Proof

"I am not telling people what I have seen personally, but what is actually on the film. To me, that is proof enough."

Last night, I sat entranced as the Oldfields ran the film in their old converted cottage high on the Lancashire moors.

Two seconds of the film showed wisps of silvery cloud in an azure blue sky. Then, in the right-hand side of the screen appeared the grey object you see in the photos.

Watching the film with me was photographer Bill Bradley. His professional report:

I saw the projection of Mrs. Oldfield's film showing a shape in the sky, the transformation of which I can only describe as fantastic.

Allowing for the fact it was taken on an amateur's camera, and through the window of the aircraft, it was still showing a great deal of detail and could not be confused as a shadow or any other such phenomena.

It had a definite shape, or shapes, all of which it assumed in a few seconds before disappearing completely.

In my long experience, I have never seen anything like this and am completely mystified.

One thing I am certain of: It is not a trick of light or shadow. The outlines are too sharp for that.
