Hi.

My name is Jose Lopez and I am an IT Support Specialist with the Enterprise Service Desk at the NASA Shared Services Center.

For me personally, it's important to work in an environment that doesn't focus too much on what makes us different but instead focuses on what makes us the same.

Here at the NSSC we focus on our common ground, the culture that we all create, and our responsibility is to the mission at hand.

At the NSSC all employees have the ability to excel in their roles and advance in higher positions.

I appreciate a working environment that a person's ability to be successful doesn't depend on what ethnicity that they are but instead their work ethic, their merit and the experience they bring to the team.
Throughout my time here at the NSSC I have enjoyed the benefit of the wonderful culture that we have here. I could tell from day one that this was a different environment than I had experienced with previous jobs. The leadership here puts forth very special care to make sure that every single employee feels like they are part of something big. In my job at the Enterprise Service Desk, we are faced with new challenges every single day and being part of a team that has so much experience and such a wide variety of talents really enables us to be able to provide solutions to meet the needs of the customer. To me Hispanic Heritage means stayed focus on where it is you want to go without forgetting where you came from.
