

Seen again.—The resident of Newport who, as we reported a couple of weeks back, spotted a mysterious object in the western sky at Christmas, saw it again on Saturday, plainly visible out beyond the Kensey Valley. He telephoned us and we too saw something unusual just above the horizon. Our view was somewhat obscured by the glare of the Pennygillam lights, but whatever it was (and it could have been a star) varied in intensity with a quite rapid pulsing. Yet not far above it, what was plainly a star (more probably Venus) shone quite unblinkingly. We have also had a report of a sighting the same evening at Callington.
