Strangers on the line ²³⁷⁴

NOW those of us who spot a cigar-shaped craft humming over the potting-shed or a silver-suited alien hopping in through the bedroom window will really have an understanding ear to talk to.

Electrical engineer Roy Fisher, from Stalybridge, will launch a new phone-in service on Monday — the North West UFO Line — which will provide a report on the latest UFO news (updated three times a week) and invite callers to pass on details of sightings to an expert from the British UFO Research Association.

A nice little earner, I anticipate, for British Telecom, who know a thing or two about mysterious messages floating through the ether themselves.
