

Army keep up search for 'saucer'

The mystery of the Saucer-Shaped Crater in a Wiltshire field may be solved today.

Army experts will return with fresh equipment to farmer Roy Blanchard's potato and barley field at Charlton, near Shaftesbury.

They will shore up a shaft they have dug and take new soundings from boreholes in the hope of locating a buried metal object they have detected.

But Mr. Blanchard still says: "Something landed there and took off—with a magnetic force that stripped the crops from part of the field.

"I never believed in flying saucers before, but I do now."
