

Eerie noise in the night

ON Saturday, June 2, I was awakened at about 1 a.m. by a curious noise which seemed to fill the whole area of Lower Farnham Road, Aldershot.

This "oscillating" sound, which can only be said to be indescribable, had me so perplexed as to phone Aldershot

Police Station later in the morning, only to be told that they had no reports of unusual noises on the night shift.

I would normally let it go at that, but once again I have been disturbed from sleep twice in one night by exactly the same experience — on Wednesday, June 27, at about 1 a.m. and 3 a.m.

The oscillating stops very suddenly and one theory put forward to me is that it could be night repairs to railway tracks, but this seems unlikely.

As my wife has also heard this weird sound, I know I'm not "going off my nut," so if any other readers have had the same experience or could offer any explanation through your pages, I would be very grateful. — Name and address withheld.
