

Sky's the limit for UFO disc

By MICHAEL CABLE

AN amazing UFO sighting inspired Hot Chocolate's new single, No Doubt About It.

The song's writers, Mike Burns and Steve Glen, spotted a low-flying object as they drove through London one night.

"It was surrounded by a halo of light, and they were so intrigued that they followed it around for the next 90 minutes," said Chocolate's lead singer, Erroll Brown.

"There was no obvious explanation for what they saw. It certainly wasn't a plane or anything like that.

"The whole incident made such an impression on Mike and Steve that they went away and wrote the song.

ERROLL: "Intrigued"

"I have never seen a UFO but I certainly don't knock the idea of visitors from space.

"Thousands of people have seen things that can't easily be explained away."

Erroll has solved one mystery himself — what happened to his father, whom he last saw when his mother brought him to England from Jamaica 23 years ago.

When his mother died Erroll went back last year in a bid to trace him.

He said: "I didn't have any luck. But after I returned, a friend wrote from Jamaica and told me my father had died several years ago.

"Although I hadn't seen him for so long, I still felt a sense of loss."
