Giant space monsters targeting our solar system, says scientist

By IRWIN FISHER

A leading scientist warns that a race of gigantic, space-faring monsters are so powerful that they could crack the earth like a nut!

Even more shocking, the so-called "Doomsday Dragons" appear to be heading for our solar system and could be here within 100 years.

"If that is the case, we're doomed," Dr. Guy Kruger told reporters in Brussels, Belgium. "These creatures appear to thrive on destruction.

"They leave nothing but devastation in their wake."

Dr. Kruger first theorized that a race of space monsters existed after the mysterious disappearance of 32 stars in 1972.

Since then he says that dozens of additional stars and planets have vanished — and he claims they were destroyed by space monsters.

"I originally thought comets were causing the destruction," said the expert. "But it soon became evident that the annihilation was irregular and wanton.

"That's when I concluded that intelligent beings of enormous size and power were behind it."

Although it can't be proved, Dr. Kruger believes the monsters may have visited our solar system before.

"Ancient Chinese art frequently depicts airborne dragons," he continued. "It is possible that these monsters came here thousands of years ago and were actually seen by men.

"If that is true, the question we must ask is why our planet was spared?"

Dr. Frans Genin, the Belgian astrophysicist, stopped just short of supporting Dr. Kruger's theory. He told newspapers that intelligent, space-faring beings might well exist.

But he seriously doubted that they would have the means or desire to destroy everything in their path for the fun of it.

"If such creatures are heading for our solar system, why do we have to assume they are coming to destroy us?" he said.

"I think it would be much more prudent to give them the benefit
