Agency Personnel

This is where you can find staff members by department and learn a little about the responsibilities of each work unit. Information on our many boards and advisory groups is also included.

Order Materials

Copies of items in our collections are available for a pre-paid fee. Orders can be placed online, by telephone, or by mail. In certain instances, you must request and receive permission for certain uses of our materials, such as for publication or exhibition. Check our forms cabinet for more information on obtaining permission.

Donate Materials

The Library of Virginia's incredible collection of Virginia literature, history and culture has been a work in progress since the founding of the Library in 1823. From the very beginning we have collected books, manuscripts, maps, newspapers, broadsides, photographs, portraits, and other items that chronicle the history of the commonwealth. Many of our greatest treasures are the result of gifts from generous donors.

Your Big Find

Have you found something special in our collections? An ancestor's birth record, a missing family photo, the house your grandparents lived in, or the story of a long-lost relative? Something deeply important to you or to the history and culture of the commonwealth? Tell us about it! If it has meaning to you, it has meaning to us and we want to recognize your big find!

We've gone ahead and answered some of your most frequently asked questions about the history of the commonwealth, Virginia's government and legislative history, and our collections. If you don't see what you're looking for here, contact us using the form at the left, and we'll find the answers you need!

BIOGRAPHICAL STATEMENT

Mrs. Laura Carter Holloway Langford, a writer, was born in Nashville, Tennessee, in 1843 and died in 1930. In 1862, she married Junius B. Holloway, and they had a son, George Thomas Holloway, born in 1864. She moved with her Carter family to Brooklyn, New York, after the Civil War, and entered the field of journalism in order to help support not just herself and George, but also her parents and siblings. While writing a history of the First Ladies, she resided with fellow Tennesseans President and Mrs. Andrew Johnson at the White House. The Ladies of the White House was perhaps her best known book. For many years she wrote articles and books and edited for the Brooklyn Eagle. She also gave public lectures in which she spoke on subjects ranging from women's rights to Charlotte Brontë. Langford lent support to such causes as Cuban independence and cremation. She belonged to the International Council of Women and was a member of Madame Blavatsky's Theosophical Society. She became interested in the Shakers and bought a farm from them, near New Lebanon, New York. Her second marriage—to Edward L. Langford—occurred in 1890. She was widowed in 1902.

(For a corrected version of the early years of Mrs. Holloway's life, see "The Self-Inventions of Laura Carter Holloway," by Diane Sasson, in Tennessee Historical Quarterly, v. 67, no. 3, fall 2008.)

SCOPE AND CONTENT

One scrapbook, two photographs, a few odds and ends, and a number of books and magazines which once belonged to Laura C. Holloway Langford. The scrapbook contains poems and illustrations clipped from magazines and newspapers, some obituaries, and a few articles, mostly dating circa 1860-1870. The scrapbook was started while Mrs. Langford lived in Nashville. One page bears the inscription "Thus ends the old life; a new begins from this point. New York, 66, 67, 68, 69. Move to Brooklyn in 1870, resided first at 59 Hicks St., the Heights." A number of the magazines and pamphlets were published by the Theosophical Society. Libretti of various operas are found, as well as books and magazines on diverse topics, including issues of The Philistine. A number of the magazines and books have marks or notes in them made by Mrs. Langford. The photographs are of 2 men, presumably theosophists.

ORGANIZATION

Publications divided into those pertaining to theosophy and spiritualism and those which do not, and are arranged alphabetically within each group.

LANGUAGE OF MATERIALS

The materials are in English. Many of the libretti include texts in German or Italian.

RESTRICTIONS ON ACCESS

Collection is open to the public. Copyright restrictions may apply.

PROVENANCE

Gift of Diane Sasson.

RELATED MATERIALS

See Yearning for the New Age: Laura Holloway-Langford and late Victorian Spirituality, by Diane Sasson, in Printed Books and Periodicals section of Winterthur Library.

Edward D. and Faith Andrews collected some of Laura Holloway Langford's papers because of her interest in the Shakers. These papers are in the Edward Deming Andrews Memorial Shaker Collection, found at this repository, call numbers ASC 1198 and ASC 1202. Finding aids are available for both these groups. ASC 1198 contains papers mostly pertaining to the Theosophical Society. ASC 1202 contains papers pertaining to the Shakers and to Mrs. Langford's other interests.

Also in the Edward Deming Andrews Memorial Shaker Collection are photographs of the Shakers which were owned by Laura Langford; a book owned by Laura Langford (call number ASC 606); a book written by her (call number ASC 591); and a letter to her (call number ASC 778).

Additional material about Laura C. Holloway Langford has been donated to the Tennessee Historical Society and the Tennessee Archives and History Library.

COLLECTION DESCRIPTION

Biographical Note

Michael Longley was born in Belfast, Northern Ireland, on July 27, 1939. He attended Malone Primary School and the Royal Belfast Academical Institution, before going on to Trinity College, Dublin, where he read Classics. After graduating with honors in 1963, he held a variety of teaching positions in Blackrock, Dublin, London, and Belfast.

It was while teaching in Belfast that Longley first attended Philip Hobsbaum's informal gatherings of writers known simply as "the group." There he and other young writers-including Seamus Heaney, Arthur Terry, Jack Packenham, Harry Chambers-read their poems and short stories and helped to foster the work of a new generation of Irish writers.

Longley published his first collection of poems, Ten Poems, in 1966, followed by Three Regional Voices (1967), Room to Rhyme (with Seamus Heaney and David Hammond, 1968), and Secret Marriages (1968). His first major collection of poems, No Continuing City: Poems 1963-1968, was published in 1969 by Macmillan. Since the 1960's Michael Longley has published numerous collections of poems, among them An Exploded View (1973), Man Lying on the Wall (1976), The Echo Gate (1979), Gorse Fires (1991) and The Ghost Orchid (1995). His Selected Poems, 1963 - 1980 was published in 1981, followed by a later selected edition, Poems, 1963 - 1983 in 1985. After his poetic silence of the 1980s, he published Gorse Fires in 1991 to critical acclaim, followed by The Ghost Orchid (1995), Selected Poems (1998), and The Weather in Japan (2000).

Michael Longley has received numerous awards for his poetry including the Eric Gregory Award in 1965 and, more recently, the 1991 Whitbread Poetry Prize for Gorse Fires as well as the 2000 T.S. Eliot Prize for The Weather in Japan. He was awarded the Queen's Gold Medal for poetry in 2001. He is a member of the Royal Society of Literature and of Aosdána.

In addition to writing poetry, Longley has also edited collections of poems by Louis MacNeice and W.R. Rodgers, and from 1970 - 1991 he directed the literature programs of the Arts Council of Northern Ireland. In 1994 Longley published a collection of autobiographical prose pieces under the title Tuppenny Stung.

He is married to the critic Edna Longley and lives in Belfast.

Scope and Content Note

The collection consists of personal and literary papers of Michael Longley from 1960-2000. The bulk of the collection contains drafts, typescripts, and proofs of Longley's poems, essays, and prose pieces and works of other authors, most notably Seamus Heaney and Derek Mahon. The collection also contains correspondence, radio and film scripts, printed material, financial records, records relating to Longley's work for the Arts Council of Northern Ireland, and papers of his wife, Edna Longley.

Arrangement Note

Organized into 12 series: (1) Correspondence, (2) Writings by Michael Longley, (3) Writings by others, (4) Printed material, (5) Photographs, (6) Financial records, (7) Miscellaneous personal files, (8) Belfast Group sheets, (9) Arts Council of Northern Ireland records, (10) Subject files, (11) Edna Longley papers, and (12) Collected material.

Finding Aid Note

Index to selected correspondents in Series 1 is available for letters up to 1992.

Description

This collection contains professional and personal records created and collected by Crawford Wayne Barton. Inclusive dates are 1945-1995; the bulk of the collection is from 1961-1990. The collection has a particular emphasis on the photography of Barton as well as his creative writing. The collection includes photographs, negatives, slides, 8 and 16mm movies, correspondence, journals, manuscripts and clippings.

Background

Crawford Wayne Barton was born on June 2, 1943 in rural Georgia. As a child and teenager Bartontook piano lessons and enjoyed drawing and studying nature. After graduating from Calhoun High School in 1961, Barton attended the University of Georgia on an art scholarship. Barton studied drawing painting and sculpture at three different colleges in Georgia as an art major, but never graduated. Late in 1968 Barton decided to move to Los Angeles, CA to study filmmaking at UCLA. However, Barton never enrolled and instead moved to San Francisco. It was in San Francisco that Barton became a leading photographer of gay life. Barton took photographs for the Advocate, the Bay Area Reporter, the San Francisco Examiner, Newsday, and the Los Angeles Times.

About Our Collections

The archives of the GLBT Historical Society contain approximately 500 collections of personal papers and organizational records. These collections include unpublished material such as letters, diaries and scrapbooks documenting the lives of both average people and community leaders. They also include the records of many community organizations, businesses and political campaigns.

In addition, the archives holds 200 nonmanuscript collections; 70 linear feet of ephemera; 4,000 periodical titles; some 80,000 photographs; approximately 3,000 t-shirts; nearly 5,000 posters; nearly 500 oral histories; approximately 1,000 hours of recorded sound; and approximately 1,000 hours of film and video. The archives also has extensive holdings of historic textiles, fine and graphic arts, and artifacts.

For more information, see our collections policy.

Research Hours

Members. Wednesday to Friday from 11:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. by appointment, subject to availability. For an appointment, send an e-mail to our reference staff.

Members also can come in without an appointment on the first and third Saturday of each month from 1:00 p.m. to 5:00 p.m.

Non-Members. Open the first and third Saturday of each month from 1:00 p.m. to 5:00 p.m. to the general public; no appointment needed.

Non-members also can schedule an appointment for Fridays. For appointments, please send an e-mail to our reference staff. For information on joining the Historical Society, see our membership page.

Donating Materials

We are always interested in assessing donations of all kinds for inclusion in our collections. Currently, we would particularly like to fill gaps in our holdings, including materials documenting GLBT life prior to the 1970s, as well as GLBT people of color, lesbian and bisexual women of all social and cultural backgrounds, GLBT working class communities, and bisexual and transgender people of all time periods.

If you would like to offer a donation, please complete our online donation form.

BIOGRAPHICAL INFORMATION

Evert B. Clark was born in Gainesville, Georgia on October 15, 1926. He served in the U. S. Navy from 1944 to 1946 and graduated from the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill in June 1947, with an A. B. in journalism and naval science and tactics. From June 1947 to October 1948 Clark worked as a reporter, state editor, and features editor for the Durham, North Carolina Morning Herald. In November 1948 he became a reporter for the Washington, D. C. Daily News, working also as assistant city editor and aviation editor for that newspaper through December 1955.

In January 1956 Clark began working at Aviation Week Magazine, serving at various times as its Washington bureau chief, space technology editor (the first space editor in the magazine's history), and military editor. He joined the Washington bureau of the New York Times in September 1963 as a science correspondent, specializing in aviation and space stories. In June 1968 he joined Newsweek magazine in its Washington bureau as a science correspondent (again specializing in aviation and space). He also covered the Watergate scandal for Newsweek from its inception to its conclusion. From April 1978 until his death, Clark was a technical editor for Business Week and other magazines connected with the McGraw-Hill World News Bureau in Washington. He died on July 7, 1988.

Clark received many awards for his writing, including the National Space Club's journalism prize in 1969, in which Clark was cited for his "penetrating, consistently informed and lucid writing on all phases of the national space program: sometimes critical, always objective and thorough, resulting in outstanding reporting to the world at large." The National Press Foundation has established an award in Clark's memory. The Evert Clark Award, presented annually to a journalist 30 or younger, is intended to encourage young science writers by recognizing outstanding reporting in the science area. The award was first presented in 1990.

SCOPE AND CONTENT

The Evert B. Clark Papers contain many of Clark's notes, files, and much of his correspondence, for stories and research projects from throughout his career.

ARRANGEMENT

Boxes 1-9 contain subject files and correspondence, arranged by date. Boxes 10-13 contain clippings of articles Clark wrote for the Washington Daily News, Aviation Week, the New York Times, Newsweek and Business Week, as well as his drafts for articles for Newsweek. Part of Box 13 and all of Box 14 contain Clark's research files for the book Contrabandista!, which he and Nicholas Horrock published in 1973, as well as Clark's research files for a projected book on space weapons, never published. (A third book project on the Glomar Explorer and underseas espionage, referred to as "Project Jennifer," is represented by files in the main body of the collection.) Box 15 contains oversize materials; their existence is also noted where they would have fit chronologically in the main body of the collection.

saw action in the Marianas Islands (July-August 1944); Western Caroline Islands (September-October 1944); Leyte (October-November 1944); Luzon (January 1945); Iwo Jima (February-March 1945); Okinawa Gunto (April-June 1945); and the Japanese homeland operations. After the war Lechowicz participated in Operation Crossroads on Bikini Atoll in the Marshall Islands (July 1 and 25, 1946), served on the surrendered German heavy cruiser USS PRINZ EUGEN (IX-300) that served as an auxiliary ship, the destroyer USS RICHARD B. ANDERSON (DD-786), and the oil tanker USS SABINE (AO-25).

Description

Correspondence and memos concern duties aboard the CACHE and safety procedures regarding the atomic bomb tests in 1946. In one letter (July 6, 1946) to his sister, Lechowicz describes his experience during an atom bomb test conducted on July 1, the affects of radioactivity on ship targets such as his own PRINZ EUGEN and the USS INDEPENDENCE (CV-22), and comments that married seamen were worried about sterility. Other correspondence includes letters from the Defense Nuclear Agency of the Department of Defense, and the Department of the Navy (1981, 1984, 1989). These letters concern the effects of radiation received during the atomic tests, the risk to personnel, and the Radiation-Exposed Veterans Compensation Act of 1988. This legislation lists the forms of radiogenic disease likely caused by these tests that qualify a veteran for compensation. Attached newsletters outline the project's goals and include a report that estimated Lechowicz's radiation exposure during the 1946 tests. Finally, a letter from recently widowed Jennie Lechowicz to the New York Times Magazine editor comments on their recent story about the commercial exploitation of Bikini Atoll (May 7, 1994).

Of particular interest are photographs that Lechowicz apparently found on board the PRINZ EUGEN in 1946. Likely collected or taken by a German seaman, these photographs depict the German battleship BISMARCK firing on the British battleship HMS HOOD (May 24, 1941) in the North Atlantic; the PRINZ EUGEN, BISMARCK, and German heavy cruiser ADMIRAL HIPPER in battle with a torpedo boat in the North Sea; the PRINZ EUGEN near Norway and in the Kiel, Germany, shipyard; the PRINZ EUGEN'S catapult and seaplane; and the release of captured British pilots in Norway. Other photographs include scenes on board the CACHE; the Panama Canal (1946); the battleship USS NEW JERSEY (BB-62), the aircraft carrier USS NEWPORT NEWS (CA-148), and the light cruiser USS SPRINGFIELD (CL-66); sight-seeing in Washington, DC, and Rome, including an audience with Pope Pius XII (1951); three atomic bomb blasts; a flying boat; shots of Lechowicz with his fellow crewmen; and a post card of the RICHARD B. ANDERSON.

Other records include a transcript of duty (1942-1947), enlistment form, awards, crossing-the-line (equator) certificates, and various Navy identification cards. Publications include a Seaman's Navy Training Course book; several CACHE newsletters that contain such information as a crossing-the-line script (July 1943); the Potsdam Conference and the cease fire (August 15, 1945); the occupation of Japan and a list of the ships involved; and histories of the CACHE and SABINE. An oversized 1943 "Stream Drift Chart of the World" and a copy of the New York Times Magazine concerning Bikini Atoll (May 1, 1994) complete the collection.

Description

Captain Earl Arthur Luehman (b. 1918) graduated from the United States Naval Academy in 1941. Stationed aboard the USS HELENA as turret officer during World War II, he saw action in Pearl Harbor and Guadalcanal. He attended flight school, received his wings in September 1943, and flew Navy Privateers and B-24's for the remainder of World War II, receiving the Distinguished Flying Cross. After the war, he was an instructor in Naval Science and Navigation at Iowa State (1950-1952); served as the commanding officer of the Naval air station in Trinidad (1959-1962); was the country director for the Caribbean Islands, Venezuela, Guyana, Surinam, and French Guinea in the Western Hemisphereoffice of the Assistant Secretary of Defense (1966-1967); was the Naval operations officer during Task Force 8 (the Pacific atomic bomb tests, 1958-1959); served two years as the Naval Attaché to the USSR (1963-1965); and served as the Naval Defense and the Naval Air Attaché in Greece (1968-1971). In the early 1970s, after his retirement, he worked for a subsidiary of National Cash Register as the marketing director for the Middle East and North Africa, selling communication systems for military and civilian aviation uses.

During the course of this interview, Luehman primarily describes his experiences in World War II and, after the war, the events surrounding his duties as a Naval Attaché in the USSR and as the commanding officer of the Naval air station in Trinidad.

A 1941 graduate of the Naval Academy, Luehman discusses his assignment to the USS HELENA in Pearl Harbor (p. 3), the Japanese attack there on December 7, 1941 (p. 4), and the subsequent torpedo damage to the ship (p. 5). After the HELENA was repaired, Luehman describes her participation in several night battles (pp. 5-6), including the third battle of Savo Island in the Guadalcanal campaign, in which his turret was hit (pp. 6-7). He describes the terrible damage done to the SAN FRANCISCO during the last of the night battles and the unconventional burial at sea the next day of the men killed on her during that battle (pp. 7-8), and a firsthand account of the USS JUNEAU being blown up by a torpedo (p. 8). He also mentions the sinking of the HELENA after he had left it and the attempted rescue operations (p. 10).

After completing flight school and getting his wings in September 1943, he flew land-based Navy Liberators and B-24's on patrol to protect the invasion forces in the Pacific for the rest of the war. He describes the planes (pp. 10-11) and some of the missions he flew, including encountering "Zeros" off Iwo Jima (p. 12); sinking a submarine near Tokyo Bay (p. 13); and setting mines in a strait near Pusan (p. 14). He also speaks of the lack of adequate runway room for the American planes on captured islands and the solutions (p. 11).

After the war he mentions that he became skipper of the Airborne Early Warning Squadron VW-1 and flew B-17's with radar domes (p. 15) and Constellations in the early 1950s (p. 15). He also briefly describes his work as the Naval operations officer in Task Force 8, the atomic bomb tests series at Eniwetok (p. 16). Luehman discusses activities (1959-1962) in Trinidad as commander of the Naval air station before Trinidad and Tobago obtained their independence (pp. 16-17).

Luehman discusses in great length his years (1963-1965) as Naval Attaché to the USSR (pp. 17-28), including the use of assigned drivers who were KGB men (pp. 17-18); attempts to spy on Soviet ship and submarine building (pp. 18-19); the preponderance of Russian surveillance (pp. 19-27) with many details concerning KGB operations; demonstrations against Americans (p. 27); and of the hardships of embassy life such as having to obtain food from other countries (pp. 25-28).

After finishing his tour in the USSR, Luehman returned to the States, earning his Master's in Foreign Affairs from George Washington University (p. 24) before being assigned as the Naval Attaché in Greece (p. 25).

After his retirement in 1971, Luehman worked for several years (pp. 28-29) in the Near East for a subsidiary of National Cash Register (NCR) which dealt with military communications systems. He describes visits to Khartoum in Sudan, Iran, and Saudi Arabia.

The last items described are the weather tracking of a typhoon off of Okinawa when he flew to the center of the typhoon (pp. 30-31) and an incident during World War II when he had engine trouble while searching for a submarine and barely made it back to Midway (pp. 31-32).

Records of the Paris-based interior design firm, including ledgers, stock books, furniture designs, correspondence, photographs, fabric samples, drawings, and business records for the firms' Paris, London, New York, and Buenos Aires offices.

The Carlhian family operated a leading Paris-based interior design firm that specialized in interiors in the French eighteenth-century style. The firm's foundation is traced back to 1867, when Anatole Carlhian and his brother-in-law, Albert Dujardin-Beaumetz, founded the export commission business Carlhian & Beaumetz located in Paris at 30, rue Beaurepaire, close to the place de la République. The firm initially made purchases on behalf of its clients and later specialized in reproductions of period French furniture. The London dealer Duveen Brothers became an important client, using Carlhian & Beaumetz as an intermediary for its dealings in the French market not involving fine art and antique objects. Duveen Brothers also recommended Carlhian & Beaumetz to the future king of England Edward VII as designers for the thrones for his coronation ceremonies.

Abstract

The Peale family is best known as a family of artists; however, family interests and activities were much more wide-ranging. The best known Peale is Charles Willson Peale (1741-1827, APS 1786), who produced more than one thousand paintings, including hundreds of portraits of leading Americans during the colonial and early national periods. Peale was married three times, to Rachel Brewster (1744-1790), Elizabeth de Peyster (1765-1804), and Hannah More (1755-1821). He had eighteen children, eleven of whom reached adulthood. Three of Charles Willson Peale's sons became artists: Raphaele Peale (1774-1825), Rembrandt Peale (1778-1860), and Rubens Peale (1784-1865). A fourth son, Titian Ramsay Peale (1799-1885, APS 1833), was a naturalist (who made drawings on the exploring expeditions he accompanied) and pioneer in photography, and another son, Benjamin Franklin Peale (1795-1870), became a naturalist and paleontologist. Peale's daughter Sophonisba

Angusciola was married to Coleman Sellers (1781-1834), an inventor and manufacturer of machinery, including locomotives. Two of their sons, George Escol Sellers (1808-1899) and Coleman Sellers (1827-1907, APS 1872), were inventors and engineers. The latter served as director of the construction of the hydro-electric power development at Niagara Falls. He was married to Cornelia Wells Sellers (1831-1909). One of their grandsons was Charles Coleman Sellers (1903-1980, APS 1979), a librarian and historian and the author of several studies of the Peale family, including a Charles Willson Peale biography.

Peale's daughter Sophonisba Angusciola was married to Coleman Sellers (1781-1834), an inventor and manufacturer of machinery, including locomotives. Two of their sons, George Escol Sellers (1808-1899) and Coleman Sellers (1827-1907, APS 1872), were inventors and engineers. The latter served as director of the construction of the hydro-electric power development at Niagara Falls. He was married to Cornelia Wells Sellers (1831-1909). One of their grandsons was Charles Coleman Sellers (1903-1980, APS 1979), a librarian and historian and the author of several studies of the Peale family, including a Charles Willson Peale biography.

Charles Willson Peale was born in Queen Anne's County, Maryland, in 1741. His father Charles had been banished from Britain to the colonies for embezzling funds while working as a clerk in the General Post Office at London. By 1740 the elder Charles was employed as a teacher in Annapolis; later that year he married Margaret Triggs. The couple lived in modest circumstances. They had five children. Charles Willson's father died when he was still a boy. At the age of twelve Charles was apprenticed to Nathan Waters, a saddle maker in Annapolis. In 1762, Charles opened his own shop; that same year he married Rachel Brewer. The couple eventually had eleven children, six of whom reached adulthood. They also adopted Peale's orphaned nephew Charles Peale Polk.

Peale struggled to support his family as a saddler. Within a couple of years, he added first upholstery and harness making, and then watch and clock repair to his business. He also tried his hand at painting. In 1763 he began to advertise himself as a sign painter. That year, he also received his first painting instruction. His teacher was the prolific portrait painter John Hesselius, the son of Gustavus Hesselius, America's first portrait painter of note. Peale wrote in his autobiography that he traded one of his best saddles for the opportunity to watch the younger Hesselius paint.

Soon his talent attracted the attention of several members of the local gentry, including Charles Carroll, Governor Horatio Sharpe, Daniel Dulaney, and Benedict Calvert, who decided to provide funds for young Peale to study with Benjamin West in London. Peale stayed in London from 1767 to 1769, during which time he completed two full-length portraits of William Pitt. He also prepared an engraving of the painting for sale in North America. Furthermore, Peale met Benjamin Franklin, who had been acquainted with his father, and he visited the studios of Sir Joshua Reynolds, Francis Cotes, and Allen Ramsey.

For six years after his return to North America, Peale made his home in Annapolis. Here he gave lessons in painting to his brothers St. George (1745-1788) and James (1749-1831). The latter subsequently became a notable miniature painter; two of James' daughters, Anna Claypole (1791-1878) and Sarah Miriam (1800-1885), would become professional painters as well. During this period Charles Willson also traveled throughout the middle colonies to paint the portraits of prominent figures. In 1772 he visited Mt. Vernon to paint the first of what would ultimately be seven life portraits of George Washington. In 1775 Peale moved to Philadelphia in hopes of increased patronage. Demand for his portraits was indeed rising, and he was busy with commissions from several prominent families.

Peale was an ardent supporter of the Revolution, joining the city militia as a private, rising to the rank of first lieutenant, and participating in the battles of Trenton and Princeton. He painted several officers and also sometimes their wives at various encampments, including portraits of Arthur St. Clair, Benjamin Lincoln, Nathanael Greene, and his well-known full-length painting of Washington at the Battle of Princeton. After the evacuation of Philadelphia by the occupying British, Peale became an active member of the "Furious Whigs." He was also a member of a Committee of Correspondence, the "Constitutional Society," and the General Assembly of Pennsylvania (1779 to 1781). However, in 1787, in part due to fear that his political views and activities would antagonize his patrons, Peale left politics. Between 1788 and 1791 Peale painted numerous portraits of wealthy and prominent Americans primarily in Philadelphia and Maryland, including Alexander Hamilton and Thomas Jefferson.

In 1782 Peale began to exhibit his art in a gallery in his home. In the mid-1780s he opened a "Repository for Natural Curiosities," a scientifically organized museum with displays of natural history objects alongside his portraits of notable Americans. He formally retired as a professional artist in 1794, though he continued to paint portraits of family members, friends, and for his museum. He exhibited some of his and his sons' paintings in the Columbianum, an art school and museum he founded that year to support art and artists in Philadelphia. In 1795 Peale's Museum (and his family) moved into the American Philosophical Society's building, Philosophical Hall. He had been elected to membership in 1786, and he served as the Society's curator from 1788 to 1810.

A major, and at the time unique, component of the museum was its collection of natural history specimen that were displayed according to Linnaean taxonomy. (Peale was a great admirer of the Swedish botanist and named his son Charles Linnaeus in his honor.) Peale's first specimen evidently was a paddle fish, a gift from Professor Robert Patterson (1743-1824, APS 1783) of the University of Pennsylvania. The collection soon included an extensive variety of animals and objects, including birds, insects, amphibian animals, fossils, minerals, and stones. With the help of his son Raphaelle, Peale prepared many of the animals in his exhibition himself. In addition, he painted the backgrounds of their "habitat arrangement," a kind of display that he originated. In 1793 he sent Raphaelle to Georgia and South America to collect specimens, and in 1801 he organized an expedition--the first scientific in the new United States--to exhume the bones of a mastodon that had been found in upstate New York. His efforts were supported by his friend President Thomas Jefferson and by the American Philosophical Society. Peale and his son Rembrandt traveled to New York, helped exhume the skeleton, transported it back to Philadelphia, and mounted it in the museum. The skeleton became an immediate sensation. Peale captured the unearthing of the bones in his painting "The Exhumation of the Mastodon" (1806-1808). Peale's Museum was the most successful institution of its kind in the early United States.

Even though Peale and other leading figures, including Thomas Jefferson, believed that his institution fulfilled an important educational function in the early republic, Peale never succeeded in securing public funds toward its support. This meant that he had to rely on private aid and assistance.

Nevertheless, in 1802 he was able to convince the Pennsylvania legislature to grant him free use of the old State House in Philadelphia (now known as Independence Hall). He subsequently moved his exhibitions from the APS to the second floor of the state house.

In 1804 Peale's second wife Elizabeth died in childbirth; the infant, her seventh child, also died. The next year he married Hannah Moore. The couple did not have children; instead, Hannah helped raised her husband's offspring from his previous marriages.

In addition to his work with the museum, Peale obtained patents for fireplace improvements and a portable vapor bath. He also avid user of a writing machine, called the polygraph, whose complex of telescoping arms a created a copy of whatever as he wrote. He made models for his friends Jefferson and Benjamin Henry Latrobe; both men used it to duplicate many of their letters. He also published essays on various topics, including the building of bridges (1797), health (1803), and "Domestic Happiness" (1812). In 1805 a group of artists and business leaders, including Peale and the sculptor William Rush, founded the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts, the first art school in the nation.

In 1810 Peale retired to "Belfield," a farm in Germantown, Pennsylvania. He spent much time on technical experiments and the care and cultivation of his gardens. His sons--Franklin, Titian Ramsay, and Rubens--gradually took over most of the work at the museum, though Peale was never one to keep hands off, and he took a generous stipend from the museum for himself. In 1816 Peale replaced the museum's whale oil lights with gas lights, the first in Philadelphia. Three years later the city ordered the lights removed, due to the fire hazard they posed. In 1821 the state legislature incorporated the Philadelphia Museum Company, composed of Peale's sons Raphael, Rembrandt, and Rubens, his son-in-law Coleman Sellers and Pierce Butler.

In 1822 Peale completed one of his most famous paintings, his "Self Portrait: The Artist in His Museum." The image of himself in front of the main exhibit room with displays of natural history objects and paintings depicts Peale as artist, museum keeper, naturalist, and educator. A few months before the museum was scheduled to move into larger quarters, Peale died in Philadelphia. By that time the collection numbered more than 100,000 objects. Peale's oldest son and first child to survive childhood Raphaele Peale (1774-1825) received instruction in painting from his father. Beginning in the mid-1780s, he also assisted him in the museum. In 1795 the museum's catalogue indentified him as "Portrait Painter at the Museum," and he exhibited several of his painting in the Columbianum. In 1796 he and his brother Rembrandt moved to Baltimore to open a museum; however, economic problems contributed to its failure less than two years later. In 1797 Raphaele married Martha "Patty" McGlathery (1775-1852). They had eight children.

Raphaele also conducted scientific experiments that led to, among other things, a patent of a solution for the preservation of ship's timber. In addition, he collaborated with his father in the development of new methods for heating rooms, such as the use of sliding fireplace dampers.

Charles Coleman Sellers wrote in his biography of Charles Willson Peale that Raphaele never succeeded in making a living as an artist, and that his life was marked by long absences from home, financial instability, heavy drinking, and chronic illness. In 1803 and 1805 he traveled through the South with a physiognotrace, a device that traced profile silhouettes on paper and could be operated by the sitter himself. His income was substantial enough to allow him the purchase of a "handsome House" in Philadelphia. In 1804 he and Rembrandt went to South Carolina, Georgia and Maryland to exhibit the mastodon. He also traveled to Washington to take President Jefferson's profile, and then ventured to Boston. Here he encountered a more competitive environment that rendered it challenging to earn a living. In 1805 he was shipwrecked on his way back to Georgia, losing some of his material, including gilt frames. More misfortune followed: he broke his leg in a fall from his horse, contracted a tropical disease, and evidently suffered a kind of mental breakdown. He returned to Philadelphia in 1806, broken in health and finances.

By the end of the decade, Raphaelle's growing family relied on his father for support. Raphaelle's problems were exacerbated by alcoholism, arthritis in his fingers, and a painful, recurring case of gout. In 1809 he was admitted to Pennsylvania Hospital for "delirium." Nevertheless, his later years were marked by periods of productivity. He undertook several more Southern tours to sell his profiles. He also completed miniatures of Franklin Peale and Titian Ramsay. Beginning in 1811 he regularly exhibited paintings at the Pennsylvania Academy annual exhibitions. While he painted small portraits early in his career, his area of greatest expertise was still life. Indeed, some historians have called Peale the first American professional still life painter. By the early 1820s, he was receiving considerable critical and also some financial success. It was during this period that he completed one of his best-known paintings, "Venus Rising from the Sea--A Deception." He also received commissions for portraits, including one by Maryland Governor Samuel Sprigg.

Raphaelle spent the winter of 1823/24 in Charleston, South Carolina, returning to Philadelphia in time to take part in the celebrations around the visit of the Marquis de Lafayette and to sell profiles of him. Toward the end of his life Raphaelle tended to pay merchants for goods and services with his paintings. He died in Philadelphia.

Rembrandt Peale was a painter as well. Born at the Vanarsdalen farm, near Richboro, Bucks County, Pennsylvania, during the British occupation of Philadelphia, Rembrandt was an accomplished artist and was helpful in the creation and maintenance of the Peale Museum. In 1802, to further his practice of painting, Rembrandt traveled to England and met Benjamin West, who had been helpful to C. W. Peale. It is suggested by Horace Wells Sellers, in his biographical notes on Rembrandt, that it was contact with West that led the former to move from portraiture to biblical, historical and allegorical paintings. Indeed, aside from the portrait of Washington, which won the Silver Medal of the Franklin Institute, Rembrandt's most famous and well received painting, "The Court of Death," is indicative of this move from portraiture.

In 1808 and 1809 C.W. Peale commissioned Rembrandt Peale to travel Europe painting the portraits of certain French Savants for inclusion in the Peale Museum. It was during this time that Rembrandt was offered Imperial patronage if he would establish himself in Paris. Though he ultimately decided to return to America, the influence of the court paintings had a lasting impression on Rembrandt's future work. At the time that Charles Willson Peale gave up portraiture to run the museum, Rembrandt attempted to do both, creating a museum in Baltimore while continuing his painting. This eventually proved a failure, though Rembrandt did succeed Col. Trumbull as president of the American Academy in New York. Rembrandt Peale died in Philadelphia in 1860 at the age of 83.

Charles Willson's third surviving son, Titian Ramsay Peale, born in 1780, showed an interest in natural history at an early age, and was helping his father clean and dress specimens for the museum before the age of 13. Titian fell ill during the yellow fever epidemic of 1798 in Philadelphia. Responding positively to treatment at first, Titian accompanied his father to New York to tend to William DePeyster, Charles Willson Peale's father-in-law. While there Titian's condition worsened and he died "at 8 o'clock 8 Sept." In his diary, Charles Willson laments the early death of his son, "Thus departed a youth whose talents for preserving subjects of natural History was very general, Birds, Quadraped or Fish &c. equally easy to him ... America has cause to mourn the loss of this promising youth."

Apparently less interested in a career as a painter than many of the other members of the family, Rubens Peale was instrumental as a museum director, not only of his father's Philadelphia Museum, but also of that of the Baltimore Museum and his own museum in New York. Starting at an early age, Rubens was a constant assistant to his father in running the museum, and in 1810 when Charles

Willson started thinking of retiring to pursue other interests, Rubens fully took over. However, as Charles Willson began to tire of life on the farm, he returned to the museum. Rubens moved to the Baltimore museum, thus replacing Rembrandt Peale. After continued trouble with Baltimore Museum stockholders, Rubens started his own museum in New York. The New York Museum opened on October 26, 1828, which purposely coincided with the opening of the Erie Canal; Rubens took advantage of the fanfare of the latter event to benefit for former. For several years the museum did well financially, despite close proximity of a major competitor, Scudders American Museum (later owned by P.T. Barnum and known as Barnum's American Museum). The panic of 1837, however, left Rubens broke, and he eventually sold his collection to P.T. Barnum, who also bought the majority of the collections from the Baltimore and Philadelphia museums. Rubens finished his life in the mountains of Pennsylvania. He was, as biographer Charles Coleman Sellers says, "a learned, affable country gentleman – an authority on many obscure branches of knowledge, such as mesmerism, a fad whose mysteries he had first introduced to the American public," and as an artist, finally taking up still-life painting in the last years of his life; he died in 1865.

Benjamin Franklin Peale showed an aptitude for mechanics. He aided Matthias Baldwin in the creation of the locomotive which was displayed in Peale's Philadelphia Museum. After serving in the Peale museum as manager from 1822-1833, Franklin, as he was called, entered the service of the U.S. Mint. Two years spent in Europe studying various mints culminated in the introduction of steam presses at the U.S. Mint in 1835-1836. Franklin Peale remained with the Mint until 1854, retiring as Chief Coiner. He died in 1870.

Named after his recently-deceased brother, Titian Ramsay Peale, the youngest son of Charles Willson Peale, aided his father in the management of the museum. Titian Ramsay traveled extensively to supply specimens and images for the museum. In 1818 he traveled with George Ord and Thomas Say to collect subjects in Georgia and Florida. In 1819 Titian Ramsay joined Major Stephen Harriman Long's Scientific Expedition as zoologist, painter and as assistant naturalist, "to prepare the skins of such animals as may be discovered." Titian Ramsay also served as naturalist under St. Charles Wilkes of the United States Exploring Expedition to the South Seas. Peale's various travels resulted in illustrations for several important works on natural history, including Charles Lucien Bonaparte's American Ornithology (1825–33) and Thomas Say's American Entomology (1824–28). In 1843 Titian Ramsay took control of the now distressed museum. By this time, however, it was too late the save the institution and the collection was sold off that same year. From 1849 to 1872 Titian Ramsay Peale served as Examiner in the U.S. Patent Office in Washington, D.C., dying in 1885.

Daughters of Charles Willson Peale include Angelica Kauffman Peale (1775-1853), who married Alexander Robinson; Sophonisba Peale (1786-1859), who married Coleman Sellers; Sybilla Miriam (1797-1856) who married Andrew Summers; and Elizabeth De Peyster Peale (1802-1857), who married William Augustus Patterson.

The marriage of Sophonisba Peale (1786-1859) to Coleman Sellers linked the Peale and Sellers family. The Sellers were a family of engineers and inventors, many of whom made significant improvements in the fields of papermaking and locomotive engineering. John Sellers (1728-1805, APS 1768) served as a member of the Provincial Council and was, by profession, a surveyor. John was on the APS committee to observe the transit of Venus in 1769.

Apprenticed as a lawyer, Coleman's father Nathan eventually turned to paper making, and quickly became a leader in the fledging paper industry in America, focusing on the production of wire molds. During the Revolution Nathan enlisted in Colonel John Paschall's Flying Camp of Pennsylvania militiamen and marched into New Jersey in 1776. A resolution of Congress, however, put an end to his military life and sent him home to make paper, since Nathan was one of the few in America with the necessary experience.

After the war, demand for his paper molds bloomed. Orders for specific watermarks came from across the country, from banks and institutions eager to have a remedy for counterfeit money. He made innovations in the field that were eventually carried back to the more developed paper mold markets of Europe. To match the new demand, Nathan, with his brother David, started N. & D. Sellers, a firm that engaged in wire working and in the manufacture of wool cards and paper molds.

Coleman Sellers (1781-1834) carried on the N. & D. Sellers firm after the death of David Sellers in 1813 and the retirement of Nathan Sellers in 1817. Coleman moved the family business to land outside of Philadelphia – near present-day 69th Street – and expanded into the locomotive business. In this new area, he is best known for several improvements to the design of locomotives, including the pivoted forward truck and wooden frames in the running gears.

He and Sophonsiba Peale Sellers had six children, of whom several would continue in the family lines of locomotive engineering and papermaking.

Second son of Coleman and Sophonsiba Sellers, George Escol Sellers worked with his father to develop the improvements in locomotives. Taking these improvements further, Escol created a hill-climbing locomotive for the Isthmus of Panama in 1847. In 1854 Escol established “Sellers’ Landing,” an industrial center on the Ohio River. In 1864 he invented a new process for paper making, using grass and reed rendered to pulp and forced by steam against a baffle plate.

Many of Escol's plans ended in frustration and tragedy. His wife and all but one of his children died while living at Seller’s Landing, and this remote location made it difficult for his manufacturing ventures to be successful. During these hard years, Charles Dudley Warner first heard of Escol's name and applied it to The Gilded Age, the novel he wrote with Mark Twain. The association with the name of the shady character from the book was source of further frustration for Escol.

In later years, Escol moved to Tennessee and devoted significant time to family genealogy and history. After his death in 1899 his paper making process enjoyed resurgence due to paper scarcity and brought him posthumous fame. Youngest son of Coleman and Sophonsiba Sellers, Coleman Sellers, Jr. (1827-1907), was a prominent engineer and inventor. After finishing school, Coleman Sellers went to work at an early age at the Globe Rolling Mill in Cincinnati, Ohio, which was operated by two of his older brothers, Charles and Escol. He showed early promise as in engineering and made several significant improvements to the Mill. After several years with the Globe Rolling Mill, serving part of the time as superintendent, Coleman Jr. began under contract to design and construct locomotives for the Panama Railway in 1850-1851. In 1856, at the behest of his second cousin William Sellers, Coleman moved to Philadelphia and assumed the position of chief engineer of William Sellers & Company. In this capacity he received patents for various inventions and developed an interest in the transfer of electrical power. After leaving William Sellers & Company in 1886, Coleman became a consulting engineer of the Cataract Construction Company, formed to develop the hydro-electric power of Niagara Falls. In this position, Coleman worked with the International Niagara Commission, and helped determine the types of turbines and generators to use, and the best method of transporting the power generated by the Falls. He also developed the large dynamos installed at the power plant. His work at Niagara Falls was his crowning achievement as an engineer, as he overruled the opinion of his principal colleague, Lord Kelvin, and successfully established the first large scale use of alternating currents. Coleman worked closely with his son Horace Wells Sellers, also an engineer with the Cataract Construction Company. Coleman Sellers also had a lifelong interest in natural philosophy and contemporary developments in physics and other fields of the emerging natural sciences. While working in Cincinnati, this interest resulted in the formation of a gentleman's debating and lecturing club around the sciences. In later life, Colman continued to find time for his experiments in physics and telegraphy, as well as microscopic and photography. He is credited with the photographic inventions that moved forward the usefulness of the art by rendering plates easier to use, and by inventing the “kinematoscope,” an early precursor to the motion picture.

Coleman Sellers served as Vice-President of the American Philosophical Society and as President of the Franklin Institute. He was instrumental in the standardization of screw threads, a major step in the world of mechanics, and was influential in arguing against the adoption of the metric system in the United States, principally in a paper given before the Mechanical Society of American Engineers in 1880 entitled “The Metric System: Is It Wise to Introduce it into Our Machine Shops.” He died in 1907 in Philadelphia.

Coleman’s grandson, Charles Coleman Sellers (1903-1980, APS 1979), was a noted historian of early America, best known for his numerous works on the life and artistic production of the family of his own great-great grandfather, Charles Willson Peale. Charles Coleman Sellers had much to do with the assembling of the Peale-Sellers Family Collection at the American Philosophical Society.

Sellers was born in 1903 in Overbrook, Pennsylvania, the son of Horace Sellers, an engineer and architect, and his wife Cora Wells. He attended Haverford College (1925) and Harvard (MA 1926). In 1932 Sellers married Helen Earle Gilbert; they had two children. She died in 1951, and the following year, he married Barbara Roberts. From 1932 to 1938 the Sellers operated Tracey’s Book Store in Hebron, Connecticut. Sellers subsequently accepted a position as librarian at Wesleyan College (1937-1949) and in 1956 became librarian of the Waldron Phoenix Belknap, Jr., Research Library of American Painting at Winterthur, Delaware, and of Dickinson College (1956-1968). For several years in the late 1940s, Sellers worked at the American Philosophical Society as Research Associate.

Sellers’ first publications dealt with such figures as Lorenzo Dow (1928), Theophilus Ransom Gates (1930), and Benedict Arnold (1930), and he also wrote several plays, three of which were produced. However, Sellers is best known for his work on the voluminous artistic output of the Peale family and on the Peale Museum. His publications include a catalogue raisonné of Peale, titled Portraits and Miniatures of Charles Willson Peale (1952), and a biography of Peale that earned him the Bancroft Prize for History in 1970. Sellers also conducted research on Benjamin Franklin and others among the Peales’ contemporaries, and he wrote a history of Dickinson College (1973).

Sellers was a member of the Society of the Cincinnati. He received an honorary doctorate from Temple University in 1957 and was named Historian of the Year by the Cumberland County (Pennsylvania) Historical Society in 1972. He was elected to membership in the APS in 1979; Dickinson College awarded him an honorary degree that same year.

Seller’s second wife died in 1979, and he became engaged to Peggy Barnes. He also completed his twelfth and final book, titled Mr. Peale’s Museum. However, he did not live to see its publication. He died in 1980 while on a visit to his daughter in Australia.

Scope and content

The collection represents the careers and interests of the members of the Peale-Sellers family from the 1670s to 1960s. Divided into seven series, more than half is correspondence among various members of the Peale-Sellers families.

Principal correspondents in Series I include Charles Willson Peale, Rembrandt Peale, Titian Ramsay Peale, Benjamin Franklin Peale, Nathan Sellers, Coleman Sellers, and George Escol Sellers. Principal topics of the letters include the Philadelphia Museum, natural history, and Charles Willson Peale’s portraits. Various business ventures of the Sellers’ family are also covered, including inventions and investments in steam engines, papermaking and locomotives.

In series 2 are writings by the members of the Peale-Sellers family including poetry, short diaries, autobiographical works, and writings on a number of diverse topics. A large portion of the series is concerned with genealogy.

Series 3 includes wills, indentures, receipts, financial statements, and several other types of records pertaining to financial and legal matters. Of particular historical interest is a resolution from the Continental Congress ordering Nathan Sellers home during the Revolutionary War so he can make paper molds, which Congress considered a better use of his time.

The series also holds important records that illuminate various business ventures of the Peale-Sellers family, including expense reports for "excavating the mammoth," a petition from C.W. Peale to the commissioners of Philadelphia for a tax exemption and as well as other museum matters, and an oath of originality by Nathan Sellers for a patent.

Series 4 is a rich resource for the business side of the Niagara power generating project and contains official reports and contracts and contains mostly letters between Coleman Sellers and his son Horace. The letters also have family news.

Series 5 includes awards, certificates to various members of the Peale and Sellers families, as well as tickets of admission, several of which are for the Peale Museum.

Series 6 consists of graphics which and includes sketches, paintings, drawings and maps.

Series 7, composed of 147 volumes, provides insight into many family members and includes from Charles Willson Peale's autobiography, diaries and letterbooks and Charles Coleman Sellers' research material on the family. Expense books and diaries show day-to-day life during the nineteenth century, as well as life during extraordinary times of war and tragedy.

Collection information

Related material

This collection is also available on microfilm (Film 240). The papers of C. W. Peale and his family have been reproduced almost in their entirety in microfiche form (Lillian B. Miller, ed. "Collected papers of Charles Willson Peale and his family." Kraus Microfilm, 1980), which is available in the APS Library as Microfiche 11.

Naval History Note

There are at least two letters in the Peale-Sellers Correspondence which may be of interest to naval historians:

Wilkes, Charles, 1798-1877. United States Exploring Expedition (1838-1842).

1. Peale, Rembrandt. Letter to the president and directors of the Philadelphia Museum. 1837 January 31. As his brother Titian is appointed on the United States Exploring Expedition, Rembrandt applied for position of manager of the Museum. 2 pages.
2. Peale, Titian Ramsay. Letter to Lieutenant Charles Wilkes. 1838 July 11. Wishes Wilkes to sit for a portrait. 1 page.

General note

The Peale-Sellers Family Papers is a large collection within the papers relating to Charles Willson Peale. The collection is extremely rich, providing insight not only into the life Charles Willson Peale but also many aspects of life in early America. There are also many types of material: account books, diaries, letters, and drawings.

Early American History Note

The Peale-Sellers Collection is an extensive collection that contains various records of the extended Peale family. MOLE contains an extensive inventory.

| This series represents a wide range of material, including poetry, short diary and autobiographical works. The writings of various types cover a wide range of topics, from bridge building to thoughts on natural history and mental philosophy. A large portion of this series is concerned with genealogy. Also present are writings accumulated through various members of the Peale-Sellers family, but are not easily identifiable as being created by them.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |           |                           |                |

| Series 3 includes wills, indentures, receipts, financial statements, and several other types of records pertaining to financial and legal matters. Of particular historical interest is a resolution from the Continental Congress ordering Nathan Sellers home during the Revolutionary War so he can make paper molds, which Congress considered a better use of his time. The series also holds important records that illuminate various business ventures of the Peale-Sellers family, including expense reports for “excavating the mammoth,” a petition from C.W. Peale to the commissioners of Philadelphia for a tax exemption and as well as other museum matters, and an oath of originality by Nathan Sellers for a patent. There are several items in this collection that were brought to the APS after being found in Congress Hall during renovations. These items are identifiable by a note indicating their provenance (originally written by Horace Wells Sellers), as well as their uncertain relation to the rest of the material. Examples include petitions to the select council for various projects, such as the improvement of Washington Square in Philadelphia, and warrants of arrest for various persons. |                  |                                |                       |

| A densely concentrated on one ten year span, this series contains correspondence and business records related to Coleman and Horace Wells Sellers' interest in generating power from Niagara Falls, from the earliest phases to the year 1899. The formation of the project is reflected in letters of introduction to Alexander Graham Bell, explaining the project and asking for support, and a feasibility report by Coleman Sellers. Topics discussed include the procurement and creation of tunnels, explosives and other equipment. Often sliding from business to personal matters, the correspondence also covers family news between Coleman and his son Horace Wells Sellers. The business records reflect the formation of the Cataract Construction Co. and its relation to the Canal Company.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |                  |                                |                       |

| Spanning from the end of the seventeenth century to the second half of the twentieth century, with the bulk of the material from the nineteenth century, the series includes correspondence from members of the Peale and Sellers families. Principal correspondents include Charles Willson Peale, Rembrandt Peale, Titian Ramsay Peale, Benjamin Franklin Peale, Nathan Sellers, Coleman Sellers, and George Escol Sellers. Other correspondents include George Washington Parke Custis, Eliza Burd Patterson Peale (Mrs. Rubens), Harriet Friel Peale (Mrs. Charles Willson Peale, Rubens Peale, Angelica Peale Robinson, and Albert Charles Peale, who appears to have assembled a portion of the collection. Principle topics discussed are the Philadelphia Museum, natural history, and Charles Willson Peale's portraits. Various business ventures of the Sellers' family are also represented, including inventions and investments in steam engines and locomotives. The time frame of the series ensures that many major American events are mentioned, such as the American Revolution, the War of 1812, and the Civil War. Large portions of the correspondence refer to the Peale family works of art and are of particular interest to art historians. |                       |                           |                                      |

| The following was a note on the leaf to which this item was pasted: "This proposal of marriage was among the family papers taken from Mill BAnks by Hannah Sellers Hill after the death of her sister Ann Sellers. The paper and water mark suggests that it was written before Ann's & Hannah's day. Perhaps to one of their Coleman Aunts who lived at Mill Banks late in life." |         |         |                              |

| Peale, Charles Willson, 1741-1827.Portrait list Abstract: This is a list of names of 55 persons whom Peale painted, with notes on the sizes of paintings and prices charged. This information appears in another form in Charles Coleman Sellers, "Portraits and Miniatures by Charles Willson Peale," Transactions of the American Philosophical Society 42/1(1952). This single page contains a list of fifty-five individuals who Charles Willson Peale painted along with how much he charged. Although it carries no date, it likely was from before the American Revolution. It contains the last names of prominent individuals from Maryland-Pennsylvania high society, such as Dulaney, Dickinson, Carroll, Tilgham, and Chew. Was previously cataloged as B P31.8. Alternate formats available: The papers of C. W. Peale and his family have been reproduced almost in their entirety in microfiche form (Lillian B. Miller, ed. "Collected papers of Charles Willson Peale and his family." Kraus Microfilm, 1980). | [ca. 1772]    |              | Request File |

| Series 3 includes wills, indentures, receipts, financial statements, and several other types of records pertaining to financial and legal matters. Of particular historical interest is a resolution from the Continental Congress ordering Nathan Sellers home during the Revolutionary War so he can make paper molds, which Congress considered a better use of his time. The series also holds important records that illuminate various business ventures of the Peale-Sellers family, including expense reports for "excavating the mammoth," a petition from C.W. Peale to the commissioners of Philadelphia for a tax exemption and as well as other museum matters, and an oath of originality by Nathan Sellers for a patent. There are several items in this collection that were brought to the APS after being found in Congress Hall during renovations. These items are identifiable by a note indicating their provenance (originally written by Horace Wells Sellers), as well as their uncertain relation to the rest of the material. Examples include petitions to the select council for various projects, such as the improvement of Washington Square in Philadelphia, and warrants of arrest for various persons. |                |          |                                                |
