrails while the B707 causes none. Figure 2 shows this fact during ascent and Fig. 3 during descent. The photographs show the contrails best during descent due to the more favorable sun and Falcon positions relative to the two other aircraft. We clearly see the four contrails forming from the four engines of the A340 while the B707 is seen flying without contrails.

@achariw Yes, it;s about contrails. That's the point. In 1981 contrails could spread out and cover the sky. So why can't they now?

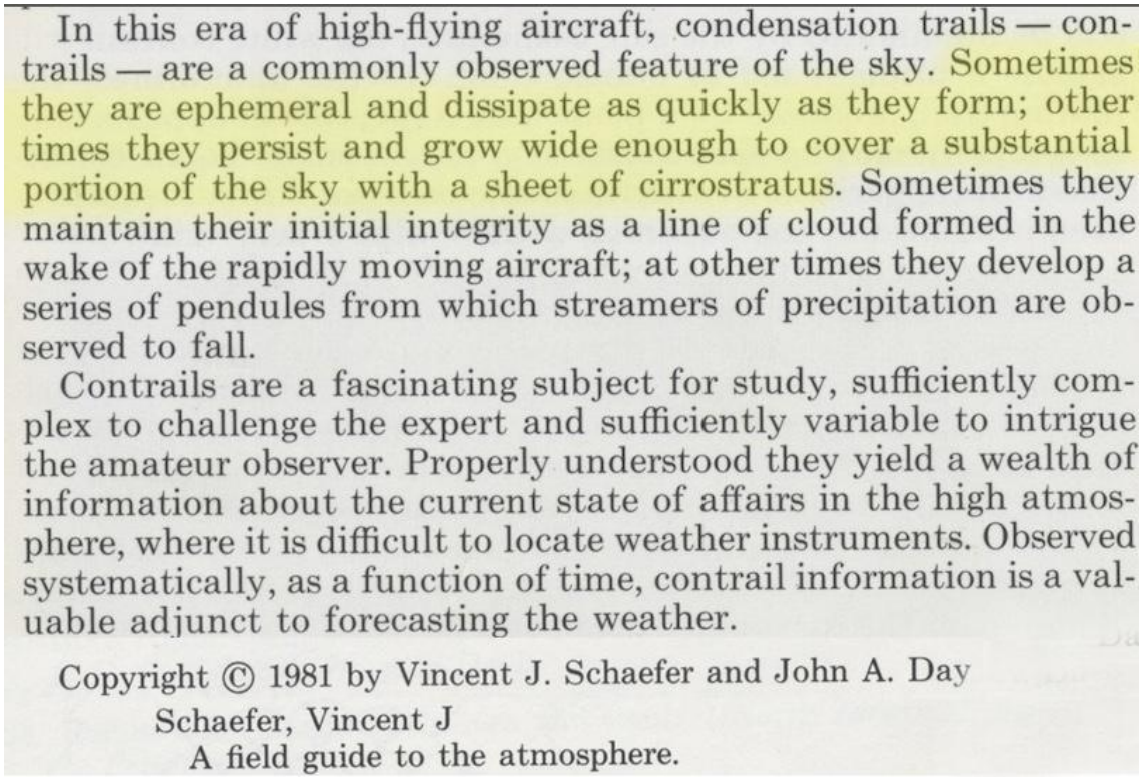
https://twitter.com/_/status/566273413098901504

@achariw Then why do to the books on clouds say they do?

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/B9vOqwZIEAA52sn.jpg



In this era of high-flying aircraft, condensation trails — contrails — are a commonly observed feature of the sky. Sometimes they are ephemeral and dissipate as quickly as they form; other times they persist and grow wide enough to cover a substantial portion of the sky with a sheet of cirrostratus. Sometimes they maintain their initial integrity as a line of cloud formed in the wake of the rapidly moving aircraft; at other times they develop a series of pendules from which streamers of precipitation are observed to fall.

Contrails are a fascinating subject for study, sufficiently complex to challenge the expert and sufficiently variable to intrigue the amateur observer. Properly understood they yield a wealth of information about the current state of affairs in the high atmosphere, where it is difficult to locate weather instruments. Observed systematically, as a function of time, contrail information is a valuable adjunct to forecasting the weather.

Toasters are mundane ordinary objects that nearly everyone has in their house, or has at least used occasionally.

UFOs are a variety of ambiguous phenomena and experiences, often closely tied with esoteric notions like visiting aliens.

So it's a VERY different question.

@gfodor Sure, but if we are talking about a coarse identification, it would be useful if we have a word for it. "identified", in common usage, is fairly specific.

Let's adopt "characterization" in the interests of clear communication.

Schiff: larger effort that is being undertaken to study and characterize UAP reports Moultrie: any object that we encounter can likely be isolated, characterized, identified and,... mitigated.

At the UAP hearing, Ronald Moultrie disclosed a hierarchy of goals in handling UAPs

1) Isolate
2) Characterize
3) Identify
4) Mitigate

Identified/unidentified is a false dichotomy. Let's focus more on characterization

e.g. Gimbal is characterized as a glare, but not identified

In this case, @LueElizondo and I are in agreement. The green triangle video does not show flying pyramids. They are camera artifacts, and we are looking at the lights of a plane or a drone.

And if something unidentified is buzzing ship, that's a real issue.

@Mike_FIRE @scotch2gmail @likeitmatters3 @sSamsquantch I don't say it's a PVS14. I showed one at one point, but two people found they happened to own NV with triangular apertures, so it's hardly uncommon.

It's kind of irrelevant, as the stars are triangle-shaped.

This is semantic nonsense. You don't need rock solid proof to accept mundane claims like "I saw a bee once". But if it's a extraordinary claim, like "I rode a dragon once", then a much higher level of evidence would be required to accept it.

The UAP hearing referenced 11 "near-misses" with UAP. That could very easily be near misses with airborne clutter. Like the one they showed (which resembled a fly-by of a mylar balloon).

They didn't bother to try to contact it, unmanned, maybe not even controlled flight.

In this era of high-flying aircraft, condensation trails — contrails — are a commonly observed feature of the sky. Sometimes they are ephemeral and dissipate as quickly as they form; other times they persist and grow wide enough to cover a substantial portion of the sky with a sheet of cirrostratus. Sometimes they maintain their initial integrity as a line of cloud formed in the wake of the rapidly moving aircraft; at other times they develop a series of pendules from which streamers of precipitation are observed to fall.

https://www.flickr.com/photos/metabunk/sets/72157641669574294/

11.4 Glaciation and Distortion

Except for trails in wingtip vortex cores most contrails are formed at temperatures below −40°C (see 11.2.iv) and therefore the particles freeze almost immediately. Mock suns are often very bright in contrails, and parts of circumzenithal arcs have been observed in them.

Once glaciated the trails may last for many hours, and may be spread out by wind shear into almost horizontal sheets. The most extensive sheets are formed from trails which originally produced an extensive vertical curtain of cloud or very elongated blobs.

The trails persist in air that is saturated for ice and not for water, and such air is often found ahead of warm fronts. Often contrails can extend the forward edge of warm front cirrus by many tens of miles.

1969: Clouds and Weather. Page 28
https://www.flickr.com/photos/metabunk/sets/72157641629656855/

Aircraft condensation trails

Everyone has noticed the long, thin, white trails left by highflying aircraft. They sometimes disappear quickly, but on other occasions they persist for a long time, spread out and become a cirrus or altocumulus type of cloud. These condensation trails ('contrails') result from the condensation of water vapour contained in the exhaust gases of the aircraft engines. Their persistence depends on the temperature and humidity of the atmosphere at the flight level. Thus, when a warm front is approaching and the cirrus clouds are beginning to form, an aircraft trail will usually tend to persist and even grow, because the air at that level is already moist. Wind shear (the change of wind speed from one height and distance to another) will cause the trails to spread out and give a spectacular display (88).

@DavidLeal16 Clouds are ice crystals. They don't dissipate quickly. So why would contrails?

Look it up. http://pbs.twimg.com/media/B9bkYNrCYAET-Bg.jpg

where the temperatures range from −30°C to −65°C (−22°F to −85°F). This is the region of the high troposphere or the low stratosphere. It takes very little water at these temperatures to produce a condition of saturation or supersaturation. Between these extremes lie all the possibilities for the many variations in pattern that occur. Moisture at high elevations often advances through the sky in tongues or uneven patterns, both large and small. Thus contrails may be seen in uneven segments of growth and dissipation.

Sometimes the multiple contrails that persist will break into a series of swirled loops, with the loops joining into ovals. When these loops and connected vortices develop, they ordinarily do not last more than a minute or so. When trails last for longer periods, they may break into a series of pendules or fingers. The pendule is a form of ring vortex, indicating the presence of locally stable moist air. Sometimes pendules are pulled away into long streamers by a zone of faster moving air. The resulting shear motion may result in such an extensive cloud sheet that the sky becomes completely overcast.

Contrails are spectacular in early morning and evening, and even in the light of the full moon. When the air to the west is clear and the sun has set, a jet aircraft at 12 km (about 40,000 ft.) will still be illuminated by the sun. Sometimes the white contrail will assume a brilliant red or orange color. To the uninformed, the moving trail, produced by a plane that is invisible or appears only as a rapidly moving spot in the sky, may seem to be an out-of-this-world apparition — more than one such case has subsequently been headlined in the papers as a UFO with a fiery tail.

Under most conditions a contrail is made of ice crystals. Though it initially consists of liquid water droplets in the warm exhaust air, these soon change to ice particles in the frigid temperatures of the high atmosphere. The presence of ice is best illustrated when the contrail is located between the observer and the sun. Bright areas called parhelia (see Color Plate 11) are visible at an angle of 22° on either side of the sun. This angle can easily be checked with a built-in device possessed by every human. With arm and fingers outstretched, let the thumb obscure the sun. The little finger, stretched to the maximum, then subtends an angle of about 22°. The bright spots observed are a portion of the well-known 22° halo (see p. 158).

The jet aircraft disturbs its environment in 2 important ways. First, a jet engine consumes large quantities of fuel, and substantial amounts of water vapor, a major by-product of combustion, leave the engine as one component of the exhaust gases. Second, the rapid movement of the air over the wings and body of the aircraft generates vortices that persist for a time until their internal energy is dissipated.

The particular contrail pattern will be determined by several

interacting factors. These are: (1) the moisture content of the air, (2) the temperature of the air, (3) the moisture introduced into the air by the engines, (4) the vertical stability of the air below, at, and above the aircraft, (5) the cloud condensation and ice nuclei count when the air is warmer than −40°C (−40°F), and (6) the mixing that takes place between the environmental air and the exhaust.

At one extreme, the air through which the jet is flying might be gently sinking over a large area, and thus have a very low relative humidity. In this case, the addition of moisture might be insufficient to produce anything but a very short-lived contrail, quickly destroyed by mixing with the dry surrounding air. When a jet passes and leaves no contrails in the sky, or contrails that quickly disappear, this is a good prognosticator of fair weather.

At the other extreme, the jet flies through air that is gradually rising and becoming cool, and so may be nearly saturated. The addition of moisture from the jet exhaust may then be enough to produce saturation and consequent water drops or ice crystals. A persistent trail is an indicator of moist air, which may be the first sign of an extensive storm area moving into the region. This is particularly true when cirrus clouds are also present.

Pl.151 IV$_H$ Classic example of jet stream cirrus covering whole sky. Strong jet stream winds in upper portion of photograph leave behind nearly horizontal streams of falling ice crystals.

https://www.metabunk.org/threads/manchester-contrail-pentagram-explained.3868/

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/B9V1TOyCMAAVTqN.jpg

The first four pictures apparently were taken before and the last one after the David's picture above (post #139 in https://www.metabunk.org/threads/co...ther-signs-in-the-sky.3659/page-4#post-111989). There are nine contrails in the last picture with five of them making the star. Comparison of photos allows the deduction of partial order of plane appearances and their headings relative to the camera (left or right, toward or away).

Unlike previous contrail pentagrams, it is known where and when this star was observed. Moreover, the photos provide sufficient information for its explanation. In particular, the last two photos taken in Stockport area with a ten-minute interval at 18:40 and 18:50 BST (on 20th June 2014) show the contrail star position relative the sun, the azimuth and altitude of which at that moment are readily calculated. These data place the contrail star northwest of Manchester with its centre being somewhere over Bolton. In ten minutes between the two Stockport photos the star went up in the sky relative to the sun, that is, it was brought closer to the camera position by a high altitude north-westerly wind.

Fligthradar24 playback for this area from 17:25 UTC till 17:50 UTC shows nine planes flying above this area at the contrail altitudes:

The order of appearances and headings of these planes are fully consistent with the photos. The contrails from the flights EZY49EY, VIR302G, DHL5CK, RYR39CF and H2B (1, 2, 3, 5 and 6) probably have made the star. Taking the wind factor into account, I have modelled these contrails on Google Earth, using the Flightradar24 data on flight routes and altitudes:

Whatever Causes Vapor-Trails, They're Pretty

By JAMES F. BECHTEL

Zero weather is a novelty in Florida—and that goes whether the temperature reading is taken at sea-level on Florida's sunny shores or at 20,000 feet above in the sunny skies.

This was apparent yesterday when long-time Florida residents were gazing aloft because several planes from the Naval Air Station were leaving vapor-trails high in the sky.

The newer arrivals looked just as wonderingly at the old timers! Why, in all creation were they dislocating their necks watching a few planes playing in the stratosphere?

Vapor-trails? Why, back North they're as common as an unclouded sun is in Florida!

But apparently vapor-trails aren't common here in Daytona Beach, judging by the way they were stared at yesterday. Maybe it's just because the kind of training done here doesn't ordinarily call for Naval fliers to go up four or five miles in the air. Or perhaps it's because other strange and still not completely understood meteoric phenomena aren't always functioning in the Florida skies.

Aircraft condensation trails

Everyone has noticed the long, thin, white trails left by highflying aircraft. They sometimes disappear quickly, but on other occasions they persist for a long time, spread out and become a cirrus or altocumulus type of cloud. These condensation trails ('contrails') result from the condensation of water vapour contained in the exhaust gases of the aircraft engines. Their persistence depends on the temperature and humidity of the atmosphere at the flight level. Thus, when a warm front is approaching and the cirrus clouds are beginning to form, an aircraft trail will usually tend to persist and even grow, because the air at that level is already moist. Wind shear (the change of wind speed from one height and distance to another) will cause the trails to spread out and give a spectacular display (88).

Sunset spike on the Pittsburgh PA radar.

These beams can be caused by a number of things. The most common causes are airplanes (since many radar sites are close to airport runways), large downtown buildings, or the sunrise and sunset. They are not "beam attacks." They are not energy spikes sent out to strengthen storms. They're just objects and waves messing with the radar returns. Less dramatic spikes can be caused by hailstorms.

Here are more of those radar spikes, perfectly aligned in the direction of the sunset:

where the temperatures range from −30°C to −65°C (−22°F to −85°F). This is the region of the high troposphere or the low stratosphere. It takes very little water at these temperatures to produce a condition of saturation or supersaturation. Between these extremes lie all the possibilities for the many variations in pattern that occur. Moisture at high elevations often advances through the sky in tongues or uneven patterns, both large and small. Thus contrails may be seen in uneven segments of growth and dissipation.

Sometimes the multiple contrails that persist will break into a series of swirled loops, with the loops joining into ovals. When these loops and connected vortices develop, they ordinarily do not last more than a minute or so. When trails last for longer periods, they may break into a series of pendules or fingers. The pendule is a form of ring vortex, indicating the presence of locally stable moist air. Sometimes pendules are pulled away into long streamers by a zone of faster moving air. The resulting shear motion may result in such an extensive cloud sheet that the sky becomes completely overcast.

Contrails are spectacular in early morning and evening, and even in the light of the full moon. When the air to the west is clear and the sun has set, a jet aircraft at 12 km (about 40,000 ft.) will still be illuminated by the sun. Sometimes the white contrail will assume a brilliant red or orange color. To the uninformed, the moving trail, produced by a plane that is invisible or appears only as a rapidly moving spot in the sky, may seem to be an out-of-this-world apparition — more than one such case has subsequently been headlined in the papers as a UFO with a fiery tail.

Under most conditions a contrail is made of ice crystals. Though it initially consists of liquid water droplets in the warm exhaust air, these soon change to ice particles in the frigid temperatures of the high atmosphere. The presence of ice is best illustrated when the contrail is located between the observer and the sun. Bright areas called parhelia (see Color Plate 11) are visible at an angle of 22° on either side of the sun. This angle can easily be checked with a built-in device possessed by every human. With arm and fingers outstretched, let the thumb obscure the sun. The little finger, stretched to the maximum, then subtends an angle of about 22°. The bright spots observed are a portion of the well-known 22° halo (see p. 158).

The jet aircraft disturbs its environment in 2 important ways. First, a jet engine consumes large quantities of fuel, and substantial amounts of water vapor, a major by-product of combustion, leave the engine as one component of the exhaust gases. Second, the rapid movement of the air over the wings and body of the aircraft generates vortices that persist for a time until their internal energy is dissipated.

The particular contrail pattern will be determined by several

interacting factors. These are: (1) the moisture content of the air, (2) the temperature of the air, (3) the moisture introduced into the air by the engines, (4) the vertical stability of the air below, at, and above the aircraft, (5) the cloud condensation and ice nuclei count when the air is warmer than −40°C (−40°F), and (6) the mixing that takes place between the environmental air and the exhaust.

At one extreme, the air through which the jet is flying might be gently sinking over a large area, and thus have a very low relative humidity. In this case, the addition of moisture might be insufficient to produce anything but a very short-lived contrail, quickly destroyed by mixing with the dry surrounding air. When a jet passes and leaves no contrails in the sky, or contrails that quickly disappear, this is a good prognosticator of fair weather.

At the other extreme, the jet flies through air that is gradually rising and becoming cool, and so may be nearly saturated. The addition of moisture from the jet exhaust may then be enough to produce saturation and consequent water drops or ice crystals. A persistent trail is an indicator of moist air, which may be the first sign of an extensive storm area moving into the region. This is particularly true when cirrus clouds are also present.

Pl.151 IV$_H$ Classic example of jet stream cirrus covering whole sky. Strong jet stream winds in upper portion of photograph leave behind nearly horizontal streams of falling ice crystals.

https://twitter.com/_/status/562788939707457537

2015-02-04T01:43:26+00:00

WHY PLANES MAKE Vapor Trails

This Dornier's exhaust trail might be spotted by the P-47 before the plane itself is seen

AIRPLANES leave trails in the atmosphere that can be picked up, if a spotter is quick enough, like those of game sought by a hunter. Some of them, especially trails left by a plane's exhaust at high, cold altitudes, endure for some time, while those made by wing tips creating vortices are audible as well as visible.

Both of these types of airplane trails are explained by condensation. Invisible water vapor in a plane's exhaust condenses into a visible cloud when the vapor reaches an excess of what the atmosphere will hold. Wing-tip trails add no water to the air, but as their vortices expand, the air temperature in them drops and the dew point is reached if the vortices are strong enough and humidity is high.

A small wind shear can draw out a contrail into an almost horizontal sheet of cloud [no. 70]. In this picture, the right hand trail is a few minutes older than the other and has been extended more. Sometimes several trails drawn out in this way cover most of the sky with cirrus. If the trails are very persistent the clear air must be saturated for ice.

Brightly coloured parts of complex haloes are occasionally seen in persistent contrails. Parts of coronae have been seen from accompanying aircraft in the first few metres of the trails, but they disappear as the droplets freeze and grow into crystals.

There is one other form of ice crystal cloud. The artificial one caused by aircraft, and there are two varieties. One is produced by the condensation and freezing of exhaust vapour, which on issuing expands to a large extent forming a line of cloud which drifts in the sky for some time, spreading outward, and becoming less froze. When the ambient relative humidity is high, the resulting ice-crystal plume may last for several hours. The trail may be distorted by the winds, and sometimes the ice-crystal cloud spreads outwards to form a layer of cirrus. On rare occasions, when the air is nearly saturated with water vapour, air circulation at the wing tips of an airplane may cause sufficient pressure and temperature reductions to cause cloud streamers to form.

Condensation trails (contrails)

Contrails are clouds which form in the wake of an aircraft when the atmosphere at flying level is sufficiently cold and humid. When just formed, they have the appearance of brilliant white streaks; soon however they show pendant swellings like inverted mushrooms. Often they are short-lived, but especially when Cirrus or Cirrostratus is present, they may persist for several hours. Persistent trails spread progressively, frequently forming large patches of fluffy or fibrous clouds, having the appearance of Cirrus or patches of Cirrocumulus or Cirrostratus; in fact it is sometimes impossible to distinguish old contrails from these clouds.

Contrails may produce halo phenomena with exceptionally pure colours.

sources, etc. With very few exceptions, we should not see ANYTHING behind the jets in our skies that are fitted with high bypass turbofan jet engines. High Bypass turbofan jet engines are fitted on ALL COMMERCIAL AIRCRAFT and ALL MILITARY TANKERS. High bypass jet engines are nearly incapable of producing a "condensation trail" except for the most extreme conditions and even then any visible trail should not be more than a few seconds at most. Even many actively engaged in the fight to expose and stop the ongoing climate engineering insanity do not yet understand this fact. Shorter bright trails are in most cases still SPRAYED HIGHLY TOXIC DISPERSIONS. Those who truly want to be effective in the battle to expose the geoengineering crimes should take the time to watch the video below, perhaps twice. More than any other issue, our collective futures depend on exposing and stopping the spraying. Do your part, get educated and become a more effective fighter in this most critical battle.

1946, Brewer, Condensation Trails: Weather, June 1946
http://www.metoffice.gov.uk/media/pdf/c/3/1946_Brewer_condensation_trails.pdf

The trail, of course, spreads and diffuses behind the aircraft, but if the air is generally saturated the trail cannot evaporate, or can do so only very slowly, and a very long and persistent trail is formed, as is well known. An excellent example of such a trail made by Fortress aircraft at 32,000 ft., which could be seen for some time from most parts of East Anglia, is shown on the cover photograph. If, on the other hand, the general relative humidity is low, the trail will evaporate behind the aircraft and will only appear as a short plume behind it. Actually, the really persistent trails are almost always associated with the supersaturation in the upper air, in which case the trail, once formed, thickens instead of evaporating, and after a few minutes snow can usually be seen falling from it.

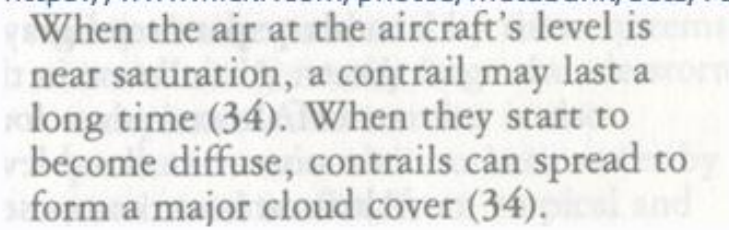
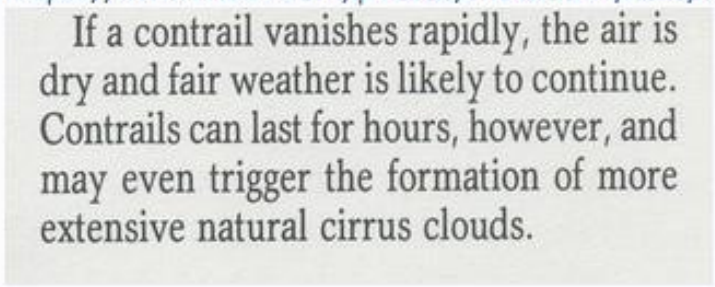
1991: National Audubon Society Field Guide to North American Weather
https://www.flickr.com/photos/metabunk/sets/72157644020551293/



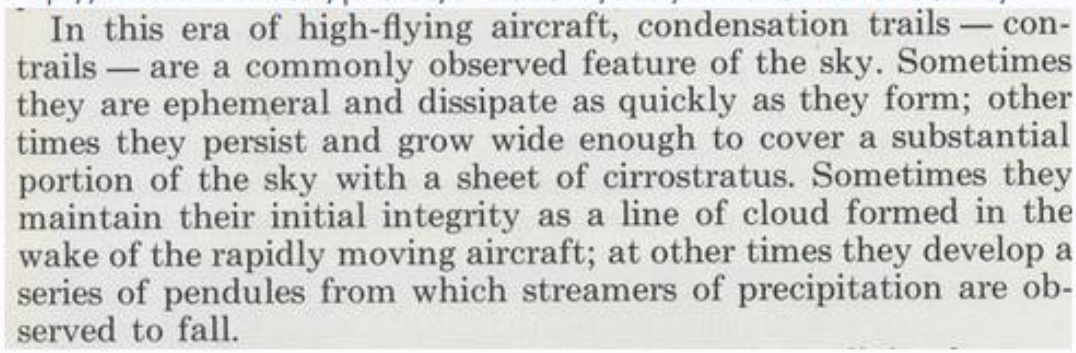
When the air at the aircraft's level is near saturation, a contrail may last a long time (34). When they start to become diffuse, contrails can spread to form a major cloud cover (34).

1988: Exploring the Sky By Day, Page 49
https://www.flickr.com/photos/metabunk/sets/72157643850292503/



If a contrail vanishes rapidly, the air is dry and fair weather is likely to continue. Contrails can last for hours, however, and may even trigger the formation of more extensive natural cirrus clouds.

1981: Peterson Field Guide to the Atmosphere, page 137
http://www.flickr.com/photos/metabunk/sets/72157641675780313/



In this era of high-flying aircraft, condensation trails — contrails — are a commonly observed feature of the sky. Sometimes they are ephemeral and dissipate as quickly as they form; other times they persist and grow wide enough to cover a substantial portion of the sky with a sheet of cirrostratus. Sometimes they maintain their initial integrity as a line of cloud formed in the wake of the rapidly moving aircraft; at other times they develop a series of pendules from which streamers of precipitation are observed to fall.

@rockermom53 Contrails do that to, lots of history to it.

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/B8UKtPjCIAAqFra.jpg

For scientific discussion, see, for example, all these articles on contrails. In particular the one titled "", from 1970:

Airborne Observations of Contrail Effects on the Thermal Radiation Budget

> The spreading of jet contrails into extensive cirrus sheets is a familiar sight. Often, when persistent contrails exist from 25,000 to 40,000 ft, several long contrails increase in number and gradually merge into an almost solid interlaced sheet.
> Contrail development and spreading begins in the morning hours with the start of heavy jet traffic and may extend from horizon to horizon as the air traffic peaks. Fig. 1 is a typical example of midmorning contrails that occured on 17 December 1969 northwest of Boulder. By midafternoon, sky conditions had developed into those shown in Fig. 2 an almost solid contrail sheet reported to average 500 m in depth.

@BlauweStorm Yes, it happens all the time, due to variations in humidity, like how clouds vary. http://pbs.twimg.com/media/B8T6iLVCUAApC2T.jpg

If the overall humidity is lower, then these regions are still there but the water does not condense, so we can't see them.
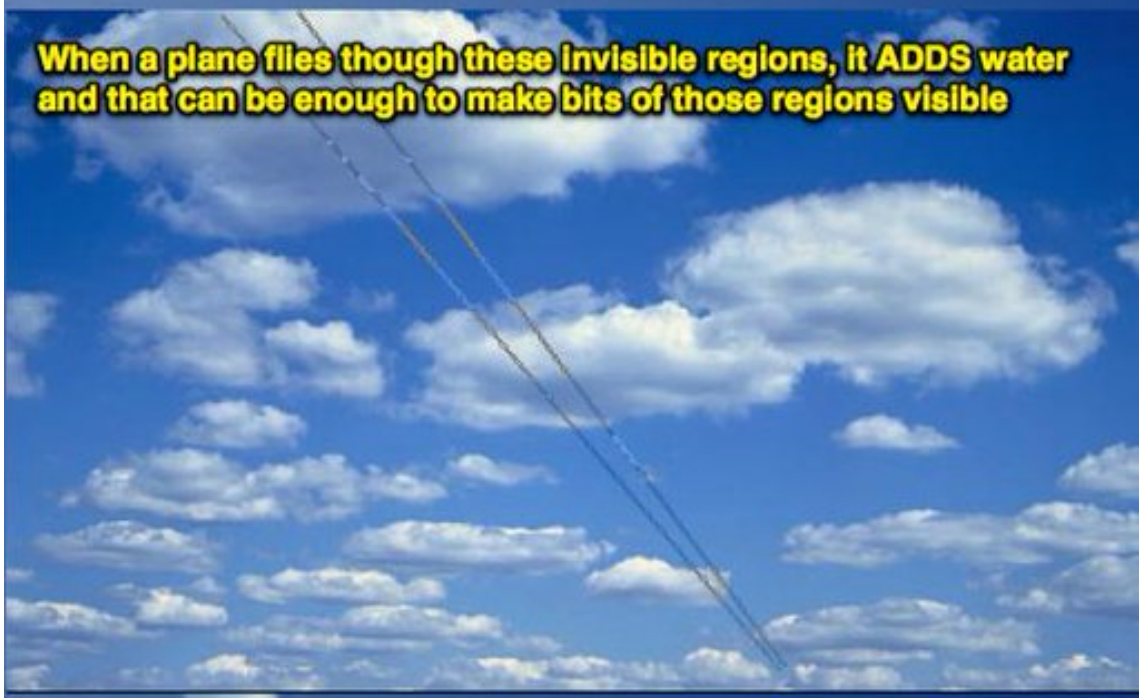
Kind of like invisble clouds.



So it leaves a trail thet reveals where the humidity was high enough
Kind of like a magic pen, revealing the invisible clouds

11.2.4 The contrail is formed about one wingspan behind the aircraft when the exhaust has mixed with sufficient air of the environment to produce saturation. The edges of the trails are ragged to begin with but further mixing evaporates these and the trail becomes smooth: this indicates that the condensation persists only in the low pressure region of the vortex cores.

Close to the aircraft it is seen that the two trails from the inner engines descend further than the outer ones, those on the right being separately visible but the outer left one being behind the inner left one. Often one complete rotation of the inner round the outer one can be seen.

In the second picture the trails appear hollow. This is because the exhaust did not enter the middle of the vortex core. The particles are too small for centrifuging to be significant.

The irregularities are intensified, and at the right end the mixing penetrates in a few places into the vortex cores and dissipates the cloud. The spacing of the loops must be determined by the distance apart of the vortices: irregularities of all wavelengths are unstable, but two loops very close together merge into one, while new loops can appear between those that are rather far apart. The interval between the first and last pictures is 90 sec.

Motion identical with that shown here has been observed in smoke trails emitted at the wing tips of a Comet aircraft at 3,000 metres which is far below the normal altitude for contrails.

11.2.5 The condensation outside the vortex cores persisted in the trail of the first aircraft to pass, but not in the trail of the second. It seems probable, therefore, that the first trail was frozen as a result of being at an environmental temperature near to or below −40°C. (See 11.4.)

These pictures were taken looking vertically upwards over a period of about three minutes, and because the aircraft was on a turn the downwash was inclined outwards. The effect is to give a view rather like the side view of a straight trail (see 11.2.3, 11.2.8). Where the vortices are closest together they have penetrated farthest, and the blobs correspond to the places where the mixing has penetrated into the vortex cores. In the lowest picture the linear clouds are composed of the detrained accompanying fluid.

@4thAnon I'm debunking the claim that the video is fake because the shadows converge. Am I not?

@4thAnon But here I'm debunking something in the MSM. Nobody trusts the media. I certainly don't.

@4thAnon But in this case, why you say "now I'm cynical", is that cynical of the "It's fake" story, or cynical of my debunk?

@4thAnon It's because of Veryan Khan. She thinks the shadows converge oddly. That's all she says, but she's an "expert".

The lights of an airport at night never fail to move the spirit, and this portrayal of dusk falling on London's great terminal—just as the old year receded—shows the subject in a setting dramatically high-lighted by the contrails of military aircraft.

CIVIL AVIATION . . .

T.A.I.'s existing service between France and Australasia. As in the case of Jules Verne's hero, these marathon journeys are spurred by motives other than immediate cash gain. The difficulties of operating round-world services seem high in relation to the tangible reward. Routine operational problems such as spares provisioning, crew familiarization, space control and flight scheduling are intensified on services of such great length and relatively low frequency as these.

But the most exacting obstacles are to be found in the diplomatic field. On flights of this length there is no possibility of obtaining an economic load-factor if traffic is limited to that moving to and from the homeland. The necessity of carrying traffic between pairs of foreign countries—so-called "fifth-freedom traffic"—demands an extraordinary volume of diplomatic bargaining before satisfactory rights can be obtained for operating a round-world service.

The amicable relationship existing between the major airlines of the British Commonwealth, together with the close political ties linking the U.K. and its colonies to the Dominions, means that carriers such as Q.E.A. have less severe political problems to face than those airlines whose national governments are in an unfavourable bargaining position.

In obtaining permission to operate across the U.S. those airlines planning round-world services probably face their most arduous obstacle. Air France's recent experiences illustrate the difficulty of getting U.S. rights. Airlines whose governments have less to offer the State Department might soon be exploring the possibilities of using routes through Canada or Central America rather than through the U.S.

Rand Paul debunks "chemtrails" http://pbs.twimg.com/media/B6PQ285IUAEJHlr.jpg

April 18, 2013

Dear Mr. Klecka,

Thank you for contacting my office about chemtrails. I appreciate hearing your thoughts on this issue.

Evidence suggests that the phenomena sometimes referred to as chemtrails are simply condensation trails formed in the wake of jet aircraft, which may remain visible in the sky for long periods of time given favorable atmospheric conditions.

Again, thank you for contacting me. It is an honor and a privilege to represent the Commonwealth of Kentucky in the United States Senate. Please continue to inform me of any thoughts you may have on federal legislative issues.

Sincerely,

Rand Paul

CLOUD FORMATION BY SUPERCHARGED PLANE.[1]

[Reprinted from U. S. Air Service, July, 1921, p. 13.]

An altitude flight was made in the morning at McCook Field [Dayton, Ohio] recently, by Lieut. J. A. Macready in a La Pere with supercharged Liberty. When the airplane reached a height of 26,000–27,000 feet at 11:50 a. m., a long feathery white streamer was observed forming behind a rapidly moving dark speck. The cloud was of the cirrus variety, well defined at its edges and apparently 10 to 15 times the width of the plane. The sky behind the first portion was clear blue with no other clouds in the near neighborhood. The first streamer seemed perhaps 2 miles long. Then a gap of one-quarter mile. The second streamer formed with a background of light cirrus cloud and after 2 or 3 miles the plane seemed to go into the cirrus background, for the streamer formation ceased while an apparent path of blue continued beyond for a way in the cirrus cloud. The whole streamer may have been 3 miles long. After 20 minutes the streamer had drifted and spread until it merged indistinguishably with the other cirrus clouds visible. The weather conditions at the time were generally very clear, warm, with perhaps 0.1 of the sky in cirrus clouds.

Darn Sky Riders

Jet Trails Dim Sun, Palm Springs Gripes

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6. (UPI)—The air force is long since resigned to the fuss about noise from its jets. Now comes Palm Springs, Calif., with a new complaint—that jet trails overhead are so thick they are beginning to blot out the sun.

Jimmy Cooper, manager of the Palm Springs Chamber of Commerce, outlined this "most serious and urgent problem" in a telegram to Representative D. S. (Judge) Saund (D-Calif.), who has asked the air force what can be done.

"As you know," Cooper wired Saund, "our entire economy is dependent upon the tourist trade, which is predicated on our bright sunshine and warm climate. Recently our sky has resembled a mob of exuberant sky riders performing an aerial circus.

"The 'contrails' are not disappearing but are breaking down into a haze and creating a cloud-like appearance in the sky.

"With the unlimited expanse of barren, uninhabited land in the west, does such activity have to be centered over a resort area, which is offering the visitor cloudless skies and unlimited sunshine?"

The air force, so far, is flabbergasted. No doubt in time it will recover its aplomb sufficiently to give Saund the usual answer to all congressional inquiries—that the matter will be investigated.

The air force figures its jets couldn't blot out the sun short of a wing-to-wing mass flight like the European bombing raids of World war II. If anything like that is going on out of March air force base at Riverside, Calif., the nearest jet base to Palm Springs, air force officials here want to know all about it.

Shill Ousted by Minister

TOPEKA, Kan., Dec. 6. (AP)—Maurice D. Tulloch, who gave up the life of a Baptist minister to become a shill in a Las Vegas gambling casino, was stripped of his ministerial standing yesterday.

The action was taken by the executive committee of the Kansas Baptist convention.

Tulloch, a graying, spectacled man with crew-cut hair who looks closer to 40 than his 50 years, was pastor of the First Baptist church of Sabetha, Kan. Last September 29, he walked out of a meeting of Baptist pastors in Hutchinson, Kan., and disappeared.

On November 26 he was located in Las Vegas, working as a shill—a gambling casino employee who poses as a customer to drum up trade.

Why planes make vapor trails. Popular science, 1943. Same reason now, but jet exhausts are much bigger. http://pbs.twimg.com/media/B4W3S28CYAEiGhx.jpg

WHY PLANES MAKE Vapor Trails

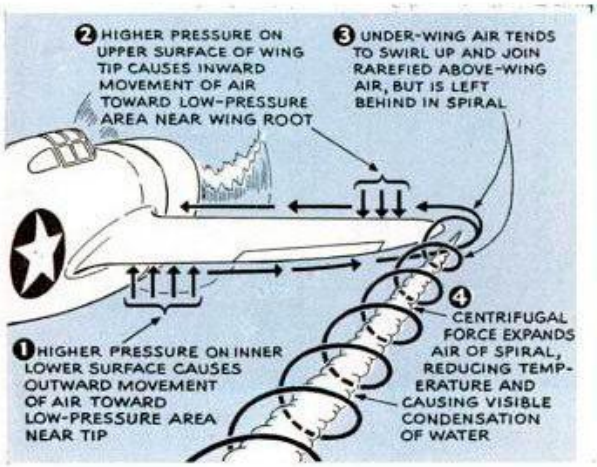
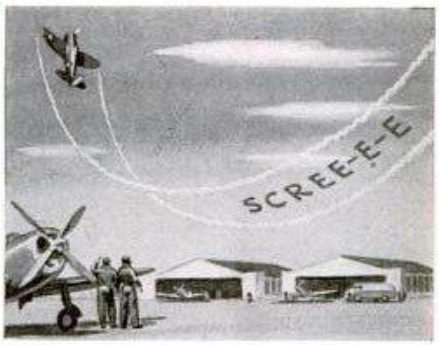
AIRPLANES leave trails in the atmosphere that can be picked up, if a spotter is quick enough, like those of game sought by a hunter. Some of them, especially trails left by a plane's exhaust at high, cold altitudes, endure for some time, while those made by wing tips creating vortices are audible as well as visible.

Both of these types of airplane trails are explained by condensation. Invisible water vapor in a plane's exhaust condenses into a visible cloud when the vapor reaches an excess of what the atmosphere will hold. Wing-tip trails add no water to the air, but as their vortices expand, the air temperature in them drops and the dew point is reached if the vortices are strong enough and humidity is high.





Noise like the whistle of a falling object may be heard when a heavily loaded plane pulls out of a low dive. It is from the wing-tip trail illustrated at left, and is audible after that of the motor dies away @Alicia_May_Bee The patent is speculation about sometime that might be done in the future. It's intended to fix (patch) climate change.

@Alicia_May_Bee The fumes are there regardless of if you see a contrail. The contrail is just a cloud that sometimes forms there.

@Q4LT00 someone who studies the actual crop. And preferably several of them. Someone familiar with the way the crop grows and reacts.

https://twitter.com/_/status/540242813510631424

@Drastic709 @Q4LT00 Depends on the atmospheric conditions. Look up "crow instability" contrails.

https://twitter.com/_/status/540241610764599296

@Drastic709 @Q4LT00 That would still be anecdotal. What is needed is a more detailed study, sampling of crops, consult with experts.

@Q4LT00 Lots of detail for the flat earth theory. Do you feel the need to check that? http://theflatearthsociety.org/cms/

https://twitter.com/_/status/540238821900574720

@Q4LT00 Do you think there is good evidence some specific crop circles are not man-made?

2014-12-03T20:18:24+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/540238642409529344

@Q4LT00 If they did, then would you go seeking evidence?

2014-12-03T20:16:45+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/540238229610303489

@Q4LT00 No you don't, because there is no reason to suspect it's not man-made. Just like with crop circles.

2014-12-03T20:14:48+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/540237738570547200

The key point is the lack of evidence that they are not man-made.

2014-12-03T20:11:26+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/540236889303683073

@Q4LT00 A) We know lots of crop circles are definitely made by people. B) There are some that look basically the same.

https://twitter.com/_/status/540229456657264640

@Q4LT00 I know people can make crop circles. That's the most important detail.

2014-12-03T19:41:01+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/540229235533561856

@Q4LT00 do you know any crop circle you think might be a spaceship landing pattern?

2014-12-03T19:40:19+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/540229058798559232

@Q4LT00 The crop circles are obviously deliberate patterns, not accidents, regardless of their cause.

2014-12-03T19:39:50+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/540228939403120640

@Q4LT00 But it seems very likely that the laws of physics would be unchanged. Air would be displaced.

https://twitter.com/_/status/540228783723143168

@Q4LT00 There's an infinite number of things I've not had direct experience with.

2014-12-03T19:38:46+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/540228671798145024

2014-12-03T19:37:40+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/540228394558832640

@Q4LT00 And if something were cause by a landing spaceship, it's going to look like the whirlwind flattening, not fancy patterns.

https://twitter.com/_/status/540228221292122112

https://twitter.com/_/status/540221715091947520

@Q4LT00 Two different sets of people make crop circles with different results hardly seems unexpected.

2014-12-03T19:03:48+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/540219871666003968

@Q4LT00 Like, was the the same weather, crop age, pressure used, time of day, etc?

https://twitter.com/_/status/540219727826542592

@Q4LT00 You certainly try. But I don't think one cake coming out different proves aliens made the good cake. Maybe some other variable.

During flight tests in 1994, the cabin interior of the prototype 777 was filled with what at first glance looked like aluminum beer kegs. In fact, these 55-gallon barrels contained water. The contents of two dozen barrels in the forward cabin and a like number of barrels in the aft section were pumped back and forth to simulate shifts in center of gravity that would result from passengers moving about. The top photo shows the cabin as it is when the 777 is delivered.

UAP Hearing: Here are all three frames where the FlyBy UFO is visible. They are all out of focus. A single bright reflection is present as bokeh (the white region). Given the slow speed indicated by Bray, this is probably a mylar balloon. http://pbs.twimg.com/media/FS_v6M1VIAIexT7.jpg @EricRWeinstein I think very few cases are lying, most are simply honest mistakes, even mistakes by experts and highly trained professionals. With large numbers, things happen.

My confidence is simply a sober assessment after looking at many cases and having found them lacking. I extrapolate.

@KirbysCrackle @KilliK69 @ztrussell That would imply that additional data would make zero difference in solving the mystery.

Which is obviously not true, hence the data is insufficient to solve the mystery.

2 Speaker 2 1:13:02

Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Representative Stefanik is in route I believe, just real quickly, but in the interim, if I could, if you'll indulge me, I just have one. A couple of real small questions. One is do we have an example? Can you cite a specific example of an object that can't be explained as having been human made or natural?

SB Scott Bray 1:13:26

I mean, the the the example that, that I would say that that is still unresolved, that I think everyone understands quite well as the 2004 incident from from Nimitz. We have data on that, and that simply remains unresolved. does not mean it resolves to being something that is easily explainable or difficulty, or Well, obviously, it resolved to being something that is difficult to explain. But I can't point to something that definitively was not manmade. But I can point to a number of examples in which remain unresolved.

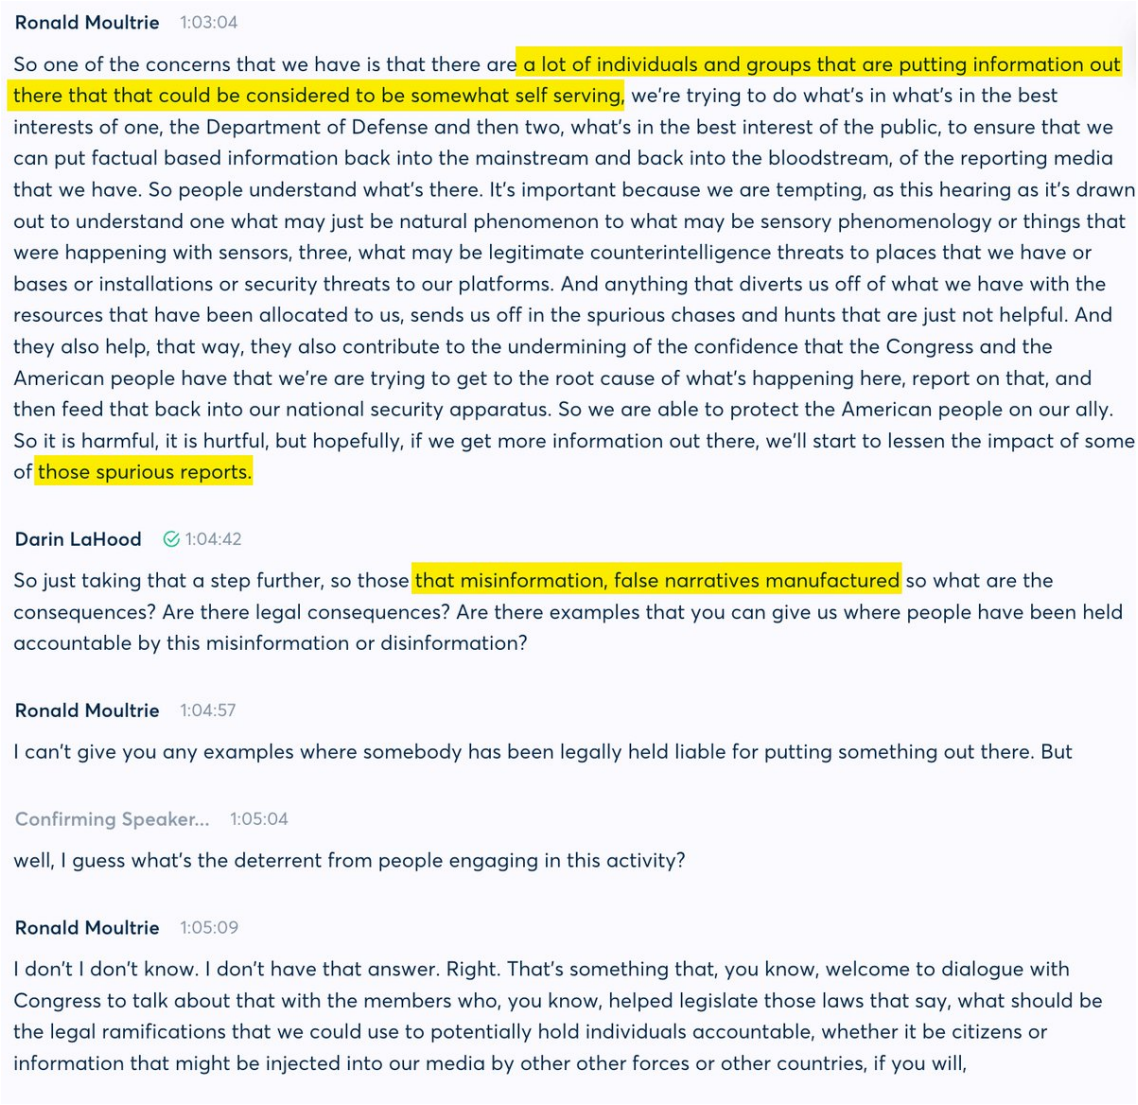
At the UAP hearing today, what "individuals and groups" putting out "spurious reports" and "false narratives" are Moultrie and LaHood referring to?
http://pbs.twimg.com/media/FS_CaQNUUAAGgg3.jpg



Ronald Moultrie 1:03:04

So one of the concerns that we have is that there are a lot of individuals and groups that are putting information out there that that could be considered to be somewhat self serving, we're trying to do what's in what's in the best interests of one, the Department of Defense and then two, what's in the best interest of the public, to ensure that we can put factual based information back into the mainstream and back into the bloodstream, of the reporting media that we have. So people understand what's there. It's important because we are tempting, as this hearing as it's drawn out to understand one what may just be natural phenomenon to what may be sensory phenomenology or things that were happening with sensors, three, what may be legitimate counterintelligence threats to places that we have or bases or installations or security threats to our platforms. And anything that diverts us off of what we have with the resources that have been allocated to us, sends us off in the spurious chases and hunts that are just not helpful. And they also help, that way, they also contribute to the undermining of the confidence that the Congress and the American people have that we're are trying to get to the root cause of what's happening here, report on that, and then feed that back into our national security apparatus. So we are able to protect the American people on our ally. So it is harmful, it is hurtful, but hopefully, if we get more information out there, we'll start to lessen the impact of some of those spurious reports.

Darin LaHood 1:04:42

So just taking that a step further, so those that misinformation, false narratives manufactured so what are the consequences? Are there legal consequences? Are there examples that you can give us where people have been held accountable by this misinformation or disinformation?

Ronald Moultrie 1:04:57

I can't give you any examples where somebody has been legally held liable for putting something out there. But

Confirming Speaker... 1:05:04 well, I guess what's the deterrent from people engaging in this activity?

Ronald Moultrie 1:05:09

I don't I don't know. I don't have that answer. Right. That's something that, you know, welcome to dialogue with Congress to talk about that with the members who, you know, helped legislate those laws that say, what should be the legal ramifications that we could use to potentially hold individuals accountable, whether it be citizens or information that might be injected into our media by other other forces or other countries, if you will,

Not having a definitive explanation does not mean it's amazing.

The "Fly-by" UFO was:
- Slow
- Round
-Shiny

So a VERY PLAUSIBLE hypothesis is that it's a stray mylar balloon.

@valliant No, @uncertainvector said that the Gimbal object did not do the turn in the video until AFTER the wedge had done its turn.

So it really does not seem possible, as described.

@uncertainvector Here I've made the fleet have a "radius of turn", as roughly indicated by @uncertainvector. The problem being this needs them to accelerate from 200 knots to 4200 knots.

This seems problematic.

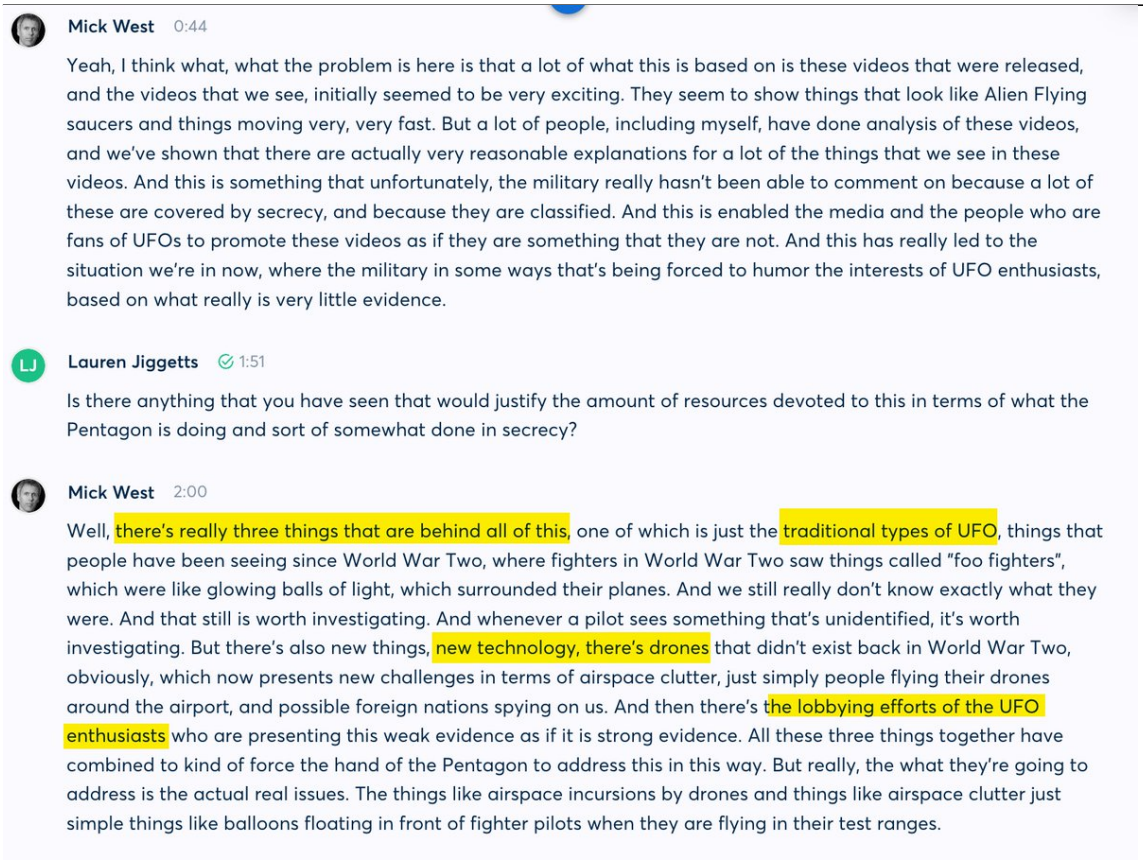
@paulsanderson @TheUfoJoe This is what I said on TV a few day ago:

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/FS6G_5pUUAAD8ug.jpg



Mick West 0:44

Yeah, I think what, what the problem is here is that a lot of what this is based on is these videos that were released, and the videos that we see, initially seemed to be very exciting. They seem to show things that look like Alien Flying saucers and things moving very, very fast. But a lot of people, including myself, have done analysis of these videos, and we've shown that there are actually very reasonable explanations for a lot of the things that we see in these videos. And this is something that unfortunately, the military really hasn't been able to comment on because a lot of these are covered by secrecy, and because they are classified. And this is enabled the media and the people who are fans of UFOs to promote these videos as if they are something that they are not. And this has really led to the situation we're in now, where the military in some ways that's being forced to humor the interests of UFO enthusiasts, based on what really is very little evidence.

Lauren Jiggetts 1:51

Is there anything that you have seen that would justify the amount of resources devoted to this in terms of what the Pentagon is doing and sort of somewhat done in secrecy?

Mick West 2:00

Well, there's really three things that are behind all of this, one of which is just the traditional types of UFO, things that people have been seeing since World War Two, where fighters in World War Two saw things called "foo fighters", which were like glowing balls of light, which surrounded their planes. And we still really don't know exactly what they were. And that still is worth investigating. And whenever a pilot sees something that's unidentified, it's worth investigating. But there's also new things, new technology, there's drones that didn't exist back in World War Two, obviously, which now presents new challenges in terms of airspace clutter, just simply people flying their drones around the airport, and possible foreign nations spying on us. And then there's the lobbying efforts of the UFO enthusiasts who are presenting this weak evidence as if it is strong evidence. All these three things together have combined to kind of force the hand of the Pentagon to address this in this way. But really, the what they're going to address is the actual real issues. The things like airspace incursions by drones and things like airspace clutter just simple things like balloons floating in front of fighter pilots when they are flying in their test ranges.

@Q4LT00 Trails are also moved quickly by the wind. As they get further away, closer to the horizon, it can look like they are descending @Q4LT00 It is, as the ice crystals grow (if humidity is high enough), then it will slowly sink. It forms "pendules" as it does.

@Q4LT00 The trails you are seeing at ground level at LAX are aerodynamic though, so don't need cold temps.

https://twitter.com/_/status/539833101707268096

@Q4LT00 probably 60% RH for both to form, but you'd need a fighter jet to see them both unless it's closer to 100%.

2014-12-02T17:25:20+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/539832703760076800

@Q4LT00 Needs to be (approximately) -40Â°F or colder, and above about 60% Relative Humidity, at the altitude the trails form.

11.4 Glaciation and Distortion

Except for trails in wingtip vortex cores most contrails are formed at temperatures below −40°C (see 11.2.iv) and therefore the particles freeze almost immediately. Mock suns are often very bright in contrails, and parts of circumzenithal arcs have been observed in them.

Once glaciated the trails may last for many hours, and may be spread out by wind shear into almost horizontal sheets. The most extensive sheets are formed from trails which originally produced an extensive vertical curtain of cloud or very elongated blobs.

The trails persist in air that is saturated for ice and not for water, and such air is often found ahead of warm fronts. Often contrails can extend the forward edge of warm front cirrus by many tens of miles.

11.4.1 These contrails are of various ages and are seen almost vertically overhead about three hours after sunrise in July at Wimbledon. The newest trail is the one from the top left corner: the oldest is the horizontal one, which has a delicate structure for which there is no obvious explanation.

11.4.2 This trail was seen above the sunset over Bognor Regis in July. The blobs were extended over about a mile horizontally and in the shear layer billows can be seen.

Trace metals in rain and snow during 1973 at Chadron, Nebraska

A.W. Struempler

Received 20 January 1975. Revised 7 July 1975. Available online 14 April 2003.

Abstract

This 1973 study found an average of 350 ug/L aluminum in rain and snow

Rain and snow were collected during 1973 in Chadron, Nebraska, a rural location 480 km north-northeast of Denver, Colorado, and analyzed for Ag, Al, Cd, Cu, Mn, Pb and Zn. Our location with prevailing westerly and southerly winds seemed ideal for establishing baseline concentrations of metals in precipitation before additional coal-fired power plants begin operation in adjacent western states with coal reserves. Samples were analyzed by flameless atomic absorption spectroscopy. The concentrations of Ag, Al, Cd, Cu, Mn, Pb and Zn in samples of rain and snow averaged 8.4 × 10−11, 3.5 × 10−7, 3.1 × 10−10, 4.4 × 10−9, 5.2 × 10−9, 4.8 × 10−9 and 1.0 × 10−8 g cm^{-3}, respectively.

For scientific discussion, see, for example, all these articles on contrails. In particular the one titled "", from 1970:

Airborne Observations of Contrail Effects on the Thermal Radiation Budget

> The spreading of jet contrails into extensive cirrus sheets is a familiar sight. Often, when persistent contrails exist from 25,000 to 40,000 ft, several long contrails increase in number and gradually merge into an almost solid interlaced sheet.
> [....]
> Contrail development and spreading begins in the morning hours with the start of heavy jet traffic and may extend from horizon to horizon as the air traffic peaks. Fig. 1 is a typical example of midmorning contrails that occured on 17 December 1969 northwest of Boulder. By midafternoon, sky conditions had developed into those shown in Fig. 2 an almost solid contrail sheet reported to average 500 m in depth.

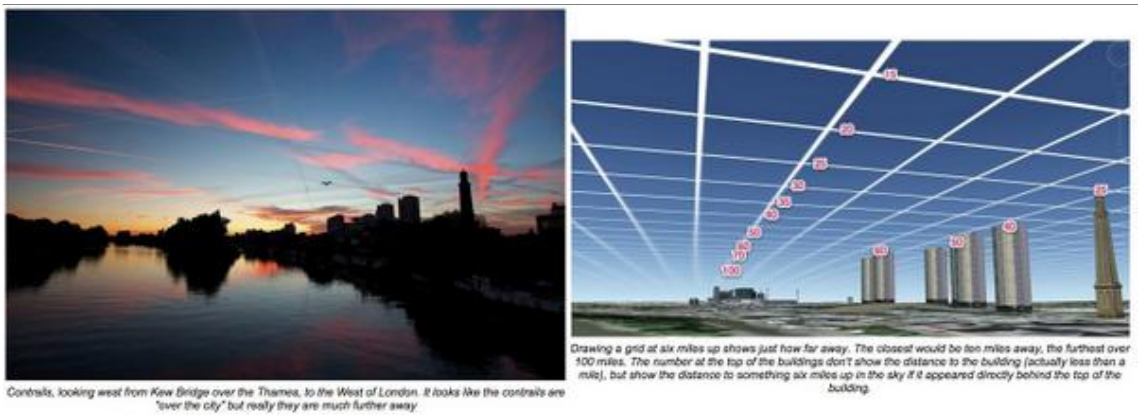
Perspective. Contrails are generally far away. @DavidMckenna7 @__White_Rabbit_ @greenfox49 http://pbs.twimg.com/media/BzR3MVeIcAEpYEB.jpg



Contrails, looking west from Kew Bridge over the Thames, to the West of London. It looks like the contrails are "over the city" but really they are much further away

Drawing a grid at six miles up shows just how far away. The closest would be ten miles away, the furthest over 100 miles. The number at the top of the buildings don't show the distance to the building (actually less than a mile), but show the distance to something six miles up in the sky if it appeared directly behind the top of the building.

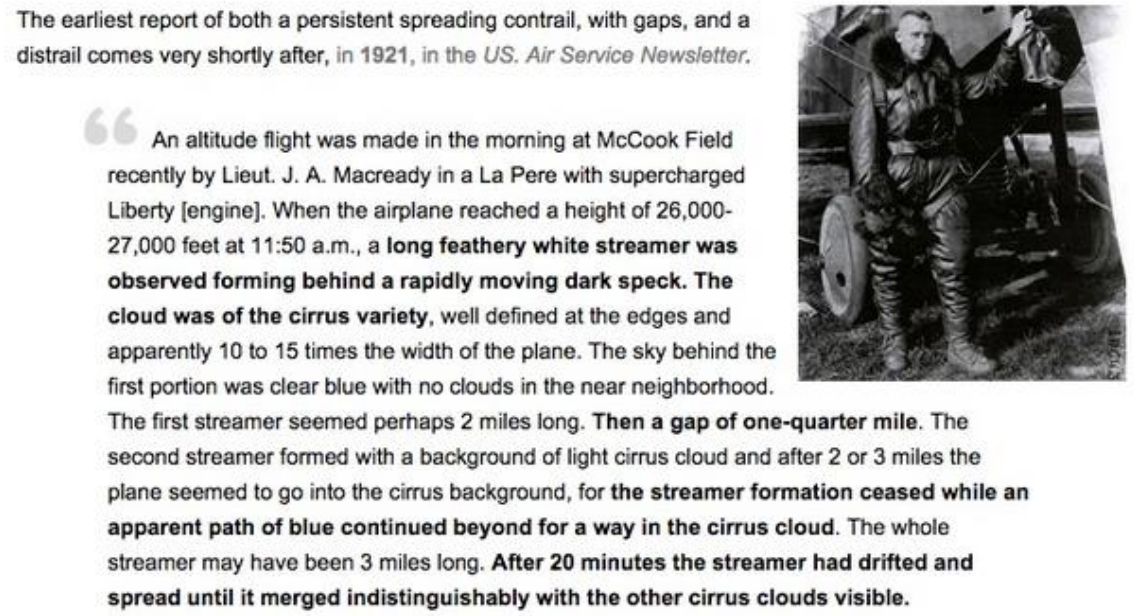
@greenfox49 @DavidMckenna7 @__White_Rabbit_ Contrail persistence is straightforward science and history. http://pbs.twimg.com/media/BzR2Gr3IgAAhYV-.jpg



The earliest report of both a persistent spreading contrail, with gaps, and a distrail comes very shortly after, in 1921, in the US. Air Service Newsletter.

> An altitude flight was made in the morning at McCook Field recently by Lieut. J. A. Macready in a La Pere with supercharged Liberty [engine]. When the airplane reached a height of 26,000-27,000 feet at 11:50 a.m., a long feathery white streamer was observed forming behind a rapidly moving dark speck. The cloud was of the cirrus variety, well defined at the edges and apparently 10 to 15 times the width of the plane. The sky behind the first portion was clear blue with no clouds in the near neighborhood. The first streamer seemed perhaps 2 miles long. Then a gap of one-quarter mile. The second streamer formed with a background of light cirrus cloud and after 2 or 3 miles the plane seemed to go into the cirrus background, for the streamer formation ceased while an apparent path of blue continued beyond for a way in the cirrus cloud. The whole streamer may have been 3 miles long. After 20 minutes the streamer had drifted and spread until it merged indistinguishably with the other cirrus clouds visible.

Do contrails sometimes persist and spread out?

Yes, see the Encyclopædia Britannica article on vapour trails (contrails):

> Contrail, streamer of cloud sometimes observed behind an airplane flying in clear, cold, humid air. It forms upon condensation of the water vapour produced by the combustion of fuel in the airplane engines. When the ambient relative humidity is high, the resulting ice-crystal plume may last for several hours*. The trail may be distorted by the winds, and* sometimes it spreads outwards to form a layer of cirrus cloud.
> vapour trail. (2007). In Encyclopædia Britannica.Retrieved May 4, 2007,from Encyclopædia Britannica Online: http://www.britannica.com/eb/article-9074829

NUBI E SISTEMI FRONTALI

Fig. 75. Scie di condensazione
La presenza di numerose scie persistenti indica condizioni favorevoli al loro perdurare (aria stabile e sufficientemente umida).

ti dall'altro, a volte mascherati da nuvolosità più bassa e immobile. Si tratta di turbolenza che è pericolosa per la navigazione aerea, soprattutto per i velivoli leggeri.

Il meccanismo di formazione è simile a quello delle nebbie da avvezione.

Le scie di condensazione si formano ad altezze in cui la temperatura dell'aria è molto bassa (inferiore a –40 °C), con umidità relativa almeno del 60%.

Le scie possono essere più o meno durature nel tempo, a seconda della stabilità dell'aria e della quantità di vapore presente.

Nubi madreperlacee

Le nubi madreperlacee hanno iridescenze simili a quelle della madreperla. Di forma lenticolare, si sviluppano presumibilmente nella stratosfera, dove raccolgono la poca umidità e le particelle presenti.

A small wind shear can draw out a contrail into an almost horizontal sheet of cloud [no. 70]. In this picture, the right hand trail is a few minutes older than the other and has been extended more. Sometimes several trails drawn out in this way cover most of the sky with cirrus. If the trails are very persistent the clear air must be saturated for ice.

Brightly coloured parts of complex haloes are occasionally seen in persistent contrails. Parts of coronae have been seen from accompanying aircraft in the first few metres of the trails, but they disappear as the droplets freeze and grow into crystals.

11.4 Glaciation and Distortion

Except for trails in wingtip vortex cores most contrails are formed at temperatures below −40°C (see 11.2.iv) and therefore the particles freeze almost immediately. Mock suns are often very bright in contrails, and parts of circumzenithal arcs have been observed in them.

Once glaciated the trails may last for many hours, and may be spread out by wind shear into almost horizontal sheets. The most extensive sheets are formed from trails which originally produced an extensive vertical curtain of cloud or very elongated blobs.

The trails persist in air that is saturated for ice and not for water, and such air is often found ahead of warm fronts. Often contrails can extend the forward edge of warm front cirrus by many tens of miles.

Aircraft condensation trails

Everyone has noticed the long, thin, white trails left by highflying aircraft. They sometimes disappear quickly, but on other occasions they persist for a long time, spread out and become a cirrus or altocumulus type of cloud. These condensation trails ('contrails') result from the condensation of water vapour contained in the exhaust gases of the aircraft engines. Their persistence depends on the temperature and humidity of the atmosphere at the flight level. Thus, when a warm front is approaching and the cirrus clouds are beginning to form, an aircraft trail will usually tend to persist and even grow, because the air at that level is already moist. Wind shear (the change of wind speed from one height and distance to another) will cause the trails to spread out and give a spectacular display (88).

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/Bwnxr1QIIAAfVM_.jpg

CONTRAILS

The lines of condensation that form behind high-altitude aircraft

There must have been a cloudspotter or two amongst the cavemen.

I like to think that – some fifty thousand years ago – the odd enlightened Neanderthal stepped out of his cave on a beautiful morning, looked up at the sky, and grunted to his partner the equivalent of 'Honey, get out here quick – you're missing a fabulous display of Altocumulus stratiformis perlucidus!' It is, after all, tempting to speculate that cavemen would have looked up at exactly the same family of cloud types as we see above us today. Tempting, but wrong.

A new type of cloud has joined the family, you see. In fact, it is such a recent addition to the skies that it wasn't even around two hundred years ago when Luke Howard first named the clouds.

Arriving during the run-up to the First World War, the condensation trail, or 'contrail', is the straight, man-made cloud that forms in the wake of high-altitude aircraft.

Dr. Courtney Henderson's Cure for HIV of the Soul
ABSTRACT

A Life-Saving Innovation which utilizes Mind controls/Voice activated Satellite Technology to cure HIV disease of the Soul. Body Scans before and after the process demonstrated that Souls/Agents were cured of HIV The Souls should be a Visible Image. The Satellite—Transforms the Soul into an Invisible Image; performs a series of three Aromatizations; mobilizes materials such as water and a specialized washing solution for the procedure; rinses the Soul with water for two minutes; washes the Soul for three minutes; rinses the Soul for three minutes; performs a series of three Materializations; transforms the Soul into a Visible Image; drys the Soul with heated air at a low velocity for further disinfection.The invention is ten minutes in duration and is usually curative in two treatments; once per consecutive day. Can be performed anywhere in the world. This invention is a "Must-Have."

On 8-17 they discovered that their iPhone made the flickering lights they observed.

Then on 8-18, they take another video with flickering light.

Long Description of Sighting Report

My name is[name redacted], I'm a 52-year-old retired F/A-18 pilot and tactical jet instructor for the US Navy/Marines. My current position is chief pilot for a corporate flight department out of Palomar CA "KCRQ". I hold Airline Transport Ratings in single engine, multi engine and helicopters. I'm also a CFI/II/MEI as well as Helicopter CFI/II. I have a Bachelor of Science degree in Aeronautical Science from Embry Riddle Aeronautical University as well as US Navy/Marine Corps aircraft accident investigations / accident investigator for the US Marine Corps.

On Aug 18, 2022, at approximately 03:20 while in our Gulfstream G650, call sign TWY670, in route from Miami "KOPF" to Maui "PHOG" at FL470 off the coast of CA, I witnessed 2 AUP's high above our aircraft in a circular formation. Me being a retired Marine F/A-18 pilot who has conducted many aircraft intercepts throughout my career, immediately reported it to LA center.

LA Center informed us that they had no known or unknown primary or secondary RADAR contacts in or around us or in their airspace period. I then turned our Traffic Collision Avoidance System "TCAS" to ABOVE mode also to receive no active aircraft activity as well.

As I was continuing my reporting with LA center when another 2 UAP's joined the formation. I then saw what I believed was a shooting star, but it stopped descending and joined the other 4 UAP's in their circular orbit. I took my iPhone out and attempted to record the UAP's as they moved over our aircraft.

I lost sight of them and continued to discuss the encounter with ATC. Another aircraft also reported the incident, and LA center reported it to the FAA Presidential Aerial Security Administration in Washington DC.

I received a phone call from LA center and also talked to the FAA Presidential Aerial Security office in Washington DC. Both agencies were very interested in the encounter. I was informed other aircraft had reported seeing the UAP's over the phone but declined to acknowledge it over the radio.

@ZimRavens @FullStackLogan No, because it's not an actual optical effect. It's purely perceptual - the Moon simply feels to your brain like it's bigger. It's not, though. And there's nothing about the refraction in the atmosphere that would make it bigger. Near the horizon, things get squished vertically.

The Moon (and even the Sun) can be in the LIZ (the Low Information Zone, where UFOs are found) if it's behind patchy clouds. Especially close to the horizon, where cloud layers are dense but skinny. Here's a classic case from last year.

New SitRec feature (WIP).

Take two KML files (ADS-B GPS tracks of planes.) Set one as the camera and other as the target. Sync the timestamps. Now you can see what one plane looks like from another when filmed with an iPhone.

This will be useful.

VIdeo from multiple independent witnesses is the Holy Grail of UFOlogy. Something that would prove one and for all that something significant was going on.

This is not that Holy Grail. http://pbs.twimg.com/media/Fbg3_VGUsAAPr-6.jpg

The most helpful event in investigations of unidentified things is usually finding someone who recognizes that thing, or some aspect of it.
A small group, even with a couple of PhDs, is doomed to fail, because nobody is familiar with everything.

The answer? Crowdsourcing. https://twitter.com/TheUfoJoe/status/1565010207234613248

Video4 is at 03:31:50 (EXIF, and verified by the ADS-B track and cockpit display)

11.5 minutes later. So he was filming, on and off, for over 11 minutes. But got nothing.

I really don't see what the problem is. It barely hurt at all. I carefully measured the temperature to make sure I was not going to be injured. It left a small mark that faded after a few weeks. It was a successful experiment.

The scale is distance from the aircraft to the inside edge of compass rose. Successive actuations of the pushbutton causes the range scale to decrement and then to start over at 160 nm. The 250,000:1 map is displayed when the 5 nm range scale is selected. The 500,000:1 map is displayed when the 10 nm range scale is selected, and the 2,000,000:1 map is displayed when the 20 nm or 40 nm scale is selected. @Philosoraptor93 @Serg_is_Vargas @tinyklaus The military does not seem to think so - according to the UAP report.

https://www.dni.gov/files/ODNI/documents/assessments/Prelimary-Assessment-UAP-20210625.pdf http://pbs.twimg.com/media/FSvqia4VsAAIBE4.jpg

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The limited amount of high-quality reporting on unidentified aerial phenomena (UAP) hampers our ability to draw firm conclusions about the nature or intent of UAP. The Unidentified Aerial Phenomena Task Force (UAPTF) considered a range of information on UAP described in U.S. military and IC (Intelligence Community) reporting, but because the reporting lacked sufficient specificity, ultimately recognized that a unique, tailored reporting process was required to provide sufficient data for analysis of UAP events.

- As a result, the UAPTF concentrated its review on reports that occurred between 2004 and 2021, the majority of which are a result of this new tailored process to better capture UAP events through formalized reporting.
- Most of the UAP reported probably do represent physical objects given that a majority of UAP were registered across multiple sensors, to include radar, infrared, electro-optical, weapon seekers, and visual observation.

In a limited number of incidents, UAP reportedly appeared to exhibit unusual flight characteristics. These observations could be the result of sensor errors, spoofing, or observer misperception and require additional rigorous analysis.

reasons to investigate UAP, as I said yesterday.

Is there anything that you have seen that would justify the amount of resources devoted to this in terms of what the Pentagon is doing and sort of somewhat done in secrecy?

Mick West 2:00

Well, there's really three things that are behind all of this, one of which is just the traditional types of UFO, things that people have been seeing since World War Two, where fighters in World War Two saw things called "foo fighters", which were like glowing balls of light, which surrounded their planes. And we still really don't know exactly what they were. And that still is worth investigating. And whenever a pilot sees something that's unidentified, it's worth investigating. But there's also new things, new technology, there's drones that didn't exist back in World War Two, obviously, which now presents new challenges in terms of airspace clutter, just simply people flying their drones around the airport, and possible foreign nations spying on us. And then there's the lobbying efforts of the UFO enthusiasts who are presenting this weak evidence as if it is strong evidence. All these three things together have combined to kind of force the hand of the Pentagon to address this in this way. But really, the what they're going to address is the actual real issues. The things like airspace incursions by drones and things like airspace clutter just simple things like balloons floating in front of fighter pilots when they are flying in their test ranges.

How to people acquire a belief in a subject when they don't understand the technical aspects? It's often by listening to people talk in an authoritative sounding way about it.

But you have to be careful you're not just listening to a fringe subset. Compelling does not mean true http://pbs.twimg.com/media/FSvDXJmVUAAVwFF.jpg

One day in 1996, I received a call from George Knapp, an investigative reporter at KLAS-TV, the CBS affiliate in Las Vegas, and a friend of mine. “Harry,” he said, “there’s something you have to attend.” He invited me to an upcoming conference that would focus on what the U.S. government generally refers to as “unidentified aerial phenomena,” but what most other people simply call U.F.O.s, a subject Mr. Knapp had, and still has, a particular interest in.

A large conference room at the event was filled with academics, interested members of the public and, yes, a few oddballs. I was very impressed with the academics, who spoke of unidentified aerial phenomena in the language of science, discussing the issue in terms of technological advancement and national security. I was hooked.

UAP PROBABLY LACK A SINGLE EXPLANATION

The UAP documented in this limited dataset demonstrate an array of aerial behaviors, reinforcing the possibility there are multiple types of UAP requiring different explanations. Our analysis of the data supports the construct that if and when individual UAP incidents are resolved they will fall into one of five potential explanatory categories: airborne clutter, natural atmospheric phenomena, USG or industry developmental programs, foreign adversary systems, and a catchall "other" bin. With the exception of the one instance where we determined with high confidence that the reported UAP was airborne clutter, specifically a deflating balloon, we currently lack sufficient information in our dataset to attribute incidents to specific explanations.

Airborne Clutter: These objects include birds, balloons, recreational unmanned aerial vehicles (UAV), or airborne debris like plastic bags that muddle a scene and affect an operator's ability to identify true targets, such as enemy aircraft.

Natural Atmospheric Phenomena: Natural atmospheric phenomena includes ice crystals, moisture, and thermal fluctuations that may register on some infrared and radar systems.

USG or Industry Developmental Programs: Some UAP observations could be attributable to developments and classified programs by U.S. entities. We were unable to confirm, however, that these systems accounted for any of the UAP reports we collected.

Foreign Adversary Systems: Some UAP may be technologies deployed by China, Russia, another nation, or a non-governmental entity.

Other: Although most of the UAP described in our dataset probably remain unidentified due to limited data or challenges to collection processing or analysis, we may require additional scientific knowledge to successfully collect on, analyze and characterize some of them. We would group such objects in this category pending scientific advances that allowed us to better understand them. The UAPTF intends to focus additional analysis on the small number of cases where a UAP appeared to display unusual flight characteristics or signature management.

@SteUFOnotCGULLS Foo.

They would know if it was a plane only if it looked like a plane in the video, which it does not. In the case of Gimbal, I think it's almost certainly a glare that obscures a non-rotating flying object that's hot. Maybe a jet.

The earliest known account of a persistent spreading contrail was in 1921 http://contrailscience.com/pre-wwii-contrails/ http://pbs.twimg.com/media/Bvk2gnRIIAAgcoN.jpg not a #chemtrail

The earliest report of both a persistent spreading contrail, with gaps, and a distrail comes very shortly after, in 1921, in the US. Air Service Newsletter.

> An altitude flight was made in the morning at McCook Field recently by Lieut. J. A. Macready in a La Pere with supercharged Liberty [engine]. When the airplane reached a height of 26,000-27,000 feet at 11:50 a.m., a long feathery white streamer was observed forming behind a rapidly moving dark speck. The cloud was of the cirrus variety, well defined at the edges and apparently 10 to 15 times the width of the plane. The sky behind the first portion was clear blue with no clouds in the near neighborhood. The first streamer seemed perhaps 2 miles long. Then a gap of one-quarter mile. The second streamer formed with a background of light cirrus cloud and after 2 or 3 miles the plane seemed to go into the cirrus background, for the streamer formation ceased while an apparent path of blue continued beyond for a way in the cirrus cloud. The whole streamer may have been 3 miles long. After 20 minutes the streamer had drifted and spread until it merged indistinguishably with the other cirrus clouds visible.

https://twitter.com/_/status/502154685944311808
@Maxillius If contrails can persist, then isn't it possible that this whole "chemtrail" thing just came from a misunderstanding?

https://twitter.com/_/status/502154417630490624
@Maxillius But you post a photo and say "these are chemtrails". Problem is, they look like contrails. How can you tell they were "sprayed"?

2014-08-20T17:58:43+00:00
https://twitter.com/_/status/502152764554616832
@Maxillius Because it's combustion of a hydrocarbon. The "stuff" it produces at cruise is still mostly (>99%) water and carbon dioxide.

2014-08-20T17:54:05+00:00
https://twitter.com/_/status/502151600790462464
@Maxillius If the air is ice supersaturated, then the contrail CANNOT sublimate. Hence it must persist.

2014-08-20T17:53:16+00:00
https://twitter.com/_/status/502151394606854146
@Maxillius Indeed, in DRY air. So temperature is irrelevant.

2014-08-20T17:52:56+00:00
https://twitter.com/_/status/502151311517704193 @Maxillius Of course not. But where contrails form it's generally -40Â°F or cooler. So why would they "thaw"?

2014-08-20T17:52:18+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/502151149911162882

@Maxillius I never noticed that. But let's stick to actual science. Persistent contrails have been observed and documented since the 1920s.

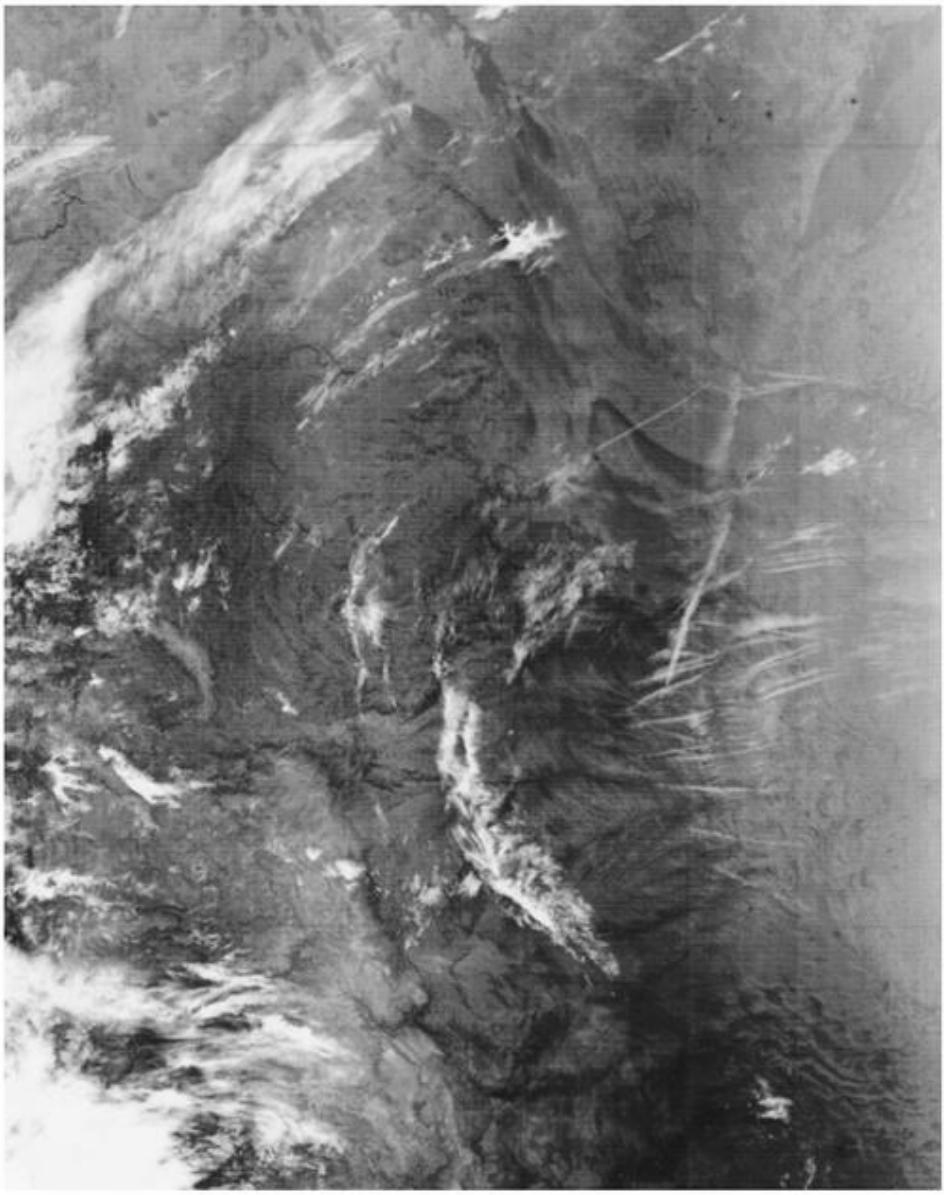

FIG. 1. DMSP DR thermal-IR image acquired by SDNB at 0310 UTC 20 Oct 1977. The imaged area is the western Great Plains of the United States, with Lake Superior and Lake Winnipeg evident in the upper-right and upper-center portions of the image. Twenty-four west–east-oriented contrails associated with patchy cirrus and with clear air were identified over eastern portions of South Dakota and Nebraska and western portions of Minnesota and Iowa (right-hand side of center part of image). The long contrail oriented south-southwest to north-northeast and bisecting the other shorter contrails shows evidence of spreading, diffusion, and thinning.

http://contrailscience.com/pre-wwii-contrails/

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/BuZUI0yIQAALvLN.jpg

The earliest report of both a persistent spreading contrail, with gaps, and a distrail comes very shortly after, in 1921, in the US. Air Service Newsletter.

> An altitude flight was made in the morning at McCook Field recently by Lieut. J. A. Macready in a La Pere with supercharged Liberty [engine]. When the airplane reached a height of 26,000-27,000 feet at 11:50 a.m., a long feathery white streamer was observed forming behind a rapidly moving dark speck. The cloud was of the cirrus variety, well defined at the edges and apparently 10 to 15 times the width of the plane. The sky behind the first portion was clear blue with no clouds in the near neighborhood. The first streamer seemed perhaps 2 miles long. Then a gap of one-quarter mile. The second streamer formed with a background of light cirrus cloud and after 2 or 3 miles the plane seemed to go into the cirrus background, for the streamer formation ceased while an apparent path of blue continued beyond for a way in the cirrus cloud. The whole streamer may have been 3 miles long. After 20 minutes the streamer had drifted and spread until it merged indistinguishably with the other cirrus clouds visible.

Both these accounts were reprinted in the June 1921 Monthly Weather Review, in the article The Argonne Battle Cloud, which also includes an account from Captain W. H. Nead, that includes an account of iridescence in the trails:

@2ndfor1st @climateviewer My message is that there's no evidence of "chemtrails". The negative effects of contrails are another issue.

https://twitter.com/_/status/492885384062201856

@2ndfor1st @climateviewer The video has a lot of bogus science. Like saying aviation exhaust water is a pollutant. It's not.

https://twitter.com/_/status/492885122283094016

@2ndfor1st @climateviewer Jim Lee does not believe in Chemtrails. Madison does. It's unclear why they are on the same "side" here.

https://twitter.com/_/status/492884800017944576

@2ndfor1st @climateviewer But this is just trying to "rebrand" the chemtrail theory as concern about contrails. It's a confused message.

@2ndfor1st @climateviewer I'd certainly go with a move towards actual issues like air pollution or contrail effects on climate @4thAnon Northwoods did not involved killing people, just staged events. And even that was quickly rejected as a terrible idea.

https://twitter.com/_/status/491448430909067264

@WearKilluminati But 33K was not at all unusual. Every day planes were flying over at 33K. There were at least two that day alone.

https://twitter.com/_/status/491446824251555840

@4thAnon The point is that "odds" don't really tell you very much. Unusual things happen all the time.

https://twitter.com/_/status/491442999679651840
@4thAnon (just ballparking). Total odds maybe 1 in 100 that a random plane in that general location would be an MH 777

2014-07-22T04:41:05+00:00
https://twitter.com/_/status/491442788462907393
@4thAnon Not by a long shot. There's only a few airlines and a few planes that fly that route. 777 probable 1 in 5, Malaysia maybe 1 in 20.

@Pax1sw So how can you tell how high a plane is? If you look up at an angle you can't tell how much above or below a given cloud it is.

2014-07-16T03:22:51+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/489248772753354755

@Pax1sw Passenger jets usually fly between 30,000 and 40,000 feet, right? That's above most cumulonimbus clouds, except big storms.

@Pax1sw So how did you determine altitude?

2014-07-16T02:05:53+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/489229403356807168

@Pax1sw it's always -40 at some altitude, and altitude is hard to measure visually.

@Pax1sw There are more planes and routes now, and high bypass engines make more contrails. Contrails persist. https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=X72uACIN_00

@Pax1sw Why is that no contrail? Jets make U shapes all the time, and trails start and stop in different regions of air. I've seen J-shapes.

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/Br8phQNCMAEkL49.jpg

A small wind shear can draw out a contrail into an almost horizontal sheet of cloud [no. 70]. In this picture, the right hand trail is a few minutes older than the other and has been extended more. Sometimes several trails drawn out in this way cover most of the sky with cirrus. If the trails are very persistent the clear air must be saturated for ice.

Brightly coloured parts of complex haloes are occasionally seen in persistent contrails. Parts of coronae have been seen from accompanying aircraft in the first few metres of the trails, but they disappear as the droplets freeze and grow into crystals.

70 R. S. Scorer

71 W. Tribble

Sometimes ice crystals appear along the path of an aircraft which flies through a cloud of supercooled droplets. If the crystals grow and eventually fall out of the cloud layer, they may leave a fall-streak hole [see no. 28 and p. 45] in the form of a long clear lane. In the present example [no. 71], however, the crystal trail lies below a clear lane which is probably an ordinary distrail; it was produced in a very thin wave cloud.

TOXICOLOGY

Detailed Findings:

Analysis and Comments	Result	Units	Rpt. Limit	Specimen Source	Analysis By
Selenium	140	mcg/L	11	001 - Cardiac Blood	GFAAS
Barium	1120	mcg/L	11	001 - Cardiac Blood	ICP/MS
Lead	1.4	mcg/dL	1.1	001 - Cardiac Blood	ICP/MS

Other than the above findings, examination of the specimen(s) submitted did not reveal any positive findings of toxicological significance by procedures outlined in the accompanying Analysis Summary.

Reference Comments:

1 Barium - Cardiac Blood

Barium is present in trace amounts in all human tissues, and some studies indicate that it is an element essential to proper growth. The concentration of barium in normal human blood is approximately 2 - 400 mcg/L, most of which is found in the plasma fraction.

Inorganic barium compounds are used extensively in industry, and in glass, plastic and rubber manufacture. Specimens submitted for elemental testing require special handling to reduce potential sources of external contamination. Without such precautions, the finding of an elevated barium concentration in a specimen may be the result of environmental contamination from such things as collection devices, specimen containers and sample preservatives, and should be interpreted accordingly.

In two intentional, but non-fatal barium poisonings serum barium concentrations were 3400 and 7800 mcg/L. In one fatality following barium ingestion, the barium concentration in blood was 1900 mcg/mL.

@TchuTchx @biggysmlls Yes, they do that sometimes. It depends on the weather. 1957 book:

https://www.flickr.com/photos/metabunk/sets/72157642384424663/

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/BrphFJdCEAAymyj.jpg

A small wind shear can draw out a contrail into an almost horizontal sheet of cloud [no. 70]. In this picture, the right hand trail is a few minutes older than the other and has been extended more. Sometimes several trails drawn out in this way cover most of the sky with cirrus. If the trails are very persistent the clear air must be saturated for ice.

Brightly coloured parts of complex haloes are occasionally seen in persistent contrails. Parts of coronae have been seen from accompanying aircraft in the first few metres of the trails, but they disappear as the droplets freeze and grow into crystals.

70 R. S. Scorer

71 W. Tribble

Sometimes ice crystals appear along the path of an aircraft which flies through a cloud of supercooled droplets. If the crystals grow and eventually fall out of the cloud layer, they may leave a fall-streak hole [see no. 28 and p. 45] in the form of a long clear lane. In the present example [no. 71], however, the crystal trail lies below a clear lane which is probably an ordinary distrail; it was produced in a very thin wave cloud.

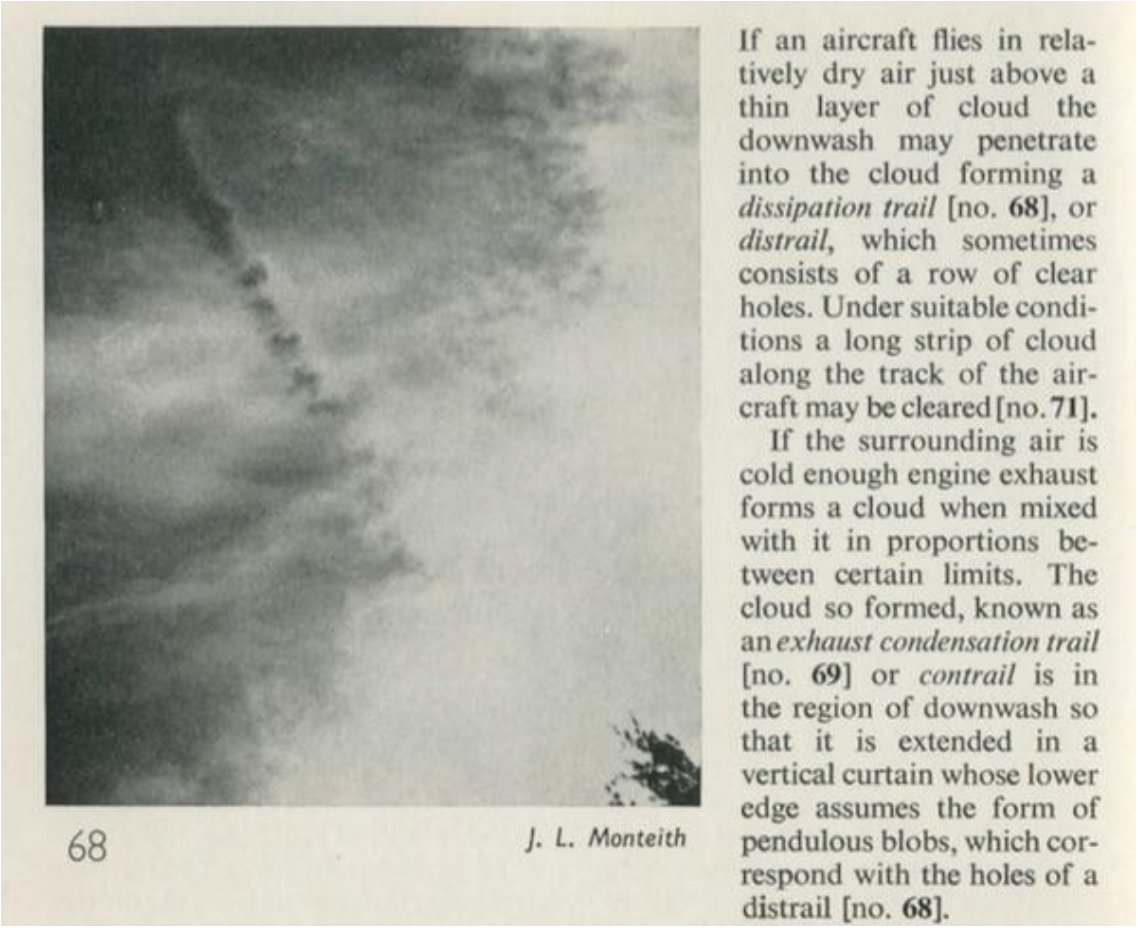
@nickmyer That's called a distrail. Been observed since the 1920s. e.g. from 1957:

https://www.flickr.com/photos/metabunk/sets/72157642384424663/

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/Bro6tQeCcAEdKi-.jpg



68 J. L. Monteith

If an aircraft flies in relatively dry air just above a thin layer of cloud the downwash may penetrate into the cloud forming a dissipation trail [no. 68], or distrail, which sometimes consists of a row of clear holes. Under suitable conditions a long strip of cloud along the track of the aircraft may be cleared [no. 71].

If the surrounding air is cold enough engine exhaust forms a cloud when mixed with it in proportions between certain limits. The cloud so formed, known as an exhaust condensation trail [no. 69] or contrail is in the region of downwash so that it is extended in a vertical curtain whose lower edge assumes the form of pendulous blobs, which correspond with the holes of a distrail [no. 68].

@nickmyer Why would it not look like a cloud? Planes have been forming clouds since the 1920s. http://pbs.twimg.com/media/Bri8EcJCUAEyPXw.jpg

[Reprinted from U. S. Air Service, July, 1921, p. 13.]

An altitude flight was made in the morning at McCook Field [Dayton, Ohio] recently, by Lieut. J. A. Macready in a La Pere with supercharged Liberty. When the airplane reached a height of 26,000–27,000 feet at 11:50 a. m., a long feathery white streamer was observed forming behind a rapidly moving dark speck. The cloud was of the cirrus variety, well defined at its edges and apparently 10 to 15 times the width of the plane. The sky behind the first portion was clear blue with no other clouds in the near neighborhood. The first streamer seemed perhaps 2 miles long. Then a gap of one-quarter mile. The second streamer formed with a background of light cirrus cloud and after 2 or 3 miles the plane seemed to go into the cirrus background, for the streamer formation ceased while an apparent path of blue continued beyond for a way in the cirrus cloud. The whole streamer may have been 3 miles long. After 20 minutes the streamer had drifted and spread until it merged indistinguishably with the other cirrus clouds visible. The weather conditions at the time were generally very clear, warm, with perhaps 0.1 of the sky in cirrus clouds.

THE RESOURCES AGENCY OF CALIFORNIA DEPARTMENT OF WATER RESOURCES

January 21, 1963

Honorable Edmund G. Brown, Governor and Members of the Legislature of the State of California

Gentlemen:

I have the honor to transmit herewith a report of the Department of Water Resources, entitled "Weather Modification Operations in California, October 1961 - September 1962."

During the period covered by the report, there were eight projects involving weather modification operations which were undertaken in California. These were accomplished by eight of the eleven operators who were licensed by the department for such activities.

Sincerely yours,

Director

2014-06-30T16:06:05+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/483642639569285120

https://twitter.com/_/status/483642475819433984

2014-06-30T16:01:05+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/483641379357077505

@camy_079 @RisingSign Correct. Lots more examples here: https://www.metabunk.org/threads/debunked-chemtrail-plane-interior-ballast-barrels.661/ (Also other similar things, like firefighting packs)

https://twitter.com/_/status/483641150637498369

@RisingSign @camy_079 Dreamed up? They have been using ballast barrels since the 1950s. They have to use they to test the aircraft.

https://twitter.com/_/status/483640993900535808

@RisingSign No it's not. Planes generally fly in straight lines. What do you think "normal" trails would look like?

2014-06-30T15:51:49+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/483639047118520321

2014-06-30T15:51:24+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/483638943414374400

@RisingSign Seen them already. Dane just uses the same flawed evidence. The NASA video is talking about the future.

https://twitter.com/_/status/483637350417715200

2014-06-30T15:40:39+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/483636237308162048

@RisingSign Right, but all those pics have been explained. Contrails, ballast barrels, cirrus clouds, more contrails.

2014-06-30T15:35:18+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/483634891930624001

@RisingSign It depends on the relative humidity. That changes from day to day. Just like it's cloudy some days and not others.

2014-06-30T15:33:10+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/483634355433000960

@RisingSign But you'd agree now that contrails can persist?

2014-06-30T15:23:27+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/483631910120194048

@RisingSign Science isn't something you pick and choose to believe. Look at the actual evidence. Contrails can persist and spread.

2014-06-30T15:21:33+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/483631430044381184

@RisingSign I made this video. It's only 3 minutes long. Please consider watching it, to get a broader perspective. https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=X72uACIN_00

2014-06-30T15:20:33+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/483631179766050817

@RisingSign You can't prove a negative. However I can point out there is no actual evidence. I encourage you to check the science.

https://twitter.com/_/status/483630946701176833

@RisingSign What is a "chemtrail" plane?

2014-06-30T15:18:52+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/483630756074254336

@RisingSign Have you been told that contrails always quickly fade away? If so, did you check this?

2014-06-30T15:18:02+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/483630547273404416

@RisingSign All planes are contrail planes if they fly in the right atmospheric conditions.

2014-06-30T15:17:29+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/483630410128035841

@RisingSign Because that what contrails are. Trails that come from planes. They sometimes persist an spread.

2014-06-30T15:17:03+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/483630299255824384

@RisingSign Example incorrectly performed test: http://contrailscience.com/chemtrail-non-science/ Tested the % in solids instead of in air.

2014-06-30T15:16:10+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/483630077574279168

@RisingSign I'm just demonstrating that there is no actual evidence it is being done.

2014-06-30T15:15:32+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/483629916617850881

@RisingSign The test do not show that. Either they misread the test, or test the wrong thing.

2014-06-30T15:14:52+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/483629748879245313

@RisingSign There are many photos claiming to be "chemtrail" planes. They are ALL identifiable as other things.

2014-06-30T15:13:35+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/483629427369074688

@RisingSign What you call a "chemtrail" is simply a persistent contrail. Depending on weather at altitude, contrails can persist for hours.

Water tanks provided ballast to simulate passenger and cargo loads for flight testing. Not only could the tanks simulate various amounts of weight, they could also shift the weight fore and aft in flight through connecting pipes to test different center-of-gravity configurations. Boeing @RisingSign That's a pre-production test plane. Water barrels simulate different passenger configurations. http://pbs.twimg.com/media/BrYx54aCcAAfNJE.jpg

During flight tests in 1994, the cabin interior of the prototype 777 was filled with what at first glance looked like aluminum beer kegs. In fact, these 55-gallon barrels contained water. The contents of two dozen barrels in the forward cabin and a like number of barrels in the aft section were pumped back and forth to simulate shifts in center of gravity that would result from passengers moving about. The top photo shows the cabin as it is when the 777 is delivered.

@RisingSign How can you tell the difference? Here's a 1957 book on clouds for comparison.

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/BrYbhxsCUAE_5rU.jpg

A small wind shear can draw out a contrail into an almost horizontal sheet of cloud [no. 70]. In this picture, the right hand trail is a few minutes older than the other and has been extended more. Sometimes several trails drawn out in this way cover most of the sky with cirrus. If the trails are very persistent the clear air must be saturated for ice.

Brightly coloured parts of complex haloes are occasionally seen in persistent contrails. Parts of coronae have been seen from accompanying aircraft in the first few metres of the trails, but they disappear as the droplets freeze and grow into crystals.

70 R. S. Scorer

71 W. Tribble

Sometimes ice crystals appear along the path of an aircraft which flies through a cloud of supercooled droplets. If the crystals grow and eventually fall out of the cloud layer, they may leave a fall-streak hole [see no. 28 and p. 45] in the form of a long clear lane. In the present example [no. 71], however, the crystal trail lies below a clear lane which is probably an ordinary distrail; it was produced in a very thin wave cloud.

32 Spokane Daily Chronicle, Thursday, July 7, 1955.

Vapor Trails, Scenic From Ground, Pose Air Danger

Vapor trails often take picturesque forms.

Condensation trails made by high-flying planes over the Inland Empire have professional significance to pilots who fly jet fighters and bombers.

Bomber pilots consider the "con trail" a disadvantage in that it would help people on the ground detect their presence overhead. · practice runs over the area at extreme high altitude without detection by sound or sight when vapor trails are not forming, the air force pointed out.

The engines of the heavy B-36s can be heard more readily. The B-36s leave a number of con trails that merge into one long make eight or so trails, one for each of six propeller-driven engines and one for each jet pod, Maj. Lawrence W. Ertner, Fairchild weather detachment commander, pointed out.

To a fighter pilot, the trails provide a means of locating "hostile" fighters or bombers.

In either case, it's a sure bet that the plane making the "con trails" or ice clouds is too high to hit with a rock. Air force weathermen say the trails seldom occur below 20,000 feet and normally are much higher than that.

In a 20-hour flight at high altitude Fairchild B-36 crews normally see trails some time during the flight.

Con trails seen lately over the Inland Empire have been classed as "moderately persistent." Persistent con trails are those that stay a while. An extremely persistent con trail might stay in the sky all day.

Weather briefings for fliers usually include the altitudes at which the weatherman thinks con trails will occur.

Air force weathermen at Geiger and Fairchild said there are two general theories as to why they form. One is that any moving object at a high altitude creates trails when weather conditions are right.

The second theory is that trails are caused by temperature changes of exhaust gas. Indications are that both are true under varying circumstances.

A cirrus cloud layer or overcast that marked Inland Empire weather may be a reason why con trails were formed often during late June, Major Ertner said.

Cirrus cloud formations are often an indicator of ice crystals aloft which need only a moving object to trigger them into a cloud.

Watch Needed

In World war II crews flying bombers over Germany were advised to be especially watchful when vapor trails occurred because German fighter pilots occasionally pursued the bombers in the trails and emerged from cover to fire at close range. Tail warning radar on B-36c and other bombers prohibits similar conditions today.

Col. Charles W. King of Geiger pointed out that fighter pilots of the Korean conflict were vitally concerned with the likelihood of condensation trails and the altitudes they would occur for combat tactics against other aircraft.

Other: Although most of the UAP described in our dataset probably remain unidentified due to limited data or challenges to collection processing or analysis, we may require additional scientific knowledge to successfully collect on, analyze and characterize some of them. We would group such objects in this category pending scientific advances that allowed us to better understand them. The UAPTF intends to focus additional analysis on the small number of cases where a UAP appeared to display unusual flight characteristics or signature management.

Triple aerodynamic rainbow contrails!

These come from variations in the size of water microdroplets in the contrails. The further from the plane a droplet gets, the larger it is. Mie scattering affects different wavelength of light based on the droplet size, hence "rainbow"

50 U.S.C. § 3024(i)

(U) EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

(U) The limited amount of high-quality reporting on UAP hampers our ability to draw firm conclusions about the nature or intent of UAP. The UAPTF considered a range of information on UAP described in U.S. military and IC (Intelligence Community) reporting, but because the reporting lacked sufficient specificity, ultimately recognized that a unique, tailored reporting process was required to provide sufficient data for analysis of UAP events.

50 U.S.C. § 3024(i) As a result, the UAPTF concentrated its review on 1.4(c) describing incidents that occurred between 2004 and 2021, the majority of which are a result of a new tailored process to better capture UAP events through formalized reporting.

- (U) Most of the UAP reported probably do represent physical objects given that a majority of UAP registered across multiple sensors, to include radar, infrared, electro-optical, weapon seekers, and visual observation.

50 U.S.C. § 3024(i) In a limited number of incidents, UAP reportedly appeared to exhibit unusual flight characteristics, including several in which the 1.4(a)(e)(g) involving 1.4(a)(e)(g) These observations could be the result of sensor errors, spoofing, or observer misperception and require additional rigorous analysis.

(U) There are probably multiple types of UAP requiring different explanations based on the range of appearances and behaviors described in the available reporting. Our analysis of the data supports the construct that if and when individual UAP incidents are resolved they will fall into one of five potential explanatory categories: airborne clutter, natural atmospheric phenomena, USG or U.S. industry developmental programs, foreign adversary systems, and a catchall "other" bin.

1) Historical style UFO sightings, Foo Fighters, etc.

2) New technology, specifically drones, maybe foreign adversary drones or other UAS

3) UFO enthusiasts, pushing their beliefs in the ETH

@joe_forbrich @EricRWeinstein That's not actually true when talking about exciting tales with dubious provenance. A viral story can go around the world before the truth gets its boots on.

@uaptaskforce1 Did you watch it? It's not a "rebuttal" video. It's a quite deep-dive investigation into AAWSAP and Elizondo - and has almost nothing to do with reports of UFOs.

@aka__V @EricRWeinstein I think he has an interest in the topic, and access to people with strong opinions on it, and that makes it seem significant to him. I feel like he's reading too much into it. It's complex, and there's gov ineptitude and shady dealings (AAWSAP) but a lot of it is very mundane.

@Crumbsuka @EricRWeinstein It's not a psyop. The pentagon is embarrassed by AAWSAP, and is just trying to downplay it because the paranormal creates bad optics when it comes to congressional oversight and funding.

Ancient Aliens is very popular. People are going to do things like this "door on Mars" because they are true believers (in aliens) looking for evidence to validate their beliefs. That's all.

@DaHawse @QTRResearch I think it's the inevitable result of a speculation bubble. Tulipmania.
http://pbs.twimg.com/media/FSkx49SVEAk9uNU.jpg

Tulipmania (also known as the Dutch tulip bulb market bubble) is a model for the general cycle of a financial bubble:

- Investors lose track of rational expectations.
- Psychological biases lead to a massive upswing in the price of an asset or sector.
- A positive-feedback cycle continues to inflate prices.
- Investors realize that they are holding an irrationally priced asset.
- Prices collapse due to a massive sell-off, and an overwhelming majority go bankrupt.

An exceptional nine-minute Navy video of a UFO displaying highly unusual behavior, studied by Chilean authorities for the last two years, is now being released to the public. The CEFAA - the Chilean government agency which investigates UFOs, or UAP (unidentified aerial phenomena), has been in charge of the investigation. Located within the DGAC, the equivalent of our FAA but under the jurisdiction of the Chilean Air Force, CEFAA has committees of military experts, technicians and academics from many disciplines. None of them have been able to explain the strange flying object captured by two experienced Navy officers from a helicopter.

The Navy immediately turned over the footage to the CEFAA, and General Bermúdez, accompanied by nuclear chemist Mario Avila, a CEFAA scientific committee member, conducted interviews with the two officers at their Navy base. “I was very impressed by these witnesses,” Avila told me. “They were highly trained professionals with many years experience, and they were absolutely certain that they could not explain what they saw.” Both offiicers also provided written reports at the base, as is required, and for CEFAA.

@hiphopintellectYou are looking up here, so if a trail is further away, then it's higher.

2014-06-26T22:08:05+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/482284190033903616

@hiphopintellect Consider this. ALL the curved trails here are at the SAME altitude. But some look "above" others http://pbs.twimg.com/media/BrFq6hpCEAAgKOU.jpg

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/BrFq6hpCEAAgKOU.jpg

https://twitter.com/_/status/482283773464018945

@hiphopintellect But that's horizontal. It's not at both altitudes. It's a 3D pic. Think about where things are in space there.

@hiphopintellect How do you know?

2014-06-26T22:03:29+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/482283029012824064

@hiphopintellect Like how water can be liquid at 33Â°F and solid at 32Â°F. Tiny diff in temp = huge diff in liquidity.

2014-06-26T22:02:24+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/482282757112881152

@hiphopintellect @GeoengWatch But it demonstrates the trail can differ. They can also differ in persistence. There's science behind this.

https://twitter.com/_/status/482282517706190848

@hiphopintellect @GeoengWatch How do you know they are the same altitude? They look like they are 20 miles away and seven miles up.

2014-06-26T21:58:56+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/482281885301604352

@hiphopintellect @GeoengWatch So? That just means they are at different altitudes, or they are different airplanes. http://pbs.twimg.com/media/BrFo0aGCIAAowSN.jpg @nickmyer or are you referring to some "chemtrail" type thing? Any evidence for that?

https://twitter.com/_/status/478641723824824320

@nickmyer I don't think there is ANY cloud seeding in the UK now. Do you have evidence of some?

https://twitter.com/_/status/478640255394787328

@nickmyer Sorry, I thought you were referring to the 1952 Lynmouth floods. http://www.weatheronline.co.uk/reports/philip-eden/Lynmouth-Flood-man-made.htm but the modern floods are similar.

2014-06-16T19:55:59+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/478627066582032384

@nickmyer Those floods were not created by cloud seeding. Rainfall was evenly large over a huge area. Just a storm.

Public Notices

NOTICE OF INTENTION TO MODIFY NATURAL PRECIPITATION BY ARTIFICIAL MEANS

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

Notice is hereby given that it is the intent of the Water Resources Development Corporation of 460 South Broadway, Denver 9, Colorado, which holds License No. 54 of the State of Oregon, to engage in operations to modify natural precipitation by artificial means, for and on behalf of MORROW COUNTY WEATHER RESEARCH ASSOCIATION, located at Echo. Oregon. The object of the above program will be to increase natural rainfall.

1. The area to be affected is described as lying within Morrow County and Northwestern Umatilla County, State of Oregon.
2. The Operation will be conducted through the use of ground-based silver iodide generators and located within the Counties of Grant, Wheeler, Wasco, Gilliam, Morrow, Umatilla and Sherman, State of Oregon.
3. The period of Operation will be from on or about 1 October 1965 to on or about 31 October 1966.

PRECIPITATION BY ARTIFICIAL MEANS

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT PACIFIC GAS AND ELECTRIC COMPANY, a California corporation, having its principal office and place of business at 245 Market Street, San Francisco, California, 94106, and holder of License No. 23 of the State of California to engage in operations to modify natural precipitation by artificial means, will for and on behalf of itself conduct a program of weather modification by artificial nucleation of clouds with silver iodide and other nucleating agents with the object of increasing useful precipitation in certain areas of the Sierra Nevada Mountains as follows:

1. The area in which the equipment will be located is in the counties of Plumas, Lassen, and Tehama, in the State of California.
2. The target area will be the watersheds of Lake Almanor, Butt Valley Reservoir, and Mountain Meadows Reservoir in the counties of Plumas, Lassen, and Shasta, in the State of California.
3. Area adjacent to the target area which may be subject to effects of operation will be in the counties of Plumas, Lassen, Shasta, and Tehama, in the State of California.

The operation will extend over the period from about November 1, 1969 to May 31, 1970.

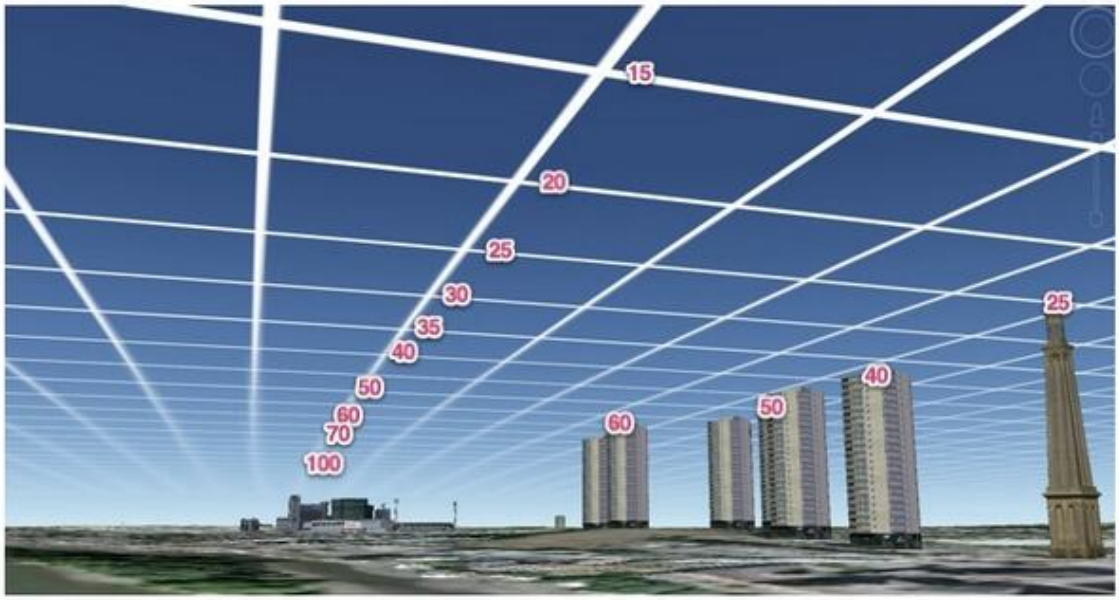
@davidicke There's a great discussion of that location here:
http://contrailscience.com/how-far-away-is-that-contrail/
http://pbs.twimg.com/media/BqHUGk1CMAE_rVs.jpg



Drawing a grid at six miles up shows just how far away. The closest would be ten miles away, the furthest over 100 miles. The number at the top of the buildings don't show the distance to the building (actually less than a mile), but show the distance to something six miles up in the sky if it appeared directly behind the top of the building.

@nickmyer @ContrailSkies @lek_black But you can't find anything wrong, and there's lots wrong on Danes site. So what does that tell you?

2014-06-06T18:51:44+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/474987017621622786

@nickmyer @ContrailSkies @lek_black Why would you skip it? I've read Dane's site, noted many errors. Yet nobody points out errors on MB.

@4thAnon Sabrosky lies about his credentials, and claims the military knew about Israel "doing it" (9/11). Snowden seems unaware.

The most common reason for denial by the FBI was a record of a felony indictment or conviction (over 47%), followed by fugitives from justice (19%), and state law prohibitions (about 11%) (Table 1). Other reasons included drug use or addiction (about 10%), domestic violence misdemeanor convictions (over 6%), and domestic violence restraining orders (over 4%) (Appendix table A).

"Chemtrails" causing problems in 1958: http://pbs.twimg.com/media/Bo50JxVCUAAEEEI.jpg

Jet Trails Dim Sun, Palm Springs Gripes

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6. (UPI)—The air force is long since resigned to the fuss about noise from its jets. Now comes Palm Springs, Calif., with a new complaint—that jet trails overhead are so thick they are beginning to blot out the sun.

Jimmy Cooper, manager of the Palm Springs Chamber of Commerce, outlined this "most serious and urgent problem" in a telegram to Representative D. S. (Judge) Saund (D-Calif.), who has asked the air force what can be done.

"As you know," Cooper wired Saund, "our entire economy is dependent upon the tourist trade, which is predicated on our bright sunshine and warm climate. Recently our sky has resembled a mob of exuberant sky riders performing an aerial circus.

"The 'contrails' are not disappearing but are breaking down into a haze and creating a cloud-like appearance in the sky.

"With the unlimited expanse of barren, uninhabited land in the west, does such activity have to be centered over a resort area, which is offering the visitor cloudless skies and unlimited sunshine?"

The air force, so far, is flabbergasted. No doubt in time it will recover its aplomb sufficiently to give Saund the usual answer to all congressional inquiries—that the matter will be investigated.

The air force figures its jets couldn't blot out the sun short of a wing-to-wing mass flight like the European bombing raids of World war II. If anything like that is going on out of March air force base at Riverside, Calif., the nearest jet base to Palm Springs, air force officials here want to know all about it.

Shill Ousted by Minister

TOPEKA, Kan., Dec. 6. (AP)—Maurice D. Tulloch, who gave up the life of a Baptist minister to become a shill in a Las Vegas gambling casino, was stripped of his ministerial standing yesterday.

The action was taken by the executive committee of the Kansas Baptist convention.

Tulloch, a graying, spectacled man with crew-cut hair who looks closer to 40 than his 50 years, was pastor of the First Baptist church of Sabetha, Kan. Last September 29, he walked out of a meeting of Baptist pastors in Hutchinson, Kan., and disappeared.

On November 26 he was located in Las Vegas, working as a shill—a gambling casino employee who poses as a customer to drum up trade.

The International 'Think Tank' Remains Off Limits to Press

AMSTERDAM, the Netherlands (AP) — It's been 20 years since Prince Bernhard of the Netherlands first produced his formula for promoting the cause of transatlantic harmony.

He introduced the idea of an international think tank, comprising top people from the United States and Western Europe, able to speak with total frankness on issues ruffling the Atlantic alliance.

Bernhard gave the participants privacy. The think tank was almost hermetically sealed from the press.

The first assembly was held in 1954 at the secluded Bilderberg Hotel lying in wooded countryside not far from Arnhem, Holland. The name of the hotel caught on and the Bilderberg group has continued to meet in different countries with different participants.

Always, however, the chairman has been Bernhard, the German-born prince who married Queen Juliana while she was still a princess. Bernhard later fought with the Allies in World War II.

Gerald R. Ford attended two Bilderberg meetings long before he became vice president of the United States.

"You don't really belong to the organization; one gets an invitation from the prince," Ford said in 1965.

At various other times, the prince has requested and obtained the presence of Henry A. Kissinger — 1971, Woodstock, Vt. — Helmut Schmidt, now West German chancellor — 1973, Saltsjoeboden, Sweden — former U.S. Secretaries of State Dean Rusk and Christian A. Herter; Thomas E. Dewey, former governor of New York and twice Republican presidential nominee; former British Prime Minister Edward Heath, Amintore Fanfani of Italy and so on.

Bernhard promised the conferees privacy, and the 1974 meeting in April was no exception.

It was held in a luxury hotel at the French ski resort of Megeve. Before the meeting, Bernhard entered the downtown press center, the Megeve Sports Hall, which was practically surrounded by police for the occasion.

He announced who had been invited to the meeting and what the topic would be. He then declared there would be no more information on the three-day session.

Reporters were never allowed to enter the hotel where the sessions were held.

There was only one topic at the meeting: prospects for the Atlantic world.

Eighty persons were invited and among those Americans who turned up were NATO commander Gen. Andrew Goodpaster; former U.S. Undersecretary of State George Ball, David Rockefeller, head of the Chase Manhattan Bank, and Sen. Walter F. Mondale, D-Minn.

Bernhard has made it clear that participants who deal with the press won't be invited back.

Apart from that, he likes to change the faces. There is often a 50 per cent switch in representation from one year to the next.

Procedures have become well established. The main speakers get 10 minutes, other participants are limited to 5. Papers written by both American and European participants are distributed in English and French, the two languages of the conference. Votes are never taken and titles are never used. A government official or an ambassador is plain mister. Bernhard is Mr. Chairman.

"The purpose of the conference," he has said, "is that eminent persons in every field get the opportunity to speak freely without being hindered by the knowledge that their words and ideas will be analyzed, commented upon and eventually criticized in the press."

His pulling power appears to date from World War II having taken his family into exile, he won his wings with Britain's Royal Air Force and reputedly got into rows with the British for going on unofficial bombing excursions over Germany.

He ended the war as commander in chief of the Dutch armed forces and a good friend of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Bernhard, now 62, unhesitatingly used his wartime contacts to get the Bilderberg conception rolling. He has consistently asserted its only aim is to foster the transatlantic relationship.

Bernhard clearly expects that within influential circles, the ideas emerging from Bilderberg will make their impression. Of his personal role, he said: "I'd consider my own work in the same light as practically everything I do. I am only a catalyst."

Prince Bernhard Coming To City

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 12 (AP) — Prince Bernhard of The Netherlands left by plane today for a 23-day tour of the United States.

The prince will preside over the so-called Bilderberg Conference of U.S. and European business and political representatives at St. Simons Island, Ga., opening Thursday.

The prince on his U.S. tour expects to visit the Fairchild factory at Hagerstown, Md., among others..

Secret Session Roster Revealed

NEW YORK.—The mysterious cabal of supranational architects of the future who spent three days in secret session at St. Simon Island, Ga., thus far have been able to ignore the flurry of suspicion which belatedly marred their otherwise serene and impudent coup.

However, the jig is up and henceforth their privacy doubtless will be destroyed by notoriety and challenge. They tiptoed into session on February 16 and tiptoed away on the 18th.

Their island is close enough to Jekyll island to compel in the mind of the knowing observer a comparison with the silly but fateful conclave of a simular bunch who in 1908 formulated the federal reserve system on Jekyll while using only their first names. They suppressed their last names to keep their identity secret from the servants.

In the present instance, since the discovery and denunciation of the conference, efforts have been made to convince the public that the exploit was unofficial and not at all secret.

To be sure, it was not "covered" by the press, although Arthur Hays Sulzberger, publisher of the New York Times, and Ralph McGill, editor of the Atlanta Constitution, were participants, but there was nothing clandestine about it.

Unfortunately for that effort to take the heat off a stealthy deal, Senator Alexander Wiley, of Wisconsin, stuck into the appendix of the congressional record a few days later a "summary" taken from the New York Times, and said in his introductory remarks, "some 70 European and American leaders concluded a private and unofficial three-day meeting at St. Simon."

Wiley's self-important acknowledgement of himself and of Sulzberger and McGill as "leaders" well expresses in one word the effrontery of the whole affair.

* * *

McGill, formerly sport editor of the Constitution, has become a

the platform with the Republican national committee.

Although this conclave was "unofficial," the revealed roster names Viscount Kilmuir, lord high chancellor of Great Britain; Tom Dewey; Senators Fulbright and Wiley, both of the foreign relations committee; Gabriel Hague, a truly mysterious stranger to Americans who nevertheless is formally described in the roster as Eisenhower's assistant in charge of economic affairs and by the Wall Street Journal as the expert who tells Ike "what to think"; C. O. Jackson, vice president of Time and "former special assistant to Eisenhower for international affairs and delegate to the ninth UN assembly"; and George Kennan, former ambassador to Russia.

Kennan is so mysterious that he does not even name his parents in Who's Who in America. Kennan is a member of the colony of double-heads at Princeton which includes the Professor Oppenheimer.

Paul Hoffman, now on the UN by Ike's appointment, was invited, but didn't show up.

The tax-free foundations did very well. Joseph E. Johnson, "honorary secretary" of the shebang, is president of the Carnegie endowment for international peace. (The bum who just shouted "remember Alger Hiss" will get a paste in the snoot if he will step outside.)

Dean Rusk, president of the Rockefeller foundation, and Henry Kissinger, described as "director of special studies" of the Rockefeller brothers fund, were a few names apart from David Rockefeller, vice chairman of the board of the Rockefellers Chase Manhattan bank. Morehead Patterson, deputy United States commissioner of disarmament of UN, is an executive of the banks 42d street store.

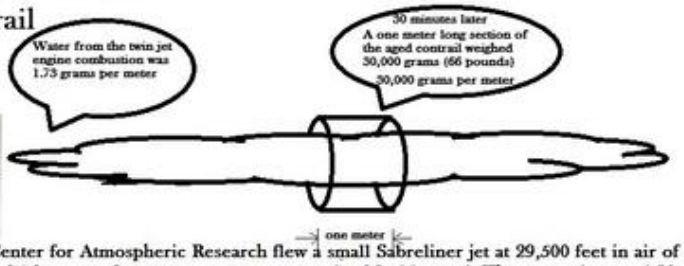
Measurements of the Growth of the Ice Budget In A Persisting Contrail

http://cires.colorado.edu/science/groups/pielke/classes/atoc7500/knollenberg72.pdf



In 1972, researchers from the National Center for Atmospheric Research flew a small Sabreliner jet at 29,500 feet in air of -38.2 degrees C. The two jet engines produced 1.73 grams of water per meter as a result of fuel burned. They turned around 30 minutes later and found that the resulting contrail had grown to 1 km wide and 400 meters deep, and the ice crystals had grown to weigh 30,000 grams (66 pounds) per meter of contrail. The ice crystal growth of over 10,000 times came from deposition of water vapor from ice supersaturated air in the environment.

A Sabreliner has a max payload of 2000 lbs. The resulting aged persistent contrail, however, weighed 66,000 pounds per kilometer(1000 meters). It is a physical impossibility for the Sabreliner to have sprayed 66,000 pounds, so the persistent contrail must have been composed of water vapor originally in the atmosphere. Persistent contrails can be hundreds of kilometers long, and large jets like the 747 etc. will produce persistent contrails weighing hundreds of tons per kilometer, an amount impossible to attribute to anything the aircraft could conceivably carry. The basic math is 1.3 lbs water per lb of fuel burned x 10,000 = weight of the persistent contrail. Do the math using the fuel burn rate for any jet to see the impossibility of a contrail being something sprayed.

@Tier5SpyNetwork Ballast Barrels:

https://www.metabunk.org/threads/debunked-chemtrail-plane-interior-ballast-barrels.661/

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/BobRjwhCEAAyVuK.jpg

During flight tests in 1994, the cabin interior of the prototype 777 was filled with what at first glance looked like aluminum beer kegs. In fact, these 55-gallon barrels contained water. The contents of two dozen barrels in the forward cabin and a like number of barrels in the aft section were pumped back and forth to simulate shifts in center of gravity that would result from passengers moving about. The top photo shows the cabin as it is when the 777 is delivered.

@rfsinopo @trutherbot No. But how do you know it can't be debunked if you don't try yourself?

https://twitter.com/_/status/469625109162889217

@nickmyer But what about the vast number of factual errors on his site? How can you trust that?

2014-05-22T23:29:57+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/469621216991395841

@nickmyer You are really getting hung up on silly semantics. It's perfectly clear what he meant.

2014-05-22T23:23:10+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/469619508684931073

@nickmyer He didn't know because everyone has different definitions. What is it that you think he knew about "Chemtrails"?

2014-05-22T23:22:17+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/469619284289658885

@nickmyer Okay, so if they sprayed aluminum oxide, then that would not be a chemtrail? As it's inert?

2014-05-22T23:21:37+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/469619117482180610

@nickmyer I mean, the wikipedia definition specifically excludes crop dusting. So how is DK supposed to know what she's referring to?

2014-05-22T23:20:37+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/469618865006063617

@nickmyer But you don't think that woman was talking about crop dusting, do you? So isn't it natural for DK to ask what she means?

2014-05-22T23:19:20+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/469618542279524352

@nickmyer And since H2O is not used for propulsion, then would you consider a contrail to be a chemtrail?

2014-05-22T23:18:37+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/469618361312088064

@nickmyer And here's another "chemtrail" by your definition: (pesticide)

2014-05-22T22:59:14+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/469613485026856960

@nickmyer And yet you can't define what a chemtrail is either? So what does that make you?

2014-05-22T22:47:49+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/469610610825506816

@nickmyer But why can't you say what "a chemtrail" is? Are you confused?

https://twitter.com/_/status/469608878414368768

@nickmyer So what is "a chemtrail"?

2014-05-22T22:39:24+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/469608493259837441

@POTUS7 Based on specious guesses about astronomy. Radiocarbon dating proves it's only 1,500 years old.

2014-05-22T22:37:09+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/469607925674045440

2014-05-22T22:36:20+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/469607722531299328

@DomNoble_com And so? Just another article about possible future geoengineering.

2014-05-22T16:55:12+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/469521872862732288

@CraziDarling No. Why would you think I am? Did I say something incorrect?

2014-05-22T16:46:59+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/469519807151226880

@DomNoble_com So do you have any evidence at all on paper?

2014-05-22T16:46:26+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/469519668265230336

@JasonBermas HAARP was shut down because of lack of funding, that's all.

2014-05-22T16:44:26+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/469519164046966784

@DomNoble_com What was a deadly particulate fog? And how did they confirm this? Do you have the text of what they said?

2014-05-22T16:36:44+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/469517225263497216

@CraziDarling Everyone believes that the government lies to them. So maybe their lack of belief in "chemtrails" is just about the evidence?

2014-05-22T16:32:15+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/469516096718905344

@oscare2000 @JKuylenstierna @SEIclimate Original article is two years old. That test was cancelled.

https://twitter.com/_/status/469509320510418944

@martinhume @Hsaive None of which have anything to do with the CIA, who were just involved in some minor funding of general research.

2014-05-22T16:04:36+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/469509138947375104

@martinhume @Hsaive A new low in misleading headlines there. Ozone depletion is a possible side effect of some proposed schemes.

2014-05-22T15:21:30+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/469498293303533568

@4thAnon And they don't say "more persistent" they say contrails don't persist. All the books say contrails CAN persist. What do you think?

2014-05-22T15:20:36+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/469498065477308417

@4thAnon You don't think that all the books for the last 70+ years agreeing on a point of science is relevant?

2014-05-22T15:19:12+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/469497714841894914

@MichaelAlexisB Private whois data is largely the default now. Check out some sites you like.

https://twitter.com/_/status/469497198028144640

@DanBillowWESH Depends on the rocket type. Some rockets use H+O2 as fuel. But some low and high "contrails" are more like smoke trails.

2014-05-22T06:00:28+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/469357102301868032

@biggysmlls @RA9h10m20sD1416 @KristenMeghan Then please point out the errors, and I will correct them.

https://twitter.com/_/status/469279950923513856

2014-05-22T00:53:27+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/469279839170486272

@DomNoble_com I drank a pint of barium when I had my MRI. That was harmless. But anyway, there's no evidence people are spraying barium.

@HuffPostWeird And really "zigzagging chemtrails"? It was a straight SM-3 trail blown into that shape by the wind.

https://www.metabunk.org/threads/strange-lights-over-hawaii-aegis-ashore-sm-3-missile-test.3675/

2014-05-22T00:43:26+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/469277320050507776

@HuffPostWeird You know why. Maybe weird news should actually be limited to UNidentified flying objects. Not the boring ones. :)

2014-05-22T00:34:48+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/469275146788687873

@4thAnon I made this short video debunking that "difference".

2014-05-22T00:33:25+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/469274797826772992

@4thAnon Some people say that contrails don't persist. However that's incorrect. So you tell me what you think the difference is.

2014-05-22T00:30:24+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/469274039244947459

@biggysmlls @RA9h10m20sD1416 Contrails, not chemtrails. See:

2014-05-22T00:08:35+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/469268551778324481

2014-05-22T00:04:34+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/469267539738914816

@4thAnon So if someone admits they exist, I'll be very interested in how they did it without leaving any evidence.

2014-05-22T00:04:03+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/469267408465559552

@4thAnon My entire point is not that chemtrails don't exist, but that there is no evidence that they exist.

2014-05-22T00:03:36+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/469267296813199360

@4thAnon Both what? Contrails and "chemtrails" that look and act exactly like contrails?

2014-05-22T00:01:03+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/469266652467453952

2014-05-21T23:59:26+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/469266247809368065

@4thAnon But it "chemtrails" are admitted, then does it make the info on this page incorrect? http://contrailscience.com/persisting-and-spreading-contrails/ That all still science

2014-05-21T23:11:04+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/469254073586171904

@DomNoble_com I you can learn PHP you can look up the expected amount of barium in the atmosphere. So why don't you?

2014-05-21T23:10:13+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/469253861274681344

2014-05-21T22:32:55+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/469244474225205248

@DomNoble_com A proposal for possible future geoengineering. So what?

2014-05-21T22:32:08+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/469244275276791808

@DomNoble_com No, it proves that this farmer thought that they were.

2014-05-21T22:05:25+00:00

2014-05-21T22:04:58+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/469237439362789376

2014-05-21T22:03:55+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/469237175100268547

@DomNoble_com Example: Barium:

2014-05-21T21:53:18+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/469234506528878592

2014-05-21T18:45:44+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/469187301638017024

https://twitter.com/_/status/468883019269672961

@4thAnon There's a broad spectrum of conspiracy theories. You can arrange them by plausibility, or by how much they violate science.

2014-05-20T22:32:07+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/468881885591252993

@4thAnon no, me too. I suspect there are many conspiracies in government. Particularly with lobbying and campaign finance.

2014-05-20T22:26:01+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/468880348315930625

@michaelshermer - Investigators predisposed to finding "unidentifieds"

- Excessive deference to verbal accounts from "highly trained" people.

- Gaps in the expert pool. Nobody was familiar with aerodynamic contrails. I was.

- Lack of interest from the military, perhaps partially due to stigma.

(1/3) A cautionary tale

In 2014, "highly trained" Navy pilots saw and videoed a UFO. The government's UFO investigation department and many experts studied it for two years, could not figure it out, and declared it a genuine UFO

@lesliekean lauded it as "exceptional" in Jan 2017

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/FSe903_akAEfXbC.jpg

By Leslie Kean, Contributor

Jan. 5, 2017, 11:19 AM EST | Updated Jan. 5, 2017

An exceptional nine-minute Navy video of a UFO displaying highly unusual behavior, studied by Chilean authorities for the last two years, is now being released to the public. The CEFAA - the Chilean government agency which investigates UFOs, or UAP (unidentified aerial phenomena), has been in charge of the investigation. Located within the DGAC, the equivalent of our FAA but under the jurisdiction of the Chilean Air Force, CEFAA has committees of military experts, technicians and academics from many disciplines. None of them have been able to explain the strange flying object captured by two experienced Navy officers from a helicopter.

The Navy immediately turned over the footage to the CEFAA, and General Bermúdez, accompanied by nuclear chemist Mario Avila, a CEFAA scientific committee member, conducted interviews with the two officers at their Navy base. “I was very impressed by these witnesses,” Avila told me. “They were highly trained professionals with many years experience, and they were absolutely certain that they could not explain what they saw.” Both offiicers also provided written reports at the base, as is required, and for CEFAA.

@dave_beaty I do think #4 is partially valid though. Mythologizing UFOs as alien heralds is not helpful for either the reporting stigma, or accurate determination of what individual sightings might be.
But we are in a different world now. http://pbs.twimg.com/media/FSby0l9VEAAZ4v7.jpg

4. In order most effectively to strengthen the national facilities for the timely recognition and the appropriate handling of true indications of hostile action, and to minimize the concomitant dangers alluded to above, the Panel recommends:

a. That the national security agencies take immediate steps to strip the Unidentified Flying Objects of the special status they have been given and the aura of mystery they have unfortunately acquired;

b. That the national security agencies institute policies on intelligence, training, and public education designed to prepare the material defenses and the morale of the country to recognize most promptly and to react most effectively to true indications of hostile intent or action.

We suggest that these aims may be achieved by an integrated program designed to reassure the public of the total lack of evidence of Inimical forces behind the phenomenon, to train personnel to recognize and reject false indications quickly and effectively, and to strengthen regular channels for the evaluation of and prompt reaction to true indications of hostile measures."[2]

Thought provoking questions are a great way to help people out of the rabbit hole. Ask people, politely, why they believe the things they do. Seeking out rational explanations eventually moves them closer to reality. https://twitter.com/aprilajoyr/status/1523754829222678528

Photographs are often the source of "UFO" reports. While generally higher resolution that video, they have less information in the temporal-spatial domain (i.e. movement). Frozen in time, things can look really odd. Like this peacock.

@timetherington @MvonRen "Smudge" is a bit of a strawman, as it evokes an image of a blob of goop on the lense.

What is actually being suggested is a very lightly smeared or streaked front window. Like when you clean your phone's lens with a finger. Maybe in this case from weather, even salt abrasion.

2 - Get a good team of people to study it and try really really hard, like at Skunkworks, to figure out how to do it.
3 - Build a warp drive spaceship

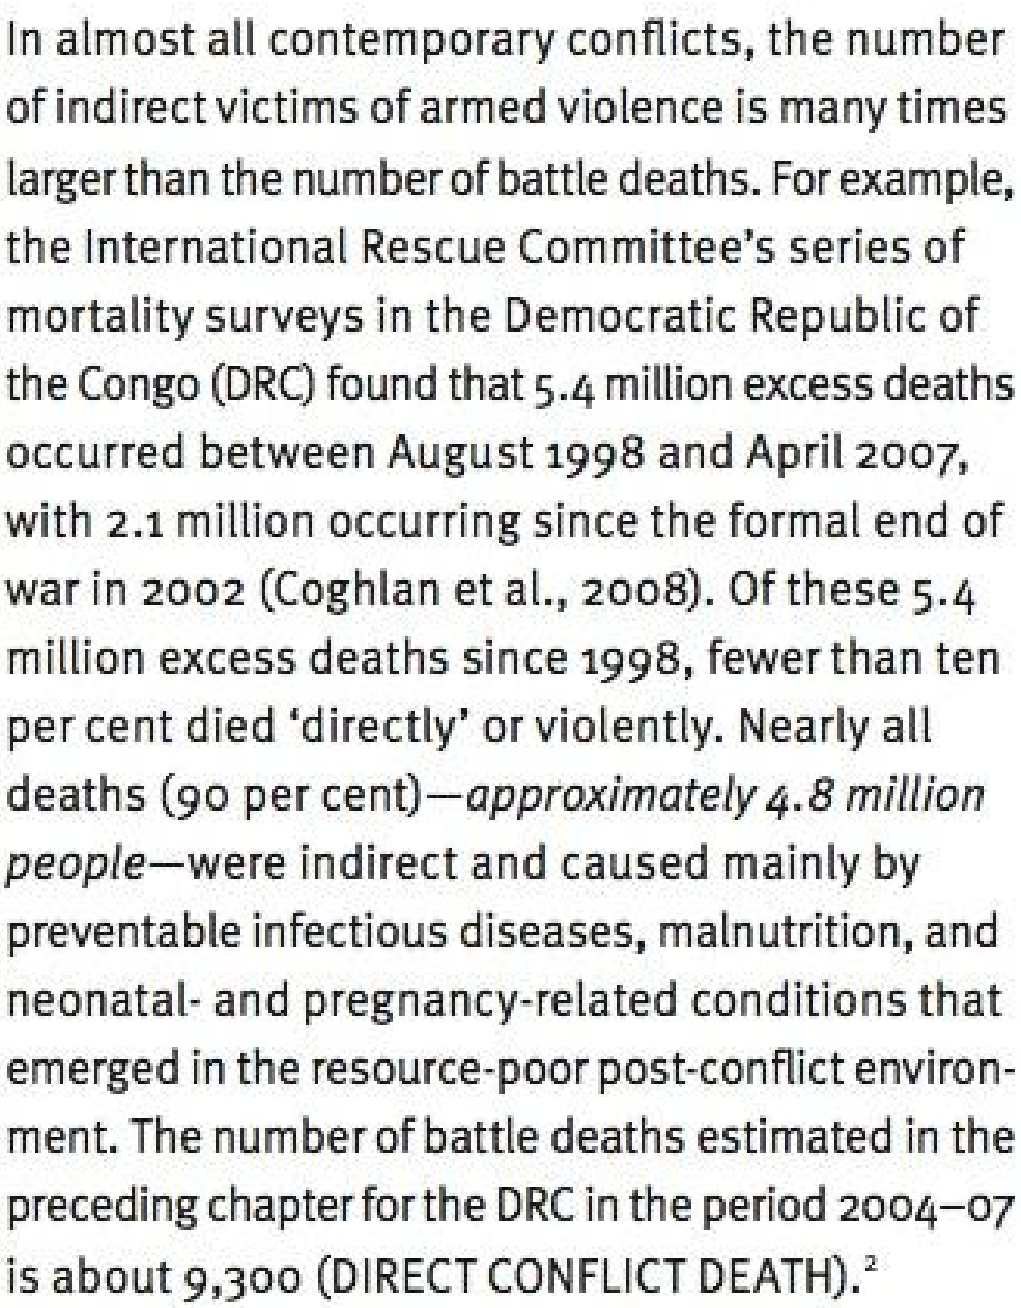
@4thAnon The term "indirect" is as used by the geneva declaration, chapter 2.

http://www.genevadeclaration.org/fileadmin/docs/GBAV/GBAV08-CH2.pdf

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/BnxU6a_CIAEwrBW.jpg



In almost all contemporary conflicts, the number of indirect victims of armed violence is many times larger than the number of battle deaths. For example, the International Rescue Committee's series of mortality surveys in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC) found that 5.4 million excess deaths occurred between August 1998 and April 2007, with 2.1 million occurring since the formal end of war in 2002 (Coghlan et al., 2008). Of these 5.4 million excess deaths since 1998, fewer than ten per cent died 'directly' or violently. Nearly all deaths (90 per cent)—approximately 4.8 million people—were indirect and caused mainly by preventable infectious diseases, malnutrition, and neonatal- and pregnancy-related conditions that emerged in the resource-poor post-conflict environment. The number of battle deaths estimated in the preceding chapter for the DRC in the period 2004–07 is about 9,300 (DIRECT CONFLICT DEATH).[2]

@4thAnon "Indirect" is a descriptive term. It does not make them less dead, and their deaths are still caused by war, just indirectly.

a "Conspiracy Theory"

Leftist publication regurgitates intellectually bankrupt White House talking point

Paul Joseph Watson
Infowars.com
May 13, 2014

In an article for leftist publication Salon.com, writer Arthur Goldwag characterizes the Benghazi cover-up as a "conspiracy theory" backed by nothing more than "faith," a ludicrous assertion given the recent release of emails which proved a deliberate effort to mislead on behalf of the Obama administration.

In a sophomoric piece entitled, Benghazi nuts, anti-vaxxers, birthers: Do they really buy their own nonsense?, Goldwag asks, "Why do people believe ridiculous things, in despite of all reason and proofs to the contrary?"

One of those "ridiculous things" is the notion that there was a cover-up surrounding the attack on the U.S. diplomatic mission in Benghazi, which Goldwag labels a "conspiracy theory" backed by no evidence, comparing belief that the Obama administration lied about the incident to belief in the King James Bible.

Goldwag goes on to equate believers in a Benghazi cover-up to those who supported Stalin's mass starvation of millions of Russians in the 1930's.

In characterizing the notion that there was a cover-up surrounding the attack on the U.S. diplomatic mission as a "conspiracy theory," Salon is regurgitating White House talking points. Last week, White House Press Secretary Jay Carney said that a new investigation into the attack was unwarranted because the "conspiracy theories" had "fallen apart."

In typical fashion, Goldwag's smearing of those who assert there was a Benghazi cover-up with the pejorative "conspiracy theory" term is a poor substitute for him failing to even acknowledge never mind attempt to debunk actual hard evidence which clearly indicates there was a cover-up surrounding the attack in Benghazi.

Goldwag makes no mention whatsoever of emails released under the Freedom of Information Act earlier this month which reveal how Ben Rhodes, Obama's deputy national security adviser for strategic communications, coached then U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations Susan Rice "to underscore that these protests are rooted in an Internet video, and not a broader failure of policy."

The fact that the assault on the consulate was a terror attack and not a protest gone awry as a result of a inflammatory video rather than the work of Islamic militants.

When Rice's account proved incorrect, Republican lawmakers accused her of trying to protect Obama during his re-election campaign, which the White House disputed. Rice is now Obama's national security adviser.

Judicial Watch sought documents related to the Benghazi attacks through the Freedom of Information Act and obtained them earlier this month. On Tuesday, it pointed to an email from Ben Rhodes, Obama's deputy national security adviser for strategic communications, which discussed preparations for Rice's appearances on the shows.

The email lists one goal as being "to underscore that these protests are rooted in an Internet video, and not a broader failure of policy."

It also emphasizes Obama's leadership and stresses his statesmanlike qualities.

"Now we know the Obama White House's chief concern about the Benghazi attack was making sure that President Obama looked good," Judicial Watch President Tom Fitton said in a statement on the group's website.

A White House spokeswoman said the email contained "general topline talking points" about the unrest spreading throughout the Middle East at the time.

Rhodes' email also made clear the administration's primary goals involved protecting people in the field and bringing to justice those responsible for the attacks, said Bernadette Meehan, spokeswoman for the White House National Security Council.

"Unlike those who insist on politicizing the events in Benghazi, our focus remains on ensuring that a tragedy like this isn't repeated in Libya or anywhere else in the world," Meehan added.

"In our view, these documents only serve to reinforce what we have long been saying: that in the days after September 11, 2012, we were concerned by unrest occurring across the region and that we provided our best assessment of what was happening at the time."

Last year, the White House [illegible] reams of emails related to the controversy that showed the talking points for Rice went through a series of revisions that scrubbed them of references to terror warnings before the deadly attacks.

Contrails turned into clouds, in 1921 @chliberty

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/Bni4lrACMAA42iy.jpg

CLOUD FORMATION BY SUPERCHARGED PLANE.[1]

[Reprinted from U. S. Air Service, July, 1921, p. 13.]

An altitude flight was made in the morning at McCook Field [Dayton, Ohio] recently, by Lieut. J. A. Macready in a La Pere with supercharged Liberty. When the airplane reached a height of 26,000–27,000 feet at 11:50 a. m., a long feathery white streamer was observed forming behind a rapidly moving dark speck. The cloud was of the cirrus variety, well defined at its edges and apparently 10 to 15 times the width of the plane. The sky behind the first portion was clear blue with no other clouds in the near neighborhood. The first streamer seemed perhaps 2 miles long. Then a gap of one-quarter mile. The second streamer formed with a background of light cirrus cloud and after 2 or 3 miles the plane seemed to go into the cirrus background, for the streamer formation ceased while an apparent path of blue continued beyond for a way in the cirrus cloud. The whole streamer may have been 3 miles long. After 20 minutes the streamer had drifted and spread until it merged indistinguishably with the other cirrus clouds visible. The weather conditions at the time were generally very clear, warm, with perhaps 0.1 of the sky in cirrus clouds.

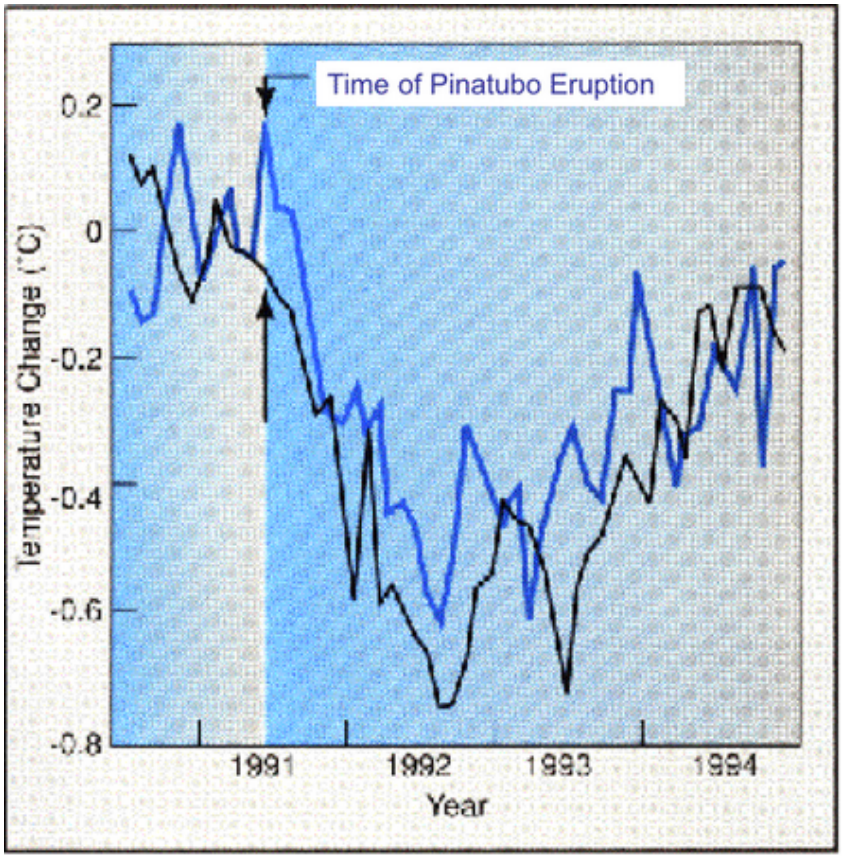

Figure 1 Comparison of modeled (black line) and observed (blue) impact of a major volcanic eruption on the temperature of the lower atmosphere. The eruption of Mt. Pinatubo in the Philippines, during June 1991, injected vast amounts of sulfur dioxide directly into the stratosphere. The gas quickly transformed into sulfuric acid particles that enshrouded the Earth and blocked part of the incoming solar radiation. The apparent effect is a drop of about 0.6°C in the globally-averaged temperature, lasting about two years. From J. Hansen et al., in National Geographic Research and Exploration, vol 9, no 2, pp 142-158, 1993.

Want to Buy Some Rain?

Thomas E. Stimson, Jr.

DR. KRICK, president of the American Institute of Aerological Research, for 17 years was head of the meteorology department of California Institute of Technology. Among other duties during the war he served as Chief of the Weather Information Section of the U. S. Strategic Air Forces. At present he operates a meteorological consulting service for clients throughout the United States

ARE MODERN rain-making techniques any good?

No! The Air Force and the Weather Bureau speak. The two agencies declare that they got negative results in numerous attempts to stimulate rainfall over an 8 by 20-mile test area in Ohio last year.

Yes! This is the equally positive answer by a number of other investigators.

The latest and perhaps most authoritative confirmation is supplied by a project conducted under the auspices of the Arizona Weather Research Foundation. The results indicate that during one month last summer, cloud-seeding operations over the Salt River, Verde River and Tonto Creek watersheds placed 12,000 acre-feet of water in storage in excess of the amount that would have been produced naturally by existing atmospheric conditions.

The difference between the Ohio and the @BlackburnRuth My point is it's not getting whiter every day. It's variable. It's the weather

#LABTOURDEMO – LAB TOUR & OVER-UNITY DEMOS Suggested min. donation, $200K USD (PER PERSON)

It is highly necessary that you've had a few consultations and you have a deal in place before you have any live demo's. There is a lot of work that goes into tuning in the demo machines (a team of 12 highly skilled engineers up to 6 months to tune in.) Due to thefts in the past WE DO NOT KEEP THE DEMO MACHINES TUNED IN.

For those reasons, the suggested minimum donation amount may seem high to some people. (These are usually people who have no idea what real scientists and engineers earn.) However, if you count the down time for the whole lab, every time we do a demo and the tuning in time, the amounts are actually a real bargain.

Suggested minimum donation $200k per person. At least 3 Skype consultations are required before setting up a Lab Tour (see item #WSOHC above.)

Covenant Partners of this ministry or an equivalent ministry for one year or more receive 50% off the suggested amount per person. Please allow 6 months lead-time for a standard over-unity demo and lab tour.)

Each person attending, should be a covenant partner for at least those 6 months.

-Please Note: minimum suggested donation amounts are NOT negotiable.

-The demonstrations are all done on glass tables (or in other ways easy to see above, underneath, in back of, and on all sides,) and are therefore very real, and easy to see there are no tricks.

-Demos are very obvious and very convincing.

-Everyone who has seen our demos has been thoroughly convinced! (This donation amount is PER PERSON.)

"Pilot forgot to turn off chemtrails" Popular Mechanics 1943 version:

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/BmbIX9mCcAAlNQp.jpg

WHY PLANES MAKE Vapor Trails

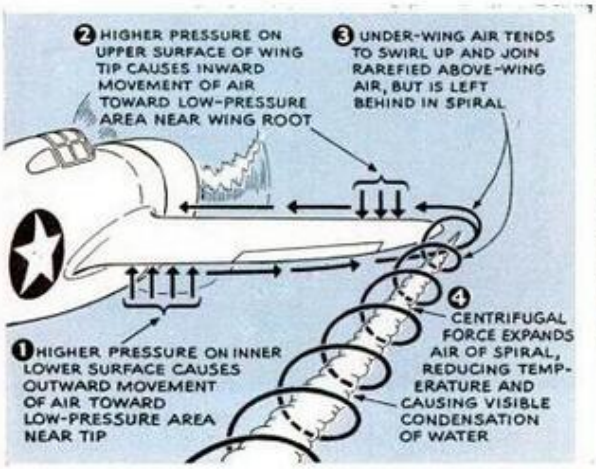
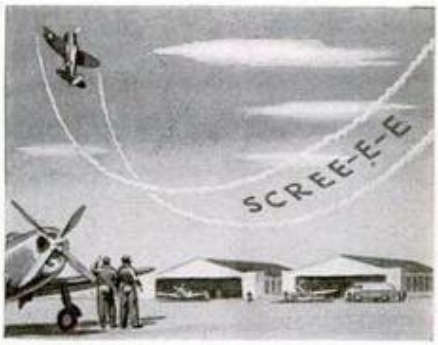
AIRPLANES leave trails in the atmosphere that can be picked up, if a spotter is quick enough, like those of game sought by a hunter. Some of them, especially trails left by a plane's exhaust at high, cold altitudes, endure for some time, while those made by wing tips creating vortices are audible as well as visible.

Both of these types of airplane trails are explained by condensation. Invisible water vapor in a plane's exhaust condenses into a visible cloud when the vapor reaches an excess of what the atmosphere will hold. Wing-tip trails add no water to the air, but as their vortices expand, the air temperature in them drops and the dew point is reached if the vortices are strong enough and humidity is high.





Noise like the whistle of a falling object may be heard when a heavily loaded plane pulls out of a low dive. It is from the wing-tip trail illustrated at left, and is audible after that of the motor dies away

A small wind shear can draw out a contrail into an almost horizontal sheet of cloud [no. 70]. In this picture, the right hand trail is a few minutes older than the other and has been extended more. Sometimes several trails drawn out in this way cover most of the sky with cirrus. If the trails are very persistent the clear air must be saturated for ice.

Brightly coloured parts of complex haloes are occasionally seen in persistent contrails. Parts of coronae have been seen from accompanying aircraft in the first few metres of the trails, but they disappear as the droplets freeze and grow into crystals.

https://www.metabunk.org/threads/debunked-chemtrail-plane-interior-ballast-barrels.661/
http://pbs.twimg.com/media/BmZdrktCcAAZlAB.jpg

During flight tests in 1994, the cabin interior of the prototype 777 was filled with what at first glance looked like aluminum beer kegs. In fact, these 55-gallon barrels contained water. The contents of two dozen barrels in the forward cabin and a like number of barrels in the aft section were pumped back and forth to simulate shifts in center of gravity that would result from passengers moving about. The top photo shows the cabin as it is when the 777 is delivered.

1.3 HOW MIGHT I BE EXPOSED TO ALUMINUM?

Food—primary source of exposure	Unprocessed foods like fresh fruits, vegetables, and meat contain very little aluminum. Aluminum compounds may be added during processing of foods, such as: • flour • baking powder • coloring agents • anticaking agents An average adult in the United States eats about 7–9 mg of aluminum per day in their food.

@ZeDikaRedirect No. Jet exhaust contains water. When this cools down, the water condenses (like breath on a cold day), then it freezes.

2014-04-28T23:13:35+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/460919788550647808

@ShawnSt51128037 @chemtrailreport Yes, these are aerodynamic contrails. The ones that stick around are exhaust contrails. Very different.

https://twitter.com/_/status/460919459452960768

@phdamodei It needs to be in fog for persistence (100% humidity), as it's too warm to freeze. Contrails form at -40Â°C

https://twitter.com/_/status/460916865695371264

@nickmyer It's flying through a region of humid air. Like an invisible cloud. The exhaust makes it visible. http://pbs.twimg.com/media/BmV6G_TCEAAkRWA.jpg

If the overall humidity is lower, then these regions are still there but the water does not condense, so we can't see them.
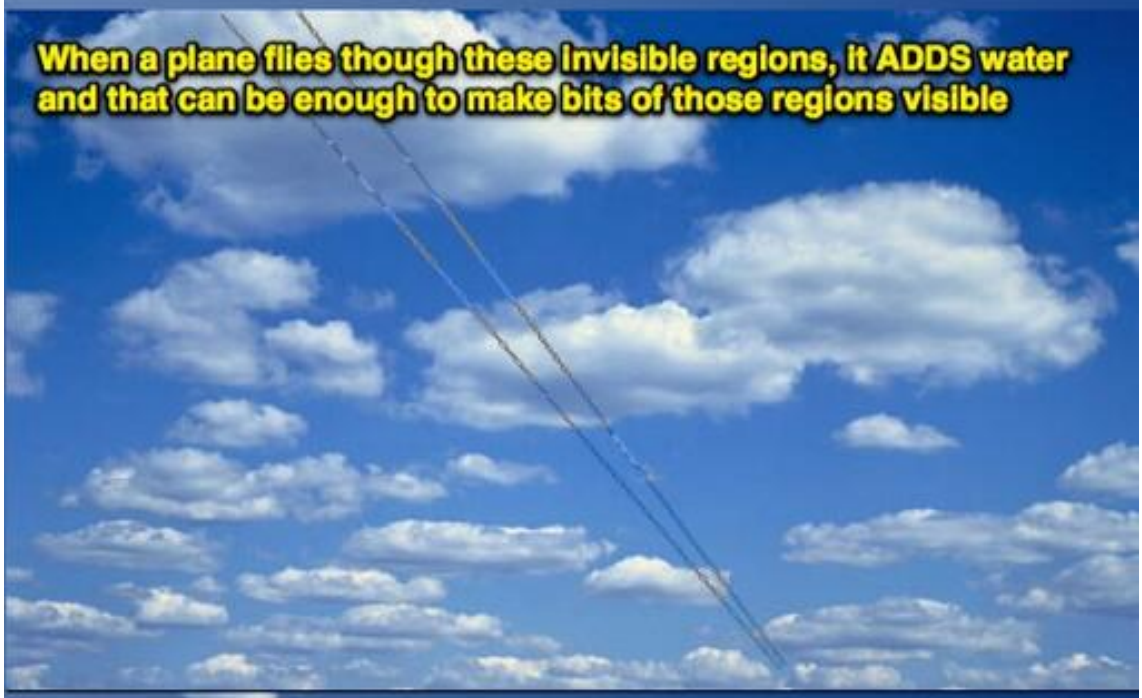
Kind of like invisble clouds.



So it leaves a trail thet reveals where the humidity was high enough Kind of like a magic pen, revealing the invisible clouds

https://twitter.com/_/status/460552186741526528

@The_Codeine_Kid How does that differ from these 1957 contrails?

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/Bl3KWtQCcAEokUd.jpg

A small wind shear can draw out a contrail into an almost horizontal sheet of cloud [no. 70]. In this picture, the right hand trail is a few minutes older than the other and has been extended more. Sometimes several trails drawn out in this way cover most of the sky with cirrus. If the trails are very persistent the clear air must be saturated for ice.

Brightly coloured parts of complex haloes are occasionally seen in persistent contrails. Parts of coronae have been seen from accompanying aircraft in the first few metres of the trails, but they disappear as the droplets freeze and grow into crystals.

70 R. S. Scorer

71 W. Tribble

Sometimes ice crystals appear along the path of an aircraft which flies through a cloud of supercooled droplets. If the crystals grow and eventually fall out of the cloud layer, they may leave a fall-streak hole [see no. 28 and p. 45] in the form of a long clear lane. In the present example [no. 71], however, the crystal trail lies below a clear lane which is probably an ordinary distrail; it was produced in a very thin wave cloud.

@nickmyer @RationalBee But it's true. Some engines do make about 5% more contrails. It's called the "contrail factor", and varies by engine.

2014-04-20T16:39:56+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/457921620821016576

@nickmyer @RationalBee Photo shows two contrails. Could be 10,000 or 1,000 feet feet apart.

2014-04-20T16:39:04+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/457921402884997121

@nickmyer As I've explained, it's not really significantly different to the old jet. 1957 example: http://pbs.twimg.com/media/BlrdFu4CEAAUe_z.jpg

A small wind shear can draw out a contrail into an almost horizontal sheet of cloud [no. 70]. In this picture, the right hand trail is a few minutes older than the other and has been extended more. Sometimes several trails drawn out in this way cover most of the sky with cirrus. If the trails are very persistent the clear air must be saturated for ice.

Brightly coloured parts of complex haloes are occasionally seen in persistent contrails. Parts of coronae have been seen from accompanying aircraft in the first few metres of the trails, but they disappear as the droplets freeze and grow into crystals.

70 R. S. Scorer

71 W. Tribble

Sometimes ice crystals appear along the path of an aircraft which flies through a cloud of supercooled droplets. If the crystals grow and eventually fall out of the cloud layer, they may leave a fall-streak hole [see no. 28 and p. 45] in the form of a long clear lane. In the present example [no. 71], however, the crystal trail lies below a clear lane which is probably an ordinary distrail; it was produced in a very thin wave cloud.

@nickmyer @RationalBee Make a target 5% bigger and you will hit it 5% more often. High bypass engines just have a bigger target.

https://twitter.com/_/status/457919669886668800
@nickmyer @RationalBee It was, because it expands the range of altitudes at which they can leave contrails. It's like having a bigger target

@NewWorldOrchard Remarkably similar to this contrail cloud from 1957:

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/BlSJEsACEAAAb24.jpg

A small wind shear can draw out a contrail into an almost horizontal sheet of cloud [no. 70]. In this picture, the right hand trail is a few minutes older than the other and has been extended more. Sometimes several trails drawn out in this way cover most of the sky with cirrus. If the trails are very persistent the clear air must be saturated for ice.

Brightly coloured parts of complex haloes are occasionally seen in persistent contrails. Parts of coronae have been seen from accompanying aircraft in the first few metres of the trails, but they disappear as the droplets freeze and grow into crystals.

70 R. S. Scorer

71 W. Tribble

Sometimes ice crystals appear along the path of an aircraft which flies through a cloud of supercooled droplets. If the crystals grow and eventually fall out of the cloud layer, they may leave a fall-streak hole [see no. 28 and p. 45] in the form of a long clear lane. In the present example [no. 71], however, the crystal trail lies below a clear lane which is probably an ordinary distrail; it was produced in a very thin wave cloud.

(3/6) Eventually, the wedge formation began a turn. The vehicles turned similar to an aircraft, where they had a radius of turn. This is in contrast to the GIMBAL object which reversed its direction with no turn. The turn of the wedge formation, if I remember correctly, was @flarkey @OMApproach @dustyWayneJr @MindfulOfLight @MvonRen @chrisotis78 @lesliekean @CorridorDigital They discussed parallax briefly "an illusions created by the motion of the plane" - but in a way that made it clear that whoever wrote it utterly misunderstood it.

Their explanation here requires the plane to stop in mid air.

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/FSVXJnXVcAAMOzV.jpg

Line-of-Sight Evaluation Appendix L

Introduction

Some arguments have been advanced that the object could be a balloon and that the motion of the balloon relative to the background is an illusion created by the motion of the plane circling the balloon. This is incorrect. There are some frames of video having no background motion at all and the UAP can be seen changing locations relative to the background. Consider Frames 711 and 712 of Figure 1:

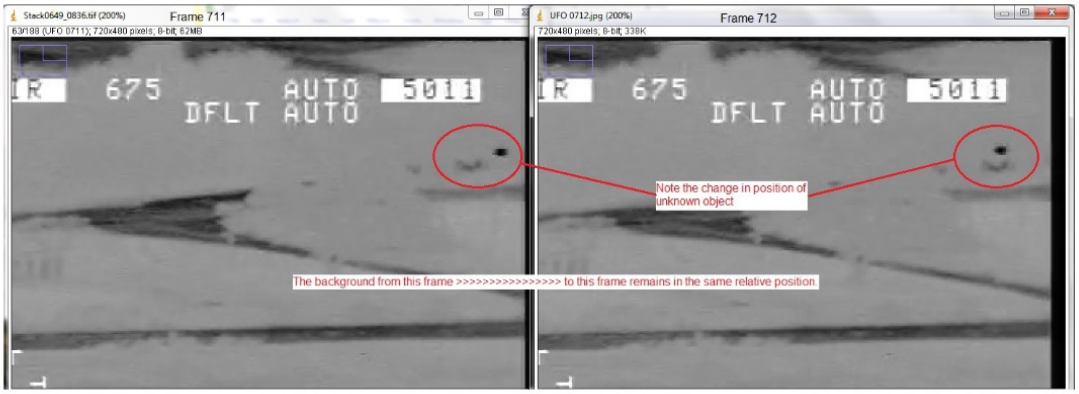

Figure 1

WRONG!

Figure 1 clearly demonstrates the intrinsic motion of the UAP and that the motion of the plane from one frame to the next contributes nothing to the difference in the location of the UAP. This, in itself, does not eliminate the possibility of a balloon since a balloon could have drifted into the frames due to its own motion.

@BarlowTerry @6diego32 When you think something is further away than it actually is, then even if it's not moving it will look like it is (and in a weird manner) because of the parallax illusion.

If you circle something not moving, it looks like it mirrors your moves on the other side of the circle.

@BarlowTerry @6diego32 It does not. I suspect there may have been some parallax illusion - hence he thought it was "mirroring" him.

@6diego32 No, I don't need to explain that. I've said several times I don't know what Fravor, and others saw. I SUSPECT that Fravor misjudged the distance, and so was fooled by parallax effects - possibly by something as simple as a target balloon.

@IMGeorgeMakris It's a contrail. They look vertical when the plane is flying towards you (i.e. from the horizon). http://contrailscience.com/contrails-are-usually-horizontal/

2014-04-12T23:39:34+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/455128122015223808

@nwo_analyst Looks just like it did in 1957:

https://www.flickr.com/photos/metabunk/sets/72157642384424663/

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/BlDwnYiCEAAyXl2.jpg

A small wind shear can draw out a contrail into an almost horizontal sheet of cloud [no. 70]. In this picture, the right hand trail is a few minutes older than the other and has been extended more. Sometimes several trails drawn out in this way cover most of the sky with cirrus. If the trails are very persistent the clear air must be saturated for ice.

Brightly coloured parts of complex haloes are occasionally seen in persistent contrails. Parts of coronae have been seen from accompanying aircraft in the first few metres of the trails, but they disappear as the droplets freeze and grow into crystals.

70 R. S. Scorer

71 W. Tribble

Sometimes ice crystals appear along the path of an aircraft which flies through a cloud of supercooled droplets. If the crystals grow and eventually fall out of the cloud layer, they may leave a fall-streak hole [see no. 28 and p. 45] in the form of a long clear lane. In the present example [no. 71], however, the crystal trail lies below a clear lane which is probably an ordinary distrail; it was produced in a very thin wave cloud.

@CBowen4 So let's get to the basics. Can contrails persist and spread?

https://twitter.com/_/status/455096211125460992

@CBowen4 For this conversation to be useful, we must establish common ground, otherwise it's just tossing words around.

2014-04-12T21:32:01+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/455096020725026817

@CBowen4 No, all the book on clouds say the CONTRAILS can persist for hours, spread out, cover the sky. So why do you think they can't?

The Prime Minister of the UK debunks #chemtrails http://pbs.twimg.com/media/BlCnPjqCAAENGb2.jpg

HOUSE OF COMMONS
LONDON SW1A 0AA

Monday, 7th April 2014
Ref. [redacted]

Dear Mr. & Mrs. Darkin,

Thank you for contacting me about chemtrails.

The Department for Transport is not aware of any matter or aerosol being eject from aircraft in the UK, other than normal exhaust products.

I am aware that other countries have, on occasion, used weather modification techniques, such as cloud seeding, which can cause precipitation by introducing substances into cumulus clouds that causes condensation. However, these techniques are aimed at reducing the locally damaging effects of hail or promoting rainfall, and have no impact on the climate and should not be considered to be geo-engineering.

It is also worth noting that since 1977 cloud seeding and environmental techniques have been subject to international regulation after countries agreed the "Convention of the Prohibition of Military or Any Other Hostile Use of Environmental Modification Techniques" (ENMOD). Importantly, this treaty forbids the use of environmental modification techniques in hostile circumstances.

I do hope this goes some way to reassure you and thank you again for taking the time to write to me.

Yours sincerely

David Cameron

From the Member of Parliament for the Witney constituency in the district of West Oxfordshire, including Bampton, Burford, Carterton, Charlbury, Chipping Norton, Eynsham, Witney and Woodstock.

SEC. 1078. RESTRICTIONS ON THE USE OF HUMAN SUBJECTS FOR TESTING OF CHEMICAL OR BIOLOGICAL AGENTS.

(a) PROHIBITED ACTIVITIES.—The Secretary of Defense may not conduct (directly or by contract)—

(1) any test or experiment involving the use of a chemical agent or biological agent on a civilian population; or

(2) any other testing of a chemical agent or biological agent on human subjects.

(b) EXCEPTIONS.—Subject to subsections (c), (d), and (e), the prohibition in subsection (a) does not apply to a test or experiment carried out for any of the following purposes:

(1) Any peaceful purpose that is related to a medical, therapeutic, pharmaceutical, agricultural, industrial, or research activity.

(2) Any purpose that is directly related to protection against toxic chemicals or biological weapons and agents.

(3) Any law enforcement purpose, including any purpose related to riot control.

(c) INFORMED CONSENT REQUIRED.—The Secretary of Defense may conduct a test or experiment described in subsection (b) only if informed consent to the testing was obtained from each human subject in advance of the testing on that subject.

(d) PRIOR NOTICE TO CONGRESS.—Not later than 30 days after the date of final approval within the Department of Defense of plans for any experiment or study to be conducted by the Department of Defense (whether directly or under contract) involving the use of human subjects for the testing of a chemical agent or a biological agent, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate and the Committee on National Security of the House of Representatives a report

https://twitter.com/_/status/453757855884009472

@Jason10Noto @cryptotraveler @JasonBermas Because the "chemtrail" issue is about supposed deliberate spraying, not normal pollution.

If chemtrails are to block the sun, then these are just contrails then, right? @Chemtrails_818

https://twitter.com/_/status/453756006619549697

@Jason10Noto @cryptotraveler @JasonBermas Like car exhaust? Power station emissions? Those both cause FAR more damage.

https://twitter.com/_/status/453755790889742336

@WWCWD @jfkjohan @LakeShOwQueen Not true. Contrail can persist. See:

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=X72uACIN_00

http://pbs.twimg.com/media/BkwQfMaCYAELwOE.jpg

A small wind shear can draw out a contrail into an almost horizontal sheet of cloud [no. 70]. In this picture, the right hand trail is a few minutes older than the other and has been extended more. Sometimes several trails drawn out in this way cover most of the sky with cirrus. If the trails are very persistent the clear air must be saturated for ice.

Brightly coloured parts of complex haloes are occasionally seen in persistent contrails. Parts of coronae have been seen from accompanying aircraft in the first few metres of the trails, but they disappear as the droplets freeze and grow into crystals.

70 R. S. Scorer

71 W. Tribble

Sometimes ice crystals appear along the path of an aircraft which flies through a cloud of supercooled droplets. If the crystals grow and eventually fall out of the cloud layer, they may leave a fall-streak hole [see no. 28 and p. 45] in the form of a long clear lane. In the present example [no. 71], however, the crystal trail lies below a clear lane which is probably an ordinary distrail; it was produced in a very thin wave cloud.

Dear Friend,

I have some news in my possion whitch I believe to be true and would interest you very much.I canot davulg the mans name at present who gave me the news but I will geve you the news I have and if you think it worth while then you can have one of your men contact me,for futher information. Hitler is in Argentina,He is liveing in a great underground establishment beneath a vast hacienda- 675 miles vestfrom Florianopolis; 430 miles northwest of Buenos Aires;and that 'two doubles' are there with Hitler.The western enterence to elevators leading to Hitlers new underground is a wall operated by photo-electric cells,and that by code signals of even dim flash lights,wall slides to left,lets Autos speed in,and instantly slides back onto place.

Do not believe the British lie that Hitler is dead I am A full blooded American and think this should be investigated at once. Your Friend, [redacted]

Seven Rockets Fired From Wallops Island

WALLOPS ISLAND, Va. (AP) —Seven Nike-Apache sounding rockets sped out from this space agency testing base last night and early today — four laying pink and red clouds, three carrying experimental capsules.

The sodium vapor cloud shots were part of the National Aeronautics and Space Agency's continuing program of gathering data on wind directions and speeds at various atltitudes.

The experimental capsules were flown for the University of Illinois to measure changes in the ionosphere occurring in the change over from night time to daytime conditions.

@4thAnon It's evidence. Just not very substantial evidence. KM claims soil tests. Refuses to release them. So....?

https://twitter.com/_/status/445521012705501184

@4thAnon I just explained. Despite her accusations being public and false, they do me no demonstrable harm. Hence no reason to sue.

2014-03-14T17:04:32+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/445519458892034048

@4thAnon Notice how all she ever does is mock me for just being a video game programmer, hence avoiding discussing science.

2014-03-14T17:03:47+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/445519271972880384

@4thAnon Her calling me a "paid government shill" just makes her look silly. Especially as she can't point out anything I said wrong.

2014-03-14T17:02:09+00:00

https://twitter.com/_/status/445518857600819200

@4thAnon Because her claims are not injurious, as nobody takes them seriously except existing believers. They are public and false though.

https://twitter.com/_/status/445513232728768512

There is one other form of ice crystal cloud. The artificial one caused by aircraft, and there are two varieties. One is produced by the condensation and freezing of exhaust vapour, which on issuing expands to a large extent forming a line of cloud which drifts in the sky for some time, spreading outward, and becoming less dense. The other type, is produced by the wing tip vortices, and is only temporary, and seldom visible from the ground. Figs. 78 and 79 show the first type of trail in company with true cirrus.

@kencampbell66 @RichMoffitt What do they do? All the books in that video say that's what they do. e.g. From 1957: http://pbs.twimg.com/media/BiilG4hCMAArg2f.jpg

A small wind shear can draw out a contrail into an almost horizontal sheet of cloud [no. 70]. In this picture, the right hand trail is a few minutes older than the other and has been extended more. Sometimes several trails drawn out in this way cover most of the sky with cirrus. If the trails are very persistent the clear air must be saturated for ice.

Brightly coloured parts of complex haloes are occasionally seen in persistent contrails. Parts of coronae have been seen from accompanying aircraft in the first few metres of the trails, but they disappear as the droplets freeze and grow into crystals.

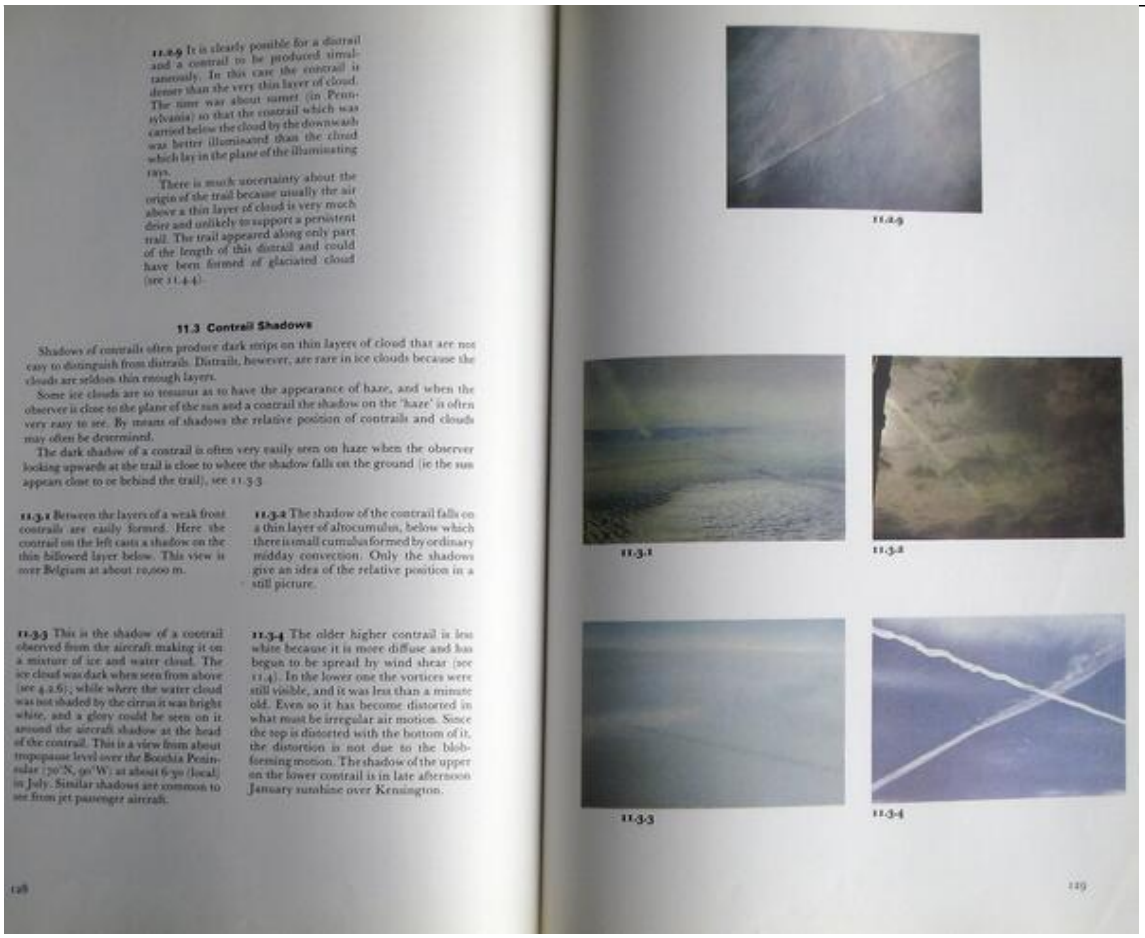
http://pbs.twimg.com/media/BiiT_njCQAAxwBq.jpg



11.2.9 It is clearly possible for a distrail and a contrail to be produced simultaneously. In this case the contrail is denser than the very thin layer of cloud. The time was about sunset (in Pennsylvania) so that the contrail which was carried below the cloud by the downwash was better illuminated than the cloud which lay in the plane of the illuminating rays.

There is much uncertainty about the origin of the trail because usually the air above a thin layer of cloud is very much drier and unlikely to support a persistent trail. The trail appeared along only part of the length of this distrail and could have been formed of glaciated cloud (see 11.4.4).

11.3 Contrail Shadows

Shadows of contrails often produce dark strips on thin layers of cloud that are not easy to distinguish from distrails. Distrails, however, are rare in ice clouds because the clouds are seldom thin enough layers.

Some ice clouds are so tenuous as to have the appearance of haze, and when the observer is close to the plane of the sun and a contrail the shadow on the 'haze' is often very easy to see. By means of shadows the relative position of contrails and clouds may often be determined.

The dark shadow of a contrail is often very easily seen on haze when the observer looking upwards at the trail is close to where the shadow falls on the ground (ie the sun appears close to or behind the trail), see 11.3.3.

11.3.1 Between the layers of a weak frost contrails are easily formed. Here the contrail on the left casts a shadow on the thin billowed layer below. This view is over Belgium at about 10,000 m.

11.3.2 The shadow of the contrail falls on a thin layer of altocumulus, below which there is small cumulus formed by ordinary midday convection. Only the shadows give an idea of the relative position in a still picture.

11.3.3 This is the shadow of a contrail observed from the aircraft making it on a mixture of ice and water cloud. The ice cloud was dark when seen from above (see 4.2.6); while where the water cloud was not shaded by the cirrus it was bright white, and a glory could be seen on it around the aircraft shadow at the head of the contrail. This is a view from about tropopause level over the Bonthia Peninsular (70°N, 90°W; at about 6·30 (local) in July. Similar shadows are common to see from jet passenger aircraft.

11.3.4 The older higher contrail is less white because it is more diffuse and has begun to be spread by wind shear (see 11.4). In the lower one the vortices were still visible, and it was less than a minute old. Even so it has become distorted in what must be irregular air motion. Since the top is distorted with the bottom of it, the distortion is not due to the blob-forming motion. The shadow of the upper on the lower contrail is in late afternoon January sunshine over Kensington.

@nwo_analyst I don't. My point is that there is no evidence they are doing it. Why do you think they are?

@loftyjester "Contrails may be seen in uneven segments of growth and dissipation" Says this 33 year old book. http://pbs.twimg.com/media/Bh50ZvNIEAAXh9U.jpg

where the temperatures range from −30°C to −65°C (−22°F to −85°F). This is the region of the high troposphere or the low stratosphere. It takes very little water at these temperatures to produce a condition of saturation or supersaturation. Between these extremes lie all the possibilities for the many variations in pattern that occur. Moisture at high elevations often advances through the sky in tongues or uneven patterns, both large and small. Thus contrails may be seen in uneven segments of growth and dissipation.

Sometimes the multiple contrails that persist will break into a series of swirled loops, with the loops joining into ovals. When these loops and connected vortices develop, they ordinarily do not last more than a minute or so. When trails last for longer periods, they may break into a series of pendules or fingers. The pendule is a form of ring vortex, indicating the presence of locally stable moist air. Sometimes pendules are pulled away into long streamers by a zone of faster moving air. The resulting shear motion may result in such an extensive cloud sheet that the sky becomes completely overcast.

Contrails are spectacular in early morning and evening, and even in the light of the full moon. When the air to the west is clear and the sun has set, a jet aircraft at 12 km (about 40,000 ft.) will still be illuminated by the sun. Sometimes the white contrail will assume a brilliant red or orange color. To the uninformed, the moving trail, produced by a plane that is invisible or appears only as a rapidly moving spot in the sky, may seem to be an out-of-this-world apparition — more than one such case has subsequently been headlined in the papers as a UFO with a fiery tail.

Under most conditions a contrail is made of ice crystals. Though it initially consists of liquid water droplets in the warm exhaust air, these soon change to ice particles in the frigid temperatures of the high atmosphere. The presence of ice is best illustrated when the contrail is located between the observer and the sun. Bright areas called parhelia (see Color Plate 11) are visible at an angle of 22° on either side of the sun. This angle can easily be checked with a built-in device possessed by every human. With arm and fingers outstretched, let the thumb obscure the sun. The little finger, stretched to the maximum, then subtends an angle of about 22°. The bright spots observed are a portion of the well-known 22° halo (see p. 158).

The jet aircraft disturbs its environment in 2 important ways. First, a jet engine consumes large quantities of fuel, and substantial amounts of water vapor, a major by-product of combustion, leave the engine as one component of the exhaust gases. Second, the rapid movement of the air over the wings and body of the aircraft generates vortices that persist for a time until their internal energy is dissipated.

The particular contrail pattern will be determined by several

Peterson Field Guide to the Atmosphere. 1981

interacting factors. These are: (1) the moisture content of the air, (2) the temperature of the air, (3) the moisture introduced into the air by the engines, (4) the vertical stability of the air below, at, and above the aircraft, (5) the cloud condensation and ice nuclei count when the air is warmer than −40°C (−40°F), and (6) the mixing that takes place between the environmental air and the exhaust.

At one extreme, the air through which the jet is flying might be gently sinking over a large area, and thus have a very low relative humidity. In this case, the addition of moisture might be insufficient to produce anything but a very short-lived contrail, quickly destroyed by mixing with the dry surrounding air. When a jet passes and leaves no contrails in the sky, or contrails that quickly disappear, this is a good prognosticator of fair weather.

At the other extreme, the jet flies through air that is gradually rising and becoming cool, and so may be nearly saturated. The addition of moisture from the jet exhaust may then be enough to produce saturation and consequent water drops or ice crystals. A persistent trail is an indicator of moist air, which may be the first sign of an extensive storm area moving into the region. This is particularly true when cirrus clouds are also present.

Pl.151 IV$_B$ Classic example of jet stream cirrus covering whole sky. Strong jet stream winds in upper portion of photograph leave behind nearly horizontal streams of falling ice crystals.

Condensation trails (contrails)

Three condensation trails (1, 2, 3) can be seen. They expand with time. The two older trails (1, 2), probably made 15-30 minutes before the picture was taken, have assumed a fleecy aspect, while the most recent one (3), which is just being produced, merely looks like a white streak in the sky. Numerous Cirrus clouds can also be seen; they may have developed out of contrails formed earlier.

Aircraft condensation trails

Everyone has noticed the long, thin, white trails left by highflying aircraft. They sometimes disappear quickly, but on other occasions they persist for a long time, spread out and become a cirrus or altocumulus type of cloud. These condensation trails ('contrails') result from the condensation of water vapour contained in the exhaust gases of the aircraft engines. Their persistence depends on the temperature and humidity of the atmosphere at the flight level. Thus, when a warm front is approaching and the cirrus clouds are beginning to form, an aircraft trail will usually tend to persist and even grow, because the air at that level is already moist. Wind shear (the change of wind speed from one height and distance to another) will cause the trails to spread out and give a spectacular display (88).

87. Condensation trails (contrails)

88. Contrails

94, 95. Jet-stream cloud
These plates form a matching pair of pictures and show a jet-stream cloud extending from the west-south-west horizon to the west-north-west. The wind speed at the cloud level was about 140 knots. The cloud is thinner than in the previous example but, once again, the cloud shows a 'billow' structure at right angles to the general line, caused by differences in wind speed in the layers above and below the cloud. The contrail in Plate 94 illustrates the way that it has persisted in the cloud area but dispersed beyond it. This indicates that the air beyond the cloud is very dry.

105. Altocumulus bands
On this occasion these bands of cloud appeared in the west and were slowly transferred to the south-east as new bands appeared and the old ones to the west dispersed. Each individual band moved from north-west to south-east. In bands in the bottom right, a billow structure can be seen. Although upper-air conditions were conducive to the formation of wave clouds, from the appearance and movement of these cloud bands, the structure was probably a series of shear waves near the top of an inversion.

106. Altocumulus bands
The bands lay in long lines across the sky, but suddenly a rift appeared with cirrus-like threads falling from the cloud at that spot. The bands of cloud were slowly transferred. Probably the cloud, composed of supercooled water droplets, for some reason turned to ice crystals causing breaks in the cloud and probably a minor wind change.

87. Condensation trails (contrails)

88. Contrails
The trail across the picture has just been made, but the 'wineglass-like' cloud is the subsequent development of the one shown in the previous picture with a bulge on its right.

11.2.7 Dense trails are formed from all four engines of this aircraft and by the time the trails from the inner engines have moved round to the outside they have begun to evaporate. The exhaust from the outer engines enters the cores of the vortices and the cloud persists in the low pressure regions only. There appears to have been some side slip because either the two vortices are unequal or, more probably, the amount of exhaust entering the vortes on the outside of the bend was less. This is similar to the feebler trail of 11.2.5.

@the_cholla @SabersKnight Glare size is a function of multiple variables. It VERY MUCH DOES MATTER in FLIR1. In fact it's key to understanding what is going on.

42 seconds in, the shape of the plane become more distinct in IR, as the glare on the right diminishes.

@the_cholla @SabersKnight "glare bigger than plane" isn't a function of tail angle.

In the example you cite, the glare remains relatively constant in size in the frame. At one (optical) zoom level that covers the plane, in another zoom level, it does not.

@the_cholla I'm disappointed that you think that.

It's a function of the in-camera intensity of the IR/light source, the camera exposure settings, and the glare spread function. Glare size can often remain relatively constant as distance changes. Here's an example I made five years ago.

You can practically track the weather (or at least upper air humidity) with the frequency of "chemtrail" posts.

Green areas are persistent contrail forming areas. When they cover wide regions you get criss-crossing contrails, horizon to horizon.

@2020defense I'm saying that the fact that the glare at the start of the FLIR1 (Tic-Tac) video is the same size and shape as the supposed "object" in the Gimbal video strongly suggests that the Gimbal video is showing glare that obscures the actual object.

And this isn't something you have to tortuously tweak out of the video. You can SEE the "saucer" shape in the original Tic-Tac (FLIR1) footage.

Fun UFO fact. The start of the Tic-Tac video shows IR glare, but it's in white-hot mode.

If you invert it to black-hot mode and adjust contrast and gamma, it starts to look suspiciously like the "object" in the Gimbal video.

Coincidence? Or Gimbal is a glare! http://pbs.twimg.com/media/FSA6b1tVIAA_O5g.jpg

@the_cholla @DavidGaryEsp I'm not sure what you are referring to. Did I say some other footage was too old?

This is basically ATFLIR tech (AF ATP version, not deployed as they chose the Sniper ATP) back in 2001.

We also have the FLIR1 2004 footage showing glare.

2015 obviously might differ. http://pbs.twimg.com/media/FSA2SI_VgAUedba.jpg

@the_cholla @DavidGaryEsp Sure it is. It's a wonderful illustration of how glare is dependent on camera settings. Here you've got a glare that, at one setting, is larger than the plane - something we've seen elsewhere.

They always say they're gonna do something bad and then they get in office and, and honestly, I thought Trump was gonna do something, though he was gonna release the files. But you know, they release these files are redacted. It's just a big blob of white out. Clearly, something's going on that we can't handle. I mean UFOs were in the Bible. Read Ezekiel, it talks about the wheel flying around. So I mean, they're, they've been around since we've been around and somebody needs to come up with some answers.

Even when something's supposed to be released coming up in a few weeks or months. What do you think is going to be in that?

Rep. Time Burchett – (R) TN

I don't believe it. I think Roswell was covered up. I think you know more people believe in UFOs than believe in Congress for good reason. Because of the jackleg stuff we do like that we talked about we're going to release it and then we never do or we release something that is so redacted that is just ridiculous. The Air Force had a release on Roswell, which was the big deal I think in '48 [1947] and the big cover up there and the guy that did it was a smart alec and he kind of smirked the whole time and nobody took it serious, they ought to take it serious. @4thAnon @phdamodei Well I don't think I'd describe myself as naive :) But essentially a hobbyist, yes. Again, I'm open to correction.

@4thAnon The basic facts are solid. CO2 is a greenhouse gas. Earth is getting hotter. Those are inarguable.

https://twitter.com/_/status/436197369382584321
@4thAnon You know it's very easy to make a video arguing a minority position. But the fact is there IS a solid consensus on AGW.

https://twitter.com/_/status/434369411705614336

Water tanks provided ballast to simulate passenger and cargo loads for flight testing. Not only could the tanks simulate various amounts of weight, they could also shift the weight fore and aft in flight through connecting pipes to test different center-of-gravity configurations. Boeing

Vapor Trails Bane To Pilots, Former News-Post Photog Says

Vapor trails similar to the one which a high-flying airplane left over this city early in February are a bane to pilots since they are a "dead give-away for fighter aircraft and anti-aircraft gunners," Tech. Sergt. Robert L. Yinger, former News - Post photographer, writes from Muroc, Calif., where he is stationed with the 336th Bomber Squadron.

Sergt. Yinger said he read with interest the account of the long vapor trails left by the unidentified aircraft which passed over this city and which were viewed by many residents. The trails have appeared as a narrow ribbon of dense white smoke unwinding from the plane until it disappeared below the horizon.

He said the vapor trails are termed "contrail," a contraction for condensation trail, and "are not so much a rarity here in the west, possibly due to the dryness of the atmosphere."

"It is quite common to see several large trails every day, produced by high altitude bombers. The maneuvering of the aircraft results frequently in interesting patterns. Contrails are a headache to combat pilots and are very difficult to control. Apparently they result only when the atmosphere is at a certain temperature and humidity."

Sergt. Yinger then makes this interesting observation: "Contrails frequently have a tendency to cause a complete overcast and cause rain. In Idaho I have seen contrails formed in a perfectly clear sky and four hours later a complete overcast resulted.

"But one of the oddest effects I have even seen and which has never been satisfactorily explained to me is that when an aircraft producing a vapor trail enters a cloud formation, the vapor trail stops and a perfectly clear tunnel is bored through to the other side. As soon as the ship emerges, the trail begins again. This may be caused by precipitation of the water vapor in the cloud. While most trails persist for several hours, some are only of short duration, giving the appearance of the wake of a ship in water.

"The complete elimination or control of contrails would be a great advancement for aerial warfare, since they are a dead give-away for fighter aircraft and anti-aircraft gunners.

"Notwithstanding the seriousness of contrails to high altitude flying, I saw one pilot over Los Angeles who was making good use of it. He was sky-writing with his P-39, to the amazement of onlookers."

CHAPTER I

THE ATMOSPHERE

1. Clouds have been correctly defined by Dickson as "portions of the atmosphere which, from natural causes, have become temporarily visible." They are aggregates of particles floating in the air, generally, but not necessarily, particles of water or ice. It will therefore be useful, before proceeding to analyse the various forms of cloud and their bearing on weather, to try and fix in our minds some ideas of the nature of this atmosphere and of the processes taking place in it which affect the formation of cloud.

Secret Session Roster Revealed

NEW YORK.—The mysterious cabal of supranational architects of the future who spent three days in secret session at St. Simon Island, Ga., thus far have been able to ignore the flurry of suspicion which belatedly marred their otherwise serene and impudent coup.

However, the jig is up and henceforth their privacy doubtless will be destroyed by notoriety and challenge. They tiptoed into session on February 16 and tiptoed away on the 18th.

Their island is close enough to Jekyll island to compel in the mind of the knowing observer a comparison with the silly but fateful conclave of a simular bunch who in 1908 formulated the federal reserve system on Jekyll while using only their first names. They suppressed their last names to keep their identity secret from the servants.

* * *

In the present instance, since the discovery and denunciation of the conference, efforts have been made to convince the public that the exploit was unofficial and not at all secret.

To be sure, it was not "covered" by the press, although Arthur Hays Sulzberger, publisher of the New York Times, and Ralph McGill, editor of the Atlanta Constitution, were participants, but there was nothing clandestine about it.

Wiley's self-important acknowledgement of himself and of Sulzberger and McGill as "leaders" well expresses in one word the effrontery of the whole affair.

* * *

McGill, formerly sport editor of the Constitution, has become a the platform with the Republican national committee.

Although this conclave was "unofficial," the revealed roster names Viscount Kilmuir, lord high chancellor of Great Britain; Tom Dewey; Senators Fulbright and Wiley, both of the foreign relations committee; Gabriel Hague, a truly mysterious stranger to Americans who nevertheless is formally described in the roster as Eisenhower's assistant in charge of economic affairs and by the Wall Street Journal as the expert who tells Ike "what to think"; C. O. Jackson, vice president of Time and "former special assistant to Eisenhower for international affairs and delegate to the ninth UN assembly"; and George Kennan, former ambassador to Russia.

Kennan is so mysterious that he does not even name his parents in Who's Who in America. Kennan is a member of the colony of double-heads at Princeton which includes the Professor Oppenheimer.

Paul Hoffman, now on the UN by Ike's appointment, was invited, but didn't show up.

The tax-free foundations did very well. Joseph E. Johnson, "honorary secretary" of the shebang, is president of the Carnegie endowment for international peace. (The bum who just shouted "remember Alger Hiss" will get a paste in the snoot if he will step outside.)

Dean Rusk, president of the Rockefeller foundation, and Henry Kissinger, described as "director of special studies" of the Rockefeller brothers fund, were a few names apart from David Rockefeller, vice chairman of the board of the Rockefellers Chase Manhattan bank. Morehead Patterson, deputy United States commissioner of disarmament of UN, is an executive of the banks 42d street store.

An American supreme court justice, apparently Frankfurter, was there, but did not register. There are unverified reports that about 20 savants refused to sign the hotel register.
