Worzel goes Martian!

AMERICAN and Japanese farmers are flocking to buy a British-built, space-age scarecrow with the fearsome looks of an invading Martian. The eight-foot high, four-legged monster is the creation of designer Michael Williams, 40, from Saffron Waldon, Essex. It wails like a ghost and sends out blinding flashes of light visible two miles away. Michael says: "He's the nearest thing to a real man running and shrieking across a field."
