

We bet there are UFOs

BOOKIES are laying odds of 200-1 against the existence of UFOs.

Punters clamoured to lay bets after eight policemen in Kensington reported seeing a UFO moving across the night sky.

Now bookies William Hill have introduced what they call a standard UFO bet.

The bet depends on the Prime Minister, Foreign Secretary or Home Secretary announcing the existence of UFOs or intelligent life in Outer Space in the next year.

If it happens, the bookies already stand to lose a quarter of a million pounds.
