

UFO probe crew flee 'noise ray'

A BBC television crew filming a mystery giant circle in a cornfield had their equipment "blasted" by an unidentified energy source.

The noise was so loud the sound engineer had to tear off his headphones.

But producer David Morgenstern said: "When we moved from the circle the powerful radio interference disappeared."

The blast was recorded near Avebury, Wilts, and will be heard today on Daytime Live.

Some 270 crop circles have been documented between May and September compared with 94 last year.

Theories range from UFOs' to a man-made hoax.
