Mike Curie/NASA Launch Commentator: And as your hear, we have scrubbed the launch attempt for this morning because weather was just not going to cooperate.

The situation was continuing to degrade.

Thicker clouds continued to move into the area.

There was an increased chance of moisture and rather than continue through the countdown any further, the launch director and team have made the determination to scrub today's launch attempt.