hey I'm NASA Kennedy's Steve siteswap

taking you inside KSC

Vice President Mike Pence visited Kennedy Space Center this week to see firsthand how the launch and processing site has evolved in partnership with private aerospace industry speaking to the Kennedy workforce inside the Vehicle Assembly Building thanks praised NASA's leadership in helping usher in a new generation of space exploration that will be open to more people than ever before Kennedy Space Center is proof that public and private sectors can achieve more by working together than they could ever achieve apart hence toward Kennedy's unique facilities including the operations and check-out building where a Ryan is being assembled for a flight test in 2019 he also saw the launch pads and processing calls that have been remade to host a new generation of spacecraft that will begin flying astronauts to the International Space Station next year and remember spaceport magazine digs deeper inside KSC
