

Strange lights in the sky

Brian
Stevenson

As Mrs. Sandy Neville Tsan was writing a letter on Monday night, she glanced out of the window of her home, Sycamores, Alverton, Penzance, and saw a strange light appear in the sky.

"It just got brighter and brighter until another one appeared, then another—there were four altogether in a vertical line. I was flabbergasted. I thought we were being invaded," said Mrs. Tsan.

The lights appeared at about 10 p.m. At 10.20 p.m. Mrs. Tsan rang a neighbour to see if she had also seen the lights, but she had not.

Mrs. Tsan returned to her window and at about 10.30 p.m. the lights started to fade one by one.

Five minutes later Mrs. Tsan went to make a cup of tea, thinking she had imagined it all, when the lights appeared again.

"They seemed to be going out to sea but this time they were in a horizontal line," she said.

On Tuesday Mrs. Tsan told her experience to a Penzance shop-keeper and was overheard by a schoolgirl who explained that her mother had also seen the lights at St. Just at exactly the same time.

6723

CORNISHMAN 14/5/81