A FRIGHTENED secretary vanished one day after claiming she was beamed aboard a spacecraft.

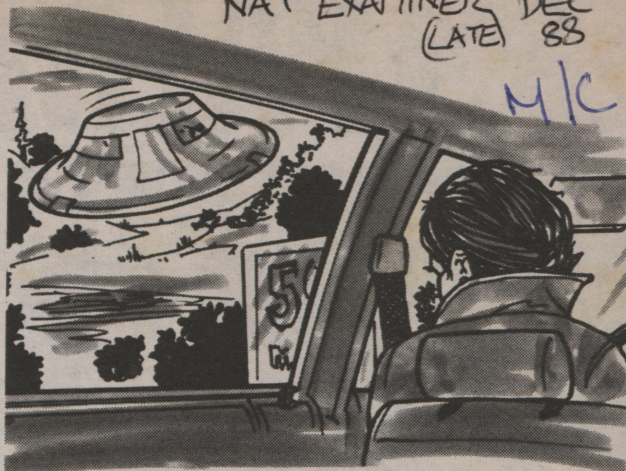

Jackie Smith, 39, arrived at her office in a panic, according to her boss, Andy Egan. She said she was driving alone in her car when it was whisked into the air and she passed out.

Blue dots

"She said the next thing she remembered was waking up in the car six hours later with strange blue dots on her ankles and neck," said Egan.

"And she claimed her car had been transported to a different place, several miles from the spot where she blacked out," he added.

But Smith's most startling revelation was that the space beings had materialized in her car without her opening the door, according to another colleague, Sally Warren, 19.

Smith, of Warrington, England, vanished the day after the mindboggling disclosure, according to police, who are baffled by her disappearance.

But top British UFOlogist Jenny Randles is not surprised that Smith has disappeared. Said Randles: "Jackie may be hiding, terrified they'll come back and get her."

She added: "The blue dots are a classic sign of alien presence.

"Jackie's case calls for further investigation.

"Let's just hope she surfaces soon."
