Catherine Johnson's story and most importantly her attitude of breaking down barriers of being a woman of color in the 1950s and 60s has really helped me overcome my own challenges of being a woman in the engineering field her and the other human computers of the 1950s and 60s broke so many glass ceilings so that now as an engineer it's much easier to break.