Hey! I'm NASA Kennedy's Skyler Kleinschmidt, taking YOU Inside KSC!

The sharp minds behind Kennedy's transition and numerous technological advancements held center stage recently during the center's annual Innovation Expo.

Kennedy's work force and the general public were treated to details about the inner workings of KSC, and plans for bringing in new businesses.

Bob Behnken and Suni Williams, two of the four astronauts selected to work closely with Commercial Crew Program providers Boeing and SpaceX, offered a number of details about the program during a live NASA event.

My elevator pitch for NASA and the Commercial Crew Program is that we're really trying to develop new vehicles to give us an alternative to the Soyuz for transportation to the space station. It's really important to have that capability out of the United States and we're looking forward to the days.
when that happens.

And remember Spaceport Magazine digs deeper Inside KSC!