THE feats of the space shuttle Challenger don't impress Ruth Norman. On a 67-acre hillside in El Cajon, California, she is preparing a landing site for extraterrestrials who are coming 'any day now'. Her organisation, Unarius, claims that the main thing that operates a space ship is the mind. She has a model of her space city available, but says the actual building will be carried out by 'space brothers'. She should know. She says she has visited 32 planets.
