

Scientists have confirmed that an unidentified flying object landed recently in a park in the Russian city of Voronezh. They also identified the landing site and found traces of aliens who had made a short promenade about the park. A large shining ball or disc was seen hovering above the park. It landed, a hatch opened and two or three human-type creatures and a small robot came out. The landing site was identified by biolocation, said Genrikh Silanov, head of the Voronezh Geophysical Laboratory. Witnesses were not told of the experiment, but their descriptions of the aliens coincided with that of the scientists . . .
