

Prince Charles' close encounter with UFO aliens

PRINCE CHARLES has returned from a cruise aboard the royal yacht, Britannia, on which he had a close encounter with a UFO spacecraft.

It was about 9:30 in the evening, and the ship was in the area of the equator. Suddenly, the engines started to cough and sputter, and lights aboard the ship began to flicker.

After a few seconds, the engines cut down completely, and the lights went off.

An eerie darkness surrounded the ship. All you could see were stars and their glow reflecting off the waves.

Charles was strolling on the deck and gazing at the sky when an object zoomed in from the heavens.

"It was shaped like a large cylinder with lights at both ends," reports one of the sailors who ran onto the deck to brief the Prince on conditions.

"I was so astonished by what I saw, I was frozen in place.

"In the middle of this strange-looking cylinder was a twinkling green light, and underneath was a pulsating reddish glow.

Staring

"It didn't look like anything I had ever seen before, and being a Navy man, I guess I've seen just about every kind of aircraft and ocean vessel ever constructed," the sailor continues.

"Charles stood there staring at it. Both of us were unable to move. Then I saw a beam of light shine down from the object to the Prince.

"It only stayed there about five seconds," says the sailor, "but it seems like it was shining on him for hours."

The witness says he wanted to run below and get some other men to come up and look at the weird sight with him, but he felt as if his feet were glued to the floor.

"Then, as suddenly as that space vehicle had come, it jetted away," says the sailor. "Charles seemed dazed as he staggered to a deck chair and sat down.

"I decided it would be best to leave him alone for a while. Besides, I was feeling a bit weak myself."

The sailor returned to the lower deck to see how the rest of the crew was doing.

"I checked my watch, and was stunned to learn less than five minutes had passed since the trouble first started with the engines," says the sailor.

The lights went on, and by the time the sailor returned to the rest of the crew, the engine was running. Everything was working as well as it had been before the encounter.

"When I was sure things were all right, I went back to check on Prince Charles," says the sailor.

"I was worried about him because he seemed so peaked after the encounter.

"When I got to the deck, I reported on conditions below. The Prince seemed to be his old self again, so I never said a thing to him about the spaceship.

"I've talked with several other crewmen who were on deck at the time of the eerie incident.

"It seems we all experienced the same feeling of not being able to move when the spacecraft was above us, the sense of time standing still, and lethargy when the UFO left.

"But I'm the only one who saw the special beam of light zap Charles. I don't know what it means."
