Undert. Per Wijkman

"The Swedes are determined not to imagine that the safe of bombs indicated military preparations against their country. At the same time the psychological effect of the "mysterious" bombing has been considerable and has opened unexpected wells of speculation.
Unofficial opinion appears to be pessimistic, believing that the co-bombs are merely unusual preliminary to political demands from a neighboring state. The optimists, however, are certain that there is some normal explanation, even though none has been given for the month of silent bombing that has made of Sweden one vast experimental target for an unknown bomber."
