| A densely concentrated on one ten year span, this series contains correspondence and business records related to Coleman and Horace Wells Sellers' interest in generating power from Niagara Falls, from the earliest phases to the year 1899. The formation of the project is reflected in letters of introduction to Alexander Graham Bell, explaining the project and asking for support, and a feasibility report by Coleman Sellers. Topics discussed include the procurement and creation of tunnels, explosives and other equipment. Often sliding from business to personal matters, the correspondence also covers family news between Coleman and his son Horace Wells Sellers. The business records reflect the formation of the Cataract Construction Co. and its relation to the Canal Company. |                  |                                |                       |

| Series 7, composed of 147 volumes, provides insight into many family members and includes from Charles Willson Peale's autobiography, diaries and letterbooks and Charles Coleman Sellers' research material on the family. Expense books and diaries show day-to-day life during the nineteenth century, as well as life during extraordinary times of war and tragedy.                                                                                                                               |                  |                    |                                                      |
| Peale, Charles Willson, 1741-1827. Autobiography This group consists of several editions of Charles Willson Peale's autobiography: a fragment of a preliminary draft begun by C. W. Peale in 1790, a more extensive version begun in 1826, a transcribed copy of the 1826 manuscript by great-grandson Horace Wells Sellers (1896?), and a typed copy of this transcribed version with notes and an index (dated 1904) also by Horace Wells Sellers. | Abstract: These diaries include daily entries relating to family and business, travels, sittings, museum work, etc. The diary of 1824 June 9-July 4 covers the period of Peale's last courtship. Three of the diaries are duplicated from originals elsewhere: No. 3 in the Henry E. Huntington Library, and Nos. 7 and 9 in Fordham University Library. Charles Willson Peale's diaries offer a remarkable window into the world of early America. Peale kept diaries from 1760 until his death. There are twenty-six discreet volumes. Peale's entries are often very detailed and content rich. Peale's experience spanned a remarkable range of events. He was very active in the American Revolution, which is chronicled here, and his continued work as an artist and innovator in early America is well-recorded here, as are the smaller anecdotes of life, like social outings and family affairs. There are also many sketches scattered throughout the volumes. The diaries not only provide insight into Peale's own life but often record events happening within Philadelphia and beyond. This was previously housed as B P31.2 |           |                |                                           |

| Abstract: This collection contains copies of outgoing business and personal correspondence on a wide variety of topics with a great many persons. Subjects include events in Philadelphia, his museum and its exhibits, Peale's hopes for the museum's acquisition by the city or state, the exhumation and exhibition of the mastodon, construction and promotion of the polygraph, agricultural concerns (including the operation of his farm Belfield), natural history, and false teeth. This was previously housed as B P31.3 The main body of the Peale Collection is described briefly in American Philosophical Society "Year Book" 1945:74-77. These eighteen volumes of letterbooks, alongside the twenty-six volumes of diaries, provide a nearly complete picture of Charles Willson Peale's life. The depth of their content also provides a wider view into life and culture in early American. The earliest volume, which covers the American Revolution, is scattered. The later volumes are much more complete and well-organized. The only caveat is that Rembrandt Peale mutilated some of the letters to sell autographs of Charles Willson Peale. The letterbook collection begins when Peale is in England studying under Benjamin West, but really picks up speed in 1775, when he returns to the colonies in the midst of the imperial crisis. Many of the earliest letters show Peale's fervent support of the Revolution and his activity within the city in suppressing dissent. The content of the later letters show Peale's changing interests and the range of his personal connections. For instance, letters detail his attempts to acquire specimens, such as birds, to paint. He often makes mention of paintings he is working on or hopes to undertake. Later, with the opening of the Philadelphia Museum, Peale's involvement as its founder and owner are documented. Other letters provide commentary on current events, some of which are addressed to prominent individuals. Not all letters are work or political. Many discuss his family and their affairs. There are few sketches in the letters, some of great detail. Indexing Terms Provenance: Purchased from Charles Coleman Sellers and accessioned, 1945 (85221-85234). | For an account of Peale's country place, see Jessie J. Poesch, "Mr. Peale's Farm Persevere," American Philosophical Society Proceedings 100(1956):545-556. This volume records various accounts from Charles Willson Peale's Belfield farm. It complements the account book (Volume 23) from Charles Willson Peale's farm near Germantown. This volume is mostly blank, but its first few pages contain financial information on the farm's expenses for 1816-1817. This was previously housed as B P31.6                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |             |                                  |

| This group includes six lectures, with rough drafts of two, on natural history, health, marriage and domestic happiness, the role of Peale's museum in educating the public, and a defense of Quaker pacifism. Some lectures have notes in an unknown hand. Three lectures are undated. This small collection contains a series of lectures that Peale delivered on a range of very important issues of the day. They include lectures on marriage, on natural history (four lectures), on the museum's educational purpose, on domestic happiness, and on health. All of these lectures hope to outline ways to improve society. There is also a fascinating lecture titled "a voice in behalf of the oppressed." Interestingly, part of this lecture defends Quaker pacifism, which runs counter to much of Peale's actions in the Revolutionary War in which he arrested pacifists. This change of heart that also comes through in his Autobiography when he apologizes for targeting Quakers during the war. | This book includes entries for recipes for curing food, mixing oil paints, making black ink, cleaning teeth, and making cement. There are also prescriptions for illnesses, notes on grafting, and notes on encaustic painting (with which his son Rembrandt was experimenting). This volume also contains notes by Rembrandt Peale. There is a 8-page transcription of coded entries on encaustic painting prepared by Carrie Scheflow, June 1986. This "memorandum book" is much more like commonplace books from the era. They contain a range of entries dealing with a variety of topics. Entries include information on medical cures, on making cements and different types of paints, and various other topics. The bulk are related to the mechanics of art, however. This was previously housed as B P31.8a |                 |                  |                                              |

| Abstract: During his 1801 journey to John Masten's farm to purchase the skeleton of a mastodon, Charles Willson Peale made seventeen finished and three unfinished sketches of the scenery along the Hudson River in the vicinity of West Point, Fort Clinton, and Fort Putnam. Most of the sketches were completed in watercolor during or shortly after the voyage, and include views of Slaughter Landing, Verplank's Point, Stony Point, Dunderberg or Thunder Hill, Haverstraw Bay, Anthony's Nose, and several of West Point. Background note: On June 18, 1801, Charles Willson Peale and Rembrandt Peale boarded the sloop Priscilla in New York City, bound up the Hudson River for Newburg. Their destination was the Orange County farm of John Masten where the bones of a mastodon were being exhumed -- the mastodon that the Peales purchased and installed as the most popular attraction in their Philadelphia Museum. Charles Willson Peale's Hudson River Sketchbook is a graphic record of the journey to unearth the mastodon skeleton that became the centerpiece of Peale's Philadelphia Museum. The sketchbook includes seventeen watercolor paintings (nine of which span facing pages) and three unfinished sketches in pencil and ink. The original album is inscribed from Charles Willson Peale to Titian Ramsay Peale, June 1822, and includes brief notes on the mastodon bones, apparently enumerating the bones that had been excavated. During the early twentieth century, the sketches were removed from their original binding and laid individually into paper frames before being rebound. The new binding is in blue full-leather with a polychrome morning glory design embossed on the cover, and prints of Charles Willson Peale's portrait of Titian Ramsay Peale (with facsimile signature) and an engraving of Rembrandt Peale's portrait of Charles Willson Peale were inserted at the front. The order of the images as listed below follows their order in the rebound volume. Links to the digital versions of the pages are included in the inventory. Provenance: An inscription inside the front cover reads "Sketches by CW Peale taken 1801, presented to TRP, June 1822." Acquired by the APS, 1957.

Related material: The APS also houses sketchbooks of James Peale and Titian Ramsay Peale, and the diaries of Charles Willson Peale that cover the period during which this trip was made.

Diary, June 19: "the wind became fair &... we... enjoyed a very agreeable run with flowing sheets, passing a variety of the elegant country seats which adorn New York Island -- with also the pleasing sight of a small fleet of sloops and some schooners gliding up the stream. When we had got opposite Mr.Depeysters having the heights where fort Lee & fort Washington formerly stood, in view, the banks of the Jersey shore being lofty and steep, strike the fancy with solemnity by its awful shades, the sun being now in the West, only glanced over its top in the vale below fort Lee."

Caption: "grass" Diary, June 22: "In the afternoon Captain Flemming conducted me up the mountain to Fort Putnam, a spot judiciously taken to cover the Works of west Point. The prospect was sublime, and awful grandeur seized the mind while viewing the steep declivity... From this we descended a short distance & traversing the side of Fort Putnam seperated from us by a deep valley covered with Trees, and on the right a View of Newburg thro' a Gap in the Mountains... A drawing I made from this spot concluded the labours of this day."

| 1747 is the earliest of Peale's letterbooks. It is separate from his other letterbooks because this one is a facsimile of an original, whereas the others held at the APS are all originals. This earlier volume reflects Peale's early life in Maryland and touches on various aspects of his life there, including discussions of his social life and of local politics. This was previously housed as B P31.9                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |                                  |                  |                                           |

| Abstract: This is an autobiographical work and mainly discusses his father's museum in Philadelphia and his museum in Baltimore (collecting specimens, gas lighting, selling his collections). There are also anecdotes on prominent people of the time. There are notes in an unknown hand (perhaps Mary Jane Peale). Background note: Rubens Peale managed his father Charles Willson Peale's museum in Philadelphia from 1810 to 1822. At that time, he bought his brother Rembrandt's controlling interest in the Peale Museum in Baltimore. He also opened branches in New York City and in Utica, New York. He eventually sold his collection to P.T. Barnum. In 1840, he settled on a farm in Pottsville, where he farmed and painted still-life. The Reubens Peale Memorandum book is more like an autobiography than a memo book. Peale recounts his life, paying particular attention to the history of his father's museums in Baltimore and Philadelphia. Reuben was particularly involved in the Baltimore museum. | The volume contains correspondence and miscellany relating to family matters and to the New York museum (1826-1849), including the exchange of specimens. There are also 23 letters to Benjamin Franklin Peale about the Baltimore museum and its relations to the Philadelphia and New York museums. These letters mention Thomas Sully, Thomas Birch, Charles Willson Peale, and other Philadelphia artists. Other subjects mentioned are the physiognotrace, galvanic experiments, gasometers, balloons, Indians, and natural history. Aside from the general correspondence, the back of the volume contains specific details on the New York Museum and its holdings. There is a list of its holdings, information on the finances of the institution, and details on preparing and preserving specimens. | The minutes are especially detailed for the period 1828-35. The minutes show a board that was interested in and cognizant of their need to create a profitable organization. The minutes show how the museum continued to be a business endeavor throughout the nineteenth century, even after Peale had left active management. | Little, John.3 Houses, Green Street Account book of John Little. From typed note attached to volume: "...military barracks were constructed in 1756 by the Provincial Commissioners on a large lot bought by them in the Northern Liberties, between Second and Third Streets, south of Green St. ... After the Revolution the barrick property was used as a tavern and later purchased by the Commissioners of Northern Liberties and converted into Commissioners' Hall. In 1784 the Supreme Executive Council determined to lay out lots for building purposes nd offer them for sale. This book indicated that John Little built three houses on the site. It will be noted that N. &amp; D. Sellers furnished the nails." | 1784                                                         |                    | Volume 138Request File |

Collection Overview

Description

German filmmaker. The collection charts the nature of visual perception in modern European culture at a time when pre-cinema objects evolved from instruments of natural magic to devices for entertainment. Most of the items date from the mid-18th century to the early 20th century.

Background

Already a collector in his early childhood, Werner Nekes turned his interest to film and cinema history when he reached his twenties. While he was a student of linguistic philology and psychology in Freiburg and Bonn in the mid-1960s he worked on his first film. Between 1969 and 1972 he taught at the Academy of Visual Arts in Hamburg.

MURIEL DRAPER (1886-1952)

Muriel Draper was born in Haverhill, Massachusetts in 1886. She was the youngest daughter of Thomas S. Sanders, one of the earliest investors in the American Telephone Company. She grew up at the family home, Birchbrow, and attended public schools in Haverhill. In 1905 and 1906 she and her parents lived in France and Italy, where she first met Norman Douglas.

In 1909 she met and married Paul Draper, a lieder singer who was then attending Harvard. Shortly after their marriage, the couple moved to Italy, where Paul studied music and Muriel made the acquaintance of Mabel Dodge Luhan. The Drapers moved to London in 1911, and their house in Lisson Grove soon became a gathering place for many of the musicians, artists, and authors of the day, including Artur Rubenstein, Pablo Casals, Duse, John Singer Sargent, Henry James, and Osbert Sitwell. Paul Draper Jr. was born in 1910, and Raimond Sanders Draper ("Smudge") in 1913.

Paul Draper's gambling led to financial difficulties, and he left London for a singing tour of Germany in July 1914. After the outbreak of the War, he made his way first to England and then back to the United States, where he attempted to renew his singing career. Muriel and the children remained in London, without the money to travel, until later in 1915, after Paul Draper had been committed for treatment of alcoholism. The couple separated, and divorced a few years later. Paul Draper died in 1925 at the age of 38.

Muriel moved to New York and became an interior decorator, working with the architect Paul Chalfin for several years. From 1920 to 1922 she was affiliated with Mary Garden as assistant manager of the Chicago Opera Company. In 1922 she opened her own decorating business, which she operated until 1927. During the 1920s, she also published articles and sketches in Harper's, Town and Country, Vogue, and other magazines. In 1929 her memoir of her life in Europe, Music at Midnight, appeared and was well received.

Throughout the 1920s and 1930s Draper was well-known as a hostess and an encourager of artists and writers. Among those she befriended and entertained were George Antheil, Max Ewing, Lincoln Kirstein, R. E. F. Larsson, Walter Lowenfels, and Mark Tobey. Through A. R. Orage she become seriously involved in the work of the New York Group of Gurdjieff disciples.

Following the success of Music at Midnight, Draper embarked on a five year career as a lecturer, speaking to women's organizations and civic groups throughout the United States. In addition to her life in London, her topics included "Has the Cause of Women an Effect?" "Live in Your Houses", "We All Wear Clothes," and other aspects of contemporary life and fashion.

Draper made her first visit to the Soviet Union in 1934-35 as a gift from her friend Arthur Courtauld. Her experiences there, described in a series of articles, confirmed her enthusiasm for the Communist experiment, and from this time she became more politically active. In 1937 she visited Spain during the Civil War. On her return she joined the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee and spoke about the Loyalist cause at many fund-raisers. She also used her 1938 NBC Radio program, "It's a Women's World," as a platform for discussion of many political and social issues.

In 1942 she helped organize the National Council of American-Soviet Friendship. She headed its women's division and was one of the delegates to the Women's International Democratic Federation meeting in 1945. She then participated in the founding of the Congress of American Women, the American branch of the W.I.D.F., becoming its president in 1949. She traveled again to the the Soviet Union at least twice between 1946 and 1949, and wrote and lectured in favor of Soviet "peace" proposals and of their domestic achievements.

The C.A.W. came under attack from the House Un-American Activities Committee in 1949 as a Communist-front organization, and the Department of Justice demanded that it be registered as a foreign agent because of its affiliation with the W.I.D.F. Draper and the other members of the executive committee voted to dissolve the organization in 1950.

Draper spent her last years living quietly in New York City, in increasing ill-health. She died on August 26th, 1952.

Description of the Papers

The Muriel Draper Papers document the personal life and artistic and political interests of Muriel Draper. The papers span the dates 1881-1977, but the bulk of the material dates from 1925-50.

The collection consists of four series. Series I, Correspondence, is alphabetically arranged and housed in Boxes 1-10. Boxes 11-14 hold Series II, Writings, arranged by type and alphabetically. Series III, Personal Papers, is contained in Boxes 15-17 and arranged alphabetically by type. Series IV, Subject Files, is located in Boxes 18-25 and has been divided into two subseries, People and Organizations and Causes. The material in each is alphabetically arranged. Box 26 contains Oversize material placed in series order.

Series I, Correspondence, located in Boxes 1-10, contains all of the personal correspondence of Muriel Draper and documents many aspects of her life, her friendships, and her political and artistic interests. There is relatively little correspondence dating from before 1914, and nearly all of that is family correspondence, with the exception of brief social notes such as the 1913 letter by Henry James. Muriel's 1905 letters to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Sanders, describe her impressions of travel through Italy, her enjoyment of life on Capri, and her acquaintance with Norman Douglas. There are also several letters from various Draper siblings containing family news and discussing the deaths of their parents in 1908 and 1911.

There is somewhat more information concerning the breakup of her marriage to Paul Draper, her return to America with their two sons, and her attempts to establish a new life in New York. The Draper marriage had been troubled almost from its inception in 1909, and involved Paul's heavy drinking and gambling which led to severe financial difficulties and probable infidelities on both sides. In the summer of 1914 Paul Draper embarked on a singing tour of Germany which he hoped would recoup his gambling losses, and for the next three years the couple was involved in the painful process of ending their marriage. This process is rather fully documented in the correspondence of Muriel and Paul themselves, of members of the Draper and Sanders families, and of several others.

Series II, Writings, is divided into four sections. The first section, Articles, contains mostly typescripts and printed versions of short pieces by Draper on various subjects, including the arts, interior decoration and her eminent friends. There are many articles concerning her experiences in the Soviet Union, including "Five Days in Moscow." "My Foreign Loan Breakfast," and "Prelude to Departure" satirize American distrust of Communism.

The second section, Books, is housed in Boxes 12-14. Folders 398-442 hold manuscript and typescript of America Deserta, a critique of American society and culture, particularly "the dullness, shabbiness and monotony of its thought and ideas." A section of the book was published in the January-March 1933 issue of Hound and Horn, and it was announced for publication by Harper & Brothers as Divided We Stand.

Material relating to Draper's published memoir, Music at Midnight, includes manuscript and typescript versions of several chapters, an incomplete corrected typescript, and three folders of fan mail (Box 14, folders 456-58). There is also a short proposal for a film of the book, to star Bette Davis and Franchot Tone.

Broadcast scripts, the next section, is located in Box 14, folders 460-476 and contains material written by Draper for her 1937-38 NBC Radio spot, "It's a Woman's World," including interviews with Lotte Lehman and Mother Bloor. Folder 474 holds several fan letters as well as memoranda sent to Draper by the network.

The fourth section, Short Stories, contains manuscripts and typescripts of seven short stories by Draper, including her first, "Christmas Day--1914."

Series III, Personal Papers, fills Boxes 15-17 and contains a variety of materials, including artwork, greeting cards, newspaper clippings, photographs, and miscellaneous papers. Material on the Draper family includes newspaper clippings, obituaries, Paul Draper Jr's application to Groton, and the death certificate for Raimond Draper ("Smudge"), who was killed while flying in the R.A.F. in 1943. Folder 498 contains notes and doggerel poems by Paul Draper, including two which satirize Muriel's relationships with men.

There is a considerable amount of information on two of Draper's professional pursuits, interior decorating and lecturing. Material on interior decoration is located in Boxes 15-16, folders 511-527. There are rough and completed sketches of room treatments, floor plans, photographs of various decorating jobs, and two folders of descriptions of decorating by Draper herself. Material on her lecture tours is found in Box 16, folders 528-32 and consists of contracts, itineraries, publicity material, and drafts and note for three lectures, all on fashion and style.

Box 16, folder 535 holds the record of one of Draper's attempts to earn money: her investment in the North Boca Raton Company, a Florida real estate development firm which failed in the collapse of 1927. Other information on Draper's finances can be found in Box 15, folder 508.

Photographs of persons are located in Box 16, folders 539-55 and include portraits of Muriel and Paul Draper, Norman Douglas, Lincoln Kirstein, Mark Tobey, and Carl Van Vechten, some of which were taken by Van Vechten. Box 17, folders 556-63 contains other photographs, such as shots of houses, chairs, and window displays.

Series IV, Subject Files, is housed in Boxes 18-25 and has been divided into two sections: People and Organizations and Causes. The first section, People, consists of material gathered by Draper about a variety of persons, many of whom were her friends and correspondents. The largest amount of material, however, concerns Georges Gurdjieff and the Institute for the Harmonious Development of Man. In addition to a complete typescript of Beelzebub's Tales and of "The First Chapter of the Third Series", a lecture given by Gurdjieff to the New York Group founded by A. R. Orage, there are seventeen folders of papers documenting Draper's involvement with the Institute through the Orage group. Box 20, folder 627 contains mainly appeals for money from the Institute, along with brief notes giving reassuring information about Gurdjieff's good health. Folders 628-29 hold neatly typed study notes made from lectures, apparently in the New York Group, while the five folders following house less organized notes and exercises, including a self-analysis by Draper. Material on A. R. Orage details his work with the Group and his changing attitudes towards Gurdjieff, who criticized his teaching and ordered him out of the group during his American trip in 1930.

There are also significant amounts of information on her friends Lincoln Kirstein, Ellery Larsson, Walter Lowenfels, and Mark Tobey. The Kirstein files consist of copies of articles by and about him and the American Ballet Theatre, theater programs, a typescript carbon of a collection of Kirstein's poetry, "Post-cards," and two folders of letters to Kirstein, one of which contains Paul Draper Jr.'s memories of his mother.

The papers relating to Ellery Larsson include manuscripts and typescripts of his poetry, and a typescript of the text of his 1939 collection Weep and Prepare. Folders 659-61 hold pencil and crayon drawings, mostly of distorted shapes and patterns, done by Larsson over a thirty year period.

Artwork dominates the papers concerning Mark Tobey. Box 22, folders 710-14 hold drawings done for Draper by Tobey. Many of these are cartoons of Draper herself, often captioned; others are caricatures of friends. The collection also contains an autobiographical sketch of Tobey; papers concerning the possible sale of paintings; and a copy of Tobey's obituary.

Like many of Draper's friends, Walter Lowenfels sent her copies of poems recently written or published. In addition to five folders of typed poems, there is also corrected page proof of "An Elegy for D. H. Lawrence" and a copy of an unnamed short story.

Other authors are also represented in Subject Files. For example, the series contains galleys of E. E. Cummings's Him; poems by Cary Ross, H. Phelps Putnam, Ruth Lambert Jones, John Brooks Wheelwright, and Humbert Wolfe. In two cases, friends sent her galleys of works in which she appears. There are galleys of "Muriel" (Chapter 10 of European Experiences) by Mabel Dodge Luhan and of Edmund Wilson's Travels in Two Democracies.

Planning Your Research Visit

Please Note: The Beinecke Rare Book & Manuscript Library will close for a major renovation in May 2015, reopening in September 2016. We will maintain a reading room in Sterling Memorial Library during this time, but access to various collections will be limited as early as April 2014 while we prepare for closure. Please consult the Closed Collections Schedule while planning your visit to confirm that desired materials will be available.

The Beinecke Library is open to all Yale University students and faculty, and visiting researchers whose work requires use of its special collections. Please take a moment to pre-register online. Materials may be requested using request links in ORBIS, the Yale Finding Aid Database, as well as the Beinecke Digital Collections tool. We ask that you fill out one form per box of archival material.

Please consult the Reading Room Policies prior to visiting the library. All library materials must be handled with great care to ensure their safety and preservation.

Research areas and public exhibition spaces are accessible to the handicapped via elevator. Researchers requiring special accommodations are encouraged to email beinecke.access@yale.edu prior to their visit. Metered parking for the handicapped is available on High St. between Wall St. and Grove St.

Researchers are encouraged to bring their own laptop computers or they may borrow a laptop from the Public Services Desk. The library's laptops are equipped with wireless technology linking Yale affiliates to the university's computer network. The Yale Guest network is available for those who are not affiliated with Yale.

Please be prepared to secure most of your belongings in a Beinecke locker, as limited amounts of material are permitted in the reading room.

Researchers are encouraged to acquaint themselves with the library's holdings and to gather preliminary information needed to identify and locate materials relevant to their work by reading an overview of the curatorial areas of the collection and available library catalogs and databases. Yale University Library's online catalog, Orbis, and databases devoted to new acquisitions and manuscripts and archival materials provide descriptions of the library's books and archives. Curators and public services librarians are available for reference consultations by request.

Many Beinecke Library collection materials may be digitally photographed by readers in the reading room for study purposes with a small handheld camera, cell phone or iPad. Large cameras and tripods are not allowed. Researchers will need to complete and sign the "Policy on Digital Photography by Readers in the Reading Room" as a part of the registration process. It is also possible to order reproductions.

Requesting Materials

Beinecke is a non-circulating, closed stack library. Paging is done by library staff during business hours. All requests for Beinecke materials must be placed through our online requesting system, Aeon. Fill out the pre-registration form and log in. Once your account has been created, you can use request links in ORBIS, the Yale Finding Aid Database, as well as the Beinecke Digital Collections tool. We ask that you fill out one form per box of archival material.

Material that is stored within the main Beinecke building will be paged when you arrive. It typically takes twenty minutes to retrieve materials from the stacks. Some Beinecke material is stored off-site and must be requested two days in advance. Collections housed off-site will be identified in Orbis with "LSF-BEINECKE."

Permission is required for access to some materials. Please consult the Closed Collections Schedule for a list of archives closed for processing.

Born-digital materials in manuscript collections must be requested at least two days in advance. Permission to view these digital files will be granted to researchers upon application. Please review our access policies for specific information about born-digital collection materials.

Yale Affiliates

Visitors

All Yale University students and faculty are welcome to study at the Beinecke. If you have not visited the Beinecke before, please take a moment to pre-register using your Net ID via Aeon. When you arrive, be sure to bring your Yale ID to complete the registration process.

Charles Henry Sykes Cartoon Collection, Accession #M 169, Special Collections and Archives, James Branch Cabell Library, Virginia

Commonwealth University

Provenance

The collection was donated to the Department by Mr. John M. Sykes on 20 December 1980.

BIOGRAPHICAL/HISTORICAL INFORMATION

Charles Henry "Bill" Sykes (1882 1942) graduated from Drexel Institute in 1904. For a short time he did free lance art work and then was employed by the Philadelphia North American, the Williamsport News, and the Nashville Banner. In 1911, he returned to Philadelphia to work for the Philadelphia Public Ledger. In 1914, he became the first and only editorial cartoonist employed by the Evening Public Ledger, which ceased publication in 1942. Until he died later in that year, Sykes, who smoked four packages of cigarettes a day, received a commission to draw a series of anti smoking advertisements. From 1922 to 1928, he was the regular editorial cartoonist for Life, producing full-page weekly editorial cartoons. In addition, during that time, Skyes inherited the weekly and annual cartoon roundup of news subjects upon the death of F. T. Richards. His most famous cartoon "Madonna and Child A. D. 1940" depicts the ugliness of war; the image shows a mother and child wearing gas masks.

Skyes created his early cartoons using the unusual patterns of coquille board for the shading effect. His later works were created with a crayon and wash technique. He was well known for his amiable style of cartooning. His cartoons were usually funny, filled with delightfully distorted figures while offering his unique perspective on the current news events.

SCOPE AND CONTENT

The collection consists of 300 original cartoons, 3 unfinished sketches, an U.S. war Bond poster, and a U.S. Victory poster by Sykes that were acquired 1980-82. The cartoons appeared in the Philadelphia Evening Ledger and illustrate the events of 1940. Many of them represent the American reaction to the aggressions of the Axis powers before the U.S. entry into World War II. Other issues represented include: John L. Lewis, Philadelphia and Pennsylvania politics, Turner-Kilroy Bill, coal miner strikes, weather and baseball.

ARRANGEMENT

The cartoons are arranged in folders in the oversize drawer 36.

Special Collections & Archives at James Branch Cabell Library

Special Collections and Archives at James Branch Cabell Library is home to rare and valuable papers and records tied to 20th and 21st century Richmond and central Virginia. Our collection focuses on traditionally under-documented groups including the African-American, gay and lesbian and women's activist communities; the visual, literary and performing arts; architecture and urban planning; and civic engagement and social activism.

Special collections of books and other published materials include book art; comic arts; manuscripts; rare books and periodicals; late 19th and early 20th century architecture and decorative arts; and Richmond history, imprints, literature and serial publications from the late 20th century to the present. The historical records of VCU and its Monroe Park Campus predecessor, the Richmond Professional Institute, are found here as well.

Materials from the collections do not circulate but are available for use in our Reading Room, on the fourth floor of Cabell Library. The staff is available to answer questions related to collections and the use of primary source materials.

Biographical / Historical Note

Walter Lowry Small, Jr. was born on October 31, 1916 in Elizabeth City, North Carolina to Judge Walter L. Small, Sr. and his wife Elizabeth Peele White (nee). Small, Jr. married Jane Van Rensselaer Harris, daughter of Rear Admiral Robert W. Cary, USN (Ret.), in 1940. They had two children, Elizabeth Craven Small and Jane Christian Small. Small entered the United States Naval Academy in 1934 and graduated in 1938 as a commissioned ensign. During World War II, Small served on the submarine USS FLYING FISH (SS-229) as Navigator and Executive Officer. Small also commanded many other naval vessels, acted as Personal Aid to Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz (1947), commanded the Middle East Force (1967-1968) and several submarine fleets, including the Submarine Force U.S. Pacific Fleet (1968-1970). Small retired from the Navy, June 1, 1973, with the rank of Rear Admiral.

Description

Included in the papers is correspondence primarily of an unofficial nature. Of particular interest is a letter concerning the opening of the Port of Bandar Abbas by the Shah of Iran (1967, n.d.) and a letter from film producer Elmo Williams regarding shooting of the film TORA! TORA! TORA! (1969) in which he thanks Small for his consultation work. Also included are numerous written congratulations to Small on his promotion to Rear Admiral, correspondence describing a Naval War Gaming course and a description of Small by his niece for one of her class assignments. Also of interest is correspondence between Small and a Texas teacher of special education students. Discussion consists of the class' request for an autographed photograph of Small, Small's response to the teacher's question of whether Admiral Nimitz was in agreement with President Roosevelt in regard to the "War at Sea" campaign, and also discussion of President Truman. In addition, correspondence focuses on the Pacific Submarine Force led by Small, as well as a letter from Small to the Sarasota Herald-Tribune submitting an obituary of Virginia Scott Polk whom he worked with during his naval career and greatly admired.

Other material in the collection includes official war patrol reports (September 9, 1944-January 25, 1945) of the submarine USS ICEFISH (SS-367) documenting its activity in the South and East China Seas. Reports entries include maneuvers around a Japanese patrol vessel and a sampan (October 17, 1944, p. 9), and details of an attack with the submarine USS DRUM (SS-228) on a Japanese convoy and aircraft (October 23-26, 1944, pp. 11-16). These reports also include summaries of radar contacts, Japanese aircraft and ship contacts, attack data, damage and defects, radio and radar functions and distance traveled. A large hand-drawn map of the 5th War Patrol of the USS ICEFISH is also included.

Later records (1967-1968) concerning the Middle East Region while Small was Commander of the Middle East Forces include rosters of United States and United Kingdom personnel and Bahrain civilians, as well as a history of the Middle East Force Command. Also present are several speeches given by Small at the commissioning and decommissioning of submarines and a variety of other official functions (1968-1970). Other materials include detailed information on submarines, Polaris and Poseidon missiles and biographical materials on Small. Numerous photographs are also present and pertain to Small's various commands, inspections, and official functions while in command. Two scrapbooks contain photographs and clippings documenting Small's command of the Submarine Fleet in the Pacific Ocean (1969-1970). See container list for fruther details.

Chester Commodore Papers, 1914-2004

Dates: 1914-2004

Size: 36 linear feet (70 archival boxes)

Repository: Chicago Public Library, Carter G. Woodson Regional Library, Vivian G. Harsh Research Collection of Afro-American History and Literature, 9525 S. Halsted St., Chicago, IL 60628

Collection 2007/01

Number:

Provenance: Nearly all the materials in this collection were created or collected by Chester Commodore as he carried out his work and family life. A few items were added by Lorin Nails-Smoote; after Commodore's death (i.e., obituary information, materials relating to a Commodore biography). Also added were few original cartoons accessioned in other archival collections held at the Chicago Public Library. During processing of this collection, copies of published Commodore cartoons whose originals are no longer available (primarily 1948-1968) were produced from digital images and added to the papers at the request of the donor.

Access: No restrictions

Biographical Note

Chester Commodore was one of the most influential and acclaimed African-American cartoonists of the twentieth century. During the nearly 50 years his cartoons appeared in the Chicago Defender, Commodore used his art to advocate for racial justice, human rights, and equality of opportunity. From the 1954 appearance of his world-famous first editorial cartoon (on the Supreme Court's Brown v. Board of Education, featuring a hammer breaking chains); his work reached an international audience. More than that, his widely-seen cartoons helped to bridge the gulf between the two "parallel universes" representing the separate worlds of Blacks and Whites in the twentieth century. Through his realistic and non-stereotyped depiction of human subjects, Commodore helped to end the "eight-ball" caricature that white cartoonists had used to depict African-Americans.

Chester Commodore was born in Racine, Wisconsin, on August 22, 1914, to Pascal and Elizabeth (Bessie Fite) Commodore, along with five siblings—Aletha (a half-sister), Blanche, Josephine, Louis, and Ruth. His parents and sisters moved to Chicago in 1923, but Chester and his older brother, Louis stayed with his maternal grandmother, Della Fite, in her Racine boarding house. His earliest memories centered on his love of drawing, and he was encouraged by John Prophet, who boarded at the house. In Grandmother Fite's music room Commodore mingled with notable African-American musicians, artists, and other cultured travelers who were denied accommodation in white-owned establishments in Chicago and Milwaukee. Always the boy observed and watched the living panorama he would later reproduce so effectively.

In 1927 Commodore joined his family in Chicago. He enrolled in Tilden Technical High School with the intention of studying drawing but instead found most art classes already filled. He needed no permission to practice drawing whenever he could, but he found few buyers for his work. Frustrated, he took his portfolio to Robert Abbott, publisher of the Chicago Defender—but Abbott sternly told him to finish his schooling first. Commodore didn't finish high school. He sought work, and wound up in jobs as a car washer, chauffeur and truck driver, in Chicago and in Minneapolis. Returning to Chicago in 1940, Commodore was hired the next year by the famed Pullman Company. He began as a Pullman railroad car cleaner, but was soon promoted to maintenance mechanic for cars on the New York Central line.

Commodore was still working at Pullman when he got a call from Charles Browning, a Defender editor, offering Commodore a job for advertising layout work. The paper desperately needed staff, as it sought alternative production methods during the 1948 printers strike. Browning had been a schoolmate of Commodore's sister Ruth, and knew about his artistic abilities. He was hired on August 1, 1948, and rapidly advanced to photo layouts, story illustrations, and then to cartoons. On October 30, the Defender published the first humor or “gag” cartoon by proud new employee Chester Commodore.

In 1948 the Defender challenged its readership to provide a title for a “nameless” comic strip drawn by Commodore. After a five month contest, Commodore's inaugural strip was named “The Sparks.” Commodore took over cartoonist Jay Jackson's strip “Bungleton Green” in the early 1950s. He also contributed substantial stints drawing the cartoon features “The Ravings of Professor Doodle” and “So What?” while simultaneously providing art copy for the advertising department.

Jay Jackson died weeks before the landmark decision in Brown v. Board of Education (1954). Commodore was thrust into the position of Defender editorial cartoonist. His opening effort became the universal iconic depiction of the U.S. Supreme Court's hammer smashing the chains of separate and unequal education. Commodore worked prodigiously as editorial cartoonist for the next three decades, with just a brief hiatus away from the Defender in the 1960s. During one period he was responsible for producing no less than seven cartoons or strips at the same time. Many of the editorial cartoons he created during this period impacted public opinion with their sharp depictions of lynching, denial of suffrage, and other injustices to African-Americans. Other publications began to reprint Commodore's cartoons on their op-ed pages, and he joined the wider community of political cartoonists.

After the 1968 assassination of Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr. Commodore turned a more penetrating eye and a wider scope on life in the African-American community. His canvas expanded to broader social problems created by injustice—poverty, false democracy, denial of government services. Commodore especially decried Black-on-Black crime as feeding upon the injustices meted out to the community. His clear eye could thus portray the complex effects of policy wheel operations upon community life. He focused upon those often ignored by other media: during a bull market period in the 1950s, for example, he chose to depict the hardships endured by striking steel workers who had not enjoyed stock market benefits. It was not at all easy for Commodore. He suffered greatly from assignments that required him to illustrate sensationally heinous crimes.

In 1974 the Defender launched its weekly arts supplement, “Accent.” Each “Accent” cover featured a full-page Chester Commodore caricature of a current local or national celebrity—an artist, producer, writer, or other famed professional. The series continued for over five years. Many of Commodore's famous subjects requested and received their original Commodore caricature drawing as a memento.

Commodore's work brought him numerous awards: the National Newspaper Publishers Association's Best Cartoon Award in 1972 and in six years that followed; Cartoonist Profiles ' Best Editorial Cartoon; and numerous awards from the Chicago Newspaper Guild. Meanwhile he received the National Conference of Christians and Jews' Brotherhood award in 1976; the Lu Palmer Foundation award (1980); and a Golden Medallion Award from the Pulitzer Prize Committee. But despite twelve Pulitzer nominations, Chester Commodore was never awarded a Pulitzer Prize for his work. Commodore cartoons appeared in several exhibits, including the Chicago Public Library (1971), the Turbeville cartoon exhibit (1974); the Chicago Police Department (1977); the Colorado Pioneers Museum, and the Chicago City Bank & Trust (1978 and 1981).

It was Chester Commodore's great strength that he could integrate his enormous artistic output with his central role in a large family to create a seamlessly full life. He wholeheartedly joined the Defender staff "family" and remained close to co-workers for the rest of his life. He also participated in the larger journalistic community as one of its few African-American representatives. Chester Commodore married three times, first in the 1930s to Marie (Ruby) Bazel. The two sons born to this union, Chesterfield Jr. ("Butch") and Phillip Joseph ("Flip"), remained close to him during their adult lives. At the Defender Commodore met his third wife, Mattye Marcia Buchanan Hutchins Nails. They were married in 1955 and remained extremely devoted until her death in 1990. He called Marcia his inspiration and became a dedicated stepfather to her daughter Lorin as well as to her son William Hutchins. Commodore's papers show his close ties to both the Commodore and Buchanan extended families. He shared his humor, guidance, artistic gifts, and material wealth with his stepchildren, grandchildren, nieces and nephews. His stepdaughter recalled seeing him create the next day's cartoons at his dining room table—able to focus efficiently yet fully participate in current family endeavors.

Always creative, Commodore in retirement had more time to indulge his hobby of model train building by producing detailed replicas of early steam trains from found objects such as coffee cans. He also built scale replicas of historic buildings and expertly carved wood into exquisite miniatures. Chasing his dream of flying, he attended Chicago's Coffey School in the 1930s and piloted a number of aircraft until 1957 when his wife discovered he did not fly with a parachute. The physically fit Commodore also learned speed skating while a young man.

Chester Commodore consistently looked out for "the little guy" (his own words) who had no other spokesperson. Accordingly, he often donated his work to special causes, such as the Neediest Children's Christmas Fund (1970s), and he visited local grammar schools, high schools and colleges to speak with the students and offer guidance. Entries in the Girl Scouts' annual city art contest received Commodore's expert evaluation.

By 1980 the U.S. political landscape turned markedly more conservative, and Commodore's efforts to improve the world through his art had engendered symptoms of burnout. He decided to retire from the Defender and moved with Marcia to Colorado Springs, Colorado. While he quickly made a place for himself in this new community he was eventually enticed back to working for the Defender in 1992. From Colorado Springs he sent the Defender at least one cartoon per week for the next 12 years. Chester Commodore continued creating these cartoons until a few days before his death on April 10, 2004.

More information about Chester Commodore and the Chicago Defender during the Commodore years can be found in the following archival collections held at the Vivian G. Harsh Research Collection of Afro-

Scope and Content Note

The Chester Commodore Papers include his personal correspondence, photographs, original cartoon drawings, cartoon photocopies, newsclippings of Commodore cartoons, other clippings, and varied memorabilia. These materials (1914-2004) pertain to Commodore's nearly fifty years at the Chicago Defender newspaper, most of that time having been spent as editorial cartoonist. They also reflect his relationship to his colleagues at the Defender, to members of other local and national media, and to his extended family.

The papers were in Commodore's possession at the time of his death, and became the property of Lorin Nails-Smoot; as his literary executor. They were received by the Harsh Research Collection in a state of little intrinsic order. The papers have been arranged into seven series: Correspondence, Photographs, Original Cartoons, Cartoon Copies, Cartoon Newsclippings, Memorabilia, and Biographical material. A few items dating from Commodore's death or later include materials for his funeral, historical U.S. census data, and other records providing historical context that were obtained during the preparation of an exhibit in 2007.

Correspondence (1939-2004) falls into personal, business and social greeting categories, intermingled. Chester Commodore's personal correspondence includes many letters from national and local media notables, politicians, and other cartoonists, or correspondence inviting him to participate in an exhibit, TV program, or other event. Accompanying publicity material or newsclippings are included with attached correspondence. Interfiled with these types of professional correspondence are letters from family members and friends, some of whom were Commodore's colleagues, especially in materials dating from 1939 to 1968. Few copies of correspondence sent by Commodore are included; it appears that he rarely made copies of his letters. The correspondence series is arranged chronologically, within general categories of correspondence and greeting cards. Greeting cards saved by his wife Marcia, with little or no written message, have been foldered separately in chronological order. Included here are a few cards hand made by Chester Commodore, mostly for Marcia.

The Correspondence series includes communications from Commodore's colleagues at the Defender, such as Charles Browning, Dr. Metz Lochard, Ethel Payne, Lu Palmer, and letters from other cartoonists, including John Fischetti and Dick Locher. Both President Richard Nixon and J. Edgar Hoover thanked him for cartoons in which they were featured. Letters and notes are found from other notables from the African-American community including Harold Washington, Dempsey Travis, A.A. ("Sammy") Rayner, and Cecil Partee.

Photographs (1915-1994) are arranged chronologically, and are mainly of family members but also include artwork and community events. Current family members have identified as many of the photographs as possible, but some remain unidentified.

Original Cartoons (1948 to 2004) have been subdivided into Chicago Defender “Accent” caricatures and Chicago Defender cartoons, mostly editorial. The “Accent” caricatures (1974-1979) were finished in ink [with black/white wash]. Many of the originals were presented as gifts to their famous subjects and therefore are not part of the collection. Unfortunately Commodore destroyed much of his pre-1969 original cartoon work before he moved to Colorado in 1981. The bulk of the original editorial cartoons date from 1970 to 1981 and from 1991 to 2004. They are arranged chronologically by year, then alphabetically by caption.

The Cartoon Photocopies series consists of copies of original cartoons, made by Commodore. Harsh Collection staff added photocopies made from the Proquest serials database reproducing Commodore cartoons that appeared in the Defender for the years 1948-1968, arranged chronologically. All other cartoon photocopies (1950s-2000s) are stored in chronological order.

News clippings (1950s -2004) include thousands of Commodore’s published cartoons clipped by his wife, Marcia, from both the Chicago Defender and also from approximately thirty other publications. They are stored by publication ( Chicago Defender or other press), arranged chronologically.

Memorabilia (1920-2004) include awards (and event programs) awarded to Chester Commodore, and exhibit programs in which his work was shown. There are broadsides and other small printed materials that contain Commodore cartoons. Scrapbooks and other materials used to prepare his Pulitzer nominations are also included. There is a small amount of miscellaneous original artwork, usually unidentified. The researcher can also find two manuscripts: “What Comes First,” a children’s story by Jerry Drain illustrated by Commodore; and “The Other Side of the Coin,” 14 chapters consisting mostly of Commodore’s own work, prepared in the 1990s but never published.

A significant amount of memorabilia consist of serial publications dating from the 1960s to 2002, found with Commodore’s other papers and occasionally containing articles about him and/or cartoons created by him. Several memorabilia folders contain varied materials relating to Commodore’s hobbies, such as model railroading, aviation, and travel. Memorabilia are organized by format and subject, then chronologically. A separate box contains three-dimensional objects found with his papers.

Biographical material gleaned during preparation of an exhibit of Commodore’s work at the Harsh Research Collection (2008) was placed in a separate series in order to aid researchers. These materials include photocopies of published articles, news items, and PR materials relating to Commodore and his work. They also include a few items of correspondence, some vital records, and short biographical sketches prepared by Commodore for various Pulitzer Prize entries he submitted. Original copies of these materials are stored in their respective series.

Biographical / Historical Note

Frank Alton Armstrong, Jr., (1902-1969), was born in Hamilton, Martin County, NC. He attended public school in Hobgood, NC, and then received a law degree (1923) and a bachelor of science degree (1925) from Wake Forest University. He spent three years playing minor league baseball before he entered the Army Air Corps as a flying cadet (1928). In 1936 as a second lieutenant, he won the Distinguished Flying Cross for landing a heavily damaged bomber in Panama after ordering the crew to bail out. Armstrong witnessed the German blitz of England as a U.S. military observer in 1941. He returned to England in 1942 as commander of the VIIIth Bomber Command, and was soon promoted to colonel. In August 1942, he led the first U. S. Army Air Force daylight raid over Axis-held territory. This raid occurred over Rouen-Cotteville, France, and for his efforts, Armstrong received the Silver Star and an oak leaf cluster for the Distinguished Flying Cross. He also became the first U.S. officer to receive the British Flying Cross. As a brigadier general, Armstrong led the first American daylight bombing mission of Germany proper over Wilhelmshaven in 1943. Armstrong's experiences as a B-17 flyer during these missions formed the basis for the popular novel and film, Twelve O'Clock High. Armstrong briefly returned to the United States before being stationed in the Pacific in mid-1945. In the Pacific Theatre, Armstrong led the longest and last heavy-bomber raid over Japan from Guam to Honshu. Also in 1945, he led the first non-stop flight from Hokkaido, Japan to Washington, D.C. in a Boeing B-29. For his achievements in the Pacific, he was awarded an oak leaf cluster for the Distinguished Flying Cross.

After World War II, Armstrong served as Pacific Air chief-of-staff, senior air instructor at the Armed Forces Staff College, and commander-in-chief of the Alaskan Air Command. Armstrong also pioneered two record-breaking transatlantic. He received the Gold Medal of the Aero Club of Norway for pioneering non-stop flights from Alaska to Norway. Armstrong was promoted to major general by early 1950, and eventually to lieutenant general. In 1962 he was forced to retire at age 59, three years before the normal retirement age of 62. It is believed that this forced retirement was the result of a disagreement between Armstrong and General Curtis LeMay, Chief of Staff of the Air Force, about the strategic significance of Alaska (see note to researcher). Following his retirement, he and his family settled in Tampa, Florida. Armstrong was first married to Vernell Lloyd "Fluffy" Armstrong on March 15, 1929, and they had one child named Frank A. "Dutch" Armstrong, III. Major Frank Armstrong, III was a jet fighter pilot and was shot down and killed in Laos on July 13, 1967. Like his father before him, he was awarded the Silver Star for his military service. After Mrs. Armstrong's death, he married Peggy Jennison. Armstrong died on August 20, 1969 at age 67 in Tampa. He was survived by his wife, Peggy, his sister, Mrs. I. T. Valentine, Sr., and a granddaughter, Lloyd Armstrong.

Description

The collection consists of correspondence, memoirs, autobiographical information, various Army Air Corps and Air Force records, numerous photograph albums and memorabilia, and miscellaneous materials. Early correspondence includes letters in support of Armstrong and his nomination to the Flying Cadet Corps which was a part of the U.S. Army (July 12, November 2, 1927). Copies of correspondence pertain to a speech by Armstrong and his opinion concerning the nature and future of the Marine Corps (April 4 and 14, 1947). Later correspondence concerns President Eisenhower's impression of Elmendorf Air Force Base (June 12, 1960); a discussion by Lowell Thomas of an impersonator of Lowell Thomas, Jr. (Aug. 9, 1960); the awarding of the Distinguished Service Medal and a conservation award from the Department of the Interior (July 30, 1961); and a letter (December 5, 1967) to General Armstrong's sister describing the Vietnam combat death of Major Frank A. "Dutch" Armstrong III.

A typescript memoir (undated) written by Armstrong titled "So Near Heaven and Surrounded by Hell" describes his experiences as commander of the VIIIth Bomber Command, the first bomber unit to bomb Axis territory. The memoir relates details of the organization of the command, anecdotes, and accounts of Armstrong's experiences as a B-17 bomber pilot. The original draft (RESTRICTED – Consult staff for details or see digitized version on Digital Collections website) and three photocopies are located in oversize folder 35.1.os.4.

"Wake the Sleeping Giant" [ca. 1960] is the autobiography of Armstrong as told to William E. Hickenbotham. The account relates his experiences as an air cadet in the late twenties and comments on early air training methods. In relating his early flying career, Armstrong describes flying as a U.S. Army mail pilot for the U.S. Post Office. The autobiography incorporates a diary maintained during his tenure in England as a military observer (1941), and contains a lucid description of British life during the German Air Blitz. Some overlap exists between this account and his memoir concerning the VIIIth Bomber Command. This account describes Armstrong's command and training of the 97th Heavy Bombardment Group, the first American bomber crew to fly a mission over Europe; the 306th Heavy Bombardment Group, which flew the first daylight raid against Germany; the 46th Bomb Operational Training Wing; and the 315 Bombardment Wing (Very Heavy), which as a part of the XXist Bomber Command bombarded targets in Japan. Armstrong's postwar account includes an attempted record-breaking flight from Hokkaido, Japan, to Washington, DC, as well as an account of a pioneering flight with Bernt Balchen from Alaska, over the North Pole, to Norway (1949). Armstrong also discusses the novel and film, Twelve O'Clock High, the basis of which were his wartime bomber experiences; his tenure as commander of the Second Air Force and the training of crews for the Strategic Air Command; and the SAC-Russian competition for strategical hegemony. As commander-in-chief of the Alaskan Command, Armstrong criticizes Alaskan defense strategy, proposes solutions, and warns of the dangers of Communism. The original draft (RESTRICTED – Consult staff for details or see digitized version on Digital Collections website) and a photocopy are located in oversize folder 35.1.os.5.

A case file is included in the collection entitled, "Lieutenant General Frank Armstrong Case File for Missiles in Alaska (1959-1960)." There are also scripts for introductions to television film of General Armstrong's retirement from the Air Force and the Alaskan Air Command (1961). A retirement ceremony newspaper clipping from the Sourdough Sentinel is included (August 4, 1961). There is a speech made by Major General "Cotton" Hildreth regarding General Armstrong's son, Frank Alton Armstrong, III, who was killed in Vietnam in 1967. The speech is entitled, "A Bigger Than Life Hero," and was read at the dedication ceremony for General Armstrong's birthplace. Notes for another speech made during this dedication ceremony by General Armstrong's grandson, Frank A. Armstrong, is also a part of the papers. Of special interest is a photograph called "The Japanese Surrender, U.S.S. Missouri, Tokyo Bay," which shows Chester W. Nimitz signing the terms of surrender (September 2, 1945). It is dedicated by the Admiral "To Brigadier General Frank A. Armstrong, Jr. U.S.A.F. – with best wishes and great appreciation of your contribution to the war effort that made possible the above scene," and signed "C. W. Nimitz – Fleet Admiral U.S.N." The original photograph (RESTRICTED – Consult staff for details or see digitized version on Digital Collections website) is located in oversize folder 35.1.os.6. There is also a photograph of the historical marker at the boyhood home of General Armstrong (March 28, 2001).

Other records include Tactical Mission Reports that consist of analyses of bombing raids of the 8th Command over Hanover, Hamburg, and Amsterdam (July 1943) as well as XXth and XXist Air Force reports of missions over mainland Japan (1945). A pilot information folder (1929-1945) and flight records (1932-1945) contain statistical information on Armstrong's flying career. A speeches file includes "Strategic Bombing of Germany," pertaining to the activities and damage sustained by the 46th Bombardment Wing (January 1943); four speeches addressed to officers and enlisted men of the 315th Command (1944); mimeographed speeches concerning Philippine Independence Day (1946); a short bond drive speech by Armstrong at Raleigh, NC; and a speech entitled, "The Air War against Germany."

Pamphlets and publications are also included. Pamphlets concern the military retirement of Armstrong, in which the Alaskan Command is described (1961) and an undated pamphlet pertains to the Air Forces Rest and Recreation Center in the Mount McKinley National Park. Publications include Officers' Wives Club magazines, Totem Topics (1961) and Petticoat Press (1953, 1956), containing articles on Mrs. Armstrong. A newspaper clippings file consists of Norwegian clippings pertaining to the Alaska-Norway flight of Armstrong and Balchen (September 1949). Also included are a maintenance manual for the B-17 airplane (1943); the novel, Twelve O'Clock High; a copy of chapter 9 of "The Making of 12 O'Clock High" from the book Celluloid Wings (1989); and Target Germany (1943), which describes the role of the 8th Bomber Command during its first year in Europe. Also included are Photographs, brochures, and clippings pertain to the Inaugural Guest Program, as a member of which Mrs. Armstrong traveled to Norway (1958); general newspaper clippings pertain to Armstrong's career (1943-1969, nd); and clippings and photographs of an Alaskan visit of President Dwight D. Eisenhower are included (June 1960). Histories of the Alaskan Air Command (1948, 1950) are also included.

Numerous photograph albums and scrapbooks (RESTRICTED – Consult staff for details or see digitized version on Digital Collections website) contain photographs, clippings, and memorabilia including a Christmas gift project undertaken jointly by the 9th Air Force and the North Carolina Junior Chamber of Commerce called "Operation Christmas" (undated) and another entitled "Second to None under General Armstrong," that traces the progress of the 2nd Air Force under Armstrong's administration. Further albums contain photographs of dignitaries, celebrities, and sports figures including Presidents Eisenhower and Harry S. Truman, General Douglas MacArthur, Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, and numerous foreign diplomats; celebrities June Allyson, Jack Benny, Frank Capra, Jerry Colonna, Phil Harris, Bob Hope, Hedda Hopper, Boris Karloff, Mary Martin, Ginger Rogers, Jimmy Stewart, Ed Sullivan, The Three Stooges, and Don Wilson; and baseball player Mickey Mantle.

Several films, video cassettes, and digital video discs document Brig. Gen. Frank A. Armstrong, Jr. and his service in command of Elmendorf Air Force Base, Alaska, Norway, and in the Philippines (ca. 1960). Specifically, there is footage of various parades, bear hunts, fishing at Naknek, scenery in Norway and Alaska, and of a B-36 and F-86.

Overview of the Collection

Creator: Dana, Homer Jackson

Title: Homer Jackson Dana Papers

Dates: 1910-1968 ( inclusive )

Quantity: 131 containers. (65.5 linear feet of shelf space.) (40,000 items.)

Collection Number: Cage 299

Summary: Correspondence, reports, manuscripts, notes, records, and other papers concerning engineering research projects, experiments, and inventions, professional meetings, the Washington State Research Foundation, and Washington State University College of Engineering.

Repository: Washington State University Libraries
Manuscripts, Archives, and Special Collections
Pullman, WA 99164-5610 USA

Biographical Note

Born at Topeka, Kansas on January 1, 1890, Homer Dana came to the State of Washington with his parents in the early years of the 20th Century. His family homesteaded in central Washington for a time, then moved to the city of Pullman in 1911, where Dana entered the State College of Washington (now Washington State University). He completed a Bachelor's degree in engineering in 1915 and a Master's degree in 1917. For a brief time he was an instructor at the State College, leaving to go into private engineering practice. In the early 1920's Dana returned to WSU and completed a second Master's degree. He was again employed by the College, first as a consulting engineer, and, after 1924, as a research engineer. While the post of research engineer was his major assignment from 1924 until his retirement in 1960, he also taught classes on occasion, participated in the education of graduate students, and served as administrative head of the Engineering Experiment Station after 1945. He was placed on the State College faculty roster in the late 1940's and was designated Professor Emeritus at his retirement.

Although holding teaching and administrative posts, Dana's major work was research. He conceived his research post to be a generalized and wide-ranging assignment and consequently involved himself in work that was often far removed from his "specialty" of instrumentation and electricity. His initial major experimental project was actually a civil engineering problem, consisting of an attempt to determine the effect of heavy automobile traffic on roads and highways. Beginning with the construction of an instrument to measure the "washboard" effect, the project involved the construction and maintenance of highways as well as the construction of automobiles. The tests on roads that Dana carried out for several years in the late 1920's attracted considerable attention and the results were drawn upon by engineers throughout the United States, in Europe and in Asia.

After the completion of the highway tests, Dana concentrated on building fruit-handling equipment and developed a fruit-washing machine and various fruit-testing devices. These fruit-handling projects led him into engineering problems associated with fruit storage, especially refrigeration. He continued this line of investigation for several years in the 1930's while also working on related problems of heat transfer and storage. The heating and refrigeration projects were combined with electrical experimentation in Dana's major research of the late 1930's, a number of experiments known as the Mason City Project. This project was sponsored by the Washington State Planning Council and was connected with the Grand Coulee Dam development. Basically, it involved an attempt to determine the amount of electricity that a community would consume for heating, refrigeration, air conditioning, lighting, and power.

The Mason City Project, operated for the U.S. Government and having economic planning connotations, had been largely inspired as a reaction to the Great Depression. When recovery from this depression began in the late 1930's, Dana's work took on a different character. As demand from industry increased, he began developing specific processes and products for industrial applications. During this period he developed the "torque screw pole tester," a device for non-destructive testing of highline power transmission poles. At about the same time he began a series of studies on the problem of radio transmission to and from aircraft. This research was begun in cooperation with United Air Lines, but after the United States entered World War II, the project was transferred to the Army Air Corps. The basic problem that Dana attempted to solve in the radio experiments involved the suppression of static created by the "corona" of electrical charges built up around a moving aircraft. After much measurement to determine the nature of the corona, Dana eventually devised his "block and squirter system," a device that effected a considerable reduction of the corona effect.

Although the corona project was not quite finished, the Air Corps dropped it in the research cut-backs that accompanied the end of the war. In spite of this setback Dana saw the project through to completion using WSU facilities. The project also served as the lead-in to his next major project, likewise an aircraft communications problem and a defense-sponsored research effort. This project, carried out in the late 1940's and early 1950's, began as an attempt to develop a new aircraft communication system based on the broadcast of "facsimile" signals. This system, a combination of television and photocopy, proved to be of limited use, but in developing it Dana became involved in the "new" field of duplicating papers. He eventually developed his own "Fax" paper, one of the ancestors of later well-known photocopy paper.

The defense-inspired Fax paper project was but one of many experimental projects undertaken by Dana in response to the great demand for engineering services that faced him after World War II. At this time he found himself working on a number of major projects simultaneously, partly because he had become the administrator of the Engineering Experiment Station, in addition to being the major researcher. He once more attacked a number of problems associated with heating and refrigeration, improved his pole tester, carried out follow-up experiments on aircraft communication, and developed an aircraft warning light system for high voltage electric transmission cables and broadcasting towers. In addition he did considerable work on instrumentation, working on meters for the measure of "emotional stress," an attempt at improvement of the so-called "lie detectors."

The various research projects undertaken by Dana over the years produced a number of patentable devices and processes. In order that these might be available for industrial and commercial use, Dana joined other inventors in the Pullman area for the incorporation of the Washington State Research Foundation. This organization arranged for patent assignment and licenses of the inventions produced by a number of WSU researchers. Dana served as a manager of this organization for many years, and many of its records are included in this collection.

Dana was the author of a prodigious number of published articles, reports and technical bulletins. No small quantity of these were published as Bulletins of the WSU Engineering Experiment Station, while others were presented at professional meetings, or were the subject of publications on engineering and science. He was also often called upon to present information concerning his work at professional conferences and public meetings.

Homer Dana continued to be active after his retirement, at the age of 70 in 1960. His activities were increasingly curtailed by failing health after 1965, although he retained his interest in engineering research and continued to work on ideas for research projects. He died on December 17, 1970 at Spokane, Washington.

Content Description

The papers of Homer Jackson Dana include correspondence, reports, drafts, notes, drawings, photographs and recordings relative to his work as a research engineer at Washington State University, to his private engineering practice and to his personal affairs. Papers which emanate from Dana's position with the Washington State University Engineering Experiment Station from 1920 to 1960 constitute the major portion of the collection. These papers document Dana's research, experimentation and invention in the fields of communications, electricity, facsimile transmission, highways, lie detectors, heating and refrigeration. The papers also contain Dana's personal correspondence, diaries and business records from the time he was a student, ca. 1910-1915, to his retirement years in the 1960s. In addition, the collection includes some records of the Washington State Research Foundation (1937-1960), an organization founded by Dana and others for the patenting and commercial development of inventions of the Washington State University staff.

Detailed Description of the Collection

The following section contains a detailed listing of the materials in the collection.

Series 1: Subjects, 1920-1960

Correspondence, professional engineering notes, records, and reports divided into three chronological sub-series of which two overlap because of a dual filing system.

Subseries 1.1: ca. 1924-ca. 1947

Subseries 1.2: ca. 1947-ca. 1960

Subseries 1.3: ca. 1945-ca. 1950

Biographical Note

Barry M. Goldwater was born in Phoenix, Arizona on January 1, 1909. He attended grade school in Phoenix and at age 13 succeeded in setting up the first commercial radio transmitter in Arizona, KFDA – the 36th station licensed in the U.S. He attended high school at Staunton Military Academy in Virginia where he became an outstanding cadet and student athlete. He played football, ran track, and was captain of the record-setting swim team. After graduation, he enrolled at the University of Arizona. His academic career was cut short in 1929 by his father's death, whereupon he entered the family business, Goldwaters department store. Starting as a junior clerk, Goldwater progressed to become President and eventually Chairman of the Board – a position he held until 1953.

Goldwater married Margaret (Peggy) Johnson of Muncie, Indiana in 1934. They had four children, Joanne, Barry Jr., Michael, and Margaret (Peggy) Jr. Peggy died in 1985. In 1992, he married Susan Wechsler.

In 1940, Goldwater joined Norman Nevills on a 42-day trip down the Green and Colorado Rivers and became the 71st person to travel the full length of the Colorado. His film, photographs, slides, and lecture "Shooting the Rapids" took him to venues throughout Arizona. He drew large audiences, thus setting the stage for future political campaigns. His award-winning photography was exhibited worldwide and won him membership in the prestigious Royal Photographic Society.

Barry Goldwater's military career spanned 37 years. During World War II, he volunteered for active duty in 1942 but was rejected due to his age and previous athletic injuries. He persisted and eventually was assigned to Yuma, Arizona where he was a gunnery instructor and perfected a technique that increased target accuracy. He later became one of 10 pilots to fly P-47 Thunderbolts across the North Atlantic to Europe. He retired in 1969 as a Major General in the U.S. Air Force Reserves. By the end of his career, he had logged 15,000 hours of flight time, flew over 250 aircraft, and received numerous awards, medals, and commendations.

Goldwater launched his political career in 1949 on a Republican reform platform and won a seat on the Phoenix City Council. In 1952, Barry Goldwater challenged the incumbent Ernest McFarland and won a seat in the U.S. Senate. He served two terms and then ran for President against Lyndon B. Johnson in 1964. Although it was a landslide defeat, Goldwater emerged as a political icon for the conservative movement and the Republican Party. He was re-elected to the Senate in 1968 and served until his retirement in 1986. During his thirty-year career, he served on the Banking and Currency, Labor and Public Welfare, Interior and Insular Affairs, Aeronautical and Space Sciences, Armed Forces, Labor and Public Welfare, Select Committee on Intelligence, Indian Affairs, and Commerce, Science and Transportation and Small Business committees. These committees reflect his lifelong interests in aviation, amateur radio, technology, defense, labor and union issues, national security, and Native Americans.

On May 29, 1998, Barry M. Goldwater died at his home in Phoenix from complications of a stroke.

This program begins a life-long relationship with the Republic of China (Taiwan).
- 1943 Transferred to the 27th Ferry Squadron and is selected as one of the first 10 pilots to ferry P-47 Thunderbolts across the North Atlantic to Europe. Awarded the Air Medal for meritorious achievement while participating in aerial flight.
- 1944 Serves in the Asian Theatre and flies three major supply routes, Snowball, Crescent and Fireball. Assigned to fly "The Hump" (the eastern end of the Himalayan Mountains), the last leg of a ten-thousand mile run. Promoted to Major and then Lt. Colonel. Fourth child, Peggy Jr. is born.
- 1945 Musters out of the U.S. Army Air Corps.
- 1946 Assigned by Arizona Governor Sydney Osborn as Captain of the Arizona National Guard. Advocates integration of the Arizona Guard, which was among the first to open its ranks to African-Americans.
- 1946 Campaigns for Arizona to become a "Right to Work" state in response to major strikes nationally. Appointed by Governor Sydney Osborn to the Arizona Colorado River Commission later renamed the Interstate Stream Commission. One of his photographs is selected for the cover of the first all color issue of Arizona Highways.

- 1947 Joins the Phoenix Chamber of Commerce Thunderbirds. Promotes legislation for the Right to Work initiative. Phoenix Mayor Ray Busey appoints Barry Goldwater and 39 other leading citizens to a committee to study city government and suggest charter revisions and reforms. They become known as the Phoenix Forty.
- 1948 The Phoenix Charter Revision Committee announces its finding and recommends the appointment of a professional city manager who would be immune from political pressure. Asked by supporters to run for City Council.
- 1949 The Phoenix Charter Revision Committee reorganizes to become the Charter Government Committee, which provides a platform for reform-minded candidates who sweep the election. At age 40, wins a seat on the Phoenix City Council.
- 1950 Becomes Howard Pyle's campaign manager for Governor of Arizona.
- 1951 Re-elected to Phoenix City Council.
- 1952 Opens his campaign for U.S. Senate. Becomes Chief of Staff for the Arizona Air National Guard. Unseats Democrat incumbent Ernest McFarland by 6,500 votes.
- 1953 Gives first major speech in Senate and appeals for an end to federal price controls. In another debate, he criticizes France for its failure to move Indo-China towards independence.
- 1954 The Senator's first bill is signed by President Eisenhower. The bill authorizes the Secretary of the Interior to convey certain land to the City of Tucson, Arizona and to accept certain other lands in exchange.
- 1955 Asked to serve as Chair of the Republican Senate Campaign Committee. This launches his GOP leadership role as a national fundraiser and spokesman for emerging conservative beliefs.
- 1956 Collaborates with Stephen Shadegg on the script for the documentary "For Freedom's Sake" describing the dangers of communism. Campaigns to re-elect President Eisenhower to a second term.
- 1958 Wins a second term to the U.S. Senate over Arizona Governor Ernest McFarland by a 56% majority.
- 1959 Promoted to Brigadier General of the U.S. Air Force Reserves. Meets with Clarence Manion and a small group of conservatives in Chicago to discuss a national campaign to mobilize sentiment and delegate votes for the GOP presidential nomination. Establishes the Arizona Historical Foundation.
- 1960 Nominated by Arizona Governor Paul Fannin for President at the GOP National Convention. Arizona U.S. Congressman John Rhodes seconds the motion. Goldwater immediately withdraws his name and campaigns for Richard M. Nixon. Writes The Conscience of a Conservative. It becomes a best-seller, emphasizing his strong opposition to communism and fueling growth of the conservative political movement.
- 1961 President Kennedy asks Goldwater's advice during the Bay of Pigs invasion. He responds by advising him to order an air strike immediately or the mission would fail. Receives an Honorary Doctor of Laws degree from Arizona State University.
- 1962 The Bay of Pigs debacle precipitates the Cuban Missile Crisis. This prompts Goldwater to write Why Not Victory, which quickly becomes a bestseller and offers a foreign policy based on military strength. Promoted to Major General of the U.S. Air Force Reserves.
- 1963 Objects to the public accommodations section of the Civil Rights bill as an assault on property and states' rights. Already considering a run for the presidency, discusses a plan with John F. Kennedy to travel the country and campaign together. J.F.K is assassinated. Vice-President Lyndon Baines Johnson becomes the 36th President of the United States. Obtains HAM radio license for

- station K7UGA which is based out of his home.
- 1964 Publishes two books, Where I Stand and The Face of Arizona. Wins the Republican nomination for President. One much quoted line in his acceptance speech, written by Harry Jaffa, "I would remind you that extremism in the defense of liberty is no vice and let me remind you also that moderation in the pursuit of justice is no virtue" has its origins in a speech by Cicero. Meets with President Johnson. Both agree to remain mute on the Civil Rights issue and maintain a united front against communism. Defeated by Lyndon Baines Johnson in a landslide.
- 1964 Goldwater v. Ginzburg - sues Fact Magazine, Inc. and Ralph Ginzburg for libel regarding the article "The Unconscious of a Conservative: A Special Issue on the Mind of Barry Goldwater", which labeled him as "severely paranoid personality who was unfit for office." Court rules in Goldwater's favor in 1970.
- 1965 Settles back to his home Be-Nun-I-Kin in Phoenix, Arizona. He and his former presidential campaign manager, Denison Kitchel, create the Free Society Association. Becomes active in local issues such as the preservation of Camelback Mountain. Continues to make numerous public appearances and receives thousands of letters from supporters and fans. Makes plans to run for the U.S. Senate.
- 1967 K7UGA approved to operate as part of the Military Affiliate Radio System (MARS) which is staffed by volunteers 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. By 1983 when the station closed, over 200,000 phone calls were patched from troops in Southeast Asia to family members in the U.S. Makes first visit to Taiwan.
- 1968 Supports Richard M. Nixon for the GOP presidential bid. Runs for the U.S. Senate seat vacated by the retiring Carl Hayden and defeats Roy Elson 274,607 to 205,338 votes. ## Administrative Information

Custodial History

Barry M. Goldwater donated these papers to the Arizona Historical Foundation between 1959 and 1998.

Credit Line

Personal and Political Papers of Senator Barry M. Goldwater, FM MSS 1. Arizona State University Libraries: Arizona Collection.

Provenance

The Arizona Historical Foundation transferred these materials to the Arizona Collection in 2012.

Processing Note

This collection remained largely unprocessed through the years. Serial deposits varying in volume and format from 1959 to 1998 were made from Goldwater's Washington office, Phoenix office, and home. The collection also had been moved several times and the boxes re-numbered. There had been numerous attempts to organize and re-folder the materials resulting in various arrangement schemes. Although inventory sheets were created, locating specific correspondence, photographs, and legislative documents was reportedly difficult. Public access varied widely. Additional findings as follows:

- There were no catalog records of this collection.
- Less than 10% of all the material was found in original folders. It was assumed that labels on "new" folders reflected the originals.
- There were several runs of correspondence within each congressional session labeled as "miscellaneous." These were found to contain significant personal correspondence, colleague correspondence, Alpha files, legislative documents, and issue mail. See the Scope and Content note for Series I: Personal for details.
- Folders identified as the 91st Congress through the 99th Congress were largely found to have the incorrect ranges.
- There was no consistency within the "miscellaneous" designations. Documents were filed intermittently by sender, by organization, by city and town, or by all of these regardless of origination or topic. See Scope and Content note for Series III: Constituent Service for details.
- There were many orphan documents separated from legislative material. See Scope and Content note for Series III: Legislative for details.
- There were significant gaps in the 1964 Presidential Campaign Series. See Scope and Content note for Series II: 1964 Presidential Campaign for details.
- Very little print material remained from the 83rd-89th Congresses due to the micro-filming practices of the time. Microfilm (1952-1983) ranged from poor to good condition. Earlier reels were deteriorating. See Scope and Content note for Series VI: Media-Microfilm for details.
- Most of the loose newspaper clippings had deteriorated significantly and had outlived their usability. Albums of newspaper clippings and original cartoon art were also at risk. See Scope and Content note for Series VI: Media-Albums for details.
- Photographs were found to be an inter-mix of three distinct collections: copies of fine art images taken by Barry Goldwater and copyrighted by the Goldwater family; Goldwater's personal collection of historic photographs of the Old West; and photographs documenting his personal and political life. See Scope and Content note for Series VI: Media-Photographs for details.
- Family history material included over 40 linear feet of personal papers from Barry Goldwater's uncle, Morris Goldwater.
- Nearly 50 unprocessed "collections" of related Goldwater material from other donors were discovered. Most of these included personal correspondence with Goldwater or 1964 campaign memorabilia.
- A number of artifacts, artwork, and oversized memorabilia were found in poor condition. See Scope and Content note for Series VII for appraisal, restoration, and de-accession details.

Archival Interventions

Based on these findings, the need for transparency, and feedback from researchers, the following actions were taken:

- Developed a cataloging plan with ASU Hayden Library Technical Services that started with a preliminary catalog record with the Online Computer Library Center (OCLC) and progressed to cataloging by series as each was completed to ensure global access.

- Created a Goldwater web page. Posted progress notes and preliminary drafts of the finding aid online as well as links to various resources.
- Submitted the rationale and language for a special allocation from the Arizona State Legislature for long term preservation and access to the Goldwater papers.
- Based on the various deeds of gift, declared the entire collection open to researchers regardless of its processed state.
- Moved processing to the reading room to facilitate reference, data entry, and teaching.
- Adopted the national best practices standards for arrangement and description in Managing Congressional Collections published by the Society of American Archivists. All the materials in this collection fit neatly within the recommended series.
- Created a new Constituent Service sub-series of Projects and Programs where non-legislative gray literature such as constituent generated grant proposals, local reports, state declarations and formal requests, white papers, local-regional initiatives, and technical brochures would fit.
- Built on previous attempts at sorting Issue Mail by topic which significantly decreased the "miscellaneous" designation found throughout the collection. These issues reflect national and local interests.
- Decided on a "one size fits" all for general Constituent Correspondence - arranged alphabetically by sender and chronologically within.
- Separated the fine arts photographs http://www.azarchivesonline.org/xtf/view?docId=ead/asu/goldwater\_finearts.xml and historic photographs http://www.azarchivesonline.org/xtf/view?docId=ead/asu/goldwater\_historic.xml into two distinct collections.
- Created a stand-alone collection for the Morris Goldwater materials: http://www.azarchivesonline.org/xtf/view?docId=ead/asu/morris\_goldwater.xml.
- Integrated Goldwater correspondence, memorabilia and media from multiple donors into the appropriate series and sub-series.
- Preserved and catalogued Goldwater's Dime Store Novel Collection http://www.azarchivesonline.org/xtf/view?docId=ead/asu/goldwater\_dimenovels.xml
- Developed container lists with visual clues (sub-series in bold) to guide the researcher through various parts of the collection.
- Digitized all microfilm, selected speeches from audio cassettes, and selected film reels to CD or DVD formats.
- Digitized rare and rarely seen photographs for the Arizona Memory Project: "Senator Barry M. Goldwater: An Arizona Legend" <http://azmemory.lib.az.us/cdm4/index.php?CISOROOT=/ahfgold>

This collection was traditionally processed: duplicates weeded, large metal clips removed, binders removed, acid-free folders used, and news clippings inter-leaved. Documents are arranged chronologically within folders. Those with no dates appear at the end. See Scope and Content Note for additional information.

Other Finding Aids

The finding aid that the Arizona Historical Foundation created for this collection is available at http://www.ahfweb.org/collections\_bmg.htm. It includes all of the information found here in addition to a note to political science researchers, a photograph of Goldwater and six detailed notes describing how the collection was processed.

Container List

Series I: Personal

Scope and Content Note

This series reflects Senator Goldwater's personal interests and pursuits, life-long relationships, family business, public and private service, achievements, private musings and observations, and his deep knowledge and love of Arizona. Many of these documents were found throughout his papers and for the first time are aggregated here. Most were not found in original folders. These documents were deposited serially over time by Senator Goldwater, his family, friends, and associates. They chronicle events, people, places, and ideas that shaped Goldwater's life and view of the world. They uniquely capture Goldwater's many personas over a long and colorful life.

At times, it is impossible to distinguish the personal from the public (office-holder) materials – a signature feature of many U.S. Senate collections. Many of the documents found here, however, share certain common characteristics: they were generated before Goldwater ran for public office; were created during his hiatus from public office (1965-1968); were generated post-retirement (after 1986); were the result of non-legislative activities and/or activities unrelated to the U.S. Senate.

The Alpha Files, often quoted by biographers and scholars, are a notable exception. Goldwater was a gifted communicator and an inveterate letter-writer. He was also a "saver." The Alpha Files appear to have their origins in correspondence with such political icons as Carl Hayden, Robert Taft, Everett Dirksen, and Dwight Eisenhower. Over the years, Goldwater added certain friends, associates, celebrities, adversaries, and personal journals to the list. An estimated 30% of the names found here were added post-retirement.

The Alpha Files are now an aggregation of materials found dispersed throughout the collection. If a folder, a letter, or other document was labeled "Alpha," it is filed here. To facilitate research, once an individual folder was created, other records were added as they were discovered. While not every document was captured, Alpha File folders represent the bulk of correspondence with that individual. Some folders contain only one document; others contain dozens of records spanning many years.

This series is arranged in 17 sub-series and alphabetically and chronologically within: Alpha Files as described above; Art – Goldwater was a supporter and collector of western artwork; Aviation – Goldwater was certified to fly everything from gliders to jets; Awards and Certificates – print material related to hundreds of recognized achievements over a lifetime; Boards and Memberships – documents civic, business as well as duties appointed while in serving in the Senate; Correspondence (by sender or topic) – most of the material found here represent folders as they were originally labeled; General Correspondence (by sender A-Z) – found loose or labeled as "miscellaneous personal;" Family Correspondence – includes Goldwater and allied family correspondence. Note that correspondence with children and grandchildren is restricted until 2023. Family History – documents Goldwater genealogy, pioneering, business, and background material for publications like The Goldwaters of Arizona. Military – records of Goldwater's military assignments, promotions, and retirement; Oral Histories – most of these materials were transcribed from cassettes donated by Professor Robert Alan Goldberg for his book Barry Goldwater. Photography- documents Goldwater's lifelong interest and expertise in photography. See also Series VI: Media, Albums for his photography exhibits; Politics – most of the material here was found in folders labeled personal and/or politics. Public Appearances - largely chronicles Goldwater's post Senate career speeches, invitations, interviews, and television appearances. See Series V: Administrative for accepted invitations and public appearances while serving in the Senate. Radio – reflects Goldwater's lifelong interests in radio and telecommunications generally and is notable for his contributions to the MARS program. Senate Campaigns – significant gaps for the early campaigns; and Writings – includes Goldwater's columns for the Los Angeles Times, letters to the editor, drafts and comments for biographies, and numerous contributions to other publications.

Accruals

Two boxes (981 and 982) of newly discovered publications by Goldwater (1940-1978) were added at the end of the collection in October of 2011.

Series II: 1964 Presidential Campaign

Scope and Content Note

The material in this series derives from multiple sources in addition to the documents donated by Senator Goldwater. These include Goldwater campaign workers, office staff, family members, friends, fans, and associates. The following individuals made significant contributions, especially relating to state campaigns, speeches, news clippings, photo albums, and memorabilia: Joseph H. Bastien, Thomas Dunlavy, Bert Fireman, Donald and Michael Goldwater, Eleanor Higgins, Theodore Humes, William Middendorf, Adah Morgan, Sharon Spellman, William Quinn, Robert Stahl, Peter M. Bodnar, and Lester W. Ruffner. Goldwater correspondence with a number of these individuals extended beyond this campaign and can be found in Series I: Personal-Correspondence.

There are significant gaps within this series. In 1967, Stephen Shadegg, a long time Republican Party worker, Goldwater Senate Campaign Manager, and Regional Campaign Director for Western States, sold various campaign materials to the University of Texas. See the guide to the Stephen Shadegg/Barry Goldwater Collection at University of Texas, Austin at <http://www.lib.utexas.edu/taro/utcah/00096/cah-00096.html> for further information. Senator Goldwater's post-election correspondence was voluminous but little remains in print. Most of that correspondence is captured on microfilm. See Series V: Media Files-Microfilm. The microfilm has been converted to searchable compact discs that are available in the reading room.

Speech writers for the Goldwater-Miller Campaign were Tony Smith and Karl Hess. See Series I: Personal-Correspondence for Karl Hess. Few Smith files can be found in this collection. Very few speech drafts remain. Some background for speech material was borrowed from previous Goldwater Senate campaigns and can also be found in Series I: Personal-Campaigns. Many speeches are embedded within newsletters and news releases found in the Goldwater for President Committee and the Republican National Committee. The three bound volumes of speeches, while incomplete, represent speech highlights. These were a gift from Denison Kitchel, 1964 Presidential Campaign Manager. Few Kitchel files can be found in this series. See Series I: Personal-Alpha Files for other personal correspondence.

Included in this series are rare, unpublished Commerce Committee Prints Vol. 1, 3, and 5. Because the Senate Commerce Committee has jurisdiction over communications, it was proposed that media coverage on the 1964 Presidential Campaign for the first time be aggregated and printed as a federal document. Funding to complete the project failed. What remains are galley proofs. This is likely the most comprehensive record of speeches, radio and television appearances, floor remarks and news items from the 1964 Presidential Campaign. There were no presidential debates between Barry M. Goldwater and Lyndon B. Johnson. The nearly 5,000 pages cover the speeches, public appearances, and major radio and television broadcasts of the Johnson-Humphrey and Goldwater-Miller campaigns. The galley proofs are indexed and organized chronologically. Some pages are fragile.

Small bound photo albums, loose news clippings, and magazines relating to the 1964 campaign are included in this series for quick reference. Oversized items, artifacts and memorabilia, and loose photos relating to the 1964 Presidential Campaign can be found in Series V: Media Files. There are numerous film, political advertisements, VHS tapes, and audio cassettes of speeches ranging from poor to excellent condition. These can also be found in Series V: Media Files. Access to VHS tapes is available in the reading room. Some film has been converted to digital versatile discs.

This series is divided into 13 sub-series alphabetically and chronologically within: Committee Prints, General, Goldwater for President Committee, Literature, Magazines, Memorabilia, News Clippings, Peggy Goldwater Correspondence, Photo Albums, Republican National Committee, Republican National Convention, Speeches, and States. "States" is significant for comprehensive material gathered by the campaign team on every state and territory resulting in notebooks as well as "in house" files used for field reports, analysis, and tactical support.

Related Materials

See also the Dean Burch Papers (Arizona Historical Foundation FM MSS 142) for extensive documentation of the 1964 Presidential Campaign. Senator Goldwater selected Burch as the Chairman of the Republican National Committee in 1964, and this collection contains extensive RNC executive, planning, publicity, and candidates' schedule and travel files. It also includes Senator Goldwater's post election 1964 and 1965 correspondence.

Denison Kitchel's papers relating to the Free Society Association can be found at the Hoover Institute, Stanford University.

Series III: Legislative

Scope and Content Note

This series represents records aggregated from many sections of the collection in order to build legislative materials into a coherent whole. The goal was to create a Legislative Series with records typically found therein. Approximately 70% of all legislative files were not found in their original folders resulting in many orphan documents, mislabeled documents, and widely variable date ranges. Over the years, many bill and committee-related documents had been removed and placed in the AHF Ephemera Collection. While every effort was made to reunite files within the collection, it was impractical to integrate all the legislative documents previously catalogued as ephemera.

1953-1964: Goldwater's office embraced microfilming early on. These efforts appear largely limited to constituent correspondence. After microfilming each Congress (83rd-89th), most print material was destroyed. What remains is fragmentary resulting in significant gaps. Virtually no gray literature (i.e., reports, white papers, studies) remains from this time period. Committee work (memos, background material, mark-ups, analyses, notes) is also limited and can be found under the sub-series Legislative Fragments. Some colleague and VIP correspondence can also be found on microfilm. See Series VI: Media-Microfilm. Many microfilm reels were in poor condition and required restoration. All microfilm has been digitized to searchable compact discs available in the reading room. Overall, the quantity and quality of records differ significantly from Goldwater's first two terms (1953-1964) and his last three terms (1969-1986).

1969-1986: Microfilming continued until 1983. Most of the print material survives from Goldwater's last three terms. While these records are more intact than the previous two terms, few were found in original folders. It was assumed that the labels on this re-folded material represented the originals. The folder titles in the container lists largely reflect those labels. Bill files vary widely but the following topics are exceptionally rich: The Grand Canyon National Park; National Aeronautics and Space Administration; Voluntary Military Service; Military Reorganization; Defense; Aviation; Central Arizona Project; the Colorado River; Navajo-Hopi Relocation; Taiwan; Panama; Radio and Telecommunications; and Energy.

Colleague Correspondence: This material presented a significant challenge because it was dispersed throughout the collection. Most colleague correspondence was found within constituent letters labeled "Miscellaneous A-Z." Where feasible, colleague correspondence (much of it personal in nature) was identified, removed from the miscellaneous/constituent correspondence and aggregated by congressional session. (Note that some colleague correspondence remains embedded in Series IV: Constituent-Issue Mail. Those folders are marked accordingly.) Colleague Correspondence appears alphabetically before the various Senate Committees. The volume of correspondence determined what was placed in individual folders versus A-Z designations. Colleague correspondence found within committee files was left in situ. Note that some colleague correspondence selected by Senator Goldwater is also found in Series I: Personal-Alpha Files.

Committees: Committee assignments from 1953 to 1964 included: Banking and Currency, Labor and Public Welfare, Interior and Insular Affairs, Joint Committee on the Economic Report, Joint Committee on Navajo-Hopi Administration, and Armed Services.

Committee assignments from 1969 to 1986 included: Aeronautical and Space Sciences, Armed Services, Select Committee to Study Government Operations with Respect to Intelligence Activities, Select Committee on Intelligence, Commerce, Science and Technology, Select Committee on Indian Affairs, and Small Business. Source: Congressional Directory 83rd-99th Congress.

This series is arranged in seven sub-series, by Congress, then alphabetically and chronologically within. Some of this material was found in notebooks and is presented as found. There are significant gaps throughout.

Bills Sponsored and Co-Sponsored – bill files range from single prints to folders with correspondence and background material; for more substantive bill files see Committees.

Congressional Records Excerpts - statements, speeches, remarks, debates, and colloquia captured in the Congressional Record.

Voting Records – reports compiled by the Secretary of the Majority summarizing yeas, nays, and the arguments for and against; also includes voting records generated by Goldwater's office staff.

Record Vote Analysis – reports largely compiled by the Secretary for the Minority, Republican Conference, and the Senate Republican Policy Committee summarizing yeas, nays, and the arguments for and against.

Legislative Activities – reports largely compiled by the Sergeant of Arms and the Committee on Rules and Administration for each Senator; may include statistics generated by Goldwater's office staff.

Legislative Fragments (83rd-90th Congress) as described above.

Colleague Correspondence and Committees (91st-99th Congress) as described above.
