Biographical History

Karl Hubenthal (1917-1998) was an American sports and editorial cartoonist.

Born in Beemer, Nebraska on May 1, 1917, Hubenthal grew up in Los Angeles, California and graduated from Hollywood High School. Hubenthal got his start in 1935 at the Los Angeles Herald-Express, where his first job was with the Art Department. In 1939 he began to do sports cartoons for that newspaper. Hubenthal left to serve with the Marine Corps during World War II and following the war worked as a freelance advertising artist.

But in 1949 he was drawn back into cartooning at another Hearst paper, the Examiner and in 1956 he became the paper's full-time editorial cartoonist. When the Herald Express was combined with the Examiner in 1962, Hubenthal's cartoons were one of the Examiner's features carried over to the newly combined publication. Hubenthal's cartoons were also syndicated to other Hearst newspapers and he continued to contribute sports cartoons to the paper on Fridays and drew other sports-themed commercial art pieces .

Hubenthal's work has been widely recognized. In 1940, he was named Best Sports Cartoonist at the New York World's Fair and the National Cartoonists Society gave him four awards for his sports cartoons. Through his sports cartoons, he supported the effort to bring the Dodgers baseball team to Los Angeles and Hubenthal routinely caricatured local teams including the University of Southern California. The American Association of Editorial Cartoonists presented Hubenthal with the National Headliner's Award in 1958, 1960 and 1961. NCS also named him best editorial cartoonist in 1961, 1967 and 1970. Twenty-five Freedoms Foundation Medals were presented to him and he was nominated for the Pulitzer Prize several times. He served as president of the AAEC and the Society of Illustrators.

Karl Hubenthal retired in 1982 and died of cancer in Los Angeles on August 13, 1998.

> "The nice part of what I do is that I get instant responses. I either get panned, or praised, but at least I know what I'm saying is having some effect. When you don't get mail, that's when you should worry." (Herald-Examiner, 1982)

Biographical Note +/-

Alfred H. Fast (1917-2004), working for the architectural firm John Graham & Company, was the Project Architect for the Seattle World's Fair Space Needle. Fast graduated from the School of Architecture at the University of Vienna in 1938, and served in the United States Army Corps of Engineers on the Pacific front in World War II. While with John Graham & Company, Fast also worked on shopping mall projects in Washington and Oregon, including the Bon Marche, Alderwood Mall and Medford Shopping Mall. Fast also worked for Pietro Belluschi in Portland, Oregon, Victor Gruen Associates in Los Angeles, and WESTCOR in Phoenix, Arizona.

Alfred Fast was married to Ruth Fast of Seattle. The couple had two children, Daniel Fast of Los Angeles and Josey Fast of Seattle.

Content Description +/-

The collection consists largely of photographs which document the construction of the Space Needle, from ground-breaking to completion. A series of photographs from Pacific Car and Foundry Company largely documents the fabrication and erection of the steel work, and a series by Roger Dudley for John Graham Architects includes several images documenting construction of the restaurant. Other photographs depict the completed Space Needle as part of the World's Fair grounds. Other materials include promotional publications describing the conception and construction of the Space Needle.

Historical Background +/-

The architecture of the 605 feet tall Space Needle, built for the 1962 Seattle World's Fair (Century 21 Exposition), was the result of a collaboration between businessman Edward E. Carlson and architect John Graham. Inspired by a visit to the Stuttgart Tower in Germany, Carlson's space-age vision for the Fair's central structure included a tower resembling a tethered balloon surrounded by cables; the top of the structure would house a restaurant. Graham turned the balloon into a flying-saucer shape, and wanted the restaurant to revolve, like the one in a tower he had previously designed for the Ala Moana shopping center in Hawaii. A dozen architects in Graham's firm worked on sketches and ideas, and University of Washington architecture professor Victor Steinbrueck provided the hour-glass shape of the tower. The final compromise was reached just a year and a half before the fair was to open. John Graham, contractor Howard S. Wright and others formed the "Pentagon Corporation" to finance the project. Howard

S. Wright Construction Company was the contractor for the Space Needle construction and the Pacific Car and Foundry Company (PACCAR) was the subcontractor for the steel fabrication and erection.

Historical Note

Harrison Paul Porter was born July 29, 1921, in Houston, Texas, the second of the four children of Constance Eve Ingalls Porter and Harry Ray Porter. His father, also known as Harrison Paul Porter, was Katherine Anne Porter's brother. Mr. Porter's siblings were Dorothy Rae, Constance Elita, and Charles Boone.

He graduated from John H. Reagan High School in Houston in 1939, served in the army in Europe in World War II, then attended the University of California, Los Angeles (UCLA). There, he majored in general studies and wrote movie and dance reviews and political columns for the university newspaper. He also met Salka Viertel, who wrote some of Greta Garbo's early films. Mr. Porter left UCLA to write movies with Viertel. After this project failed, Mr. Porter returned to Houston and worked for the Southern Pacific Railroad as a claims adjuster. In 1960, he began work in New York City as an executive assistant to David Muss, Chairman of the Board of the Muss-Tankoos Corporation, which builds and manages shopping malls. He retired from Muss-Tankoos in 1986. From 1987 to 1997, he lived in Austin, Texas. He relocated to Houston, Texas, in May 1997. Paul Porter died July 28, 2012, in Houston.

Mr. Porter met Katherine Anne Porter in Houston in 1937, and they became devoted to one another. They shared interests in music, art, and writing, and he often sought her advice on books and music. They began corresponding when Porter returned to Louisiana in 1938 and continued to do so very frequently until Porter was no longer able to correspond. Some of her letters to him were published in Mademoiselle as "Letters to a Nephew: Observations on--Pets, Poets, Sex, Love, Hate, Fame, Treason" in April 1966. She encouraged him to write and critiqued his works; two of his short stories were published in Accent in 1951. He also published book and dance reviews in the Houston Post and the New York Herald Tribune. He eventually decided to pursue a more stable, practical career in business.

Mr. Porter was frequently involved in the practical matters of Katherine Anne's life; he found her new homes and moved her possessions when she was unable to do so. He became Katherine Anne Porter's legal guardian in 1977. Porter had become incapable of managing her own affairs; her behavior was erratic and she had begun to give valuable possessions to strangers. When he wrote her that the court had granted him the guardianship, she became angry and accused him of trying to mistreat her. He spent the years of the guardianship struggling to manage her complex financial, legal, and literary matters while keeping his job at Muss-Tankoos. He moved her to Carriage Hill Nursing Center in Silver Spring, Maryland, in March 1980, where she died that September. Mr. Porter remained legally in charge of Porter's affairs until 1981; the estate was at last settled in 1985.

Scope and Contents of the Collection

Paul Porter's collection includes materials dating from 1903 to 2009, with the bulk of the materials from 1977 to 2002. Mr. Porter's correspondence with Miss Porter and the University of Maryland, together with the guardianship records, form the core of the collection. The guardianship files contain financial, legal, and literary records, including court documents, business correspondence, and royalty statements, as well as a collection of personal correspondence. These provide extensive documentation of Katherine Anne Porter's last years. There are clippings of newspaper, magazine, and scholarly articles by or about Porter and a collection of her clipped, typed, and handwritten recipes and menus. The collection includes photographs of Katherine Anne Porter, her homes, her gravemarker, artwork related to Porter, and Mexico. The collection also includes photographs of Paul Porter. There are audio tapes of telephone conversations between Mr. Porter and Porter and of one of her dinner parties, one tape of commercially recorded music, and several video cassettes relating to Porter. Also included are a photograph of Paul Porter with First Lady Laura Bush framed with Mrs. Bush to Mr. Porter and a plaque recognizing Porter as a member of the Texas Literary Hall of Fame.

Custodial History and Acquisition Information

Paul Porter's papers came to the University of Maryland at College Park Libraries in four major groups. The first, consisting of the Paul Porter and Katherine Anne Porter correspondence, some other correspondence, and the clipping and recipe collection, was purchased by the Libraries in 1982. The guardianship records, which include correspondence, financial records, legal documents, photographs, publications, press releases, work papers, and audio tapes, were donated by Mr. Porter in 1989. Mr. Porter gave the third group, consisting of additional correspondence, guardianship records, and photographs, in July 1994. The Libraries also received other small groups of materials from Mr. Porter in 1986, 1987, primarily correspondence, records, books, magazine articles, photographs, and memorabilia. Between 1999 and 2005, Mr. Porter donated additional materials that were integrated into the Papers of Katherine Anne Porter collection or the Papers of Paul Porter collection as appropriate. In October 2010, Mr. Porter donated additional correspondence, manuscripts, notes clippings, publications, audiovisual materials, photographs, and memorabilia. These items and files donated in September 2004 were incorporated into the collection in Spring 2011.

Processing Information

Processed by: Processed by Mary Boccaccio, 1982. Addendum incorporated and guide revised by Jodi L. Bunnell in 1994; Kara M. McClurken, 1999; Michael Yates, 2006; and Laura Travis, 2011.

Processing note: The first group of Paul Porter's papers was purchased by the University of Maryland at College Park Libraries in 1982 and was processed by Mary Boccaccio. When Mr. Porter donated the guardianship records in 1989, a preliminary inventory was prepared, and Mr. Porter's arrangement of these records was retained. Mr. Porter visited the university in the spring of 1994 and worked on the papers with the Curator of Literary Manuscripts, weeding out some extraneous materials. The two collections, which had a great deal of similar information and were from the same time period, were combined and completely reprocessed in July-August 1994. A new series-level arrangement was created. Mr. Porter made his third major donation in July 1994; those materials, also of similar form and subject, were integrated into the existing arrangement.

The processing consisted mainly of combining and reconciling the three groups of records, which included interfiling materials from different folders. Some folders were also broken down for more logical access: items in one "Miscellaneous" correspondence folder were filed with appropriate subjects; some of the correspondents merited their own folders.

Four folders of correspondence--that with Cyrilly Abels, Matthew Josephson, Seymour Lawrence, and Current Biography--were moved to the papers of Katherine Anne Porter, as they were her correspondence and did not involve Mr. Porter or the guardianship. The folder of correspondence from John Melville, which would seemingly be part of the same category, was not moved to Porter's papers because Melville bequeathed his letters from Porter to Paul Porter. A letter to Porter from Upton Brady at Atlantic Monthly Press and a letter from Edna Edison to Porter were moved to Porter's papers, at Mr. Porter's suggestion. A 1966 edition of Craig Claiborne's The New York Times Menu Cook Book annotated in Porter's hand and dust jackets for Harcourt, Brace editions of Porter's Pale Horse, Pale Rider and The Days Before were transferred to the Marylandia and Rare Books Department. The folders in the entire collection were retitled, as appropriate, and placed in alphabetical order within their series.

The collection of clippings and recipes was classified by authorship and subject; all materials clipped from magazines and newspapers were copied to acid-free paper, and all available bibliographic information was transferred. All materials were placed in new acid-free folders and boxes.

In September 1999, Mr. Porter donated a small grouping of guardianship records relating to Roger Brooks. In October 1999, these materials, which Mr. Porter had arranged in chronological order, were housed in an acid-free folder and placed in Series 2, Box 1, of the collection.

In February 2006, additional gifts from Mr. Porter, donated between 1999 and 2005 were incorporated into the collection. As a result of this incorporation, Series 3: Printed Matter and Notes and Series 4: Audiovisual Materials were renamed, Series 6: Photographs was reorganized and renumbered, and Series 5: Books was created from books donated by Mr. Porter. Additionally, Series 7: Memorabilia was created by moving two pieces of memorabilia into the collection from the Katherine Anne Porter Papers.

In Spring 2011, additional materials donated by Mr. Porter in September 2004 and October 2010 were incorporated into the collection. The bulk of the materials consisted of correspondence and other printed matter that were incorporated into the existing Series 1: Correspondence and Series 3: Printed Matter and Notes. Other materials incorporated at this time include a number of audio and video tapes, as well as books, photographs, and memorabilia items.

- Series 6: Photographs
  - Subseries 6.1: People
  - Subseries 6.2: Artwork
  - Subseries 6.3: Places
  - Subseries 6.4: Mexico
  - Subseries 6.5: Sea World Sculpture
  - Subseries 6.6: Negatives and Contact Sheets
- Series 7: Memorabilia

Detailed Description of the Collection

Series 1: Correspondence, 1941-2009 and undated (2.5 linear feet)

Mr. Porter's involvement and continued interest in the life of Katherine Anne Porter led him to correspond with a variety of people about her. This series contains his correspondence with scholars, family members, friends, and other individuals or institutions interested in Katherine Anne Porter's life and work. The series also contains the extensive correspondence between Paul Porter and members of the University of Maryland community, which covers a period of thirty years, from 1978 to 2008. In addition to individual correspondent files, subject files are included as well. The subject files contain all correspondence relating to a particular subject such as Requests and Permissions or the Katherine Anne Porter House. Also of note is the series of letters and postcards between Miss Porter and Paul Porter. Other major correspondents include, Mr. Porter's friend Blaine Butler and staff members of the Katherine Anne Porter Museum. There is also one folder of correspondence between Miss Porter and John Melville, a close friend of Mr. Porter who died in 1957. The materials are arranged alphabetically by correspondent or subject.

Series 3: Printed Matter and Notes, 1941-2009 (2.0 linear feet)

This series consists of published and unpublished materials collected by Paul or Katherine Anne Porter, including clippings, notes, and publications. There are both articles and reviews written by or about Miss Porter, including fiction and nonfiction clipped from publications, and typewritten or manuscript notes she made that describe favorite menus and recipes. There are also annotated menus from one of Miss Porter's hospital stays.

Also included are several folders of material written by Paul Porter. There are two newspaper articles Mr. Porter wrote when he was in college, letters to the editors of various publications, and copies of speeches Mr. Porter has given at events relating to Katherine Anne Porter. Materials collected by Paul Porter, which do not relate to his aunt, include writings about photographer George Platt Lynes and artist Paul Cadmus. The materials have been organized into four groupings: About Katherine Anne Porter, By Katherine Anne Porter, By Paul Porter, and Other Subjects. The groupings are arranged alphabetically; within groupings, files are arranged alphabetically by subject.

Series 4: Audiovisual Materials, 1966-2003 (2.0 linear feet)

This series contains both audio and video recordings. Audio recordings of Miss Porter were made by Paul Porter and David Locher. The bulk of these document phone conversations between Miss Porter and her nephew. The subjects of other audio recordings include readings of the work of Katherine Anne Porter and Eudora Welty, the initial meeting of the Katherine Anne Porter Foundation in 1966, a 2003 program on Katherine Anne Porter at the University of Maryland Libraries, and music (John Renbourn's Ship of Fools). The video recordings include dramatizations of "The Jilting of Granny Weatherall," "Noon Wine," and "The Fig Tree." There are also recordings of programs presented at from the Katherine Anne Porter at One Hundred conference held at the University of Maryland in 1991. The series also includes copies of a PBS documentary about the 1918 influenza epidemic, which includes discussion of Katherine Anne Porter. The recordings are arranged into two groupings: audio and video. Within each, the recordings are arranged chronologically.

Related Material

Materials related to the papers of Paul Porter may be found in several of the literary manuscript collections held by the Archives and Manuscripts Department. Most are in the papers of Katherine Anne Porter, where there are fourteen folders of correspondence between Mr. Porter and Porter; this is the source for the other side of the correspondence represented in this collection. Porter gave the recipe clippings in this collection to Mr. Porter; the remainder of her recipes can be found in her papers. There are a number of pictures of Mr. Porter and of Porter that he took, in the Katherine Anne Porter photograph collection. Other related materials can be found in the papers of Katherine Anne Porter's family and associates with whom Mr. Porter communicated including Mr. Porter's cousin Ann Heintze, Miss Porter's lawyer E. Barrett Prettyman, publisher Seymour Lawrence, and literary trustee Isabel Bayley. There is also one folder of Paul Porter correspondence, 1977-1990, in the papers of Thomas F. Walsh. A related collection, the Paul Porter Collection of Katherine Anne Porter, may also be found in Texas State University's Wittliff Collections.

Biographical Note:

Rufus Alexander Grider was born April 13, 1817, in Lititz, Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, a town founded by members of the Moravian Congregation in 1756. Grider's ancestors came from Switzerland and Grider was confirmed in the Moravian Church. He graduated from John Beck's School for Boys in Lititz.

Grider married Elizabeth Skirving of Germantown, Pennsylvania, October 20, 1863 (or October 13, 1864); they had two daughters: Amy (born ca. 1865), who married James H. Sammons of Canajoharie, and Margaret (Margaretta S., born ca. 1868). Elizabeth Grider died March 12, 1875.

Census records show the Griders lived in Bethlehem, Pennsylvania from 1870 to 1883, when he moved to Canajoharie, Montgomery County, New York. He taught art at the Canajoharie Academy (replaced on the site in 1892 by the West Hill School) until his retirement in 1898.

Rufus Grider died February 7, 1900. He was survived by a brother, Lawrence, of Cadiz, Ohio, and a sister, Mrs. Adeline Fett, of Lititz.

Provenance Note

The Rufus Alexander Grider albums of his pen-and-ink sketches and watercolors were acquired by the New York State Library in October 1941 by special funds made available through the bequest of the late William Charles Gotshall. Before coming to this repository most written accounts indicate that upon Grider's death in 1900, his albums "fell into the hands" of an Albany (N.Y.) dealer in rare books who sold them to W. Pierrepont White of Utica, New York. On the latter's death, his wife and sons offered them to the State Library.

Scope and Content Note:

Rufus A. Grider's artistic endeavors of places and objects related to New York State history began in August 1886, while sketching the buildings erected by Sir William Johnson at Johnstown, Fulton County, New York; this is when he said that he first came up with the idea of making a "collection of pictures of old and new & curious objects possessed by inhabitants" of the Mohawk Valley. He decided he could also draw objects that "formerly existed" if he could find individuals who could "describe the objects & recognise [sic] them when drawn or restored to view".

Initially he drew views of buildings and landscapes, then Indian relics and finally "any object suited for illustration," including documents, which he "copied by tracing, making a coplete [sic] duplicate of the original".

From 1886 to about 1900, whenever his "school duties allowed," Grider traveled up and down the Mohawk Valley, with occasional excursions to the Cherry and Schoharie valleys and Lake George and Lake Champlain, in search of historic buildings, battlefields, the sites of ancient forts, the relics of Indians and early settlers, all of which he drew or copied and then arranged – with explanatory notes – on pages of albums.

In the October 1, 1888 preface to Volume I, Grider states the object of his work was twofold: "to preserve the memory of very many interesting objects of this locality – which might otherwise be lost – and 2d, for the pleasure such researches gave me, the greater the difficulty of solving a mystery, the greater the interest".

By the time of Grider's death in 1900, he had compiled nine volumes containing 1,041 pieces, including 623 water color sketches, 42 water color portraits, 169 tracings of manuscripts, 81 original engravings, seven original manuscripts, 71 tracings of maps and plans, 23 photographs and 25 water color drawings of powder horns. The first five volumes are devoted primarily to the history of the Mohawk Valley region of New Yew York State. The first three include a potpourri of images that include historic buildings and structures, natural features, early family records and historical documents, and Indian artifacts; the fourth devoted to the first commercial highways of the state, including the rivers, canals and turnpikes, and the fifth, with text as well as pictures, telling the story of the invasion of the Mohawk and the Schoharie valleys by Sir John Johnson and his Indians and Tories in 1780. Volume six contains material on Fort Ticonderoga, Lake Champlain, Lake George and other parts of the state, while volume seven is devoted entirely to the Cherry Valley, and volume eight, to the Schoharie Valley. The ninth volume contains text and illustrations devoted to the Continental Road built by General Sullivan's army between the Mohawk River and Otsego Lake in 1779 during the expedition that destroyed the settlements and crops Iroquois Indians in central and western New York.

Volume I: A Collection of Illustrations of Historic Matter Consisting of Tracings of Documents, and Pictures of Curios, &. &. Collected Principally in the Mohawk Valley, A.D. 1886 & 1887 by Rufus Alex'r Grider, of Canajoharie, N.Y.

[Volume II]: A Collection of Historic Matter Relating Principally to the Mohawk Valley, Being the Second of a Series Made by Rufus A. Grider of Canajoharie, Montgomery Co., N.Y., 1889.

[Volume III]: A Collection of Illustrations of Historic Matter Consisting of Tracings of Documents, of Pictures, of Restorations, Curios, Portraits, & &. Relating to the Mohawk Valley, Gathered Mostly During the Years 1889 to 1897. It Is Not a History, But Consists of Material Suitable for Illustration and Which, It Was Thought, Should Be Preserved. This Volume Is the Third of the Mohawk Series, Soon to Be Followed by a Fourth – Illustrating the Great Invasion in the Years 1780 by Sir John Johnson. Collected & Drawn by Rufus A. Grider of Canajoharie, N.Y. [Dated]: March 10th, 1897.

[Volume IV]: First Commercial Highways of the State of New York by Rufus A. Grider..

[Volume V]: The Invasion of the Schoharie and Mohawk Valleys by Sir John Johnson in 1780 by Rufus A. Grider

[Volume VII]: A Collection of Historic Matter Relating Mostly to Cherry Valley, Otsego County, N.Y. Made in the Year 1888

Being the Fourth of a Series Made by Rufus A. Grider of Canajoharie, Montgomery Co., New York.

There is a discrepancy as to whether this is Volume IV or Volume VII. The date and the reference "fourth in a series" seems to indicate this volume should be Volume IV. However, provenance suggests the volume became Volume VII.

[Volume VIII]: Illustrated Collections, New and Old, Made in 1887 & 1888 by Rufus A. Grider of Canajoharie, N.Y., Embracing Principally Matter Relating to Schoharie County, State of New York. (Begun July 29, 1887. Completed Sept. 18, 1888)

An article by R.W.G. Vail on the items in Volume VIII appeared in the Quarterly Bulletin published by the Schoharie County Historical Society in January 1944 (pages 6-16). The article was basically the same as the one that originally had been published in the 125th Annual Report of the New York State Library. The article prefaced descriptions of the images in Volume VIII that are more detailed than the item-number descriptions provided in this finding aid. A copy of the article is appended to the paper copy of the finding aid available in the reading room of the Manuscripts and Special Collections unit of the New York State Library.

Prefatory information in volumes II and IV refer to "a collection of over 100 colored pictures of powder horns … with notes relating where & by whom used in war time & views of the places where made or used. This latter collection seems to be the only one known to exist & has excited the attention of many antiquarians as an entirely new idea. Should these books be separated, the foregoing explains how they follow & that each vol. is complete in itself." A penciled note signed R.W.B. Vail on the preface for Volume II states: "The powder horn collection is now in New York Historical Society and a partial duplicate (?) collection in Worcester (Mass.) Historical Society".

Several of the nine volumes have hand-lettered indexes. The item list compiled by the New York State Library for the collection was an embellishment of the original indexes.

Manuscripts and Special Collections

The Manuscripts and Special Collections unit was established within the State Library in 1881. Its responsibilities include the acquisition, access and preservation of the Library's collections of:

- archives and manuscripts,
- rare books,
- maps and atlases,
- prints and photographs,
- broadsides and posters,
- musical scores and
- ephemera.

- Online Exhibits

These collections document the history of New York State from the 17th century to the present and illustrate the history of many topics related to American history, literature, science and the arts.

Visiting the Library

The Research Room for Manuscripts and Special Collections, which is shared with the New York State Archives, is on the 11th floor of the Cultural Education Center. It is open for research Monday through Saturday, 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. The Library and the Archives are both closed for New York State legal holidays.

Material is retrieved for research at 10:00 a.m. and 2:00 p.m. daily. Some collections, however, are stored off-site and may require several business days to retrieve. Arrangements should be made prior to visiting the Library.

NOTICE

Most of the material listed below is still housed in the original boxes and folders that Congressman Hutchinson's office used to ship them to the Bentley Historical Library. The Ford Library staff has not done any arrangement or description work. These boxes are available for research only on a review-on-request basis – researchers interested in using them should contact the Library well in advance of a visit to allow the staff time to prepare them for research. Please contact us for more information on the contents of individual boxes or to request that material be added to the Library's review queue.

SERIES DESCRIPTIONS

Nixon Impeachment Subject File, 1974. (Boxes 1-13, 5.0 linear feet)
Correspondence, memoranda, notes, reports, transcripts of White House tape recordings, and draft articles of impeachment. The materials concern all phases of the House Judiciary Committee's investigation of Watergate, President Nixon's alleged abuses of power, the bombing of Cambodia, dairy industry campaign contributions, and President Nixon's income tax returns. Included are Hutchinson's working papers, various reports and transcripts distributed to all Committee members, memoranda exchanged with other Committee members and staff, and materials submitted by President Nixon's lawyers.

Arranged alphabetically by subject.

The Gerald R. Ford Library collects, preserves, and makes accessible to the public a rich body of archival materials on U.S. domestic issues, foreign relations, and political affairs during the Cold War era. Current holdings include 25 million pages of memos, letters, meeting notes, reports, and other historical documents. Also there are one-half million audiovisual items, including photographs, videotapes of news broadcasts, audiotapes of speeches and press briefings, film of public events, and televised campaign commercials.

The 1974-77 presidential papers of Gerald Ford and his White House staff form the core collection. These are supplemented by the pre- and post-presidential papers of Gerald Ford, the papers of Betty Ford, collections of Federal records, and more. Former government officials have donated personal papers, researchers in the period have given copies of research interviews, and private individuals associated with the issues and events of the time have given their materials.

The Library serves students of all ages, scholars, mass media production staff, government officials, journalists, and others regardless of national citizenship. The Library is located in Ann Arbor, Michigan, on the North Campus of the University of Michigan, Gerald Ford's alma mater (B.A., 1935).

The Library is part of the Presidential libraries system of the National Archives and Records Administration, a Federal agency. Unlike other Presidential libraries, the museum component is geographically separate from the library/archives. The Ford Museum is in Grand Rapids, Michigan, 130 miles west of Ann Arbor, in Gerald Ford's hometown and the congressional district he represented from 1949-73. Despite the separation, the library and museum are a single institution sharing one director.

Biographical Note

John Franklin Steiner was born on July 21, 1908 in Milwaukee, Wisconsin. He graduated with a Bachelor of Science in 1929 and a Doctorate in Chemistry in 1933, both from the University of Wisconsin - Madison. Steiner married Nina Davis in 1948.

Steiner's interest in music began as a young child. When he was twelve, he became the hat check person at his father's music lodge in Milwaukee. He also took piano lessons and while a student at the University of Wisconsin - Madison he took lessons from Jessie Cohen. He also attended Axel Christianson's music school. As a teenager, Steiner fixed his friends' radios and would hear a variety of music, which prompted him to spend many hours listening to music broadcasts. The interest expanded when his aunt Julianna, who worked at a music store, would bring home chipped phonographs for him to listen to, during the era when not everyone owned a phonograph player. One record that made an early impression was the Dixieland Jazz Band.

Steiner started going to music performances at venues around Milwaukee, such as Humboldt Park, where he heard military and brass bands and songs such as “Tiger Rag” and “St. Louis Blues.” He started going to clubs and concerts in Chicago around 1924, traveling by train or hitchhiking as well as sleeping outdoors in parks and alleys to save money for clubs and albums. He went to music stores as well as theatres including the Oriental, McVicker’s, Chicago, and State-Lake.

Steiner was heavily influenced early on by Chicago music, partially because of its proximity to Milwaukee; it was more difficult for New York music to make its way to the Midwest. The first record he ever bought was by Cleo Brown, the second was Louis Armstrong, and the third Louis Prima. Other early influences include Jelly Roll Morton, whom he heard play at the Alhambra Theater in Milwaukee in 1926, as well as Woody Herman, Chuck Hedges, Bunny Berigan, Gene Schroeder, and Norm Cox. He later said that Duke Ellington and Bix Beiderbecke were his top favorites.

It was in the 1930s that Steiner started visiting the South Side clubs. His first was the Grand Terrace in 1935 where he saw Earl Hines. During this time he wrote for Tempo magazine and was also a correspondent for Jazz Information. With Harry Lim and Helen Oakley Dance he helped create the Hot Club of Chicago in 1935. The club continued into the 1940s by organizing performances of musicians such as Benny Goodman, Gene Krupa, Teddy Wilson, Woody Herman, and Artie Shaw.

In the mid-1930s, Steiner moved to Chicago and from 1937-1952 he worked at Miner Laboratories, after which he became the Director of Chemical Research Laboratories. Miner Laboratories was on Clinton Street, located near many “joints” including the Hamilton Hotel, Clark Theatre, Terrace Garden, and Morrison Hotel.

Steiner's interest in recording was prompted mostly through the people he knew, such as his next door neighbor Paul Edward Miller, a writer for Downbeat. In 1938, Steiner met Hugh Davis, an engineer, in a record shop on Melrose Place in Chicago. Davis worked for Seeburg, the jukebox company, and had access to equipment for pressing records. Around 1939, Steiner and Davis started recording music in the clubs. By 1943 they formed S/D Records and recorded musicians such as Squirrel Ashcraft, Cassino Simpson, Jimmy McPartland, and Bud Freeman.

Initially, they ran S/D Records from Steiner's basement but eventually moved to downtown Chicago. As part of the new business, Steiner also started a "record exchange" for collectors interested in rare jazz records. Their focus was on new artists as well as reissuing records from the 1920s and 1930s, many of them from Paramount Records. In 1945, Davis sold out to Steiner and created his own company called Technical Recording Service, though Steiner continued the S/D label for another ten years. After Davis' departure, Steiner moved the headquarters to the Uptown Playhouse Theater, where he worked as their promoter and also lived. Though a fire at the theater in 1946 destroyed most of S/D Records documentation and record stock, Steiner continued to organize recording sessions as well as release reissues.

Starting in 1943, John Steiner began leasing the rights to recordings from Paramount Records, owned by the Wisconsin Chair Company, and releasing them on the S/D label. He bought all the rights to Paramount Records in 1949, which also included the rights to Broadway, Puritan, QRS, Rialto, and others. Steiner continued to reissue early Paramount recordings not just in the United States but also Australia, Japan, England, and Italy. In addition to his reissues, Steiner leased Paramount records to many producers and companies, including Frank Driggs (Biograph Records label from Columbia Records), George Buck (G.H.B. Records), Bill Grauer Productions (Riverside Records), Orrin Keepnews (Milestone Records), and Decca Records. Steiner also managed New York Recording Laboratories in 1946 and became owner in 1948.

During his time in Chicago, Steiner worked with many musicians and often hosted them at his apartment on Ashland and later at his renovated house on Greenview (formerly the Kosciuszko Public Bath) for social events and recording sessions. Some of these artists include Little Brother Montgomery, Lil Armstrong, Baby Dodds, and Austin High Gang Members Jimmy McPartland and Bud Freeman. He recorded some of these musicians for the Paramount Records label and over time he also interviewed many of them.

During the 1950s and 1960s Steiner worked with Bill Russell (American Music Corporation) and together they interviewed many of the classic jazz musicians living in Chicago, such as Natty Dominique, Baby Dodds, Preston Jackson, Jimmy Bertrand, Roy Palmer, Ikey Robinson, and Glover Compton. In 1958, Steiner met Charles Sengstock and a few years later began the massive project of going through microfilmed copies of the Chicago Defender at the Chicago Public Library to create an index of clubs, venues, performances, musicians, and all instances of jazz mentioned in the paper. Steiner also started teaching chemistry at the University of Illinois-Chicago in 1955.

In the 1970s, Steiner helped found the Chicago Jazz Institute, which started as a series of concerts at places such as the Field Museum. Later, he was a founding member of, and very active in, the Jazz Institute of Chicago. He was also involved with the Chicago Jazz Archive at the University of Chicago Library and served on the Visiting Committee to the Department of Music at the University of Chicago.

Steiner retired from his position as a chemistry professor from University of Illinois-Chicago in 1976, at which time he and Nina moved back to Milwaukee. He continued to stay involved in the Chicago jazz scene.

For nearly eighty years, Steiner collected material about jazz music, musicians, recording companies, and many other topics of interest. He was internationally known as an expert on jazz and especially Chicago jazz and often acted as a source or consultant for articles, books, dissertations and theses, documentaries, and other productions of jazz history.

John Steiner died in Milwaukee in June 3, 2000.

Scope Note

The John Steiner Collection contains sheet music, articles, photographs, scrapbooks, correspondence, interviews, ephemera, and publications. The collection spans 140 years and documents Chicago jazz and blues, musicians, clubs, printed music, recording companies, and recording technology. The main focus of the collection is jazz and Chicago jazz, but the collection also documents other music styles such as blues, swing, boogie woogie, minstrel, and rag.

The John Steiner Collection is organized into twelve series: Series I, Personal and Professional; Series II, Correspondence, Series III, Record Industry and Collecting; Series IV, Musicians and People; Series V, Clubs, Events and Ephemera; Series VI, Photographs; Series VII, Subject Files; Series VIII, Printed Music; Series IX, Publications; Series X, Artifacts; Series XI, Audio-Visual; and Series XII, Oversize. Much of the original arrangement and description by Steiner was retained in the guide. Researchers will notice a certain amount of topical overlap between series. See each individual series description for more detail.

Series I, Personal and Professional, contains correspondence, addresses, a stamp collection, academic appointment letters, and documents about the renovations of the Kosciuszko Public Bath into a house. There are also research notes and articles, reports, correspondence, and other material that documents his career as a chemist.

Series II, Correspondence, contains letters with family, friends, musicians and their relatives, students, researchers, authors, editors, producers, collectors, and record dealers, and may include manuscripts, invitations, photographs, advertisements, announcements, and articles. Most correspondence is between Steiner and jazz researchers.

Series III, Record Industry and Collecting, contains job tickets, recording session documents, invoices, catalogs and music lists, and other administrative documents for Paramount Records and S/D Records. There are also catalogs, correspondence, and material about other record companies.

Series IV, Musicians and People, contains articles, research notes, and ephemera about musicians and other people related to the music industry, including record producers, composers, songwriters, conductors, bandleaders, accompanists, singers, dancers, writers, actors, comedians, radio and television programmers and producers, instrument makers, jukebox repairmen, club and ballroom owners, disc jockeys and announcers, agents, record shop owners, architects, collectors, authors, and others.

Series V, Clubs, Events, and Ephemera, contains articles, reviews, publications, maps, advertisements, pluggers, postcards, fliers, programs, playbills, tickets, correspondence, matchbooks, brochures, invitations, research notes, and other ephemera about clubs, club memberships, restaurants, bars, pubs, cafes, lounges, theatres, dance halls, ballrooms, hotels, buildings, schools, universities, concerts, performances, festivals, cruises, and other jazz venues, neighborhoods, events, and people in Chicago and the surrounding area.

Series VI, Photographs, contains photographic prints, negatives, and slides of musicians, clubs, locations, and other subjects. Steiner's research notes contain documentation or attempted verification of musicians' names, where they played and who they played with, as well as where clubs were located, moved to, and who played there.

Series VII, Subject Files, contains articles, fliers, brochures, book reviews, radio schedules, directories, catalogs, correspondence, cartoons, ephemera, essays, book chapters, and research notes. The material documents the history of jazz, Chicago jazz, and other musical styles such as gospel, blues, swing, rock and pop, boogie woogie, country, hillbilly, minstrel, and bluegrass.

Series VIII, Printed Music, contains sheet music, music books, and stock arrangements for jazz and popular music. The majority of the music is for piano, but also saxophone, banjo, and ukulele.

Series IX, Publications, contains magazines, newspapers, and journals primarily about jazz but also the entertainment industry.

Series X, Artifacts, contains print blocks, souvenirs and other jazz related objects, electrical items, and science equipment.

Series XI, Audio-Visual, contains an audio cassette, 8 and 16 mm film, a videocassette, microfilm, and product sample records.

Series XII, Oversize, contains artwork, articles, posters, ephemera, advertisements, records lists, album and sheet music images, and photographs.

Series I: Personal and Professional

Series I, Personal and Professional, is organized into three subseries: Subseries 1, Personal; Subseries 2; Professional; and Subseries 3, Travel.

Subseries 1, Personal, contains addresses, business cards, a personal calendar, class notes from a computer class, invoices for Oxford University Press, and retirement documents. The biographical material includes a family genealogy, interviews and articles about Steiner, as well as his personal reflections on his life and family. Steiner kept articles, documents, and a scrapbook of the renovation and history of his house on Greenview in Chicago, formerly the Kosciuszko Public Bath. The stamp collection contains jazz, United States, and foreign stamps. There are documents about his donations, teaching, and involvement at various universities.

Subseries 2, Professional, includes material from Steiner's career as a chemist, including patent summaries, applications, research notes and articles, reports, and correspondence between Steiner and chemical companies. Also included is Steiner's Ph.D. Thesis from the University of Wisconsin - Milwaukee, "Studies on the Passive State of Metals."

Subseries 3, Travel, contains maps, postcards, street guides, brochures, ephemera, and notes on his personal travel.

See Series II, III, IV, V, and VII, for additional correspondence. See Series VI for additional photographs.

Series II: Correspondence

Series II, Correspondence, is arranged alphabetically and contains letters with family, friends, musicians and their relatives, students, researchers, authors, editors, producers, collectors, and record dealers, and may include manuscripts, invitations, photographs, advertisements, announcements, and articles. The majority of the correspondence is incoming and outgoing from Steiner although there are some third party correspondence.

Much of the correspondence is inquiries from researchers to Steiner about musicians, recordings, venues, and other aspects of jazz history. In many cases he either loaned original material or provided copies of recordings, photographs, articles, interviews, and other documentation. There are also requests for permission to use audio or photographs for publications, radio, television, or film. Some correspondence is from Steiner to other musicians or collectors for information about jazz clubs and musicians in Chicago for Destination Chicago Jazz.

There is correspondence about donations, appraisals, and auctions of jazz collections. Some letters discuss Steiner's collections at and donations to universities, including the University of Chicago, University of Illinois Chicago, and the University of Wisconsin-Madison. Most of the family and personal correspondence includes holiday greetings, invitations, and letters to friends and family about personal events.

See Series I, III, IV, V, and VII for additional correspondence.

Series III: Record Industry and Collecting

Series III, Record Industry and Collecting, is arranged into five subseries: Subseries 1, Paramount and S/D Records; Subseries 2, Record Collecting, Companies, and Catalogs; Subseries 3, Album Labels; Subseries 4, Equipment and Technology; and Subseries 5, Oversize.

Subseries 1, Paramount and S/D Records, contains advertisements, catalogs and record lists from both companies. There are order forms, job tickets, invoices, recording session forms, contracts, copyright applications and renewals, stationery, and other administrative documents about the function of the companies. Also included is information on the history of Paramount Records, S/D Records, and The Wisconsin Chair Company and its subsidiaries.

Subseries 2, Record Collecting, Companies, and Catalogs, contains correspondence, order lists and forms, discographies, fliers, brochures, pamphlets, articles, invoices, newsletters, announcements, record catalogs, journals, and research notes about record companies, store owners, producers, distributors, auctions, collectors, sellers, and musicians. Some of the correspondence is between Steiner and record company representatives and discusses reissues, leases, and other business related to S/D Records or Paramount Records. He also contacted companies about purchasing their releases, record exchanges, international distribution, and royalties. Other letters are requests from researchers or collectors for catalogs, information about the recording label, and availability of records. Most catalogs and discographies are for jazz recordings, but also include blues, folk, swing, gospel, international, and others. There is some information about non-music recordings, such as language, spoken word, instructional audio, and video. Some catalogs are in Italian, French, or German.

Subseries 3, Recording Equipment and Technology, contains catalogs, advertisements, fliers, articles, journals, and research notes about radios, phonographs, cassette tapes, compact discs, record albums, amplifiers, stereos, recording equipment, turntables, speakers, digital technology, and other technology and equipment related to radios, television, record players, and recording.

Subseries 4, Album Labels, contain labels primarily from Paramount Records but also other record companies. Labels are in alphabetical order by record company and include the record number, song title, and/or musician. The folders at the end contain oversize and/or uncut labels, some of which are blank.

Subseries 5, Album Covers and Record Books, contains record sleeves, and album artwork for record companies including Paramount Records, S/D Records, and the F.W. Boerner Company. There are record books and ledgers from the Wisconsin Chair Company and its subsidiaries.

See Series II, IV, V, VI, VIII, IX, X, and XII for additional material on the record industry.

Series IV: Musicians and People

Series IV, Musicians and People, is arranged into two subseries: Subseries 1, Paramount Records Musicians and People; Subseries 2, Musicians and People. Both subseries are arranged alphabetically by last name. As much as possible, given names and nicknames are included as well as different spellings of names.

Most material is primarily about musicians and bands, but also included are other people in the entertainment industry such as record producers, composers, songwriters, conductors, bandleaders, accompanists, singers, dancers, writers, actors, comedians, radio and television programmers and producers, instrument makers, jukebox repairmen, club and ballroom owners, disc jockeys and announcers, agents, record shop owners, architects, collectors, authors, and others. Most of the musicians and people are related to the various types of jazz and blues, as well as vaudeville, gospel, soul, boogie-woogie, swing, bebop, classical, pop, rock, and others. Some of the people are related to African-American or Chicago history.

The folders contain original or photocopied newspaper and magazine articles, correspondence, discographies, advertisements, songs and sheet music, newsletters, journals, announcements and reviews of performances, fliers, programs, ticket stubs, cartoons, stationery, interviews, commentaries, autobiographical and biographical statements, greeting cards, stamps, postcards, record labels, books, album reviews, obituaries, and research notes. The correspondence is between Steiner and jazz researchers, enthusiasts, and historians, as well as record shop owners and the musicians, and may contain notes, discographies, and other documents from researchers.

Newspaper articles are primarily from local Milwaukee and Chicago newspapers, The New York Times, and The New Yorker, with some from other newspapers. Magazine and journal articles are from publications such as Matrix, Record Research, The New Yorker, The Mississippi Rag, 78 Quarterly, Blues News, Jazz Journal, Jazz Monthly, Jazzbeat, IAJRC Journal, Time Magazine, International Musician, and many others. A few articles are in French or German. Authors of articles include Harriet Choice, Leonard Feather, George Hoefer, and Sharon Pease. The “Musician Card File” has typed index cards and research notes about musicians.

See Series II, III, V, VI, VII, VIII, IX, X, XI, and XII for additional material about musicians and people.

Series V: Clubs, Events and Ephemera

Series V, Clubs, Events, and Venues, is arranged into four subseries: Subseries 1, Chicago; Subseries 2, Chicago Defender and Chicago Whip; Subseries 3, Non-Chicago; and Subseries 4, Oversize.

Subseries 1, Chicago, contains articles, reviews, publications, maps, advertisements, pluggers, postcards, fliers, programs, playbills, tickets, correspondence, matchbooks, brochures, invitations, research notes, and other ephemera about clubs, club memberships, restaurants, bars, pubs, cafes, lounges, theatres, dance halls, ballrooms, hotels, buildings, schools, universities, concerts, performances, festivals, cruises, and other jazz venues, neighborhoods, events, and people in Chicago and the surrounding area. There are articles, reviews, and listings from newspapers and magazines, including Coda, Downbeat, Reader, Chicago Tribune, Chicago Sun Times, and Chicago Daily News, of jazz events and concerts. Harriet Choice, Leonard Feather, Will Leonard, Buck Walmsley, and Studs Terkel are a few of the authors and critics of the articles and reviews. There are also essays and course papers on Chicago clubs, where students and authors would ask Steiner for research help and proofreading.

Subseries 2, Chicago Defender and Chicago Whip, contains articles and drafts of an index completed by Steiner and Charles Sengstock of events, venues, and musicians mentioned in the two newspapers.

Subseries 3, Non-Chicago, contains articles, reviews, publications, maps, advertisements, pluggers, postcards, fliers, programs, playbills, tickets, correspondence, matchbooks, brochures, invitations, research notes, and other ephemera about clubs, club memberships, restaurants, bars, pubs, cafes, lounges, theatres, dance halls, ballrooms, hotels, buildings, schools, universities, concerts, performances, festivals, cruises, and other jazz venues, neighborhoods, events, and people in areas outside of Chicago. The Milwaukee material, primarily articles from Milwaukee newspapers, includes events and venues such as the Hal Leonard Jazz Series, Music on the KK, the Milwaukee Jazz Experience, the Milwaukee Rhythm Club, Round Midday Jazz Series, Milwaukee Public Library, Summerfest, the Wisconsin Conservatory of Music, the Jazz Oasis, and the Red Mill. Most of the New York material is from the New York Times and The New Yorker, and is primarily listings of multiple events, venues, and people.

Some material is photocopies or reproductions. The dates represent dates of actual material or of the content of the photocopies. Often the items contain information about more than one event or venue. Notes are from Steiner's research and sometimes attempted verification of details. Steiner's original folder titles were kept whenever possible.

Subseries 4, Posters, contains oversize posters and advertisements for clubs as well as articles about events in Chicago, Paris, Milwaukee, Minnesota, California, and Wisconsin. Also included are maps of clubs in Chicago and a map of Chez Paree.

See Series II, IV, VI, IX, and XII for additional material about clubs and events.

Series VI: Photographs

Series VI, Photographs, contains photographic prints, reproductions, negatives, contact sheets, photocopies, correspondence, articles, postcards, and research notes. Photographs are arranged into three subseries: Subseries 1, Musicians and People; Subseries 2, Locations and Subjects; and Subseries 3, Oversize. See Series IV, Musicians and People, for additional documentation about people and photographs.

Photographs are arranged alphabetically by last name, place, or subject and were given to Steiner, taken by Steiner, or are reproductions from other sources. The dates range from the early 1900s through the 1990s, though some dates are difficult to ascertain because they are reproductions. There are often multiple copies of the same image, sometimes different sizes, and often copies of the same image are found in more than one folder. Some reproductions are of images in books, newspapers, or magazines. Steiner's folder titles and organization were kept as much as possible.

Subseries 1, Musicians and People, contains photographs mostly of jazz musicians but also bands, orchestras, collectors, members of jazz societies, relatives, and audiences. They are of performances, jam sessions, and recording sessions as well as some publicity shots. There are also a few photos of gravestones, homes, advertisements, and marquees. Folders are arranged alphabetically by last name following Steiner's original organization, with the names of other persons in photographs noted whenever possible. Photographs of a band or orchestra are sometimes filed by the leader's name, for instance "Jimmy Noone's Orchestra" is filed under Noone, Jimmy. Many musicians appear in more than one folder. Names are transcribed as written and may be only last or partial names.

Some photographs may have notations not just of musicians and dates, but who took the photograph, where the image came from, and research notes about the people, events, or places. Steiner made notations such as who a musician played with or where they played. Some of the notes contain question marks where he was researching the accuracy.

Subseries 2, Locations and Subjects, contains photographs of clubs, restaurants, venues, buildings, neighborhoods, streets, sheet music, and record albums. The photographs of venues sometimes are not of the original but the former location, therefore are of another building or site. Notes about the location may include what the building was or became, who owned or managed it, which musicians played there, the address, and other documentation.

Subseries 3, Slides, Negatives, and Oversize Prints, contains slides, negatives, and oversize photographs of musicians and locations.

Subseries 4, Scrapbooks, contains a scrapbook of newspaper and magazine images of musicians and a scrapbook of photographs and ephemera Jack Goss created from a European tour.

See Series XII for oversize photographs. See Series II, III, IV, V, VI, and VIII for additional material on musicians, clubs, sheet music, and other related information.

Series VII: Subject Files

Series VII, Subject Files, contains articles, fliers, brochures, book reviews, radio schedules, directories, catalogs, correspondence, cartoons, ephemera, and research notes. The material documents the history of jazz, Chicago jazz, and jazz in other cities, states, and foreign countries. Other topics include jazz and radio, television, film, books, science and psychology, collecting, museums, columnists and critics, and instruments. There are manuscripts, essays, theses, papers, book chapters, and other writing by Steiner and other authors about jazz and Chicago jazz. There are announcements, directories, meeting minutes, reports, articles, correspondence, fliers, brochures, invitations, membership cards, research notes, and other documents about jazz and music organizations, conferences, journals, exhibits, as well as Steiner's involvement with archives and museums including the Chicago Jazz Archive and William Ransom Hogan Jazz Archive. Also included is material about other musical styles such as gospel, blues, swing, rock and pop, boogie woogie, country, hillbilly, minstrel, and bluegrass. Other historical and cultural topics include Chicago history and figures, African culture, World's Fairs, antiques, women, cartoons and humor, Hull House, Mardi Gras, and prohibition.

See all other series for additional material.

Series VIII: Printed Music

Series VIII, Printed Music, is organized into five subseries: Subseries 1, Sheet Music; Subseries 2, Music Books; Subseries 3, Stock Arrangements; Subseries 4, Articles and Research; and Subseries 5, Oversize.

Subseries 1, Sheet Music, contains published songs primarily for piano, as well as a small amount for other instruments such as trumpet, saxophone, and banjo. This subseries is arranged alphabetically by publisher, then alphabetically by song title within each publisher heading. Songs are noted by title, lyricist(s), composer(s), arranger(s), and date whenever possible. If there is no publisher, it is labeled under the name assigned to the copyright. Publishers often changed names and/or merged; the music is filed under the name printed on the piece. Names are documented as they appeared on the music. Songs listed multiple times means multiple copies of that piece, usuall because of different cover artwork. A song may appear multiple times because it was published by more than one publisher. Some songs are in French, German, or Yiddish. Some pieces are very fragile.

Subseries 2, Music Books, contains song and method books arranged by publisher. There are method books primarily for piano as well as saxophone, banjo, ukulele, and violin. Some are for music by specific musicians, such as Duke Ellington, Jess Stacy, Count Basie, and Stan Kenton. Some books are compilations of jazz, dance, boogie woogie, and other music styles. Oversize music books are at the end with the books are arranged alphabetically by title. The books Abe Oleman, Songs of Charlie Straight, 1909-1930, Songs of Isham Jones, and Songs of Frank Magine contain bound volumes of individual pieces of sheet music.

Subseries 3, Stock Arrangements, contains published stock arrangements arranged alphabetically by publisher. Many are samples and some do not contain all the individual parts. Some arrangements were the property of Sig Meyer. There are a few handwritten arrangements.

Subseries 4, Newspaper Music, contains sheet music published in newspapers, arranged alphabetically by publisher. Most of this sheet music is fragile.

Subseries 5, Articles and Research, contains articles and research notes about Steiner's sheet music collection, composers, music styles, publishers, and other information about published music. There are also photocopies of sheet music and music books, advertisements, chord instruction and cue sheets, and loose and unidentified pieces of music.

See Series III, IV and VIII for additional material about sheet music.

Series IX: Publications

Series IX, Publications, is organized into two subseries: Subseries 1, Publications; Subseries 2, Oversize Publications. This series contains magazines, newsletters, and newspapers primarily from the United States but also the United Kingdom, Australia, France, Germany, the Netherlands, and Canada, with a few in French, German, or Dutch. There are also a few pamphlets, such as American Jazz Society, Blues Unlimited, The Discographical Society, Jazz Appreciation Society, Jazz Information [UK], and Jazz Times Bulletin. Most of the publications are about jazz, but also blues, rock, and general music. Other publications are about chemistry, audio technology, record collecting, radio, dance, entertainment, venues, organizations, archives, jazz societies, and Chicago. Publications with more than one of the same title have the location in brackets. Not all runs are complete and some may have multiple copies of one issue. Downbeat is located in both subseries.

See Series III, IV, V, and VII for additional publications.

Series X: Artifacts

Series X, Artifacts, contains print blocks, souvenirs and other jazz related objects, electrical items, and science equipment. The print blocks are images of musicians and scenes used for album cover art from various recording companies, primarily Paramount Records and Vocalion. The Paramount and S/D Records print blocks are originals. Others may be reproductions Steiner made from Chicago Defender advertisements and other sources. Known artists are listed and many print blocks are unidentified.

Souvenirs and other jazz artifacts include a framed record etched with "1st Record Grafton June 29, 1917," card sets of "Heroes of the Blues" and "Early Jazz Greats" by Yazoo Records, salt and pepper shakers of RCA Record's "Nipper" and a gramophone, Baby Dodds' drumsticks, Compton Glover's cigarette lighter and pocket knife, and a Duke Ellington pin. There are also matchbooks from London House and buttons from the Jazz Institute of Chicago, WBEZ, Columbia Records, Blue Note Records, White City Ballroom, "Dan the Piano Man," The Night Pastor, and others.

The electronics and recording pieces include wires, cords, and other parts. The science equipment is slide rules, and "addometer," and drawing instruments.

See Series III for additional material about the recording industry.

Series XI: Audio-Visual

Series XI, Audio-Visual, contains an audio cassette, film, a videocassette, microfilm, and product sample records. The audio cassette is about the Talking Machine companies of Chicago. There are 16 mm films of Baby Dodds, Ben Conroy, and Alex Lovejoy and Edna Mae Harris, an 8 mm film of a news story about Chicago public bathhouses, and a videocassette of jazz specials from Channel 11 in Chicago. Also included are microfilms of minutes from the Precision Machine Company and Louis Panico's "The Novelty Cornetist." There are product sample records, which are a promotional record with marketing materials, from various companies from the 1950s, 1960s, and 1970s.

This series does not include access copies for part or all of the material in this series. Researchers will need to consult with staff before requesting material from this series.

Series XII: Oversize

Series XII, Oversize, contains oversize items from other series. There is material about musicians, clubs, events, exhibits, and the recording industry, arranged by size. The artwork includes sketches, ink paintings, and prints, mostly of musicians and musical scenes, created by jazz and other artists.

The Personal material includes book covers from books about jazz, music, and Chicago, a poster about chemistry, and architectural plans from Steiner's house in Chicago.

The Record Industry and Collecting material contains advertisements, record lists, and album and sheet music images from Paramount Records, Broadway Records, and others. Also included are negatives for Steiner's reissue of "The Paramount Book of Blues." advertisements, mock-ups of advertisements, record lists, and album artwork for record companies including Paramount Records, S/D Records, and the F.W. Boerner Company. There are also photocopies of articles on the litigation of "Livery Stable Blues."

The Musicians and People material includes ephemera as well as articles about musicians from publications including the Saturday Evening Post, Esquire, Life, Christian Science Monitor, Mississippi Rag, Time, the New York Times, and various Chicago and Milwaukee newspapers.

The Clubs, Events, and Ephemera material is primarily posters for jazz festivals events from New Orleans, France, Mexico, and the Jazz Showcase in Chicago. Other jazz posters are of Duke Ellington, Republic Airlines, the history of jazz, and "The Jazz Family Tree."

The Photographs are originals and reproductions of jazz musicians and Chicago clubs.

The Subject Files material includes articles and other ephemera about music, jazz, and Chicago jazz. The Saturday Evening Post articles are signed by the "Houle Band at Ashcraft's" including Squirrel Ashcraft, Clark Terry, Howard Kennedy, Phil Atwood, Fred Wacky, Jack Howe, Bud Wilson, Pops Kenyan, and Bill Priestly. Also included are exhibit materials, primarily reproduced photographs and items used for display purposes, as well as posters and other ephemera about the exhibits. There are also calendars featuring jazz, vintage radios, and Hull House.

See Series III, IV, V, VI, and VII for additional material.

March 24, 2014 - June 20, 2014

The Body as Text explores intersections between the arts and sciences across the history of anatomical representation and medical illustration of the human body. From the medieval era to the modern invention of the x-ray, The Body as Text traces this interplay of disciplines until medical imaging diverged and followed its own intellectual and aesthetic paths.

Drawn from the holdings of the Special Collections Research Center and the Smart Museum of Art, this exhibition chronicles the shared influences of the arts and sciences and the subsequent avenues each discipline took in their ongoing expressions of the human body. Works by significant figures including Ketham, Vesalius, Gray, Corinth, and Rodin will be highlighted.

The Body as Text is part of a campus-wide program, Imaging/Imagining The Human Body in Anatomical Representation, and runs concurrently with complementary exhibitions at two other venues: The Body as Art, at the Smart Museum of Art; and The Body as Data, at the John Crerar Library.

Imaging/Imagining the Human Body

"Imaging/Imagining the Human Body in Anatomical Representation," a multi-venue exhibition curated by two physicians at the University of Chicago, explores the history of anatomical representation and the evolving relationship between the arts and medical science. On view through June 20. Continue reading »

Biographical / Historical Note

Randall Jarrell

Randall Jarrell (6 May 1914 – 14 October 1965), the noted American poet, literary critic, children's author, essayist, and novelist, was born in Nashville, Tennessee. He attended Vanderbilt University where he studied under Robert Penn Warren, Allen Tate, and John Crowe Ransom, edited the student humor magazine, captained the tennis team, received a Phi Beta Kappa and graduated magna cum laude. After graduating from Vanderbilt, Jarrell served as a teaching instructor at Kenyon College, Gambier, Ohio. There he worked on his master's thesis on the poetry of Alfred Edward Housman and shared rooms with writers Robie Macauley, Peter Taylor, and poet Robert Lowell. Lowell and Jarrell remained good friends and peers until Jarrell's death. The collection contains numerous references to all these men, especially Warren, Tate, and Ransom.

After receiving his masters' degree from Vanderbilt in 1938, Jarrell taught at the University of Texas at Austin from 1939 to 1942, where he met his first wife, Mackie Langham. In 1942 he left the university to join the United States Army Air Forces. The collection contains a significant amount of material relating to his military service. His war-time experiences inspired much of his early poetry. He later taught at Sarah Lawrence College in Bronxville, N.Y. and the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina. Early in the 1950's Jarrell and Mackie separated and divorced. Jarrell married his second wife Mary von Schrader Jarrell in 1952.

On October 14, 1965, Jarrell died while walking along a road in Chapel Hill near dusk. A car struck and killed him. The coroner ruled the death accidental, but Jarrell had recently been treated for mental illness and a previous suicide attempt, so some of the people closest to Jarrell suspected that he might have committed suicide. Jarrell's widow felt that his death was an accident. The collection contains a significant amount of material documenting Jarrell's mental and emotional difficulties including his final hospitalization and death in 1965. Considerable correspondence in the papers testifies to Mary Jarrell's opinions on this subject.

Stuart T. Wright

The Randall Jarrell Papers were collected and compiled by Stuart T. Wright. Wright was born on 30 March 1948 in Roxboro, North Carolina. He was the son of Frances Critcher Wright (1919-2010) and Wallace Lyndon Wright (1921-1965). An avid reader as a boy, Wright developed a strong interest in the American Civil War and with his father toured many of the war's battlefields searching for artifacts and studying the history of the era. At the age of 12, he won a statewide "Johnny Reb" essay contest and by the age of 15 had visited every major battlefield of the Civil War. Wright attended Roxboro High School, from which he graduated in 1966. It was during these years that he developed an interest in collecting historical books and manuscripts and began relationships with a number of local collectors and dealers.

In the fall of 1966, Wright enrolled at Wake Forest University as a pre-med, history, German and music student. Wright earned a B.A. in German and music in 1970. As a graduate student at Wake Forest University, Wright focused his studies on Southern history and literature, his ambition being to build an authoritative Southern Studies collection for the university. He received a master's degree in Southern Studies in 1973 and a second master's degree in U.S. History in 1980. Additionally Wright holds a professional degree from England in a medically related field. It was while studying there that he became interested in Thomas Wolfe, the noted North Carolina native and novelist.

Following his graduation from Wake Forest, Wright began to develop his collections more systematically, acquiring many first editions of Southern writers. In 1976 he began teaching at Reynolda House, a Wake Forest University affiliate dedicated to the arts and arts education. Wright taught classes in American music as well as human anatomy for art students. In 1978 Wright became Lecturer in Education at Wake Forest University. During his 10 years teaching at Wake Forest University, Wright authored numerous works of Civil War and North Carolina history, and dozens of articles, bibliographies, essays and reviews on Southern literature and the writers whose papers he collected. In addition, he developed a strong interest in the writings of the English poet Donald Davie and the Minnesota-born poet Richard Eberhart, whose works he also collected.

At the same time, Wright also began a career as a publisher by starting Palaemon Press in Winston-Salem, North Carolina. By 1984, Palaemon Press had produced 316 titles, consisting mainly of broadsides and limited editions, of the poetry and essays of such Southern writers as A. R. Ammons, Fred Chappell, James Dickey, William Goyen, George Garrett, and Eudora Welty. He also built comprehensive collections and compiled book-length descriptive bibliographies of A.R. Ammons, Andrew Lytle, Reynolds Price, James Dickey, William Goyen, Walker Percy, Randall Jarrell, Peter Taylor, George Garrett, Richard Eberhart, and Donald Davie. As well as serving as editor of the contemporary literature section of the Bulletin of Bibliography throughout the 1980s, Wright also contributed pioneering checklists of the writings of Southern poets Henry Taylor, Charles Wright, and Robert Morgan. For Meckler Publishing he served as series editor for a number of book-length bibliographies and checklists. In recognition of these accomplishments, when he was just 32, Wright was elected to membership in New York's prestigious Grolier Club.

All of these works are represented in the Stuart Wright Collection. In his dealings with these various authors Wright made consistent efforts to acquire personal papers, letters and documents, photographs, manuscripts, drafts, proofs, and published materials to supplement his continuing activities as a purchaser of their works. In this way, Wright acquired perhaps a majority of his overall collection. Over the years a number of biographers used Wright's collection to aid their research. For example, James A. Grimshaw, Jr. used the collection extensively for his Robert Penn Warren: A Descriptive Bibliography, 1922-1979 published by the University Press of Virginia, in 1981 and Craig S. Abbott did so as well for John Crowe Ransom: A Descriptive Bibliography, published by Whitston Publishing Company, Inc. in 1999. Joseph Blotner also used the Wright collection in researching Robert Penn Warren: A Biography, published by Random House in 1997.

Nevertheless, from the mid- to late 1980s, Wright began to look for a permanent home for his collection, which he felt had grown too large and yet had been too little used. Unable to find a repository willing to accept the entire collection under suitable conditions, he sold a number of individual author collections to Vanderbilt University, Duke University, the University of Texas at Austin, and Emory University. It was not until 2010 that he reached agreement to house the remaining, and largest part of his collection at East Carolina University. The Stuart Wright Collection in the East Carolina Manuscript Collection of J.Y. Joyner Library includes 22 sub-collections of the papers of Southern American writers. The related Stuart Wright Book Collection holds several thousand volumes by or about many of the same writers. Many of these volumes contain annotations, inscriptions, and insertions that reveal much about the authors in the collection and their relationships with one another. In 1998 Wright moved to England, and since 2001 he has resided in the medieval market town of Ludlow, in Shropshire.

Description

The Randall Jarrell Papers covers the period 1913-1989, and contains material relating to Randall Jarrell's life, family, and literary career, including material compiled and added to the collection by his widow and by Stuart Wright. The material is especially helpful for documenting Jarrell's relationships with Allen Tate, John Crowe Ransom, and Robert Penn Warren among others and the origin and development of his literary ideas and style. The Randall Jarrell Papers are arranged in original order in thirteen series.

Series 1: Correspondence contains letters to and from Robert Penn Warren, Randall Jarrell, Mrs. Mary von Schrader Jarrell, and others, 1946-1975. Series one is contained in box 1.a – 1.zd.

Series 2: Notes consists of literary and personal notes on books and articles Randall Jarrell was writing, ca. 1964. Series 2 is contained in box 1.ze – 1.zm.

Series 3: Lists consists of literary and personal lists on books, music, and articles Randall Jarrell was writing, ca. 1963-1965. Series 3 is contained in box 2.a – 2.d.

Series 4: Literary Essays contains two undated articles by Randall Jarrell entitled John Ransom's Poetry; Man und Frau im Essigkrug; also one undated article by May Swenson entitled Unpronouncibility of Certain Names. Series 4 is contained in box 2.e – 2.g.

Series 5: Poems contains early proofs of poems written by Randall Jarrell, 1934-1965. Series 5 is contained in box 2.h – 2.zw.

Series 6: Manuscript Volumes consists of early edited manuscripts of works by Randall Jarrell, 1926-1965, and 1989. Among the most interesting items in this series are Jarrell's early poetry notebooks from the period 1939-1965 and his World War II diary. Series 6 is contained in boxes 2.zy – 5.n.

Series 7: Miscellaneous Materials consists of pamphlets, financial records, and other materials, 1942-1965. Series 7 is contained in boxes 5.o – 5.q.

Series 8: Printed Materials consists of printed correspondence, dust jackets, and periodicals relating to Randall Jarrell, ca. 1935-1983. Series 8 is contained in boxes 5.r – 6.g

Series 9: Loose Manuscripts Transferred from Stuart Wright Book Collection contains loose manuscript materials transferred from the books in the Stuart Wright Book Collection by, about, or previously owned by Randall Jarrell. The material consists of notes, cards, correspondence, clippings, advertising, reviews, ephemera, printed materials, etc., 1913-1989 [Bulk: 1920-1965] that either Jarrell or Stuart Wright interfiled in the books. Among the more interesting items in this series is Robert Graves' 1925 letter supporting John Crowe Ransom candidacy for a Guggenheim fellowship. The loose manuscripts are linked to the book of origin by their Stuart Wright Book Collection Number (e.g. Stuart Wright Book Collection #38.04). Series 9 is contained in box 6.a – 7.zc.

Series 10: Audio Recordings consists of an audio recording by Randall Jarrell entitled "Spoken Words: Bat Poet Tape, 11 September 1964". Series 10 is contained in box 8.a.

Series 11: Photographic Prints and Negatives consists of photographs & negatives of and by Randall Jarrell, 1916-1965. Among the most interesting items in this series is a photograph of the Gotham Book Mart Party for Dame Edith Sitwell in 1948. The photograph features many of the most prominent literary figures in English literature, including: William Benet, Charles Ford, Delmore Schwartz, Randall Jarrell; Stephen Spender, Sir Osbert Sitwell, Marianne Moore, Elizabeth Bishop; Marya Zaturenska, Horace Gregory, Tennessee Williams, Richard Eberhart, Gore Vidal, Jose Garcia Via, and W. H. Auden. Series 11 is contained in box 8.b – 8.l

Series 12: Manuscript Materials and Periodicals consists of manuscript materials & periodicals containing articles about Randall Jarrell, 1960-1971. Series 12 is contained in box 8.m – 8.q.

Series 13: Oversized Materials consists of proofs & broadsides of poems written for the University of North Carolina Greensboro Library, 1955; also the reprint of a speech by Randall Jarrell, 1966. Series 13 is located in 3 oversize folders removed from boxes 2 & 7: #2.zb.os.1 - #7.s.os.2 - #7.t.os.3

Note to Researchers: Series 9: Loose Manuscripts Transferred from the Stuart Wright Book Collection consists of items found laid in works in the Stuart Wright Book Collection by, about, associated with, or owned by Randall Jarrell. They include notes and bookmarks inserted by Jarrell, Stuart Wright, and others; also notes, cards, correspondence, clippings, advertising, reviews, ephemera, etc. relating to his published works. The loose manuscripts are linked to the books from which they came by their Stuart Wright Book Collection Number (e.g. Stuart Wright Book Collection #40.15).

Collection Overview

Description Writer and producer George Meyer is well known for his work on the long-running animated television comedy The Simpsons. The collection consist of Meyer's scripts files for the The Simpsons (seasons two through six) which may include story notes, outlines, and/or drafts of scripts.

Background George Meyer was born in Pennsylvania in 1957 and grew up in Tuscon, AZ. After graduating from Harvard in 1978, he applied to medical school, was accepted, but never enrolled. Midway through his sophomore year at Harvard, he joined the writing staff of the Lampoon where he established many long-term relationships. In 1981, he started writing for the David Letterman Show and is credited with a stunt that was the basis for many subsequent Letterman routines: squashing things with a steam roller. He also wrote segments in which Letterman would demonstrate a variety of strange gadgets, which were presented as new products but had actually been conceived by Meyer. Meyer left Letterman after about two years to take a job with New Show, Lorne Michaels's successor to Saturday Night Live. The show was cancelled after just two and a half months taking Meyer to Not Necessarily the News, and then to Saturday Night Live. Meyer also published a small, offbeat humor magazine called Army Man. The first issue (there would eventually be three) was written almost entirely by him and included eight typed pages; he printed two hundred copies, which he gave away to friends. The magazine attracted a loyal following and made Rolling Stone's Hot List in 1989.

Title: Lydia Winston Malbin papers

Bulk Dates: 1938-1997

Physical Description: 100 boxes (incl. 2 oversize boxes)

Physical Description: 45 linear feet

Language(s): In English.

Summary: The collection consists primarily of files relating to individual works of art in the Malbin art collection, in addition to correspondence with artists, curators, dealers, museums and galleries; photographs; documentation regarding gifts and loans; material relating to Lydia Winston Malbin's collecting activities and related projects; a small amount of papers of Malbin's father, Albert Kahn; scrapbooks; and card files. The papers provide extensive documentation of a major twentieth-century collection which is no more and of individual works within the collection; as well as insight into some of the leading artists of this century, and particularly of the Italian Futurists, such as Umberto Boccioni. They also illustrate in detail the practice of art collecting as carried out by Malbin, one of the great American practitioners of that avocation.

Processing Notes

The bulk of the collection was processed and described by Yale University Art Gallery staff in 1993. The finding aid was encoded in Encoded Archival Description (EAD) and additions to the collection were processed by Beinecke Library staff in 2007-2008.

Lydia Winston Malbin (1897-1989)

Lydia Kahn Winston Malbin was born November 13, 1897. She was the daughter of Albert and Ernestine Krolik Kahn. Her father was the Michigan architect whose reputation was based upon his innovative and daring designs for Ford Motor Company factories, including the famed River Rouge plant, as well as other industrial complexes elsewhere in the U.S. and abroad.

From her parents Lydia received all the benefits of growing up within a beautiful home amid the pleasures afforded by wealth and culture. Most significantly, she was able to observe the joys of collecting and living amidst great art.

A 1921 graduate of Vassar College, Lydia married Harry Lewis Winston, a young attorney, in 1927. Theirs was a happy union. They were to have three children: two daughters, Sally and Ernestine, and a son, Harry, Jr.

Harry Winston was a man of easy-going temperament and enormous charm who greatly loved his wife. His amused approval of her art collecting and his liking of artists later grew into a passion that nearly equalled hers. They ultimately became a successful and formidable team within the art collecting world: Lydia would search out the background information about an artist and his work and set out to charm and cajole him into parting with it; Harry would handle the actual negotiations and see to the myriad of arrangements necessary to transport the work safely to their home. In addition, he utilized his own hobby, woodworking, to construct boxes, tables and stands for the sculpture.

In 1940, Lydia helped to organize the first show of abstract art for the city of Detroit. She worked along with Hilda Rebay, director of the Museum of Nonobjective Art (which later became the Guggenheim Museum).

In the 1940s, Lydia began studying design at the Cranbrook Academy of Art. She painted watercolors and eventually received a masters degree in ceramics and painting in 1944. This interest and training in ceramics was important because it gave her an eye for shape and design and confidence in her artistic sensibilities. Typically, Harry encouraged this interest, building a ceramics studio for her at their home.

Her ceramics were exhibited in Karl Nierendorf's gallery and were displayed at the Philadelphia Art Alliance and in museums around the country as a part of the Ceramic National, an annual exhibition sponsored by The Everson Museum of Art in Syracuse, NY. During World War II, Lydia created a Rehabilitation Program focusing upon ceramics for the American Red Cross, which was used for occupational therapy for wounded soldiers.

In the 1930's LWM began to develop a curiosity about modern art, a difficult interest to pursue at the time if one lived in the Midwest. She also made her first significant art purchases during this period. Around her earlier acquisitions were: two Marins, two Feiningers, one Chagall and one Soutine.

Lydia credited several people with early and enormous influence upon her career as an art collector. Among these were Alfred Stieglitz, Rose Fried, and Alfred Barr, Jr.

She met Alfred Stieglitz, the famed photographer and art dealer, in 1938 at his gallery, An American Place, where she had gone to inquire about purchasing a work by Marin. During this encounter, which she remembered vividly all her life, he questioned her at length and came to the conclusion that she was a woman of moderate means with a great passion for art. He instilled in her the idea that a collector has a great responsibility to art, to the artist and to the world.

Rose Fried, whom she met in 1945, was another art dealer, most notably for her art gallery, Pinacoteca. Ms. Fried helped Lydia form the early portion of her collection.

Barr's books, Cubism and Abstract Art and Twentieth Century Italian Art (which accompanied the 1949 exhibit Barr and James Thrall Soby mounted at the Museum of Modern Art) aroused her interest and planted the desire to experience more of this type of art. The MOMA exhibit included early Futurist artists as well as works by Morandi, Modigliani, and others. LWM did not see the exhibit, but she did receive the catalog, and her interest in Futurism was triggered. There was a certain logic in Albert Kahn's daughter's urge to collect Italian Futurist art, since the movement celebrated industrialism in general and the speed and power of the automobile in particular.

In 1951, Lydia and Harry made their first collecting trip to Europe. In Rome they were introduced to Benedetta Marinetti, wife of the founder of Futurism. From her Futurist collection they acquired numerous Ballas, Boccioni bronzes, and a Russolo; as well as Futurist manifestos. Signora Marinetti also gave them clues to help locate other Futurist works. During this magical journey they also met Gino Severini, whom they later visited at his studio in Meudon, outside of Paris. They acquired his painting, "Dancer Beside the Sea", the first of several works by this artist that were to grace his collection.

With the assistance of Laura Prudi Gamilla Crispati, co-editor of Archivi Futuristi, they made contact with Signora Callegari-Boccioni, the sister of Umberto Boccioni. Over the course of several years they returned to visit her and remained in contact with her. In time, she agreed to part with her collection of his drawings, which represented his development as an artist over the course of his short life. She also parted with his self-portrait in oil. As an act of friendship, she gave the Winstons her brother's principle palette and a gift.

Later trips produced additional treasures. From Giacomo Balla's daughter they obtained his painting, Lavoro and his sculpture, Fist of Boccioni, which became an emblem for the entire Futurist movement. Through Piero Dorazio, a Roman artist and friend, they tracked down and purchased other works by Boccioni, Balla, and Enrico Prampolini. Their friend Willem Sandberg introduced them to the Cobra.

One of their triumphs was their acquisition of Brancusi's sculpture, "Blonde Negress", the first time the artist had parted with one of his works in over twenty years. The Winstons wrote an amusing one-act play about this experience.

In the case of several artists including Balla, Boccioni, Severini, Russolo, Picasso, Carra, Sironi, Prampolini, Schwitters, Picabia and others, the Winstons' collection had an unusual depth. For, they acquired works from various time periods and in various media. The collection began to take on a definite shape. LWM discovered that her interests turned consistently in certain directions, and she was definite about what she did not want, as what she did. She was not interested in "easy" art, in famous artists, in works which were explicit in telling a story, in the pretty, the appealing and the charming. She was drawn to works based on construction and movement in space, to works that provided a challenge to the viewer.

Nor was LWM's interest confined to European artists. In fact, she purchased the first painting by Jackson Pollack to enter a private collection. However, she generally confined her American purchases to art which she felt was influenced by Futurism.

In 1961, LWM, along with Marcel Duchamp, was awarded an honorary doctoral degree in the humanities by Wayne State University.

Several themes ran throughout LWM's life, and frequently intersected. They were: her passion for and curiosity about art, particularly abstract art; her affection for Detroit; and her desire to help others. In 1964, the Mayor of Detroit appointed her to the Arts Commission for the City of Detroit. She also served as a member of the drawings and acquisitions committee of the Whitney Museum in New York City; sat on the Board of Bennington College, and served eight years on the acquisitions committee of the Art Institute of Chicago.

After the Winstons returned from a trip to Europe in 1964, Harry Winston suffered a heart attack. He never fully recovered, and he died April 14, 1965. His death meant much more than a passing of a singular individual and the loss of a much-loved husband and father: it brought an end to a remarkable team in twentieth-century art collecting. Significantly, their works figured in no major exhibitions in 1965.

Lydia later married Dr. Barnett Malbin, who plunged good-naturedly into his wife's world. The Malbins decided to move to an apartment in Manhattan. LWM loved New York City, the center of art activity, and had always wanted to live there. Moreover, Dr. Malbin had been born there.

Their lives slipped into a comfortable pattern: winters in New York, summers in Vermont, trips to France, Italy, Vermont, trips to Europe for the Biennale. Dr. Malbin died in 1985.

Lydia Winston Malbin died October 14, 1989, at the age of 91, in Columbia Presbyterian Hospital.

LWM took a uniquely feminine approach to her collection.

Purchases were not so much business transactions as whirlwind courtships in which she quickly learned as much as she could about the artist and got to know him and/or his family. No purchase was ever truly final until she and her husband has lived for a time with the piece, after which the relationship with the work lasted -- in most cases -- for the remainder of her life. The relationships with the artists and their families endured, as well, sometimes deepening into lasting friendships.

LWM lived with the works -- they graced her home and she often moved pieces about to experiment with new groupings. The result was "...a home that reflects warmth, class, care, and wisely applied passion..."

She nurtured her collection, caring for it with a close and affectionate eye and a determination to seek the best professional help with its upkeep whenever it was needed.

And, mindful of Stieglitz's tutelage, she loved to show off the pieces and share with others the joy they brought to her. Large portions of the collection anchored numerous shows in some of the finest galleries in the world. Individual pieces were sometimes lent to others. LWM frequently opened her home to single students and whole seminars, leading the tours herself. One result of this activity was "...the reciprocal enrichment of the students and the collection through the development of an expanding series of relationships."

As she grew older, LWM became less amenable to lending her art, especially to distant museums, especially after one of her precious Boccioni drawings was lost by a museum. Also, many of the works were inherently fragile because of their media. But, as the loans diminished, her home became more of a classroom.

She lovingly recorded every relevant piece of information she could obtain about every piece in her collection. In fact, LWM created two collections: the great art collection she amassed over the years, and the archives which supported it. The art collection has now been dispersed, but the archives will live on as a testament to a great art collector who brought to bear a knowledgeable eye, a lively intelligence, a feminine sensibility, a certain amount of luck, and excellent timing.

Description of the Papers

The Lydia Winston Malbin Papers was created and accumulated by Mrs. Malbin in the course of her art collecting, and serves as a supplement to and an enhancement of her collection of art. In time, it, along with the considerable library she amassed, came to enjoy a life and an importance of its own. In 1974, it was the focus for "Documenting a Collection", an exhibit mounted at the Detroit Institute of Arts (in conjunction with the show "Cobra and Contrasts"), which drew upon the archives holdings. Ultimately, the archives survived after the collection of art ceased to be.

An article in Connoisseur noted, "With a certain irony it would seem that to collect modern art one must not only look to the future, but to the past as well...[the Winstons] have complemented their art with a library and, even more important, with archives carefully and systematically developed. The art object is thus supplemented by a context of factual information, criticism and art history, and is established in a network of biographical, sociological , and theoretical relationships."

The papers are of interest in a number of areas. They provide extensive documentation of a major twentieth-century collection which is no more; they document -- sometimes in great depth -- individual works within the collection; they provide insights into some of the leading artists of this century, and particularly of the Italian Futurists; and they illustrate in detail the practice of art collecting as carried out by Malbin, one of the great American practitioners of that vocation.

They provide valuable information about many of the works of art that graced the collection. LWM was scrupulous about gathering as much information as she could prior to purchasing a work, and about documenting everything of relevance after, including: the costs and problems of transporting the work to their home ; all conservation work; correspondence with the artist and/or his family; correspondence regarding the work, including requests to purchase it; all information about the exhibition of the work; publications in which the work appears or is mentioned; all access to the work, and to the archival information regarding it, by scholars; and secondary materials regarding the work, the artist, the movement. On occasion, she even included relevant discoveries she made: e.g., photographs reminiscent of the work, or examples of the work's influence on advertising, or on other artists.

The papers are a particularly substantive source on the subject of Italian Futurist art. There is a wealth of information on the specific works within the Winston/Malbin Collection and the artists who created them, most notably Severini, Balla, and Boccioni. In addition, LWM collected major documents and minor scraps of information relating to Italian Futurism and its later influence within the art world.

Of special interest are the materials relating to the acquisition and later exhibition of the Boccioni drawings, and the friendship they formed with Signora-Boccioni, Boccioni's sister; the Winstons' exploits in persuading Brancusi to part with one of his works for the first time in twenty years (upon which Harry and Lydia Winston based a delightful one-act play); their experiences in commissioning a mobile by Alexander Calder for their Birmingham, Michigan home.

LWM pursued art collecting with a zest that all who knew her remarked upon. The collection contains many off-shoots of this activity: photographers of their many friends within the art world: artists and their families, fellow collectors, museum curators, and critics. There are articles she wrote, speeches she gave, copies of interviews.

Eventually -- inevitably -- the archive acquired its own reputation within the scholarly community. Numerous students visited the Malbin apartment in New York not only to view the collection, but also to conduct research within the archives. Some of the papers resulting in that research are also contained within the collection.

Arrangement

The Lydia Winston Malbin Papers are organized into thirteen series: I. Paintings, 1938-1982. II. Sculpture, 1949-1982. III. Graphics, 1944-1988. IV. Drawings, 1946-1985. V. Objects of Art, 1940-1972. VI. Correspondence, 1959-1989. VII. Photographs, 1949-1972. VIII. Gifts and Loans, 1945-1985. IX. Collection Art, 1951-1988. X. Projects and Activities, 1957-1988. XI. Other Papers, undated. XII. Albert Kahn Papers, undated. XIII. Lydia Winston Malbin Papers Addition, 1938-1997.

Within each series but the last, the materials are arranged in the order in which Mrs. Malbin seems to have kept them.

worked as a Red Cross volunteer in Charlotte, aiding servicemen at the Southern Railway Station as well as destitute families in the poorest sections of Charlotte and surrounding mill villages. After the war she launched her literary career and for a short period operated a bookstore in her home on Sunnyside Avenue. A member of the Charlotte Junior League, she published numerous articles locally and in the national Junior League publication. She penned regular columns for the Charlotte News and the Charlotte Observer between 1933 and 1974. For further information, see an autobiographical sketch in folder #180.14.j.

Description

The papers are divided into six subgroups reflecting Miss Knox's literary career and other interests. The first subgroup, consisting of correspondence, newspaper columns, and periodical publications, reflects Miss Knox's general literary career from the 1920's through 1975. Correspondence chronicles her efforts to publish articles in periodicals such as The American Golfer, The Publishers' Weekly, The Retail Bookseller, and Home Friend Magazine. The bulk of correspondence concerns her columns published between 1933 and 1974 in the Charlotte News and the Charlotte Observer. Fan letters and mail from disapproving readers predominate. Much of the correspondence deals with various aspects of life in Charlotte.

Notable correspondence discusses the annual newspaper institutes of the N.C. Press Association (Nov., 1936; Dec., 1940), the condition of Charlotte's mill village houses (Feb., 1937), Margaret Mitchell's attitude concerning fame and the preparation of sets for the movie based on Gone With the Wind (May, July, Aug., 1937), editorial policy and interests of Life magazine (July-Sept., 1937; July-Oct., 1939), Charlotte's Cook-Kelley-Cottrell gambling case (Aug., 1937), and Charles Lindberg's pacifism and the efficacy of entering World War II (Sept.-Oct., 1939; July, 1940; June, 1941).

Additional significant correspondence includes a denunciation of the policies of Franklin Roosevelt (Nov., 1940) and letters concerning race relations (Dec., 1940; July, 1943), W. J. Cash's Mind of the South (June, 1941), and the efforts of Socialist agitators to inflame industrial workers (Aug., 1941).

Carbon copies of letters from Miss Knox and interesting letters of Negroes written in response to her columns concern alleged German agitation of Negroes (May, Aug.-Sept., 1942, [ca. 1942]), the proper role of Negro domestic servants (Oct., 1941), and the grievances of black laundry workers (July, 1944).

Letters also concern German attacks on U.S. ships (Nov., 1941), the library of and books donated to the Mecklenburg Sanatorium (Dec., 1941), prostitutes frequenting the Charlotte bus station (July, 1943), the career and work of Walter Duranty (July, 1943), E. P. Dutton's controversial book Under Cover (July-Aug., 1943), persons in the Charlotte area with knowledge of countries dominated by Axis powers (Jan., 1944), and a mother's frustrating experiences while maintaining a home and caring for her children (Sept., 1945).

Additional correspondence concerns the Charlotte Symphony (Nov., 1946), Knox's association with the J. B. Ivey Company of Charlotte (1949-1956), Lake Norman's reproduction steamboat ROBERT E. LEE (Oct., 1964), interest in the use of electric automobiles (Oct., 1966), the Food Distribution Program of the N.C. Department of Agriculture (May, 1971), and Charlotte's ugliness and the removal of old trees there (undated).

Intra-office memos from W. Carey Dowd, Jr., and Brodie S. Griffith of the Charlotte News (1934-1946, undated), commend Miss Knox's work.

Knox's newspaper columns, including those pasted in two scrapbooks, constitute a rich source of information on cultural, political, historical, sociological, economic and other aspects of Charlotte and the surrounding area. The columns include "I Believe Everything," a daily piece published in the Charlotte News (1933-March, 1947); the semiweekly "Don't Quote Me," written for the J. B. Ivey Company and published in the Charlotte Observer (Sept., 1949-Feb., 1956); and a weekly piece, also printed in the Observer (March, 1961-1974). Miscellaneous newspaper articles are interspersed among the regular columns.

Literary manuscripts, mostly articles, concern William Bryan of Craven County, "Local Columnists on Regular Beats," the need for all classes of women to work together to avoid class war, and the necessity of employment for talented, older women. Other manuscripts reflect Miss Knox's interest in visitation policies at hospitals, the plight of elderly persons displaced form familiar surroundings, and women's fashions. Two articles discuss her bouts with nervous exhaustion. "The Dollop," a forty-two-page short story, discusses cats.

Periodical articles (1922-1947) reflect Knox's interest in golf, the retail book trade, and miscellaneous topics. They appear in issues of The American Golfer (1922-1923); Southern Golf Magazine (Sept., 1926); Publisher's Weekly; The Retail Bookseller; and Extra Money (1928-1932).

Knox's newspaper publications include articles on golf, letters to editors of newspapers, and reprints of several of her outstanding columns. A considerable quantity of clippings concerning or mentioning Miss Knox amplify the general literary career material.

The children's Bible book subgroup reflects Miss Knox's desire to publish a juvenile book containing notable stories from the King James translation with handsome illustrations. Untitled at first, the book came to be known as The Power and the Glory. Correspondence (1931-1972), especially that of the early 1930's, traces Miss Knox's attempts to interest publishers, including The P. F. Volland Company, Macmillan Company, Good Housekeeping, Life, Simon and Schuster, and J. B. Lippincott. Miscellany concerning the book, including her May 1, 1931, article in The Retail Bookseller, an outline, and a rough draft of a letter, is followed by a loose-leaf edited draft of The Power and the Glory.

The cerebral palsy hospitals subgroup concerns the efforts of Miss Knox and other state leaders to obtain adequate facilities for the care and training of children afflicted by cerebral palsy (spastics). Correspondence (Dec., 1942-1972), including letters from William Allan, Thomas O'Berry, George Ross Pou, and Lenox Dial Baker, traces the development of plans for the North Carolina Cerebral Palsy Hospital at Durham, completed in 1950. Additional correspondence concerns past efforts of the state to aid spastics (Dec., 1946), a survey by the Charlotte Altrusa Club to determine the number of spastics in Mecklenburg Co. (Dec., 1946), and a Federal appropriation for training personnel to care for victims of cerebral palsy and arthritis (Dec., 1950).

Periodical articles and pamphlets discuss victims of cerebral palsy and their needs. The pamphlets concern the North Carolina Cerebral Palsy Hospital and The Spastics Hospital in Charlotte.

Newspaper clippings, most of which were written by Miss Knox, emphasize similar themes.

The Junior League subgroup consists of Miss Knox's writings in Junior League Bulletin, Junior League Magazine, and Charlotte's Junior League Crier (1926-1936, undated), as well as her newspaper articles concerning philanthropic endeavors of this Charlotte Junior League. Many of the clippings discuss the league's hospital for homeless children and efforts to find parents for the children.

A subgroup of genealogical material contains correspondence, notes, photographs, and miscellany relating to the Knox family of New York, Massachusetts, California, and North Carolina, as well as Miss Knox's mother and maternal grandmother.

Letters of Robert C. Thomas of San Francisco and the copies of letters supplied by him discuss the religious views of Lois Knox of Blandford, Mass., as expressed to Reuben Knox of Mamakating, N.Y., and Kinston, N.C. (1820's-1830's). Other letters (1849-1850) and explanatory notes accompanying them concern a wagon train traveling from St. Louis to California. Notable passages describe a cholera epidemic in the St. Louis area and aspects of Fort Kearney (at the present site of Nebraska City).

The subgroup also contains substantive genealogical notes concerning the Knox family (1690's-1890's), including the Knoxes and the Kilpatrick family of Kinston, N.C.

Additional genealogical material includes three letters to poet Jane Printer [Mary Stewart (Lamb) Repiton] (1877, 1889, 1892) of Bloominburg, N.Y., and Boston; an autobiographical sketch and photographs of Dorothy Knox; photographs of Henry E. Knox and the interior of St. James Church, Goshen, N.Y. (1890); a note concerning the marriage of Daisy Lamb Repiton and Henry Elijah Knox, Jr.; a newspaper article concerning the William Wilson Lamb House in Norfolk, Va.; and a copper plate announcing the death of Mrs. M. S. L. Repiton (Nov. 2, 1897).

The World War I subgroup reflects Miss Knox's friendship with several soldiers and pilots from Charlotte or stationed briefly at Camp Greene there. Letters describe camp life and other activities in the United States, England, France, and Germany, as well as the men's feelings about the war.

Correspondence reflecting training and camp life in the United States concerns activities at Chickamauga Park near Chattanooga, Tenn. (June, 1917; [1917?]); medical training at the University of Pennsylvania (Nov., 1917); facilities, weather, and activities of servicemen at Ft. Riley, Kansas and leisure activities at Junction City, Kansas (Dec., 1917-Jan., 1918); and training at Camp Taylor in Louisville, Ky. (July, 1918).

Letters from servicemen stationed in or visiting England provide insight into military life there. Correspondence of Don Harris of the 17th Aero. Squadron describes the people of and camp conditions at Romsey (Feb., 1918), an air raid on London (Feb., 1918), camp accommodations at and the people of Catterick Bridge (Feb., Mar., 1918), and crowded conditions at the flying school of the Royal Flying Corps (Mar., 1918). Other Harris correspondence concerns the superfluity of military censorship (Mar., 1918), leisure activities at Peterborough (April, 1918), plays in London (Feb., Mar., 1918), and plans for further flight training at Marske and Stonehenge (April, 1918).

Most of the letters originate in France, though exact locations are not given. Correspondents include members of the 482nd Aero. Squadron, Ambulance Co. 33, Evacuation Hospital No. 7, Motor Supply Train 414, and "Hq. Sanitary Train" ; they concern troop and trench conditions, German air and artillery attacks, the people and villages of France, and the reflections of the men concerning war. Notable correspondence concerns life at an aerodrome and aspects of the air war (June, 1918), provisions and the role of the army and YMCA in providing them ([July, 1918?]), the frequency of mail and the importance of mail and other reading material to the troops (June-July, 1918), a YMCA facility for American and French soldiers (Oct., 1918), the nature of dugouts (Oct., 1918), activities of Ambulance Co. 33 (Oct., 1918), the absolute devastation of the Argonne section (Oct., 1918), a 1915 encounter of a monoplane and frightened German troops near Verdun (Dec., 1918), a Christmas celebration for French children at Tonnere and other leisure activities of American troops (Jan., 1919), the economy of a French widow near Nantes and the reluctance of the French to drink water (Feb., 1919), and the people and historic sites of Pau (Feb., Mar., 1919).

Correspondence originating in Germany after the armistice concerns officers' facilities and the casino at Prum (Jan., Feb., 1919). A letter from Lutzerath (Feb., 1919) describes farmers and farming techniques, the habits of the people and their attitudes toward the French and English, food supplies for adults and children during the war, and the "finality" of the towns in the area.

Other World War I correspondence concerns an incompetent photographer in Junction City, Kansas (Jan., 1918), chorus girls in New York City and "The Whistlin Pig" restaurant in Greenwich Village (Jan., 1918), New York City's reception of troopsreturning to the U.S. aboard the Mauretania (Dec., 1918), and the travels in France of soldiers on leave (Feb., Mar., July, 1919).

Among the World War I era printed materials are pamphlets concerning the threat of Communist labor agitators, the American Red Cross Bureau of Canteen Service, and various activities at Camp Greene in Charlotte. Also included are a book of cartoons concerning the army, Training for the Trenches; the June 1, 1918 issue of The Propeller (Camp Greene); three 1918 issues of The Caduceus (Camp Greene); and a catalog of clothing manufactured by the House of Kuppenheimer (1918-1919).

World War I newspaper clippings concern a dramatic air mission of Don R. Harris (Aug., 1918) and his subsequent capture by the enemy and internment at The Hague, life of soldiers at Chickamauga Park and in France, and the war record of the 30th Division of U.S. troops.

A World War I scrapbook (1917-1919) contains letters, photographs, sketches, typescripts, newspaper clippings, and miscellaneous printed material relating to Miss Knox's acquaintances and the war in general. Subjects treated include Chickamauga Park; Camp Greene; the aviation school at Georgia Tech in Atlanta; Fort Riley, Kansas; life on the homefront; the air war; medical training at the University of Pennsylvania and the effect of the war on the university's student body; Evacuation Hospital No. 7 of the A.E.F.; Red Cross volunteers at the Southern Railway Station in Charlotte; and activities of the 30th Division of U.S. troops.

Photographs and other material in the scrapbook reflect the activities of Miss Knox, Philip Woolcott, Don R. Harris, Vincent E. D. Bragg, William Carey Dowd, Jr., George A. Somarindyck, Howard L. Mingos, Earl E. Pease, and Forrest L. Marsh. A collection of poems concerns various aspects of the war.

Oversized material includes the DAR membership certificate of Daisy Lamb Repiton Knox (1909); the marriage certificate of Daisy and Henry Elijah Knox, Jr. (Sept., 1890); broadsides describing the "Seventy-Five," a French artillery piece (1919); views of Chickamauga Park and Chattanooga National Military Park (1913); the July, 1929, edition of The Home Friend containing "Happy Landing," by Dorothy Knox; a newspaper discussing aspects of Camp Greene (Oct., 1917); and newspaper articles and advertisements concerning German ships and submarines, liberty bonds, the 30th Division of U.S. troops, the abdication of Kaiser Wilhelm, and the aftermath of the war.

BIOGRAPHY

Rebecca Hourwich Reyher was born on January 21, 1897, in New York City, the second child of Isaac Hourwich (1860-1924) and his second wife Louise Elizabeth "Lisa" (Joffe) Hourwich (1866-1947). They had four other children together: Iskander "Sasha" Hourwich (1895-1968), Olga "Dicky" Hourwich (1902-1977), George Kennan Hourwich (1904-1978), and Ena (Hourwich) Kunzer (1906-1989). Isaac had fled Russia around 1890, leaving his first wife Yelena (Kushelevsky) Hourwich (whom he later divorced), and four children, Nicholas Hourwich (1882-1934), Maria (Hourwich) Kravitz (1883-), Rosa Hourwich (ca.1884-) , and Vera (Hourwich) Semmens (1890-1976) behind. Isaac was a practicing lawyer in Russia and the United States, as well as a Yiddish newspaper writer. Louise taught school in Russia, and, after immigrating to the United States with her family, attended law school. In 1900, the family moved to Washington, D.C., where Isaac had a job with the U.S. Census. In 1906, he returned to Russia and ran for election to the Duma in Minsk. By 1915, the family had moved back to New York. Rebecca enrolled at Columbia University's extension school in 1915 and took classes at the University of Chicago in the early 1920s; she received her bachelor's degree in 1954, after taking summer school classes at the University of Chicago.

While living in Washington, D.C., Rebecca became interested in the women's movement, and in March 1913, she began her life's work for women's rights by participating in the first national suffrage parade in the United States. She carried her new-found passion to New York City and beyond, organizing street meetings and opening offices for the National Woman's Party. In 1917, she married fellow writer Ferdinand Reyher. Their daughter Faith was born in 1919. The marriage was unconventional from the beginning, with Reyher continuing to travel for the National Woman's Party; by the late 1920s she was raising Faith by herself. Because she traveled extensively, Reyher often left her daughter in the care of others, occasionally at her cherished house in Robinhood, Maine. The couple divorced in 1934, with Ferdinand continuing to provide financial support for Faith. Reyher had many admirers, but remained single for the rest of her life.

In 1924, Reyher took her first trip to South Africa as a journalist; it opened her eyes to the plight of women in other countries, and inspired at least four more trips to the African continent. She wrote many books and articles (some unpublished) regarding women's rights throughout Africa, India, and Sri Lanka. Back in the United States, Reyher continued her work with the National Woman's Party, maintaining close friendships with many of the women and men who fought for equal rights for women.

Reyher worked a wide variety of jobs in the 1930s. In the early part of the decade, she was a public relations assistant to the president of the board of aldermen of New York City, Joseph V. McKee; she wrote a column, "Your City and Mine," for the New York Evening World under his signature and also helped prepare speeches and articles for him. She and John Huston co-wrote a screenplay titled "Rhodes," based on the life of Cecil Rhodes; Huston's father Walter subsequently starred in a film called Rhodes of Africa, but neither Reyher nor the younger Huston were credited for their work. She also worked for both the Federal Works Progress Administration and the People's Mandate Committee, serving as part of the latter's "Flying Caravan" mission, which traveled through South and Central America supporting ratification of the Buenos Aires Peace Treaties. In 1934, she again traveled to Africa, this time with her daughter. They spent six months in Zululand, where Reyher met Christina Sibiya. Sibiya had been brought up in a Christian compound but left it at the age of fifteen to become the first wife of Solomon ka Dinuzulu, King of the Zulus. Reyher and Sibiya had many conversations (via a translator), leading to Reyher's book Zulu Woman (1948), the story of Sibiya's first meeting with Solomon, her experiences as one of his sixty-five wives, and his increasingly violent behavior, which finally caused her to leave him. The book also addressed the increasing Westernization of Africa and the ensuing conflict with traditional customs and practices.

In the 1940s, Reyher wrote two children's books (Babies and Puppies Are Fun, 1944, and My Mother Is the Most Beautiful Woman in the World, 1945), edited a book of baby cartoons (The Stork Run, 1944) and an anthology of writings on children and childcare (Babies Keep Coming, 1947), as well as writing Zulu Woman. (She had begun writing Zulu Woman in the 1930s, but as with many of her books, it was a number of years before the book was accepted for publication. Although Reyher was a widely published author of both books and magazine articles, many of her ideas for both books and articles never found approval with publishers.)

She also hosted a weekly half-hour radio program, "City Fun with Children," which featured guests from museums, zoos, and parks in New York City and aired from 1945 to 1949. In 1949 she traveled to West Africa, to visit the Fon of Bikom, a tribal chieftain who had gained worldwide notoriety due to reports that he had over one hundred wives. Her book, The Fon and His Hundred Wives, was published in 1952. She traveled to South Africa again in 1950 and during this trip wrote columns for several Cape Town newspapers. Both these trips provided material for several additional articles. In 1957, she traveled to Uganda and the Belgian Congo; she was also active on the United States lecture circuit in the 1950s and 1960s. She took classes at the New School for Social Research in the 1960s and began teaching there, primarily on Africa. In 1965, she traveled to Africa for the last time, and interviewed many influential African women, continuing work she had begun in the 1950s. She planned two books based on this research: "Africa's First Ladies," and "African Women: The Key to the Continent," but neither was ever published.

Reyher spent a considerable portion of her time in the late 1960s and early 1970s caring for her sister Olga ("Dicky"), whose health was deteriorating. Reyher herself suffered from increasing ailments during this time, but continued to live in her New York City apartment, despite failing eyesight, until 1984, when she moved to Maryland to live with her daughter. Reyher died of pneumonia on January 9, 1987.

SCOPE AND CONTENT

This collection documents the personal and professional life of Rebecca Reyher, including her frequent travel to Africa, lecturing and teaching career, involvement with the People's Mandate Committee, work as a suffragist and member of the National Woman's Party, and experiences as a divorced woman and mother. In addition to her career as an author, Reyher worked a wide variety of jobs, and many of them are documented here. Some material related to the life of her father, Isaac Hourwich, is also included. The collection includes drafts of published and unpublished books and articles, diaries (many documenting her travel to Africa), appointment books, correspondence (including letters from family members and from other suffragists and feminists), and scripts for Reyher's 1940s radio show. The bulk of the folder titles were created by the processors; Reyher's titles, when used, appear in quotation marks. Reyher kept a large number of folders full of clippings dealing with a variety of subjects, perhaps with the goal of writing books or articles on these topics; those clippings not annotated by her have been discarded.

Series I, BIOGRAPHICAL AND PERSONAL, 1877-1987 (scattered), n.d. (#.1.1-22.11, 144.10-144.15), is arranged in two subseries described below: biographical and personal, and diaries, journals, and appointment calendars.

Subseries A, Biographical and personal, 1877-1987 (scattered), n.d. (#1.1-10.7, 144.13-144.15), includes biographical information on Reyher; autobiographical writings; a photostat of Reyher's birth certificate and drafts of her will; some course work and related documents; correspondence related to her frequent search for steady employment; financial and medical records; documents pertaining to her homes in Robinhood, Maine, and New York City, and passports. The financial records include credit disputes, receipts, bank statements, bills, insurance documents, payment for articles published, mortgages on Robinhood, Maine, house, property taxes, complaints to stores, summary of financial position, and expense accounts for trips. Biographical and autobiographical material is followed by an alphabetical arrangement of folders.

Subseries B, Diaries, journals, and appointment calendars, 1921-1984 (#10.8-22.11, 144.10-144.12), includes diaries Reyher kept on many of her trips abroad, including a trip to Russia and Palestine, her first trip to South Africa, and a trip to Africa with her daughter in 1934. Most of these diaries describe the culture, customs, politics, and climates of the various countries visited; descriptions of people encountered (including authors Olive Schreiner and Alan Paton); and Reyher's daily experiences, including her health and monetary concerns, and her writings; and often also include notes and drafts for books or articles. The subseries also includes journals describing lecture tours, and engagement calendars, some of which are very detailed. Diaries and calendars after 1965 often address Reyher's own declining health, and the medical ailments of her sister Olga ("Dicky".) The last few engagement books also address family relations and aging. The subseries is arranged chronologically.

Series II, FAMILY, 1882-1978 (#23.1-27.10, 104.6-104.7), is arranged in five subseries, described below, and mostly contains correspondence of other family members, as well as articles in Russian and Yiddish, passports, business letters, financial records, wedding announcements, and birth announcements. For Reyher's correspondence with these and other family members, see Series V.

Subseries A, Isaac Hourwich, 1882-1960 (#23.1-25.17), contains family and business correspondence, articles in Russian and Yiddish, certificates, and business records.

Subseries B, Louise Elizabeth "Lisa" Joffe Hourwich, 1886-1947 (#25.18-26.5, 104.6), contains family correspondence, high school diploma, and sympathy cards to the family after her death.

Subseries C, Faith Reyher Jackson, 1919-1974, n.d. (#26.6-26.21), contains letters from family and friends, wedding and birth announcements, and letters regarding her education.

Subseries D, Olga Hourwich, 1906-1978, n.d. (#26.22-27.4, 104.7), contains letters from family and friends, business letters, and a passport.

Subseries E, Other siblings and family members, 1911-1968 (#27.5-27.10), contains family correspondence, and articles written by family members.

Series III, BOOKS, 1923-1983 (#27.11-59.1, 70.3-70.7, 145F+B.1-146F+B.14), consists of the ten subseries described below. Materials on Reyher's three best known books, Zulu Woman, The Fon and His Hundred Wives, and My Mother Is The Most Beautiful Woman in the World, appear first, followed by the rest of the subseries listed alphabetically.

Subseries A, Zulu Woman, 1930-1975 (#27.11-34.8), includes several drafts of Reyher's book about Christina Sibiya, the first wife of Solomon ka Dinuzulu, King of the Zulus, and mother of Cyprian, Solomon's heir. The subseries also contains a copy of Solomon's letter acknowledging Cyprian as his heir; correspondence (including rejection letters and correspondence regarding a possible film version); a condensed version published in Life magazine; copyright agreements; reviews; and publicity materials. The subseries is arranged chronologically.

Subseries B, The Fon and His Hundred Wives, 1947-1971, n.d. (#34.9-38.10), includes drafts of Reyher's book about the Fon of Bikom; also included are correspondence; royalty statements; a serialized version; a version titled "The Fon of Laikom"; notes; clippings and reviews; and publicity materials. The subseries is arranged chronologically.

Subseries C, My Mother Is the Most Beautiful Woman in the World, 1944-1982 (#38.12-40.6), includes contracts for various editions; correspondence and clippings, including a column by Eleanor Roosevelt in which she mentions the book; royalty statements; and correspondence and legal documents related to Reyher's lawsuit against the Children's Television Workshop, which had featured a story very similar to My Mother Is the Most Beautiful Woman in the World in its magazine and on an episode of Sesame Street. (Reyher lost and appealed this case; her lawyer submitted a petition for a Writ of Certiorari, which was denied by the U.S. Supreme Court.) The subseries is arranged chronologically.

Subseries D, Babies and Puppies Are Fun, 1939-1949, n.d. (#40.7-40.9), includes royalty statements, correspondence (including rejection letters for an earlier version of this children's book), and a story by Reyher which appeared in Congratulations magazine.

Subseries E, Babies Keep Coming, 1941-1950, n.d. (#40.10-41.7, 70.3-70.7, 145F+B.1-146F+B.14), contains correspondence related to this book of essays, stories, poems, and book excerpts, which was edited by Reyher. The book was organized into sections with headings like "Birth" and "Expert Advice"; the section introductions, written by Reyher, and the essay she contributed, are included, as are royalty statements.

Subseries F, Book projects re: African women, 1939-1967, n.d. (#41.8-45.2), consists of drafts of several unpublished books by Reyher, as well as a segment she contributed to Dr. George Kimble's book Tropical Africa, and correspondence. The subseries is arranged alphabetically. For additional writings on African women, see Subseries J.

Subseries G, "Several Simultaneous Husbands,"1957-1964,1971,1982 (#45.3-50.5), includes several drafts of an unpublished book on polyandry in Ceylon. Correspondence and notes are also included. The subseries is arranged chronologically.

Subseries H, The Stork Run, 1942-1950, n.d. (#50.6-51.5), includes correspondence and clippings related to the book of baby cartoons edited by Reyher. The subseries also includes contracts; royalty statements; an account of the royalties due to the cartoonists; publicity materials for a publication party; and a mock-up of a proposed sequel. The subseries is arranged chronologically.

Subseries I, Other books, 1932-1983, (scattered), n.d. (#51.6-53.4), consists of book proposals and outlines; drafts; correspondence; recipes collected for potential cookbooks; and dummies of several proposed children's books. The subseries is arranged alphabetically.

Subseries J, Other writings, notes, and drafts 1923-1972, n.d. (#53.5-59.1), includes drafts on a wide variety of topics including African women, feminism, women's work, Reyher's grandsons, and many more. Some notes and ideas for articles and books are also included, as is some background material. The subseries is arranged alphabetically.

Series IV, ARTICLES AND BOOK REVIEWS, 1920-1979 (#59.2-70.2), consists primarily of published and unpublished articles by Reyher. Article topics include family life ("Who Gets the Child,""Are You a Good Father?"); biographical sketches "(Agnes Powers: The Only Woman Lay Preacher in Maine,""Gandhi's Granddaughter,""At Home with the Patons"); life in Africa ("A Day with a Zulu Doctor, ""To Market, To Market for a Profit of Sixpence"); and a wide variety of other topics. Articles by Reyher appeared in a number of magazines and newspapers, ranging from the Nation and Mademoiselle to more obscure or specialized publications such as Milady magazine and Downeast; several of her articles were published in South African papers, such as the Cape Times, for which she wrote the series of biographical sketches "These I Shall Remember" and the infant care series "Babies Keep Coming." Also included is the newspaper column Reyher wrote for Joseph McKee. The series also includes a scrapbook of clippings. With the exception of the articles "What Do You Do With Your Time? " and "Portrait of a South Africa Home Executive," all of the articles in the scrapbook also appear elsewhere in the series. The scrapbook also includes book jackets for Zulu Woman, The Stork Run, Babies and Puppies Are Fun, and Babies Keep Coming. The series is arranged with correspondence, article lists, book reviews, the scrapbook, and letters to the editor appearing first, followed by an alphabetical list of articles. In some cases, Reyher grouped articles together under such titles as "African articles" or "Articles and correspondence re: Nigeria"; she also often grouped articles published in a particular magazine together. In these cases, the folders have been placed in the alphabetical list under the title assigned by Reyher. When the magazine in which an article appeared could be determined, the magazine title is included in the folder heading. (In some cases, articles were accepted or purchased, but apparently never published.) For articles Reyher wrote for the National Woman's Party's magazine, Equal Rights, see Series VI, Subseries E.

Series V, CORRESPONDENCE, 1903-1988, n.d. (#70.8-122.7, 128.1), consists of the three subseries described below, all of which include documentation of Reyher's personal life, including marriage, raising a child, suffrage, traveling, and renovating her house in Robinhood, Maine. The subseries were created by the archivist.

Subseries A, Family, 1906-1986, n.d. (#70.8-76.19, 104.5), contains Reyher's correspondence with her family, arranged alphabetically. See also #114.14, 116.6-116.10, 120.5-120.13 for letters from family members to Reyher while she was lecturing. For other correspondence and papers of various family members, see Series II.

Subseries B, Friends and others, arranged alphabetically,1906-1986, n.d. (#77.1-88.13, 122.6-122.7), consists of letters from Reyher's friends and acquaintances. Many of the women were involved with the women's rights movement in the United States, and around the world. Of note are Sudharma Dharmadasa (one of the first female judges in Sri Lanka), Mabel Vernon, Anne Carter, Vivian Pierce, and Sister Marie-Andre du Sacre Coeur. Many of the correspondents were friends with Reyher throughout her life, and their letters can also be found in Series VI, Subseries B. The subseries is arranged alphabetically.

Subseries C, Friends and others, arranged chronologically, 1903-1987, n.d. (#89.1-104.4), consists of correspondence from Reyher's various friends and acquaintances not included in Subseries B. Incoming and outgoing correspondence are in #89.1-89.5; letters received by Reyher are in #89.6-95.1. The subseries is arranged chronologically.

Subseries D, Business, 1911-1985 (#104.8-122.5, 128.1), consists of correspondence that touches on almost all aspects of Reyher's professional career, including writing, advertising, teaching, suffrage, department store promotions and public relations, travel, and the Works Progress Administration; with the exception of folders #104.8-109.9, most folders contain incoming and outgoing correspondence. See also Series VI for lecture correspondence. Part of the subseries is arranged chronologically (#104.8-112.12), while the remainder is alphabetical (#113.1-122.5, 128.1).

Series VI, PROFESSIONAL, 1911-1985, n.d. (#122.8-144.9, 147F+B.1-147F+B.8), consists of the five subseries described below, arranged chronologically.

Subseries A, People's Mandate Committee and Dominican Republic Settlement Association, 1911-1970 (scattered), n.d. (#122.8-124.8, 147F+B.1-147F+B.8), consists primarily of material on the People's Mandate Committee. This organization (previously known as People's Mandate to Governments to End War, Committee for the Western Hemisphere, and People's Mandate for Inter-American Peace and Cooperation) was an offshoot of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom and was headed by Mabel Vernon. Reyher was in charge of press relations and was part of the organization's 1937 six-week "flying caravan," a semi-official mission which supported ratification of the Buenos Aires Peace Treaties and hoped to establish contacts with feminists and pacifists in Latin America. The organization was also involved in a 1939 goodwill tour of the United States by prominent Latin American women. The bulk of the subseries concerns the "flying caravan" trip and includes correspondence, clippings, publicity materials, a pamphlet edited by Reyher, and a photocopy of a scrapbook documenting the trip. Some material related to the Dominican Republic Settlement Association is also included here; Reyher served as executive secretary.

Subseries B, Suffrage and women's rights, 1913-1985, n.d. (#124.9-127.20), consists mainly of letters from members of the National Woman's Party, as well as other suffragists from around the United States; also included are speeches, articles, and newsletters. Many of the correspondents were friends with Reyher throughout her life, and their letters can also be found in Series V, Subseries B and C.

Subseries C, Adult education: New School for Social Research and other, 1925-1926,1939,1951-1971, n.d. (#128.2-135.4), consists of material related to the classes Reyher taught at the New School and at other adult education establishments in the 1960s. The majority of her classes focused on Africa, but some covered other countries, or focused on women. The subseries, which includes course descriptions, lecture materials, reading lists, and correspondence, is arranged with a New School brochure and course descriptions appearing first, with the remaining folders arranged alphabetically.

Subseries D, Radio programs, 1939-1952, n.d. (#135.5-140.3), contains scripts for Reyher's weekly radio program "City Fun with Children," highlighting the many activities available to mothers and children in New York City. The program ran from 1945 to 1949. Each week's show featured a guest from a local museum, zoo, or other attraction, who gave details of the activities available at their institution. Among the many institutions highlighted were the Brooklyn Public Library, the Metropolitan Museum of Art, and the Museum of the Jewish Theological Seminary. In addition to the radio scripts, the subseries also includes background material on the various guests and organizations, letters in response to the program, brochures and newspaper listings for the program, and scripts for a radio program on food and some earlier radio shows, including "Behind the Scenes with the UN." The subseries is arranged alphabetically.

Subseries E, Lectures, 1930-1978, n.d. (#140.4-144.9), consists primarily of correspondence, contracts, and publicity materials regarding speeches by Reyher. The bulk of the subseries covers the 1950s, when she traveled widely throughout the United States, giving lectures. Her wide variety of topics included "Adventures in Africa," the Fon and his hundred wives, South Africa, "Women the World Over," and "African Women: Key to the Continent." See also Series V for lecture correspondence and Series I, Subseries B for journals describing lecture tours. Relatively few speeches are included in the subseries, which is arranged chronologically.

Series VII, PHOTOGRAPHS, OVERSIZED, AND MEMORABILIA, 1910-1965, n.d. (#PD.1-PD.93, FD.1-FD.4, F+D.1-F+D.4, SD.1, 145F+B.1-147F+B.8, 148F+B.1m-148F+B.2m, 149OB.1m-150OB.4m), includes the three subseries listed below.

Subseries A, Photographs, ca.1920-1965, n.d. (#PD.1-PD.93), contains photographs taken by Reyher and others during her many trips to Africa, Russia, Greece, Syria, Pakistan, India, Ceylon, and Palestine. The majority of images are from Africa, especially southern Africa; of note are the photographs taken of the kraals. Also included are early twentieth century photographs taken in Zululand and given to Reyher. The photographs are arranged alphabetically, with folders of negatives and slides appearing last.

Most of the photographs in this collection are or will be cataloged in VIA, Harvard University's Visual Information Access database. Others, referred to as "uncataloged" photographs, are not of sufficient research interest to warrant cataloging and are simply treated as part of the documents they accompany; they are marked on the back with an asterisk in square brackets [*].

Subseries B, Oversized, 1910-1951, n.d. (#FD.1-FD.4, F+D.1-F+D.4, SD.1, 145F+B.1-147F+B.8), includes scrapbooks and items from throughout in the collection.

Subseries C, Memorabilia, 1936,1960, n.d. (148F+B.1m-148F+B.2m, 149OB.1m-150OB.4m), consists of objects found among the papers. The suffrage items were mailed to Reyher from Fern Ingersoll, who worked with Reyher for the University of California oral history project.

- Subseries B. Diaries, journals, and appointment calendars, 1921-1984 (#10.8-22.11, 144.10-144.12)
  Scope and Content: Diaries, journals, and appointment calendars, 1921-1984 (#10.8-22.11, 144.10-144.12), includes diaries Reyher kept on many of her trips abroad, including a trip to Russia and Palestine, her first trip to South Africa, and a trip to Africa with her daughter in 1934. Most of these diaries describe the culture, customs, politics, and climates of the various countries visited; descriptions of people encountered (including authors Olive Schreiner and Alan Paton); and Reyher's daily experiences, including her health and monetary concerns and her writings; and often also include notes and drafts for books or articles. The subseries also include journals describing lecture tours, and engagement calendars, some of which are very detailed. Diaries and calendars after 1965 often address Reyher's own declining health, and the medical ailments of her sister Olga ("Dicky".) The last few engagement books also address family relations and aging. The subseries is arranged chronologically.
  - 10.8. Journal entries and notes, 1921; includes uncataloged photographs
  - 10.9-11.5. First trip to South Africa, 1924-1926; includes "a lot about Dr. Poram and my first African trip" (#10.9-10.10), draft of "I Keep My Own Name in South Africa" (#11.2), and notes on history of South Africa (#11.4-11.5), letter of introduction (#11.5). (8 folders)
    See also #FD.4 for prints removed from #11.2.

- Series IV. ARTICLES AND BOOK REVIEWS, 1920-1979 (#59.2-70.2)
  Scope and Content: Series IV, ARTICLES AND BOOK REVIEWS, 1920-1979 (#59.2-70.2), consists primarily of published and unpublished articles by Reyher. Article topics include family life ("Who Gets the Child,""Are You a Good Father?"); biographical sketches "(Agnes Powers: The Only Woman Lay Preacher in Maine,""Gandhi's Granddaughter,""At Home with the Patons"); life in Africa ("A Day with a Zulu Doctor, ""To Market....To Market....for a Profit of Sixpence"); and a wide variety of other topics. Articles by Reyher appeared in a number of magazines and newspapers, ranging from the Nation and Mademoiselle to more obscure or specialized publications such as Milady magazine and Downeast; several of her articles were published in South African papers, such as the Cape Times, for which she wrote the series of biographical sketches "These I Shall Remember" and the series "Babies Keep Coming." Also included is the newspaper column Reyher wrote for Joseph McKee. The series also includes a scrapbook of clippings. With the exception of the articles "What Do You Do With Your Time? " and "Portrait of a South Africa Home Executive," all of the articles in the scrapbook also appear elsewhere in the series. The scrapbook also includes book jackets for Zulu Woman, The Stork Run, Babies and Puppies are Fun, and Babies Keep Coming. The series is arranged with correspondence, article lists, book reviews, the scrapbook, and letters to the editor appearing first, followed by an alphabetical list of articles. In some cases, Reyher grouped articles together under such titles as "African articles" or "Articles and correspondence re: Nigeria"; she also often grouped articles published in a particular magazine together. In these cases, the folders have been placed in the alphabetical list under the title assigned by Reyher. When the magazine in which an article appeared could be determined, the magazine title is included in the folder heading. (In some cases, articles were accepted or purchased, but apparently never published.) For articles Reyher wrote for the National Woman's Party's magazine, Equal Rights, see Series VI, Subseries E.

  Scope and Content: Series VI, PROFESSIONAL, 1902-1985, n.d. (#122.8-144.9, 147F+B.1-147F+B.8), consists of the five subseries described below.
  - Subseries A. People's Mandate Committee and Dominican Republic Settlement Association, 1911-1970 (scattered), n.d. (#122.8-124.7, 147F+B.1-147F+B.8)
    Scope and Content: Subseries A, People's Mandate Committee and Dominican Republic Settlement Association, 1911-1970 (scattered), n.d. (#122.8-124.7, 147F+B.1-147F+B.8), consists primarily of material on the People's Mandate Committee. This organization (earlier variously known as People's Mandate to Governments to End War, Committee for the Western Hemisphere, and People's Mandate for Inter-American Peace and Cooperation) was an offshoot of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom and was headed by Mabel Vernon. Reyher was in charge of press relations and was part of the organization's 1937 six-week "flying caravan," a semi-official mission which supported ratification of the Buenos Aires Peace Treaties and hoped to establish contacts with feminists and pacifists in Latin America. The organization was also involved in the 1939 goodwill tour of the United States by prominent Latin American women. The bulk of the subseries concerns the flying caravan trip and includes correspondence, clippings, publicity materials, a pamphlet edited by Reyher, and a scrapbook documenting the trip. Some material related to the Dominican Republic Settlement Association is also included here; Reyher served as executive secretary.

Abstract: Founded in 1978 through collaboration between artistic director Joy Zinoman, designer Russell Metheny, and arts advocate Virginia Crawford, The Studio Theatre has grown into a premiere cultural organization of Washington D.C. With four performance spaces, a partnership with the Acting Conservatory, and numerous community outreach programs, Studio Theatre is able to deliver a diverse array of special events, performances, and professional and educational training. This collection contains the professional materials of The Studio Theatre such as financial documents, production materials, renovation and expansion documents, board minutes and information, awards, press materials, and photographs as well as pre-Studio and personal materials of the founding members.

Historical Note

The Studio Theatre began in 1978 as a collaboration between Artistic Director Joy Zinoman and Designer Russell Metheny with support of arts advocate Virginia Crawford. Prior to the beginning of TST, Metheny and Zinoman had worked together on successful productions for Washingtons West End Theatre. The Studio Theatre strives to produce plays that focus on interaction between actor and audience and thus has used intimate performance spaces since its founding. In the late 1980s two more production divisions were introduced: The Studio 2ndStage and Special Events. As additions to The Studio Theatres subscription season, Special Events showcases works by performing artists without other performance opportunities in D.C. while The Studio 2ndStage produces plays which often push the boundaries of more conservative theater. In 1992, the Studio launched its Campaign to Secure the Future, an ambitious 3.5 million dollar undertaking to expand the physical space of the theatre and contribute to the revitalization of the 14th Street corridor. This successful project added two stages, numerous classrooms, and confirmed the ongoing expansion of the Studio Theatres impact. Further renovations were completed between 2002 and 2006 to update the building and improve accessibility and technological aspects of the building. Today, the Studio Theatre maintains an active relationship with the 14th street community and offers many free and affordable options for low income residents as well as partnerships with various community and youth organizations.

Scope and Contents of the Collection

Series 1: Founders, 1966-2010 and undated (14 linear feet)

This group contains the materials of founders Joy Zinoman, Russell Metheny, and Virginia Crawford. Materials include Studio and non-Studio materials belonging to the founders.

Subseries 1.1: Joy Zinoman, 1975-2010 and undated (13 linear feet)

This subseries contains Studio Theatre and pre-Studio materials such as correspondence, production programs, research material, datebooks, Studio publicity, award nominations and programs, and administrative and retreat files belonging to Joy Zinoman. Founder Joy Zinoman served as artistic director of the Studio Theatre from its beginning until her retirement in 2010. Materials are arranged into six subgroups in the following order: pre-Studio materials, programs, correspondence, datebooks, awards, and administrative files. Materials are organized chronologically within subgroup. A PDF of the subseries inventory is available here.

The box inventory for this subseries is not currently available online. Please refer to the subseries description above for a broad description of the materials or contact the department for more information.

Subseries 1.2: Russell Metheny, 1966-1988 and undated (1 linear foot)

This subseries contains many drafts, models, costume designs, and non-Studio Theatre programs donated by founding designer Russell Metheny. More design sketches and promotional drawings by Metheny can be found in the individual production files in Series 5, in the public relations files found in Subseries 3.1, and in renovation drafts in Subseries 3.3: Facilities/IT. Materials in this collection are organized into four subgroups: programs, Studio Theatre production rolls, non-Studio Theatre production rolls, and large posters and drawings. The production rolls and large posters and drawings are currently stored along the wall in the SCPA collection room. An inventory for these large objects can be found in the Studio Theatre file in SCPA Share under the title Russell Metheny Inventory. One box of uninventoried drafts remains with Studio and non-Studio drafts to be divided. A PDF of the subseries inventory is available here.

The box inventory for this subseries is not currently available online. Please refer to the subseries description above for a broad description of the materials or contact the department for more information.

Biographical Note

Erna Weill née Helft was born in 1904 in Frankfurt am Main. She studied sculpture with Helene von Beckerath, a student of August Rodin, at the University of Frankfurt. She married the chemist Ernst Weill, and the couple had two children: Peter Weill, born in 1926, followed two years later by Ruth Weill. The family fled Germany in 1936 for Switzerland, and immigrated to the United States in 1937. Erna Weill stayed in the New York City area, where she worked as a sculptor and art teacher. Next to busts of various famous people, her sculptures were connected to the American Civil Rights Movement and the world of Judaism. In addition to working as an art teacher in public schools, she also had her own art school where she applied progressive teaching methods. Erna Weill died in 1996.

Scope and Content Note

The collection contains documents from Erna Weill's personal and professional life. The bulk of the material deals with her professional life, starting with her arrival in the United States in 1937 and ending in the early 1970s. It is reflected in the correspondence with various buyers of her sculptures (Series II, Subseries 1); documents from her art school and teaching career (Series II, Subseries 2); information about her various exhibitions (Series II, Subseries 3); and newspaper clippings that she collected (Series III).

Little information is given about her personal life during this time period. Most of the personal documents cover her time in Germany (Series I). Personal information can be found in the form of correspondence (Series I, Subseries 1) and other personal papers, such as a household account book. (Series I, Subseries 2). Additional personal information is reflected in several travel documents that Erna Weill collected (Series IV). Most of these travel documents are from the time before her immigration. Prominent in this section are two travel diaries from a cruise she took to Spain in 1930.

Series III is in English and German.

Arrangement:
Topical.

Scope and Content:
Series III consists of clippings. The bulk of the clippings cover Erna Weill's work as artist and art teacher. The clipping in folder 12 is an article by Erna Weill, dealing with children working with clay. The folders labeled "Other Clippings" consist of items that she collected, but that do not have anything to do with her own professional work.

Series V: Audiovisual Material, 1932-1974

Arrangement:
Topical.

Scope and Content:
Series V contains a cassette tape with an interview and ten film reels. These film reels have been reformatted onto four DVDs that are available to researchers.

The DVD in folder 2 consists of a family trip to Palestine in what appears to be the 1930s or early 1940s. The DVD contains images from the time period of Haifa, Mt. Carmel, Tel Aviv, Jerusalem, Bethlehem, Mt. Tabor, the Jordan River, Tiberias, Jericho, and the Dead Sea. This portion is followed by visits to various Jewish settlements / kibbutzim. These settlements include Nahalal, Beth Alpha, Kinerteth (where they visit the painter Jakob Nussbaum) Gedera, Mikweh Israel, Herzlia, and Ramoth Hashawim. The film portrays panoramic views of these locations, combined with some images of the family during the trip.

The DVD in folder 3 contains images of the family in Germany in the 1930s. The images are largely of Erna Weill and her children, Peter and Ruth, engaged in various activities, including playing outdoors, swimming, flying kites, visiting a beach in northern Germany, children's birthday parties, children's performances, Easter egg hunting, and visiting extended family members.

The DVD in folder 4 dates from the family after arriving in the United States. The original film container dates the film as originating in 1934 and 1938. This DVD is largely focused on the children, Peter and Ruth. They are depicted playing with their friends, learning to play baseball, and spending time at Crystal Lake summer camp. Included are depictions of family members on vacation in what appears to be upstate New York, and family members playing musical instruments and singing together at home.

The DVD in folder 5 dates between 1932-1936. The film begins with the German soccer championship in Nuremberg in 1932, followed by a vacation in Switzerland that includes scenes of the family hiking, swimming, skiing, and mountain climbing.

Joseph Matkin, 1853-1927

Joseph Matkin Letters, 1868-1984

Physical Description: 1 mss, 1 L mss

Description: The collection consists of 44 autographed signed letters written by Joseph Matkin, ship's steward's assistant on H.M.S. CHALLENGER during the Challenger oceanographic expedition of 1872-1876, to members of his family in Oakham, Rutland, England. The letters describe the mission, oceanographic operations and ports of call of the H.M.S. CHALLENGER. The letters include a transcript made by Joseph Matkin of a lecture delivered by C. Wyville Thompson to the crew describing the mission of the expedition. Ports of call described in Matkin's letters include Fayal, Lisbon, Bermuda, Tongatabu, Hong Kong, Gulf of Yedo, New Guinea, Sydney, Hilo, and many others. Collection includes the original letters, transcripts, microfilm, photographs, and a copy of John Thomas Swann's copybook of correspondence.

Below, a transcript follows the folder list.

Donor: Lucy Mary Matkin Stone (Mrs. Vernon E. Stone). Mrs. Stone made typescript transcripts of all letters. Letters were received 3/20/84 from Mrs. Stone and sent to Victoria Blyth Hill of LA County Museum for conservation treatment, then to UCLA for microfilming.

(3) For those at Sea

"These men see the works of the Lord, and His wonders in the deep".

ETERNAL FATHER, strong to save,
Whose arm hath bound the restless wave,
Who bidd'st the mighty ocean deep,
Its own appointed limits keep,
O hear us when we cry to Thee,
For those in peril on the sea.

O Christ, Whose voice the waters heard
And hushed their raging at Thy word,
Who walkedst on the foaming deep,
And calm amid the storm didst sleep;
O hear us when we cry to Thee
For those in peril on the sea.

(4)
O Holy Spirit, who didst brood
Upon the waters dark and rude,
And bid their angry tumult cease,
And give, for wild confusion, peace;
O hear us when we cry to Thee
For those in peril on the sea.

O Trinity of love and power
Our brethren shield in danger's hour;
From rock and tempest, fire and foe,
Protect them wheresoe'er they go;
Thus evermore shall rise to Thee
Glad hymns of praise from land and sea.
Amen.
Hymn 370. A and M

The Sailor's Thanksgiving

"They that go down to the sea in ships, that do business in great waters, these see the works of the Lord, and His wonders in the deep. For He commandeth, and raiseth the stormy wind, which lifteth up the waves thereof. They mount up to the heaven, they go down again to the depths; their soul is melted because of trouble. They reel to and fro, and stagger like a drunken man, and are at their wit's end. Then they cried unto the Lord in their trouble, and He bringeth them out of Their distresses.

He maketh the storm a calm, so that the waves thereof are still.
Then are they glad because they be quiet, so He bringeth them into their desired haven".

The "CHALLENGER" - Her Challenge

"I'm a spar decked corvette, built of wood, not of iron,
I am good under steam, under sail,
No Sheffield plate dead weights my topsails environ
As I ride like a duck thro' a gale.
By my Lords I'm about to be put in commission
For a cruise of three years, if not four, and for all I'm short-handed, I carry provision,
Such as corvette ne'er victualled before.

"Mines's no cruise to train officers, boys or blue-jackets
Or Brittania's old flag to display,
To observe or report South American rackets
Or enjoy life in hapless Blue Bay.
To practice manoeuvers, or study steam tactics
Hunt down pirate junk or slave dhow,
The "Challenger" now aims at higher ~~dictates~~ didactics
And on different quest sets her prow.

Her task,s to sound ocean's, smooth humour or rough in
To examine old Neptune's sea-bed.
Dredge up samples precise of his mattresses' stuffing.
And the bolsters that pillow his head,
To study the dip and the dance of the needle
Test the currents of ocean and air,
In a word, all her secrets from nature to wheedle
And the great freight of facts homeward bear.

And by way of a treat when the fauna and flora
Of all lands and all seas I've run through,
And learnt if the Austral Antarctic Aurora
Our Boreal in beauty outdo.
In the Isle of Kerguelen with nothing between us
But the thinnest of clouds, - Oh what fun!
I'm to lurk and look on at the Transit of Venus,
Across the broad blush of the sun.

For this I bear science and seamanship plighted
In Thomson and Nares and Maclear;
While from highest to lowest aboard all invited
To serve both alike volunteer.
Broadside guns have made room to ship's batteries magnetic Apparatus turns out ammunition,
From maindeck to ground-tier I'm a peripatetic
Polytechnic marine exhibition.

Mighty fine, says John Bull, but how about cost?
Cash soon makes ducks and drakes in the ocean,
Treasury leave was asked first, prayer of course aside tost
Until Lowe went to figure with Goschen.
When they found out the outlay for all this provision
To question the land and the sea,
Would no more be than keeping my hull in commission,
With nothing to show for t'would be.

"Said Lowe laughing - To pay by results is my plan
For results here'll be nothing to pay.
Let the "Challenger" go, and I'll challenge the man
Be it Rylands himself who'll gainsay,
For he, like myself, tho' he's not been to college,
And's a shallowish sort of a snob,
Has at bottom, I'm sure, no objection to knowledge
So long as it don't cost a bob.

H.M.S. "CHALLENGER"
Sheerness. Nov. 22nd '72

Dear Tom

We came into this ship on Monday morning 175 all told, including 19 Privates and one Sergeant of Marines, and the same evening one of the Marines was drowned, walked right over the ship's gangway into the dock basin which is 27 feet deep, and was drowned in sight of several of his shipmates. It was about seven o'clock at night and pitch dark, and there was no light to direct any one walking on shore from the ship or anything round the edge of the basin to prevent them falling in. As soon as the alarm was raised all the ship's company went out on the jetty with lights, etc., and the dock yard police went for the drags (14) and dragged for two hours, but were unable to find him so had to desist for the night.

In the morning a diver was fetched and all the seamen from the barracks, a crowd of dockyard men assembling to see the diver go down. As soon as he had his dress on with about 50 lbs of iron hung round his waist, his mates began pumping air, and down he went to the bottom, and was there about three minutes walking over the whole space between the ship and the side of the basin without finding him when just as he was coming up - he saw him standing bolt upright against the side of the basin, and after tieing a rope round his waist, he came up, and hauled him out of the water head first. He had only been immersed about ten hours but his features were so altered, (15) his shipmates could scarcely recognize him.

He was buried yesterday afternoon with all the honours allowed by the service, the flag ship's brass band playing the "Dead March" and the Blue Jackets and Marines of the "Challenger" following with arms reversed. The poor fellow's mother and sisters came down from London to his funeral.

Another Marine has come today from Chatham Barracks in his place, and he turns out to be an old shipmate of mine, who was in the "Invincible" and "Audacious". I have about eight old shipmates on board.

We are to have 50 boys when we get to Portsmouth, which will make the complement 280. 230. All the officers are on board except Lord George Campell, who, I expect is waiting until all the (16) dirty work is done. We have two steam boats on board, and about 30 miles of deep sea line, and dredging line. The other six boats we shall take in when we go into the river next week. All the scientific chaps are on board, and have been busy during the week stowing their gear away. There are some thousands of small air tight bottles, and little boxes about the size of valentine boxes packed in iron tanks for keeping specimens in, insects, butterflies, mosses, plants etc. There is a photographic room on the main deck, also a dissecting room for carving up bears, whales, etc.

We had a grand funeral here on Sunday morning last, a Prussian frigate came in to bury one of her seamen, the greater part of the officers (17) and her crew followed him to the grave. Their band was composed of all seamen, playing a funeral march, and the coffin was drawn on a field piece by the seamen. They were dressed much the same as ours, but were not such good looking men, the Marines wore a black and silver uniform, and helmets, which had a fine appearance. The ship left again on Monday after saluting the flag ship with 18 guns.

We are to go out in the Medway on the 28th and expect to leave Portsmouth about the 2nd.

The Crest is a facsimile of the ship's figure head which is gilded.

Believe me,
Very Truly Yours
Joe Matkin

H.M.S. "CHALLENGER"
Portsmouth,
Dec. 17th 1872

Dear Tom

We left Sheerness last Saturday week, and had awful weather round, having to put back three times, once into Deal on the Monday, into Folkestone on Tuesday, and into Dungeness on the Wednesday, arriving here on Thursday; the distance is 105 miles and we were 109 hours steaming full speed all the way. The wind was dead against us, and it commenced to increase as soon as we had passed Dover on the Saturday night. In the morning it had increased to a gale and we found ourselves close into the coast of France. At 10 o'clock on Sunday the (19) Captain gave orders to put back for the Downs, but the wind rose to a hurricane and we could make no headway against it. At midnight the ship passed through a cyclone, which caused the sea to come right over her and go down into the engine room, through the hatchways, nearly putting out the fires, the lifeboat cutter was smashed to atoms, and the jib boom carried away with all the head sails, so that the ship drifted along under a single storm staysail. She rolled fearfully all night. I was pitched out of my hammock two or three times, and think it was the most fearful night I ever passed in my life. Several ships were wrecked close to us, and it was considered the roughest night on the southern coast (20) for the last eight years.

We reached Deal on the Monday and waited until the storm abated. There were hundreds of vessels of all nations at anchor in the Downs. Directly we dropped ours the scientific blokes made a rush for the railway station and came on to Portsmouth by train arriving two days before us. They lay about sea sick during the gale and the sailors did make game of them. The damages are nearly all repaired except a new lifeboat, which is to be sent out to the Cape Verdes in a month's time.

The chief engineer made a sketch of the ship during the gale on Sunday night which is to be printed, this week's "London News" and "Graphic" are also expected to contain plates of (21) the "Challenger". Since we came in here we have been very busy drawing extra stores for the cold weather. The Lords of the Admiralty were on board on Saturday inspecting the ship, and ordered extras, such as wines, pickles, jams, cranberries etc. We are to have warm clothing sent out to the Cape of Good Hope in a year's time, and it will be issued before going down amongst the ice, or rather lent, for it will be taken away as soon as we reach the latitude of Melbourne, and again issued at Petropavlovsk-Kamchatskiy before going through Behring Straits. We are also to have extra pay in the cold ~~station~~ weathers.

The Marquis of ~~Lome~~ Lorne was on board on Saturday, he is not as handsome as his picture. We also had Admiral (22) Sir Leopold McClintock of Arctic notoriety, and I can't tell you who has not been to look over the ship since we came here.

The Queen passed us today in her yacht on her way across to Osborne, and all the Marines were drawn up under arms.

Portsmouth is a very fine town larger I think than Hull. We expect to sail on Saturday next for Lisbon, and if we make haste shall most likely be there for Christmas.

Yours Very Sincerely

Joe Matkin.

H.M.S. "CHALLENGER"
Lisbon Roads,
January 7th 1873

Dear Tom,

We left Portsmouth on Saturday the 21st of December, and only arrived in Lisbon on the 3rd of this month. True, we were three days dredging in the Bay of Biscay, but it was the weather that delayed us so, gales of wind all the way, and always dead against us. We burnt nearly the whole of the coal coming this 700 miles.

We had a miserable Xmas day as far as the weather went, but we managed to enjoy ourselves a little; on Xmas eve we made a nice plum pudding in my mess. We all had a (24) hand in its manufacture, and it was highly successful.

We had a short service in the morning by the Captain, as we had no Chaplain, but no Xmas hymns or anything, for the ship was rolling too much to cast the harmonium adrift.

In the evening the Captain gave each one in the ship 1/3 of a pint of sherry, which went down high among the ship's company, and they all agreed that if the four ensuing Xmas's that we are to spend on the "Challenger" only pass off as comfortably, we shall have no cause to complain.

On the 27th inst. we passed in the Bay of Biscay a vessel bottom upwards in the water, but it was too rough to lower a boat although (25) we passed her quite close. Again on the 29th we passed the remains of another vessel, and a great quantity of oranges floating on the water; it was evidently one of the many fruit schooners running between here and England, and had foundered in the gale with all hands on board.

It was a very solemn light to see that first vessel bottom upwards in the sea, with the waves breaking over her. She was quite entire too, and had not been many days in the water; every man in the ship came on deck to look at her, and it made our company quite dismal for a time.

I have not time to send you particulars of the deep sea dredging this time, but I have it all in my diary, and shall send it (26) in my next letter. The dredge was cast in four different places, the lowest bottom was nearly a mile and half, and the highest not quite three miles, the strain on the line is something wonderful as the dredge gets close to the bottom, and they have lost already in heaving it in, nearly two miles of line, and two dredges.

Only one dredge came up as it ought to, and contained mud, and some very rare species of fish, as well as a common crab. These have all been preserved. They were brought from a depth of 1500 fathoms or nearly 2 miles. The mud also contained numerous insects, and was successfully analyzed.

The weather here in the daytime is very hot, and we have all (27) kinds of fruit very cheap, and I have eaten an enormous amount since we came in.

Our Captain and Professor Thompson dine with the King of Portugal to-night.

They have been coaling ship today, and we sail for Gibralter on Thursday, leaving there again about the 25th of January for Madeira.

Our letters now have to be franked by the Commander, who is now busy with some hundreds and the mail closes in 5 minutes.

Believe Me
Yours Very Sincerely
Joseph Matkin

H.M.S. "CHALLENGER"
Gibralter,
January 20th 1873

Dear Tom,

I had no further opportunity of writing again from Lisbon, so must conclude my account of there as briefly as possible in this letter.

I had a run on shore the day after I wrote you, went with a shipmate in the afternoon and had a nice walk out into the country among the orange groves. We had a look at the King's Palace, which is a very fine one, built on the top of a hill overlooking Lisbon, from there we had a stroll round the city, and were very much surprised at the dirt and (29) squalor in all parts except the principal streets and squares, in which are some really fine buildings. Still there is no bustle and business like you see in an English town. The shops have no windows or fronts and are dingy looking holes, those only which can compete with the English are the confectioners and they beat us hollow in the varieties of sweets and pastry, and the style in which they display it.

The Cathedral is the most magnificant building in the city after the style of St. Paul's in London, with dome and towers, and being built of white stone, looks of course cleaner.

There is also a very beautiful Convent there, built like Westminster Abbey on a small scale, and the peal of bells, in that, and the (30) Cathedral were the best I ever heard.

At 6 in the morning and evening they play opera tunes, which sounded beautiful from the ship. In the evening we went to the opera, which was really grand. The singing was all in Italian. The opera house is the finest (of the sort) I was ever in - seated 20,000, and there was a magnificant box for the King and Royal Family. The opera was "Ruy Blas" and the singing was truly splendid, there were 250 in the orchestra, after the opera came a Ballet, and it was nearly 1 o'clock in the morning when we came out. The Portuguese ladies are very handsome; so are the Spanish, but about one in every five is marked with small pox.

The Captain and Professor Thompson (31) dined with the King at the Palace soon after we came in, and just before we sailed, the King and several of his officers came on board to have a look over the ship, and dredging apparatus etc. He was a fine looking man, about 35 and dressed in military uniform. He came in his barge, a very handsome boat, pulling 26 oars, but I can't say the same for his boat's crew who looked as if they had been whitewashed, although they were from the pick of his navy. Our men were all in their best, and manned the yards for him, and the Officers were in full uniform for the first time.

While we were on shore we had a look in at a masquerade ball, which is a sort of national (32) affair and lasts for ten days after Christmas, according to the style of the Carnival at Rome and Venice.

Most of the dancers were in fancy dresses, some of the most grotesque characters and very costly, each one wore a domino, or black velvet mask which conceals the upper part of the face, so that it is impossible to recognize any one except from their dress. Some of the ladies were rigged as men and "vice versa" so that it was a mixed up affair altogether.

The Channel Fleet brings a great deal of custom to Lisbon, wintering there, for there are 3,500 men in it, they had just left for Gilbralter when we arrived. One of their sailor boys belonging to the "Sultan" died in the English hospital (33) while we were there, and half of our men attended his funeral. There are a great many buried in Lisbon cemetry who belonged to the Channel Fleet and they all have nice gravestones erected by their mess-mates.

We took in 150 tons of coal there, and were to have sailed on the 10th, but it came on to blow, and we were not able to start until the 12th (Sunday). We steamed down the Tagus just as the sun was setting over Lisbon, and very pretty the city looked as we slowly passed it; I should like to call there on my way home again, but think "Ascension" is the last place we stop at on our return.

We were five days on the way to Gibralter, distance from Lis-(34)bon 400 miles, but the best part of each day was spent in dredging, sounding, etc. with fishing, which on the whole was very successful. No more line was lost, and a great deal has been done by the scientific party, when the dredge is hauled up they stand round in their shirt sleeves, and commence overhauling the mud for fish, etc. and as soon as they get any, down they all go to dissect and pickle them in glass jars. The sea bottom between Lisbon and here varied from 400 to 2,500 fathoms at which depth the dredge brought up mud and shell fish, one, a regular common Sheerness crab. The mud was analyzed and some baked in the oven in bread tins, numbered and put away for the Museum (35) when we return.

A boat was lowered everyday and a fishing party told off, which went a considerable distance from the ship, and succeeded in obtaining some very rare species, but the choice kinds were by means of the trawl net, which is the same as a common herring net, and is paid out from the stern by a line of the requisite length to reach the bottom and towed along by the ship; it was only cast once and took about 6 hours hauling up from a depth of 1900 fathoms, and contained several fish varying from 1/2 lb. to 4 1/2 lbs. and of the most wonderful form and shape, heads larger than their bodies, and eyes in the middle of their backs, of course the scientifics (36) were in rare good humour and took them down to the analyzing room, where they christened them over some bottles of champagne; I forget the name with which they were honoured but should know it by sight, as it was composed of about forty letters. The scientifics keep all their information and specimens to themselves and I dare say you will know as much about the expedition from the papers, by and bye, as we do who are in the ship.

We sighted the coast of Africa on Tuesday night (the 17th) at the entrance to the Straits, and during the night we passed right through into the Mediterranean Sea where we hove to until Saturday morning early, then steamed into the (37) Bay of Gibralter.

The rock looks very grand and imposing from the sea, it is 1500 feet high, and has 1873 guns mounted, varying from 9 pounders to 18 and 25 ton guns (which command the Straits). The small guns protect it from the Spanish side, and there is one for each year, the one for 1873 is now being mounted - a 25 ton gun.

The Channel Fleet were at anchor in the bay, and left the same afternoon for Madeira and Teneriffe, where we shall see them again. It comprised the ironclads "Minotaur", "Agincourt", "Sultan", "Hercules", "Bellerophon", and "Lively"; the other one, the "Northumberland", has gone to Malta to be docked for repairs, having been accidentally rammed by the "Hercules" and (38) seriously damaged. We came alongside the jetty on the south mole as soon as the Fleet had gone ready for coaling, and today, Monday, all hands are busy filling up with it.

On Sunday morning we all went on shore to the English church; the congregation was nearly all soldiers, and officers, with their families. In the afternoon I went on shore and had a long ramble - first to the top of the rock, the guns are mounted nearly to the top, some small ones are on it, and the rock is regularly honeycombed all round for them; the Royal Engineers have done a good deal of this, but the heaviest part was done by the Spaniards, before it was taken from them in 1704.

The view from the summit of the rock was magnificant, opposite (39) lay the coast of Barbary, an awfully rugged and mountainous country; some of which are twice as high as Gibralter. The only towns in sight are Tangiers and Ceuta, and on the Spanish coast across the bay is Algerias, a very pretty place, and higher up the Mediterranean is Malaga. The artist made a sketch of the former town as we came in, and the photographer took the south side of the Rock, he also took views of Lisbon; we are to be allowed to purchase any we like at 1/each.

From the top of the rock I had a walk into Spain, past the line of British pickets across the 500 yards of neutral territory, past the Spanish pickets and into the ajoining towns. The Spanish soldiers (40) are worse than the Portuguese, they wear blue coats, green trousers, and cocked hats, and look about as fierce as maggots; you enter the town by a gate, at which stand about twenty beggars, the most wretched looking objects, you ever saw, most of them deformed, and the stench from them is something fearful, they stop everyone for alms and the Reis come in handy, there being twenty to an English penny. There are any amount of Moors here from the Barbary States, dirty looking beggars most of them, and dressed like Arabs. I like the Portuguese the best after all and Lisbon is 10 to 1 to Gibralter.

There are two towns, English town, and Spanish town both under the English governor. There was plenty of gambling going on yesterday morning (41) among the Spaniards.

We received a mail as soon as we came in, and I had one letter from W. Blackwood, congratulating me on being selected to accompany the "Challenger" on her wonderful expedition.

This letter goes to-morrow and you may expect another from Madeira or Teneriffe.

Believe me ever,

Sincerely yours,

Joe Matkin.

H.M.S. "CHALLENGER"

Santa Cruz

Feb. 7th 1873

Dear Tom:

We left Gibralter on Sunday the 26th of January, intending to call at Tangier, Morocco, but it was blowing too hard, and we had to get up steam to keep clear of the African Coast. On the following Sunday we were just ready to drop anchor at Madeira after a very pleasant passage with sounding and dredging every day, the deepest bottom was 2,600 fathoms, or rather more than 3 miles, obtained off the Islands of the Desert (belonging to Madeiras).

We also had some good trawling (43) in the passage, very rare species of fish being obtained on the 28th of Jany., and on the following day a turtle was caught and eaten by the Officers.

Off Porto Santo we picked up a large bale of cotton, which was very slightly damaged by the salt water. We did not run into Madeira on Sunday, but the Captain decided on having some trawling, and the result was that the trawl net (worth £100) and 2,000 fathoms of dredging line was lost overboard, being as the sailors' said, a judgment on fishing on the Sabbath.

On the Monday early we anchored off Funchal, the chief city of Madeira, and made preparations for coaling. The Madeira Islands (44) are in Lat. 32° N. and Long. 17° W. They all belong to Portugal and are distant from Lisbon 540 miles. They consist wholly of mountains 6,000 feet high, and we could see them 45 miles away, the productions of the islands are grown at the foot of these mountains, and consist of dates, plantains, pomegranates, bananas, figs, alligator pears, sugar canes, coffee, grapes, arrowroot, etc.

The climate is the best in the world, and there were a great many English visitors staying the winter there of whom we had several on board, including the Mayor of Edinburgh and his family. The islands have an area of 336 sq. miles, and a population of 120,000. Funchal is a very clean and pretty place, built something after the (45) style of Lisbon. I had a fine run on shore at Madeira, walked nearly to the top of the island, and drank some of the wine as well. We expect to call there again in July, when of course it will be much hotter.

We coaled on the Monday, and sailed on Tuesday at 3 o'clock, just as we were leaving H.M. Troop Ship Orontes ~~Oroutes (2)~~ came in from England, and brought us some packages. As soon as we got clear of the island, we picked up a splendid breeze, the fires were put out, and every stitch of canvas set, driving the ship 12 miles an hour.

The Canary Islands are distant from Madeira 250 miles, and we sighted the Peak of Teneriffe, at 3 p.m. yesterday, exactly 24 hours from Madeira.

(46) We remained out sounding all night and came into Santa Cruz early this morning. Being so misty we are unable to see the beach today, but I think some of the Scientifics are going to try and reach the summit before we leave, it is 12,300 feet high, or nearly 2 1/2 miles, and on the top, is at present covered with snow, although here at the bottom it is quite hot and sultry. Teneriffe is not such a pretty island as Madeira, and Santa Cruz is not to be compared with Funchal for cleanliness.

The population is 300,000 and it has an area of 878 sq. miles. Palmas one of the other Canaries is nearly as large. They all belong to the Spaniards, and one of their gun boats is (47) at anchor close to.

The productions are the same as at Madeira, with the exception of cochineal, but I think the bananas are finer. Santa Cruz is very strongly defended, and there are a great many Spanish soldiers here. It is famous as being the only place Nelson was unable to take, but he failed in consequence of the great surf which runs here capsizing the boats before the men could land. He lost his right eye, and a great many men here. An Ironclad of the present day could knock the place into ashes in about 2 minutes.

The Spaniards fired a salute for us at 12 o'clock today, but as this ship is not fitted out as a Man (48) of War she did not return it.

Sunday, Feb. 9th

The mail for England closes in five minutes, so must cut this short. I am going on shore this afternoon so must describe the place in my next letter.

We can see the famous peak quite plainly today, a party of three Officers and Scientifics with four seamen went away yesterday to scale the mountains. They have taken five days provisions, etc. To-morrow we are going to cruise round the other islands, and are to come back on Thursday, for the surveying party, when we shall start for St. Thomas.

Last night one of the men caught a shark, about 6 feet in length. (49) He was a long time dying, for after his tail was cut off, and his entrails (including 14 young ones) taken out of him, he was as lively as ever. The young ones were all alive and the Scientifics took charge of them. The old gentleman is now being eaten for dinner in the mess of the men who caught him.

Believe Me
Your ever Sincerely
Joe Matkin.

At Sea, Feb. 27th 1873

Dear Tom:

As I have time to spare this afternoon I will get the "S. Thomas's" letter under weigh. We left Teneriffe before the mail came in from England so have had no letters yet, but shall expect to receive some at S. Thomas, and Bermuda. The last I posted to you just before I went on shore at Teneriffe. I went on the following Sunday afternoon, and had a splendid walk over the mountains from Santa Cruz to La Laguna, the Spanish capital, 5 miles in the interior. At Santa Cruz the heat was tremendous, but on climb-(51)ing the mountains the air got gradually cooler, and when I left La Laguna, after sunset it was quite chilly. I could not make it out, at first, why the men and women coming down from the mountains all wore a large blanket each for a cloak, and on arriving at Santa Cruz took it off, but found out it was through the change in the climate. The men and women all went barefooted, and the latter appeared to do the best part of the work, some of them were carrying enormous baskets of fruits from the country into Santa Cruz. La Laguna was the largest place of the two, but the Cathedral was the only building worth looking at in it, in which there was a very fine group of statuary. (52) The sides of the hills were covered with a pretty shrub called the prickly pear on which the cochineal insect feeds. That is the principal export, the fruit of the prickly pear is not up to much, but alligator pears are very fine eating; Santa Cruz or the "City of the Holy Cross" is where the Spanish Governor resides, but is not such a nice place as Madeira. The next day after going on shore we got under weigh early for a four day cruise round the other Canary Islands, with occasional sounding, dredging, etc.

After we got clear of the islands we had a fine view of the Peak of Teneriffe, and could see it from all the other islands. They are all of volcanic origin, and most of them (53) rise for 8 and 9000 feet above the sea level; some of them rise perpendicularly, and have a very wonderful appearance.

We steamed round Palmas, Fuerteventura and two or three smaller ones and were away four days. The soundings varied considerably, in one place it was only 75 fathoms, a little farther on it was 1900, then 2,500, and so on, showing the bottom to be as varied in depth as the islands in height. The dredge brought up a sort of petrified cinders, which had every appearance of being thrown up from volcanoes ages ago. Off the island of S. Christopher we fell in with a Spanish fishing boat, and bought all the fish they had for 3 dollars. There were 3 large baskets full, and (54) they were of the most wonderful color I ever saw, being gold and silver, green, violet, blue and every shade you could mention. I never thought the sea contained such beautiful creatures. We were away four days, after which we anchored off Santa Cruz, and picked up the exploring party, who had been away five days attempting to scale the peak, but they only reached 9,000 feet in height out of the 12,360, when the cold was so intense that the Spanish Guide refused to go any higher, so down they came again. For 1200 feet the peak was covered in snow, which lies on the summit all the year round.

The day after we returned we took in all the coal there was in Santa Cruz, 25 tons, and got ready for sea; the (55) same evening one of the boys fell from the mainyard into the sea, but was immediately picked up by one of the seamen who jumped overboard after him, he was stunned at first, but soon recovered, the distance was 37 feet from the mainyard.

The next day Saturday, Feb. 15th we got under weigh for S. Thomas, distant 3,100 miles and to-day we are 1300 miles from Teneriffe, and have 1800 more to go. The peak could be seen the best about 70 miles away, rising above the clouds like a pillar of snow.

We have had the trade winds all the way, and might have been close there by this time, if it were not for the sounding and dredging, etc. every day, which occupies 8 and 9 hours each day, besides the labour of furling, and making (56) sail after it is all over.

The scientific operations, I believe, have been very favorable, the lowest bottom has been 1900 fathoms, and the greatest depth 3,650, or rather more than 4 miles. Several thousand fathoms of line, and a few dredges have been lost, but of course that counts as nothing. In some places the dredge brought up black coral and beautiful sponges, in others, shell fish, mud, gravel and various experiments have also been made by the Scientifics, such as telegraphing down to the bottom of the sea, and finding out the strength of the electric fluid at such great depths. By means of a certain instrument water is also brought up from the bottom; at the greatest depth (57) it was quite fresh and drinkable, the temperature was 34 degrees or 2 above freezing point. Boats have been lowered occasionally with an instrument for testing the strength of the current; yesterday it was ascertained to set at the rate of 4 1/2 miles per hour in a N.E. direction, or in the direction of Barrowden; of course this is at some distance below the water that the current is felt. We entered the Tropics on Sunday last, and it is hotter now than in the middle of summer in England. The time slips away though much quicker than with you, and the health of the ships's company is excellent at present, though our living is far from flattering, and I should enjoy some fresh butter, as from one week's end to another it is biscuit, salt horse, (58) pork, and Australian meat, which is very far from gay living. The Officers had their meat-safe broken open last night, and everything it contained was eaten before 4 o'clock this morning, so they had a short allowance for breakfast, I expect it was taken and ate up aloft, like the turkey at Xmas. I will write some few more (as Artemus Ward ~~Lays~~ says) in a few days.

March 12th

Within 250 miles of S. Thomas, W. Indies, and expecting to get in on the 15th.

The dredge has just come up full of mud etc. from 3000 fathoms of water, and all hands are making sail again for the night. We had a most interesting lecture given last week by (59) Professor Thompson to the Ship's company, on the object of the expedition which I have written as well as I can remember, and send for your perusal. The Professor has promised to lecture again on the same subject ere long.

Our brass band comes along very well, and plays every night now, two marches, and "God Save the Queen".

We passed a Spanish schooner, called the "Virgin Mary" while we were in church on Sunday, she was bound to Cuba, and had one lady on board; great excitement on board the "Challenger" to have a look at her, not having seen one of the fair sex for a month.

We have had an enormous shark following us for the last 1100 miles, and the men say he won't leave until (60) some one dies, and is thrown overboard. They have tried everything to catch him, and the Officers have fired at him with rifles, but to no effect, he only goes under the ship's bottom for a time. Our future dates have just been posted up, Bermuda letters to arrive there by April 8th, those for New York to reach there by the 25th and Bermuda again to May 15th after which it will be Madeira.

We shall stay about a week at S. Thomas, but the mail that takes this leaves there the day after we arrive.

March 16th

We have been delayed by the fog, but are just about to drop anchor in S. Thomas' Harbour, and the mail leaves in about 2 hours so I must wind up, and describe the place in my next letter. We shall soon have some English news now, and letters too, also something to eat I hope in the shape of bananas and alligator pears.

We caught three sharks yesterday about six feet in length, but the monster one is not yet caught, and is most likely under the bottom of the ship now. The young ones were eaten for breakfast this morning, I tasted a small quantity, and thought it very good indeed, though rather dry. We were sounding yesterday off the island of Sombrero and the dredge brought up a young sea serpent, which was collared by the Scientifics. The bottom within the last 120 miles, ran up from 3,075 fathoms to 400, a difference of 3 milies.

Yours as Ever.

J. Matkin.

H.M.S. "CHALLENGER",

Bermuda, Dockyard,

April 17, 1873

Dear Tom:

I received two letters from you at S. Thomas, the day after I wrote you from there, one being addressed to "Madeira", and the other "Teneriffe" so that they always manage to reach us finally, and none the less welcome for the delay. I am expecting another or two by the same mail which brings this to you. I read in the papers about the "Northfleet" catastrophe. We lay at Dungeness on our bad passage down Channel, and I should think (63) there were 300 vessels at anchor in the Downs. We get most of the newspapers sent out, and a great many magazines. "Good Words" will soon receive accounts of our doings from Professor Thompson. Did you see the picture in the "Graphic" of the King of Portugal in our ship. I have given instructions for a letter sent home to be forwarded to you to read, containing an account of the island and the colored persons, and about our picking up a large Iron Merchant ship belonging to Greenock, that had been dismasted in a gale soon after leaving New York for Liverpool. We left S. Thomas on the evening of March 24th under all plain sail, and the dredging and sounding at once commenced, and has continued (64) up to our arrival here. On the 25th we obtained the deepest soundings we have had hitherto, and I believe the deepest on record, 3,875 fathoms, or about 4 1/2 miles. The dredge was hove overboard, and the strain on the line was so great when it reached the bottom, that when they commenced hauling it in, it carried away an iron block that was screwed in to the deck, and had all the strain to bear. The block as it flew up struck a sailor boy, named Stokes, on the head, and dashed him to the deck with such terrible force, that his thigh was broken, and spine dreadfully injured. He was carried to the sick bay and attended to by the surgeons, but he was insensible the whole time, and only lived two hours. (65)

At 5 p.m. the next day the bell tolled for his funeral, all the Ship's company and the Officers and Scientific gents, attending on the main deck. The captain read the service, and at the appointed place in it, the body was lowered into the sea, by the lad's messmates, three 36 lb shots were attached to it, to sink it, the depth was over four miles. The boy came from Deal where his father is a Channel pilot. All his clothes and effects were sold, and the money, with his wages, a few photos, letters, and his bible will be sent to his friends by this same mail. We had soundings right across and the average depth was 2,800 fathoms, nothing of any importance was brought up in the dredge. On the evening of the (66) lst of April they pipe "Hands to Bathe" and about 80 of us went overboard and had a fine swim. A boat was lowered to keep away sharks, etc., the water was over 3 miles in depth. A few sharks have been caught and eaten since we left S. Thomas and the other morning one of the men harpooned a dolphin, which is the most beautiful fish in the sea, and best eating. When dying they keep changing color, but after they are dead they are of an ordinary color. They are about 3 ft long and live chiefly on flying fish, which are about the size of a herring, and skim the water like a swallow; but have not very good times for they are pursued in the water by the dolphin and other fish, and in (67) the air by gulls and sea birds. On a dark night if a lighted candle is placed in the Ship's port they will often fly in. At 2 p.m. on the 3rd of April the Bermuda Islands hove in sight, the land being wonderfully low for islands in the middle of the ocean, and looks very bleak and bare from the distance, but when we arrived in close it had a better appearance.

We dredged round the islands all day on the 4th and in the evening the Pilot (a darkie) brought us in.

The navigation on entering is very intricate and difficult, as there are so many shoals and rocks; the pilot had to stand in the foretop, where he could see the rocks, and give orders for the steering, etc. The Bermuda Islands all (68) belong to Great Britain, and are about 300 in number, but the whole lot are no larger than S. Thomas. Bermuda itself is the largest, and Hamilton the chief town is built on it, the whole population is about 12,000, and the greater portion are colored people. The islands were discovered in 1527 by Bermudez a Spaniard, who named them after himself. In 1609, Admiral

Sir George Somers, was wrecked on the islands and founded the colony; and have belonged to the British ever since. There is a fine fortified dockyard on one of the islands, and an immense iron floating dock, for the convenience of refitting the fleet stationed in North American waters, without sending them home. This immense dock was built (69) at Woolwich, and towed across the Atlantic a few years ago by four of our largest ironclads. This place would be of great importance as a rendezvous for the fleet, etc., in case of a war with America; it is 5 days sail from New York, and 800 miles from the nearest land, Cape Hatteras in North America.

The governor of the islands is Major General Lefroy, and there are plenty of soldiers here for its protection. The climate is not nearly so warm as at S. Thomas, but we are able to bathe every evening. The greater portion of our North American Fleet is here, including the "Royal Alfred" flag ship of Admiral Fanshawe, for whom we brought a heavy mail from S. Thomas.

Their head station is Halifax, but (70) they generally winter here. The Governor with a party of ladies and Officers are at present on board lunching.

On the night of April 4th we had another awfully sudden death on board. I left the upper deck at 10 p.m. to go down into my hammock, leaving the ship's schoolmaster, Mr. Ebbells and the writer (who sleeps next to me) walking the upper deck together. Soon after I turned in, they also came down, after which I went to sleep, I had not been asleep more than half an hour before the writer woke me, and said that the schoolmaster was dead. He was heard to be breathing hard, and one of the men tried to rouse him, but not succeeding went for the Doctor, before they came he was dead. On Saturday morning (71) they held an inquest, the verdict being "died from apoplexy". In the afternoon, and less than 7 hours after he died, he was buried in Bermuda Cemetry. Nearly all the ship's company attended his funeral; I should have gone but could not be spared, the band of the "Royal Alfred" played the "Dead March in Saul", to the grave; our band not having practiced it yet. A very singular and affecting scene occurred at the funeral, the Chaplain of the dockyard buried him, and did not know just at the time whose corpse it was, but happening at the conclusion to glance at the coffin plate, read the name backwards, as he stood at the head of it. "Adam Ebbels, born April 4th, 1837, died April 4th, 1873", and for some time was so much affected (72) that he was unable to continue the service.

After he had finished, on addressing the men at the grave, said he had sailed round the world with the deceased in H.M.S. "Liffey", and had been intimate with him for 3 or 4 years, during which time he had always found him an honourable man, and was never so surprised before, as he was on reading that coffin plate. The deceased was a very strong and healthy man, and clever and intelligent. He was not married and only had one sister living at Woodbury near Xeter, and what was very singular, died on his 37th birthday.

The Captain has his only son on board, a little lad of 10 years, he intended taking him as far as Sydney with us where he was going to school. (73) The schoolmaster was educating him in the meantime, but now he is dead, I hear the Captain will send his son back to England from New York. This made the fourth sudden death on board since we commissioned, and hope we shall have no more. The 1st Lieutenant played the harmonium yesterday in the Schoolmaster's place, he is a splendid player, and has a fine little instrument of American invention, I think it is called a melodian and much sweeter than a harmonium.

H.M. Ship, "~~Lamar (?)~~ Tamar", a troop ship sailed for England yesterday morning with time expired troops, their band playing "Auld Lang Syne" as they steamed past us.

I went on shore yesterday afternoon, and had a fine walk on 5 or 6 different (74) islands, which are connected either by a bridge or ferry boat, and have some splendid walks on them. The flowers here are beautiful, and there are plenty of English singing birds, as well as native ones of most brilliant plumage. The walks are shaded by trees on each side, and there are several churches, schools, etc., on the islands. Hamilton, the chief town is 2 miles from here, I walked nearly there yesterday, and intend going all the way before we leave, about the 20th inst.

I had a look in at ~~Lonicrsch~~ Somerset church while the service was going on, there was a good organ, and the chanting and singing excellent, the congregation was nearly all black, and some of the ladies, "Oh! they just was dressed", would beat Barrowden all to smash. The best (75) bit of fun was the morning after we arrived, at about 6 a.m. about 50 black washerwomen came on board, and there was some talking and jabbering, they have plenty of cheek too, went into the Officers cabins while they were turned in, and with a grin on 'em that you'd have thought it impossible to get their mouths shut again, asked "Any Vashing Sare" (answer) "go to the Devil" -- "Yes, Sare, after you Sare". They are not as spruce and good looking as the ladies of S. Thomas.

We returned on board about 7 p.m. and nearly half the men were intoxicated, and all but capsized the boat coming off, fighting all the way. When they get on board, they drop down on the deck and sleep sober before morning. We came into the dock basin this morning, and (76) are now close to the iron floating dock.

The dates of departure have been again altered, you can write from England, up to April 28th and address New York, after which Bermuda again, by the mail leaving England on May 6th as we shall not sail from here the second time before the end of that month. Don't forget to put S.S.A. on the address or it may be charged as an Officers' letter.

April 8th, 9 a.m. No sign of the mail yet, our band is playing away now first rate on the quarter deck.

Two p.m. The mail has not yet arrived from England, but ours closes at once.

Your sincerely,
Joe Matkin.

H.M.S. "CHALLENGER"

Out at Sea. May 7, 1873

Dear Tom:

"While my shipmates are dredging the sea, I'll indite a letter to thee" (one of their poetical specimens and quite extempore). Your last letter reached me on April 9th and being the only one by that mail was all the more welcome; on Good Friday the other mails came in "via Halifax" and brought me some epistles, all yours have reached me quite safely.

On Good Friday we had church in the morning, and in the afternoon I went in the ship's steam launch over to Somerset, and Hamilton, the capitol of the Bermudas. (78) The distance is 18 miles, and we passed about 80 islands on the way, most of them covered with forest and shrub. The shops were all closed so I went for a walk into the country, and saw two cricket matches being played, which made it seem more like Old England. One was between the soldiers, and the other the negroes, I liked the niggers best, they made such a sweet row, and stopped the balls with their hands occasionally, but they are very weak about the shins. I had some tea with half a dozen eggs, etc. before coming back, some of our men who were having tea, ate a dozen each; but I did not feel equal to that. The landlady's daughter who waited upon us was a trifle blacker than a crow, the sailors called her Miss Julia Snowball. We arrived (79) on board again about 8 p.m. and found the Halifax mail had just arrived from England, it brought us Halifax papers containing accounts of the loss of the Atlantic Steamer, but think the one I read was greatly exaggerated, so am anxiously awaiting for news from England about it. We shall pass the scene of the wreck in another 2 days. Easter Sunday was very wet at Bermuda and I never left the ship. On the 14th inst. a seaman belonging to the "Royal Alfred" Ironclad, fell from the main rigging to the bottom of the great iron floating dock, a distance of 70 feet, and was picked up dead. On the 17th we took in 100 tons of coal. I caught an octopus, or devil fish in the bathing place. This fish has 8 arms of feelers capable of clinging to anything, a man, or a rock, and is the most (80) horrible thing to look at in the world. His eyes and mouth are in the middle of his body, and he looks something between a dragon, star fish, and the devil. A large octopus is capable of holding a man under the water until he is suffocated, they are not often met with, but there is one living in the aquarium at Brighton, our specimen died.

On Sunday 20th all hands went to the Dockyard church, and in the afternoon I had a walk to the Dockyard cemetry; I spent nearly two hours reading the inscriptions on the stones, etc. You would be surprised to see what a quantity of seamen and naval officers have been buried there during the last 80 years. There are 80 or 90 different ship's gravestones; each ship has a large stone with the names of all the (81) officers, seamen, and marines, that they have buried engraved thereon. Drowning, falling from aloft, and yellow fever appear to have caused the most deaths; some of the stones were beautiful, and had the Ships' crests carved on them. There are 3 Admirals buried there, and a large monument to the 350 officers and men belonging to H.M. Ships "Acorn" and "Supply"; which foundered with all hands between Halifax and Bermuda about 40 years ago. But the prettiest stone of all is one dated 1809 to the memory of 2 midshipmen, brothers belonging to the same ship, one 17 years old, the other other only 13, who died within 3 days of each other from yellow fever.

We are to bring a stone back with us from Halifax to Bermuda, in memory of our schoolmaster, and the sailor boy who was killed off S. John. The subscription was made for it the other day and over £15 was obtained. On Monday April 21st we left Bermuda for Halifax, but remained off the island dredging and sounding on what is called the Great Bank of Bermuda, extending out to sea for more than 50 miles. A few days after the Captain decided going to New York, but when we were within 80 miles of Sandy Hook, he again altered his mind, and are now within 220 miles of Halifax. Expect he was afraid of losing some of our men at New York. One of our surgeons and the chemist went in the mail boat from Bermuda to New York, and are there still, from where they will bring our letters, and go on to Halifax by train.

On the 25th we passed a French barque (83) and a few days later an American. On the 26th and 27th we had a heavy gale of wind again, the ship pitching and tossing frightfully and scudding before the wind under close reefed top sails, the weather was bitterly cold, but has improved within the last few days. During the gale one or two accidents happened, on Sunday 27th a seaman fell from the foreyard arm down on to the deck and was very severely injured. For a long time they thought he could not recover, but is improving now, and will go to the hospital at Halifax. On the day following, another accident occurred by the wheel taking charge a tremendous sea struck the rudder suddenly and caused the wheel to vibrate with great velocity; 2 men and 2 boys were steering and the latter were dashed insensibly to the deck, the men were not hurt as they (84) let go. The boys are still in the sick list but getting better fast. During the gale there were hundreds of brother Carey's chickens about, but they disappeared with the wind, we also had several land birds come on board the ship in an exhausted condition, and died soon after. They were a species of lark, and had been blown out to sea from the coast of America, a distance of 280 miles.

On the 28th we lost overboard while sounding 2,100 fathoms of line. The average depth up to yesterday was about 2,500 fathoms, but we are getting shallow again now. We spent 2 days taking temperatures in the Gulf stream and trying to sound; the water on the surface was 10 degrees warmer than the atmosphere but there was such a tremendous undercurrent (85) flowing in the direction of England, that no soundings could be obtained, although the water had not the appearance of being so deep as off the West Indies; 2,500 fathoms found no bottom. One or two experiments were made as to the effect of the pressure of a column of water on any substance at 2,800 fathoms; 2 large iron buoys were sent down and came up twisted and smashed out of all shape, after that an empty ginger beer bottle was sent down carefully corked, it came up full of water with the cork forced inside.

On May 2nd, the dredge brought up a live star fish and mud, on the 3rd, more star fish and 2 small sea serpents. On Sunday we had church in the morning and kept under sail all day, we sang Hymn 222, A and M, which we have every Sunday (86). Today the sounding and dredging is all over, but don't know with what result. All present 7 p.m. the band is playing splendidly, and the ship steaming away for Halifax, and the shaking caused by the engines is such that you would be unable to write.

May 9th Halifax Dockyard.

All day yesterday we were fishing and some scores of fine cod were caught, which we had for dinner, tea and supper. We sighted the coast of Nova Scotia early this morning and steamed up the harbour mooring, alongside the dockyard at twelve o'clock. The passage down the river was spendid, regular English scenery, lighthouses, forts and batteries, and Halifax itself is quite like one of our towns at home. It is the principal Naval station (87) in British North America and the dockyard is very extensive. The harbour is considered one of the finest in the world, and the fish market more plentifully supplied than any other known, cod, salmon, halibut and mackerel are very abundant, and lobsters are only 1d each. The weather at present is very cold, more so than in England in May; although it is in the same latitude as Paris, the winter is more severe than it is in the north of Scotland. We saw naught of the wreck of the "Atlantic" coming in, but nothing is spoken of on shoré here but that at present, and bodies are being brought every day for identification or burial. The walls on shore are placarded with descriptions of the drowned people, and very large rewards are offered for some of the of the bodies.

May 13th I have not been on shore yet but am going in a day or two, Sunday and Monday were wet, cold and miserable, today has been fine but is still very hot. Several of the Officers have gone to New York by train; distant 400 miles. On Monday one watch went on 48 hours leave, and are gradually coming back again, they like the place much and say the people treat them well, but the military and police are very smart on them when they get 3 part 7 eighths intoxicated. One or two have been fined 7 and 8 dollars for drunkness and assulting the police, and you would be surprised to see what a quantity there are with broken noses and black eyes. One man said it took 12 bobbies all night to take him to the lockup, he had a terrible cut across the fore(89)head and was fined 7 dollars, which is paid by the Paymaster and charged against his wages. He says he rather thinks he shall give "em what for" if he can get on shore again before we sail. Another of our Scientific seamen brought a young Nova Scotia youth on board to see the "Mermaid" we have caught, all alive O! Today we have been taking in six months provisions etc. We have had any amount of visitors off to see the ship already and the Halifax papers are crazy about her. Yesterday the diver went down and examined the ship's bottom, which is done every quarter if we are in harbour. We have 2 divers, a carpenter and a seaman, and 2 sets of diving gear. The Flag Ship "Royal Alfred" came in yesterday from Bermuda, and is moored just ahead of us, she was only 3 days and a half (90) on the journey, while it took us 19 days; She brought the Admiral, his wife, family, servants, carriages, etc. from Bermuda. An Admiral on a foreign station lives on shore and has his wife and family with him, this one has a house here, and another at Bermuda where they pass the winter. An Admiral's pay is £6 per day, with an allowance of another £6 for table money, servants, etc. The "Royal Alfred" carries 750 men, and is larger than the "Audacious". We sent two seamen home from Bermuda, who were invalided, also one to gaol, having three others in this place from the "Royal Alfred", three more have deserted since we came here, which we shall have to obtain others in place of.

May 16th -- We have taken in six (91) months provisions and 200 tons of coal, and are to sail on Monday afternoon for Bermuda. I have been on shore this afternoon and had a good walk out into the country, the place is very strongly defended, and there are plenty of troops here for its protection.

The town is about the size of Leicester but not such a business place. The streets are all laid with tramways but are very dirty and illpaved, and 9 out of every 10 houses are built of wood, the chimneys only being of brick, and you may not be surprised to hear some day of Halifax being burnt like Chicago. Living is pretty cheap, but the climate is much colder than England, yesterday we had snow, and the other night the northern lights were very brilliant for about three hours.

(92) While on shore I saw the mail come steaming in from England, and she dropped anchor an hour ago, so we shall receive the letters tomorrow. We shall only be 8 days on the way back to Bermuda. I told Willie to lend you his letter from S. Thomas, not having time to write you from there, so that you will have a description of each place we visit. From the papers I see Roger is in full swing again, one of our seamen says he will give all his pay to hear the conclusion of the trial when we reach home in 76. May 19, we sail at 4, the mail closes at 3. The ship is full of visitors who have come all the way from New York to see it, one Yankee Professor wishes to go to Bermuda with us but not sure if he will. The dates for postage are from Bermuda to Fayal in the Azores, and only 1000 miles from England, to arrive by the 28th of June, after the S. Michael to Madeira, then to S. Vincent, Cape Verdes, arriving there July 22nd, Bahia in Brazil until the 27th of August, from thence to the Cape of Good Hope, by mails leaving England every 10 days, the last to write by being Nov. 5th.

We are 3 weeks behind the time appointed for leaving Bermuda by the Admiralty and are to make up for it before reaching the Cape. The Admiralty having the whole voyage marked out for us, with dates for arrival and departure from each place, the time for arriving in England being May or June 1876. Yours sincerely,

J. Matkin

H.M.S. "CHALLENGER",

Out at Sea, May 27, 1873

Dear Tom:

We shall soon be at Bermuda again so will get another letter under weigh. We sailed from Halifax at 4 p.m. on the 19th leaving our letters on board the "Royal Alfred" for dispatch by the first mail. Our departure from there was of the gayest description, the wharves were crowded with people to see us cast off from the dockyard jetty. The Flagship "Royal Alfred" was crowded with ladies and gentlemen, and the 750 seamen belonging to her all stood in the rigging and cheered as we steamed past; while their band gave us "Auld Lang Syne". The weather was (95) bitterly cold when we left, but 3 days after we were in the Gulf Stream, and the heat was almost unbearable, the iron was all dripping with moisture and everything in the ship was damp, so much that braziers of red hot coals had to be hung on the lower decks to dry them, and being under steam all the time made it so much worse. The sudden changes in weather are very unhealthy and trying to weak constitutions, and we have a great many on the sick list with rheumatics and sow fever. The stone for the schoolmaster came on board just before we left Halifax, a very nice one of white marble; the day previous to starting, leave was given to go on shore for seven hours, which gave six more men chance to desert, so we were again obliged to draw upon the "Royal Alfred".

(96) An American Scientific gentleman came with us from Halifax to see how the dredging operations were carried on, he will leave at Bermuda, and go to New York by mail boat. We have had a head wind all the way and for 2 days it was so rough that the soundings could not be taken; we have burned nearly 200 tons of coal coming from Halifax, and shall have to take in 300 more at Bermuda, where coal is about £3.10 per ton. We have come an entirely different course to what we steered when going, keeping further out into the Atlantic, and dredging etc. every day; but the depth is not so great as the sea is deeper in towards the American Coast -- the way we steered going to Halifax. The depths up today are - 80-200-1250-2,200-1800-2,800-2,200- and today 2,675 fathoms.

On the 22nd the dredge brought up star-fish, anemones, insects, etc. and on the following day, it and 1800 fathoms of line were carried away; today the trawl net was sent down, and brought up a few insects - which Professor Thompson said were worth their weight in diamonds. On the 24th being the Queen's birthday, the Captain issued to all hands one third of a pint of sherry, and the band played selections during the evening. This wine is supplied to the ship as extra surveying stores, no other ship in the Navy is allowed it. It is issued at the discretion of the Captain to the men and boys who are engaged in dredging, sounding, etc. One-third of a pint for men, and one-sixth for boys, about 40 are so employed, and they generally have it about twice a week, and they (98) say that if nothing comes up in the dredge, no wine given, though they work just as hard. The Steward and I have to serve it out - and being greatly interested in the dredging operations, generally drink ourselves to its success. "No more tonight".

May 30th, Dredging off the Bermudas. On the 28th we sounded at 1760 fathoms, and in the evening the revolving light on Bermuda islands hove in sight, but they kept away all night. Yesterday we were dredging the whole time on the west side of the island, depth varying from 1600 to 750 fathoms, dredge brought up star-fish, insects, etc. We anchored last night in 30 fathoms of water about 2 miles from land, and all hands commenced fishing. Several fine rock cod have been caught, but are not so fine eating as those caught (99) off Halifax, the water being so much warmer. We got up anchor this morning and went round to the east side of the islands, soundings were taken at 1700 fathoms the dredge brought up nothing. After dinner the trawl net was sent down, and after several attempts to haul it in, it carried away with 1700 fathoms of line, so the men are of opinion that no wine will be issued to night, as it has been about the most unlucky day we have had.

May 31st, 9 p.m. We took a black pilot on board at 6 a.m. this morning, and stood in for the land, and at 4 p.m. we moored alongside the Dockyard jetty in our old spot. I told you before what a dangerous and intricate entrance existed here. At present there is a large merchant ship (100) on shore at the north west of the islands which is not likely to be got off, and in the Dockyard being repaired is a large steamer called the Petersburgh of Leith, which also ran on a shoal. These shoals exist 5 or 6 miles out at sea, and lie between 8 and 12 feet beneath the water, their position is indicated by the green water all round them, the deep being of a blue color. Standing on the rising ground on shore, and looking seaward in any direction, hundreds of these green patches are to be seen, especially when the sun is shining. They are not visible unless you are some distance from and above the water, for that reason the Pilot in charge of the ship, sits upon the foretop and sings out "Starboard a point, a port" as the case may be.

The "Royal Alfred" ran aground about 6 weeks ago, and had to go in dock to have her false keel replaced. She draws 25 feet of water, we draw 22. One of the Scientific party returned on board from New York, they have been on a pleasure tour and the rest will return before we leave. The weather is twice as hot, as when we were here before, and the flies and mosquitos are ravenous on to strangers.

June 2nd. We all went to the Dockyard church yesterday norning, and in the evening I went again alone. It is a very long, cool building, with Venetian windows opening to the sea, and the organ and singing was very fair indeed, the parson was also pretty good. The congregation was nearly all Naval and Military, with a few colored ladies and gentlemen from Somerset (102) Island. The colored people are fond of imitating the whites in dress, etc., but the negresses have rather a job about the chignon, as their wool is scarcely two inches long, but they manage with a net and sundries in the way of stuffing. It was raining on the way to church, and the black ladies could be seen half a mile from the church running with their small parasols wet through, their white muslin over their heads, and skirts raised very considerably; the chignon hanging rather limp by the time they arrived. We had a regular storm while in church, and the skies after the sun went down were a splendid light, such a sunset as is never seen in England. I have just been to bathe, the water is beautiful, we go every morning and evening. We had the usual quantity of black washerwomen on board (103) this morning, and all ready to swear they were the parties who washed for you before, and finish up by hoping "You had pleasant passage, Sare, you remember me, Sare, Jemima Tricker, Sare". At present there are here H.M. Ships "Terror", "Vixen", "Fly", and a large old line of battle ship called the "Irresistible", used as a temporary domicile by the crews of ships that are being repaired in the floating dock. The "Challenger" is going in the great dock on Wednesday, and all the ship's company, Officers, etc., will live on board the "Irresistible" for a day or two. The other men of war here belong to the North American and West Indian Squadron. The English Mail, via "S. Thomas" came in at 12 o'clock, and has sailed again for Halifax. I have sent a letter home by her, but the mail which leaves on Friday (104) next via New York, will be home as soon, and very likely before this one, so shall not close yours. The letters which arrived in the mail have not come on board yet.

June 5th - The mail closes at 4 p.m. so I must finish at once. The S. Thomas mail brought us no letters, so shall have no more until we reach Fayal at the Azores. All the curiosities, etc., that have thus far been obtained, are going home in the same mail which brings this. We are not going in dock now before we get to the Cape of Good Hope, or Sydney. The coal is coming on this week, and 6 months biscuit next week. Some of the old is quite mouldy and contains maggots and weevils, etc., but of course it has to be eaten, and I expect we shall get worse before we get better.

The rest of the pleasure party, con-(105)sisting of Lord Campbell, 2 or 3 scientifics, and other officers returned from New York in the mail boat yesterday, some of them have been away nearly 2 months. We expect to sail hence to the Azores, about June 13th and shall most likely be at Fayal by July 8th, Madeira the 18th and S. Vincent, the 30th. But the Admiralty have the letters altered at the Post Office when the dates are incorrect, so that if you addressed a letter to Fayal, Azores, and it was not likely to arrive there in time to catch us, it would be crossed out, and put Madeira, so that you may always depend on its arriving some time or other.

We had a letter in the last mail, addressed to a seaman, for H. M. Ship - "Challenger" on her voyage round the world, Mediterranean, or elsewhere, and it was (106) at Halifax as early as if it had been directed there. On the 3rd, H.M.S. "Fly" sailed for England to pay off, having been out here 4 years. Our brass band played her out of the harbor, they have improved wonderfully, and by the time we get back will be good musicians. The same day a merchant seaman belonging to the "Petersburgh" in dock here, was crushed between the ship and a boat, by which his thigh was broken in two places. One of our surgeons attended him, and had him conveyed to the Naval Hospital. The same night one of our seamen came on board three parts, seven eighths, and fell from the hatchway on to the iron cable, causing a dreadful cut across his left eye. The gravestone we brought from Halifax, went to the cemetry (107) yesterday for erection, and I intend going to see it on Sunday afternoon. It is a large marble cross of pretty design, costing L16, it bears the following inscription -- "This stone is erected by the Officers and Crew of H.M.S. "Challenger", to the memory of Adam Ebbels, Naval Schoolmaster, who died at Bermuda, April 4th, also to Wm. H. Stokes, 1st Class Boy, who was killed March 25th, 1873 off the West India Islands. "In the midst of life we are in death". The Governor of Bermuda and family were on board yesterday; and in the evening they gave a ball to our Officers. As these letters have to go through New York Post Office, we have to put two stamps on them. Bye the time you get this we shall be in mid-Atlantic, and much closer to England; Fayal and S. Michael, Azores, is where (108) most of the oranges come from that are sold in England, but I think we shall be too early for them. The islands belong to Portugal. 4:00 p.m. mail just going to close -- another man went to hospital today with cholera, brought on through eating too many cucumbers, tomatoes, bananas, etc. Two other seamen are breaking their leave, and there is L3 reward out for them, we think they have left the island in the steamer "Petersburgh" which sailed this morning for New York, if not, we shall soon have them on board again, as they can't walk off the island.

Believe me to be -
The Great Circumnavigator,
Joseph Matkin

H.M.S. "Challenger"

Mid Atlantic, June 21st 73.

Dear Tom:

You will be surprised to hear that I have been very ill since I wrote last, and have got quite thin, but am improving every day, and have felt so much better since, that on the whole I think it has done me good. Bermuda is a very unhealthy place in summer, and the south-west wind always brings sickness with it at those islands. With it came the dysentry about 5 days before we sailed, and was blowing when we left, and nearly all our Ship's company had it, officers and men, some only in a mild (110) form, others very severely, I among the latter, but got rid of it soon after we were clear of the island. For 5 days I ate nothing and was on Patent Beef Tea diet the whole time, and after it left me, was as weak as if I had been laid up with fever for a month or two. We left two bad cases behind at Bermuda Hospital, and have still one or two down with it. It attacked the people on shore, as well as us, except the negroes, who have passed out of it. Unless the wind changes it frequently proves fatal, and the best remedy is to leave the island and push out to sea for a breeze, which our Captain did as soon as we got the coal and all stores in, and the repairs made good. He said he should not like to leave a dog of his on those islands, and am sure (111) I never wish to see them again. We did not leave our mooring until the evening of the 12th June, and anchored in 10 fathoms of water to the east of the islands that night. Early in the morning we got up anchor and sailed away to the Azores, with the wind right behind us, and at present are more than half way to there, having had the counter trades blowing us on the whole journey. The distance was about 2,100 miles to Fayal, and we are today 980 miles off, besides having obtained soundings, etc. every day. The passage thus far has been very pleasant and invigorating, and I feel much better than I did, before being doubled up with the dysentry. The depth thus far has been 2,700 - 2,875 - 2,700 and 3,000 fathoms. At present the dredge is overboard and (112) will be up in an hour's time. This is Saturday evening, and the band is playing away splendidly on the main deck, the officers having dinner, and most of the men dancing, or mending their clothes.

Several fine specimens of zoophytes have been obtained this week, and on Thursday the dredge brought up a fine piece of pure amber, from a depth of over 3 miles. It was the best day we have had this passage, and was the cause of wine being issued to all hands. We are to take enough wine at Madeira this time to last us all the commission.

The flies and mosquitoes that were so troublesome at Bermuda, all disappeared as soon as we got to sea, and will sleep until we get in harbour again. Some of the men were covered with (113) mosquitoe bites, but I escaped altogether, having been sucked dry by them some time ago in Australia. The depth today is 2,700 fathoms and the dredge has brought up mud, insects, etc.

June 27th, 300 miles from Fayal. Wind dropped again, but it has been splendid up to today, and we shall most likely anchor at Fayal on Monday the 30th. On Sunday, 22nd, we had church in the forenoon, and took soundings at 2,750 fathoms, after which made all plain sail again. On the 23rd, sounded at 2,700 fathoms and made sail again, passing several ships during the day. On the 24th sounded at 2,170 fathoms, and sent down the trawl net, by which several fine specimens of zoophytes etc., were obtained. On the 25th sounded at 2,200 fathoms and sent down the trawl again (114) which was 6 hours coming up and was very rich in rarities; a large blubber fish 5 feet in length was the first to be hauled out, and in the evening it was placed in water on deck, and emitted a wonderful green phosphorescent light, but in the morning no fish was to be seen, it had exploded or dismembered itself in some way, and the atoms and pieces were floating about.

Several other species of cuttle fish have the wonderful power of exploding themselves; each separate atom still possessing life and motion in the water. But this was not considered such a rarity as a large prawn of a bright scarlet colour, which was in the bottom of the net among smaller creatures. It had a sort of spike protruding from its head, and further appendages in the shape of wings. I have (115) not seen it yet, but hope to by and bye, so the 25th was quite an eventful day for the Scientifics, and they were in rare feather. Yesterday we sounded at 1,675 fathoms, and trawled after dinner, a few small specimens were obtained but nothing of any consequence. A small turtle was caught asleep in the water by the boat, which is generally lowered for fishing purposes while the trawling and dredging are going on. Today the depth was 1675 again, the trawl has been down, but has come up bottom upwards, and 2000 fathoms of line carried away, that was being used to test the strength of the current. We have been in the Gulf Stream for the last week, and the air is very damp indeed.

July 1st, 2:00 p.m. We are just running (116) into Fayal, and in 10 minutes more the Commander will be singing out "Let to the starboard anchor", the engines will cease turning, and the Portuguese boats will be swarming round us with fruit, fish, and all manner of good things. We have been told to have our letters ready tonight in case there should be a mail leaving, so I must have this all ready for closing. On the 28th, Sunday, we had church in the morning, and kept under sail all day; yesterday we sounded at 1000 fathoms and sighted the island of Flores, 70 miles N.W. of Fayal. We should not have done so, only were blown out of our direct course on Sunday.

The land was high but we never went nearer than 8 miles to it, and kept under (117) easy steam all night. This morning we sounded at 1000 fathoms and caught several fish, we also passed out of the Gulf Stream, and the sea was swarming with cuttle fish, blubber fish, nautilus, etc., of the most brilliant colours and curious forms, some like snakes 8 and 9 feet in length, but quite harmless, and as thick as bees, at night these creatures shine like stars in the water, and the prow of the ship scatters them like fire. The Gulf Stream separates into two parts between Florida and Bermuda, one part (the largest) runs as far north as the Banks of Newfoundland, where it is met by another current of icy water from the poles, and turned to the east right across the Atlantic, past Land's End, and the Irish Coast, and raising the temperature of the British (118) islands several degrees in winter, also the coast of Norway, and it can be traced as far north as Spitzbergen, after which it cools and returns again to the Equator, as an under current 2000 or more fathoms below the surface of the water, you are aware I told you the temperature in the tropics is only 2 degrees above the freezing point at 3000 fathoms. This is the Polar current which gradually rises to the surface as it nears the Equator, and as its temperature rises through the heat of the sun, it commences its journey to the poles again, raising as it goes the temperature of every country that is washed by its waters. If it were not for the Gulf Stream, Scotland would be as cold as Labrador, and England colder than Newfoundland, those countries being in the same latitude. (119) The smaller branch of the Gulf Stream flows across to these islands, passing to the north of them into the Bay of Biscay, making Lisbon and Portugal so much warmer in winter than New York, which is in the same latitude. It is the Gulf Stream which has kept us so long in the Atlantic (North) having followed its track for so many miles, and I think Professor Thompson is to give another lecture next week, chiefly about it, when of course I shall chalk him down, and send it to you. The islands of Fayal and Pico hove in sight at 10 a.m. this morning and we have been all this time coming up to them. They are over 6,000 feet high, and similar to Madeira in appearance, the Peak of Pico is over 8000 feet high and at present is up in the clouds, the day being very hazy. The Azores are a group of (120) islands 800 miles west of Portugal (to which they belong) and 1100 from Southampton, are all fertile and inhabited. Their names are Fayal, Pico, Corvo, S. Jorge, Flores, Graciosa, Terceira S. Miguel, and S. Maria. Terceira is the seat of government, but S. Miguel, or S. Michael's is the largest and most fertile, there the English Consul "Hon. E. Monson" resides, and there we expect to find our letters. The area of the whole group is 1134 square miles, and the total population 252,000. The exports are wine, oranges, brandy, grain, etc., a great deal of which goes to England. Neither of the islands possesses a good harbour, and if it comes on to blow, ships have to stand out to sea. Our Channel Fleet generally come here and Madeira, once a year, in winter. Nearly all the oranges (121) that come to England are from S. Michael's, the quantity sent last year amounting to 250,000 boxes.

I hope we shall get some fresh meat and bread here, for I am a long way behind in body yet, and as thin as a rat. We are now running into the anchorage off the capitol town "Horta" by name, and the boat is already to go on shore to see for letters, and hope we may get some for we have had no English news later than May 8th. We heard a strange rumour just before we left Bermuda, about "Sir Roger" that he was proved to be Arthur Orbon, and had murdered the real Sir Roger in South America 20 years ago, and was now indicted for it. Considering that there is no submarine telegraph to Bermuda from any other place and no mail having arrived there (122) from England, or any other place, I for one, did not believe it; and expect to hear something fresh about "The Claimant" by this mail, and think his career of deception (which must have cost him many a sleepless night during the last few years) is nearly played out.

The corn fields on the islands look beautiful, and it appears to be ready for cutting, the vineyards too have a fine fresh appearance. We leave in the morning I think for S. Michaels, so don't expect I shall get on shore here. There goes the anchor in 15 fathoms of water, and I must go up and have a look at the town of Horta, distant 1/4 of a mile.

8 p.m. Horta is an extensive place, much larger than Funchal, or Santa Cruz, and seen from the sea looks like Brighton built all along the beach, the houses are all white, and it appears very clean, and the convents which are built right up the mountains, shine in the sun splendidly -- At present the bells are ringing for evening mass -- not in a peal like ours at Oakham, but one deep tenor bell ringing very slowly, and sounds so solemn from the mountain heights. As soon as we dropped anchor the quarantine boat came alongside, and after a good deal of delay, gave us pratique, at the same time informing the Captain, that the small pox was very bad on shore, so he allowed no one to go on, except himself, with one or two officers and Scientifics. The English vice-consul came off, and brought one or two letters for the Captain, which had come by the Portuguese mail from Lisbon, our letters are either at S. Michaels (124) or Madeira. The small pox was brought here by a British merchant ship from Boston, America, and we are told all the other islands have it, and Madeira also; if so our stay there will be very short indeed. The fruit boats are alongside with mackeral, bread, cheese, eggs, green figs, apricots, pears, damsons, etc. Apricots and figs are 12 for a penny, ripe and beautiful, and have brought 6 dozen of each which will last me to S. Michael. None of the Portuguese are allowed on board, and we have to go down to their boats alongside to purchase anything.

July 2nd. Between the islands of Fayal, Pico, and S. George. Dredging. We got up anchor at 1 p.m. and left at 2 p.m., having been here just 24 hours. I should like to have stayed longer as it is a beautiful island, very different to Bermuda. We took in a live bullock this morning and killed him tonight, so shall have fresh beef tomorrow and Friday. All the messes have bought a supply of new potatoes, 7 shillings per cwt, so we shall manage now to S. Michaels. Reaching an island like this after 18 days at sea, is like coming to an oasis in the desert.

The peak of Pico has been visible all day right above the clouds, it looks nearly as high as Teneriffe but has no snow on it. We have sounded twice at 1,000 and 875 fathoms and the dredge has come up full of fine specimens. At present we are under sail for S. Michael, with a very light wind, it is distant 150 miles and as we shall be dredging all day, shall not get in until Saturday. At present 4 of the islands are in sight, the 3 above mentioned with Graciosa. They look like black clouds resting on the water. I hear that no mail leaves these islands for England before the 28th, if so, I shall wait until we reach Madeira.

July 3rd. The Peak is in sight, still rising high above the clouds and it looks very singular, as nothing of the island can be seen, we are about 45 miles away now.

The depth today was 900 fathoms and the dredge brought up a few sponges and aneroids. At present we are under steam and S. Michaels is reported to be in sight from the masthead, so shall be in tomorrow. The Captain issued wine to-night so I have had apricots, figs, biscuit, and madeira for supper.

July 4th. Sounded at 875 fathoms and made sail for S. Michaels, which was in sight. It was 7 p.m. before we were anchored off the chief town. The quarantine boat came alongside, and gave us pratique, they told us (127) there was no sickness at all on shore, so we shall most likely have leave here. There are no letters for us, so our mail is at Madeira. The island is very pretty and as large as Madeira, nothing but oranges appears to be cultivated here, they are not ripe as yet, and other fruit is much dearer than at Fayal.

Eggs are cheap, 24 a shilling, I won't tell you how many some of our men ate in a day but over a shillings worth.

July 5th. Nearly all hands are on shore, I hope to go tomorrow. 8 p.m. They have nearly all returned, but most of them intoxicated, the wine here is very strong and its effects soon felt. It was the most amusing scene I ever saw; the climbing up the ship's side, and falling in on the quarter deck for inspection to let the Officers see who was sober. Some of them had enormous cheeses, (128) others half a sheep, or a pig's head, bought for Sunday's dinner. Some had lost their hats, some their shoes, and one the seat of his inexpressibles, which he was trying very hard to keep secret from the Officers; but as each man has to drill a little, and walk along the quarter deck without staggering, he was found out and reported. Very few could walk properly, so they were nearly all reported, and will have their leave stopped for two or three days.

Sunday, July 6th, 9 p.m. I was not able to go on shore, for which I was very glad, but am going to-morrow. We had church this morning and after dinner leave was given to all hands, when the return was worse than last night, and there have been several pitched battles on deck since they came off, at present they are lying about (129) the deck like rotten sheep, and several are in such a mad state that it requires 2 or 3 men to hold them. To get drunk with wine is worse than with beer, and requires 2 or 3 days before a man is quite recovered from its effects. I hear there was a frightful scene on shore in the principal square; several of our men were fighting there and the troops were called out to remove them and carry them down to the boats, when of course another battle commenced between our men and the Porteguese soldiers; they used their bayonets, and our men stakes, wheelbarrows, and everything they could procure. A whole regiment had to be called out, and eventually they were safely embarked, but several of the soldiers were hurt, and a few of our men got pricked with their bayonets, but nothing serious, and they have dressed (130) their own wounds so that the Doctor shall not see them, so am thankful I was not on shore the same time, for there is no distinctions of persons in a squabble like that, so that you must be either

English or Portuguese. The ship is in command of the 1st Lieutenant at present, as the Captain, Commander and a lot of other officers and Scientifics went away yesterday on an excursion into the interior to see some boiling springs, and they do not return before to-morrow evening. The 1st Lieutenant says that no leave will be given to-morrow except to those few who have not already been, so we shall be a quiet party. Sunday, in Portugal, and its colonies, is over after 12 at noon, when all the wine shops open, and trade, etc., begins. So our men considered it was Monday I suppose when they (131) got ashore.

July 8th, Tuesday. I went on shore yesterday afternoon with two of my messmates and spent a very pleasant day. We hired a donkey each for 1/6, and went for a ride into the country, and should like you to have seen us making the donkey gallop, and the boys who owned them about 2 miles astern, singing out for us to stop, but the donkeys did not understand English and the more we said "Woa, Woa" the faster they went. Only their countrymen can stop them by speaking to them. The boys carry a big stick with a spike in it, and they always stick it into one place, and we soon found out the sore one, and by touching it with our fingers the animals would start off and never stop until the boys could get near enough to make them hear. It was fine sport and the country was beautiful, there were whole (132) forests of orange trees, but the fruit was quite green and will not be ripe before September. We saw them pulling the corn and ~~then~~ oxen treading it out in the open fields; they don't cut it and thresh it like we do. The town of Ponta Delgado is quite a large one, and has one or two fine squares. The streets are something like Lisbon, and we counted over 20 churches. At 6 o'clock the bells rang for Even Matins, but only a few ugly old women and Sisters of Mercy seemed to be going. We saw the Cemetry out in the country, a very pretty one, laid out in much taste, but I think they are rather restricted as to the style and design of their gravestones, for they were all alike and uniform. The soldiers on the average, stand about 4 ft. 10 in. and are armed with the old musket; their arms and kit would fetch about 1/8 (133) in England. One of our men said it took 45 of them to bring him down to the boat, and every time he pushed one, the whole of them fell, being in single file. At the hotel where we had dinner the soldiers acted as waiters; so I suppose they are hired out by the day. I could fill a letter with the account of the dishes we had at dinner, but I know you would not care about such stuff. We found everyone on shore very civil indeed, and returned on board very pleased with our ramble. The Captain and party had also returned from their excursion, and looked quite brown after it. Today the Portuguese Governor and family, the British Consul and a party of ladies and gentlemen came on board, and lunched with the Captain, after which they had (134) a look round the ship. I hear that we are to sail for Madeira tomorrow; it is distant 500 miles and we shall be about a week on the way, and hope to find our letters there all right.

July 15th. Dredging outside Madeira. We left S. Michaels on the afternoon of the 9th and expect to anchor off Funchal tonight. On the 10th we were dredging between the islands of San Miguel and San Maria, some splendid specimens of coral were obtained. The same evening we saw some small rocks right out at sea, the depth where we were was 1000 fathoms. These rocks made their appearance about 20 years ago, shot up by some volcanoes, they are about 30 miles from San Maria. July 11th. The depth was 2,025 fathoms, and a few starfish were obtained. On the 12th the depth was 2,625, and several (135) temperatures were taken. On Sunday we had church in the morning, after which sounded at 2,650 fathoms. Yesterday the depth was 2,200, today the dredge has not yet come up. At present we are about 30 miles from Madeira, and the land is visible through a glass. We have passed several outward bound ships this morning for India, China, Australia and signalled them.

I saw several curiosities in the analyzing room the other night, and was very much surprised and interested. The large prawn was the most wonderful, he had a pair of wings folded over his back like a pigeon, is in a glass jar in spirits of wine. The mud that came up on Sunday was as soft as velvet, not a bit of gritty matter in it. The Mail from England is in Madeira now coaling, so the Captain will steam (136) in to-night, so hope to be reading one of your letters, as well as some from Oakham before I turn in my hammock.

7 p.m. The depth today was 1500 fathoms, and the dredge brought up a few star fish, etc. I hear that the Captain will not go in until the morning early in time to send the letters by the mail.

6 a.m., July 16th. Anchoring off Funchal, Madeira. Mail for England going at once, shall answer the letters from S. Vincent, they are not on board yet.

Yours sincerely,

Joe Matkin.

Dear Tom

Through the Commander's impatience in closing the mail before the steamer was ready to sail, I was unable to answer the Fayal and Madeira letters. Within 10 minutes after they were sent away I received two from you and six others, and was then informed that the mail bag was again opened for two hours, so had time to write a short note home. Yours was the only one sent me to Fayal, but it was no fault of yours I did not receive it there, as the British Consul sent it with others onto (138) San Miguel and Madeira, by H.M.S. "ADRIANE". I suppose the blackberries will be looking up by the time this reaches you, and I would rather have a walk along Barrowden pasture again than at all the Madeira's, S. Michael's or Teneriffe's, we have been to, or shall visit. I was very pleased to read of Joe Pepper's success in the Mercury; he is certainly the best and most creditable pupil that Mr. Creaton has turned out. I read in the papers all about the Shah's visit, I should have liked to have been in the "Audacious" at the time. If ever the Shah visits England again, I should think they won't make such a fuss about him, or waste so much money, for I have never read or heard that he has done us any good, and don't expect he ever will. Still I suppose like the Siamese Twins and the two headed nightingale, (139) he was a novelty for about 10 minutes. As regards Roger, I should think he will soon be in fashion again, and expect by the time we reach Bahia it will be all up with him. There is generally a pitched battle among the sailors about him after we receive a mail.

We only stayed 24 hours at Madeira for the smallpox was very bad there, so of course no leave was given, so am glad I went on shore when there in January. We took in a whole lot of splendid wine for the ship's company, also fresh meat, vegetables, bread, fruit, etc. Peaches, bananas, and figs were very plentiful there. The Captain gave a party just before we sailed, and took them in the ship over to the Desert Islands, 25 miles off, but the ladies were very sea sick and glad to return. Our (140) brass band was playing all afternoon, and the ladies and officers were dancing on the upper deck. At 7 p.m. the same evening the Captain issued wine to all hands, after which we set sail for S. Vincent, Cape Verdes, distant 1040 miles. We have had the northeast trade winds behind us and at present are only 570 miles from Saint Vincent, and expect to arrive there on the 27th. At present we are off the Canary Islands, and have been dredging and sounding all the way. On Saturday we were dredging close to the island of Palma, and some fine black coral was obtained at a depth of 1100 fathoms.

We shall get letters at Saint Vincent. We are to have a fresh sub-Lieutenant and schoolmaster there, from England by mail boat, since the other poor fellow died, I have had a lot of his work to do. (141) Sunday, July 27th. Dredging off S. Vincent. On the 23rd we sounded at 2,300 fathoms, the 24th at 2,425, 25th, 2,075, 26th, 1,975, and to-day the depth is only 500 fathoms.

Several specimens have been obtained by the trawl net and dredge, and at present it is coming up. We sighted the islands of San Antonio and St. Vincent at 4 a.m. this morning, and at once stood in between them, and commenced dredging, in consequence of which we had no service today, excepting the usual prayers at 9 o'clock. The land is tremendously high, and summits of the islands enveloped in mist. About six of them are at present in sight, there are 14 altogether, but only about 8 are inhabited, for they are rocky, barren, and unfruitful, scarcely worth occupying, the whole population is only (142) 40,000, of whom three parts are negroes and half castes. They all belong to Portugal and take their name from Cape Verde on the African continent, distant 340 miles.

The Portugese send all their convicts and political prisoners there, I believe. The island of Fogo is 9,159 feet high, nearly three times as high as Ben Nevis. St. Vincent is a great place of resort for mail boats and steamers for coal, and we can see several vessels in the harbor now. The dredge has just come up empty (judgment for dredging on Sunday) and we are standing in to the harbor which is a very fine one, nearly landlocked. 9 p.m. At anchor off Mindelo, the capitol of Cape Verdes. As soon as the quarantine boat had made the usual inquiry, the letters came on board, a few indeed, with only one for me from yourself. (143) The British Consul has just been off to the ship, and informed the Captain that a sub-Lieutenant and schoolmaster arrived 8 days ago, by the same mail that brought your letter, but that the latter left the hotel the day after he arrived to go for a walk, and has not since been heard of. The Consul is of the opinion he has been murdered, so search parties have been sent out, and a reward of £20 offered for information, but nothing has yet been heard.

August 1st. We have finished coaling having taken in 250 tons at £5 per ton, and I hear we are to sail for Bahia on Sunday evening the 3rd, inst. On Monday H.M. Troopship "Smoon" came in for coal, sailing again on Tuesday for Cape (144) Coast Castle, distant 700 miles. She took in 500 tons of coal, and was 10 days from Portsmouth, and has on board 300 marines and alot of stores for the Ashantee War.

No information concerning the fate of the missing schoolmaster has come to light, but his clothes and effects were brought on board yesterday and overhauled. A more disgraceful affair I never heard tell of than the loose manner he was sent off to join the ship, and the unchristian treatment he received on his arrival here from the British Consul. From the date of his appointment to this ship, he kept a daily journal, which closes on the day of his disappearance. I read it all through last night, and this is what I was able to deduce from it. His name was Briant, and he came from near (145) Bristol, he was 33 years of age, and had been a schoolmaster in the Navy for 10 years. Was a supernumary on board the Royal Adelaide, when he was ordered to proceed to Southampton for passage to S. Vincent by mail boat for the ship. A second cabin passage was given him from the Admiralty, and he sailed from England early in July calling at Lisbon for some hours when he went ashore, and of course spent some money. He arrives on this barren island on the 19th with only £2 in his pocket, and after describing the kind of people on shore here in his journal; he goes on to say -- "Having such a small sum of private money with me, and not being furnished by the Admiralty with any funds to defray my expenses on disembarking, I consider my best plan is to (146) consult the British Consul at once about it. The Consul kindly informed me, he says, that the "Challenger" might arrive in 10 days, or she might be a month, he really could not say, but he told me I might manage to subsist at a hotel until her arrival at the rate of about 8/ per day. I then enquired, "can you furnish me the means for subsistence until the ship's arrival for I have only about £2 with me, and you shall then be reimbursed everything." His answer was -- "I have no instructions that would justify me in so doing, and to me, you are no more than any other British subject." After this pleasant information (he says), I walked about the place to collect myself and consider what was best to be done, and I have calculated that I shall be able (147) to manage at least a week if I only sleep at the hotel. I must pass away the time during the day by walking about the island, and must do the best I can in the town for food."

This is the last entry in his journal, for on the same afternoon (eight days before we arrived) he left the hotel to go for a walk, and was never again seen alive. He was wearing his watch at the time, and had his money about him, and it is considered by people who know the place well, that he has been murdered for his money and buried, which is no uncommon circumstance on this island, for I have been told that six British subjects have disappeared in the same manner during the time the present Counsul has resided here. The poor schoolmaster had seven or eight hundred pounds in shares at home, so that his embarrassment was only temporary. I suppose he considered he had funds sufficient for his journey expecting to find the ship here on his arrival. I consider the Consul ought to be superseded at the least; he is getting £400 a year for looking after the interests of British subjects, and that is the way he treated one of his own countrymen. Sub Lieutenant Harston came out in the same mail boat, and was nearly in the same predicament on landing here, but the Consul invited him to his house and then kept him until our arrival, merely because he was a commissioned Officer. People say a Freemason can find friends in any part of the world, but poor Briant could not though he was one of the fraternity, and had been a considerable time.

August 4th. The mail boat sails in an hour's time and this will reach you about the 15th. If you write to Bahia by mail leaving Liverpool, August 27th, I shall receive it there, where we shall be by September 16th and stay a few days, the distance is 3,100 miles. I was on shore yesterday, and climbed to the top of one of the highest mountains, where a flag staff has been erected, upon which scores of names have been engraved, and of course added mine to the number in letters one inch deep, also putting Oakham, Rutland, so that if anyone else belonging to the large county ever ascends that mountain, his eyesight will be gladdened. The island is totally destitute of any sort of vegetation, everything is scorched up by the sun. The view from the top was grand, nothing but mountains and sea to be seen. The climbing was difficult and dangerous, and very few would care to attempt it. The people are mostly negroes of a poor description and are nearly all employed in coaling the barges, and getting out coals from ships, the women working at it the same as the men, and smoke their pipes equally as well. They are very ugly, and not all bashful, thinking nothing of undressing on the beach and bathing without any sort of gown whatever. The children run entirely naked, and can swim like fishes. We sail in the morning for S. Tago one of the other islands -- thence to Bahia. The mail boat that brings this has come from there, where yellow fever was very bad indeed, so at present she is in quarantine. I have another letter to finish so must conclude, wishing you to observe that I am all serene and still unmarried.

Believe me, Faithfully yours,
Joe Matkin.

H.M.S. Challenger, Sierra Leone, August 16, 1873

Dear Tom

It will be at least a month before this letter leaves the ship, but must write it by installments as the information comes to hand. We left St. Vincent on the 5th for another of the Cape Verde Islands, called S. Tago, 200 miles further south. No more information concerning the fate of the missing schoolmaster turned up, and everyone on board considers that he was murdered, and buried long before our arrival. Between St. Vincent and S. Tago we sighted 2 or 3 islands belonging to the same group. One of them Fogo is a volcano 9,200 feet high. We were two days on the passage and found S. Tago quite a paradise compared with St. Vincent. We remained there two days and quite enjoyed it. The island is the largest of the whole group, and the chief town is the seat of government, it was quite an extensive and well built place, and we found more Portuguese than at St. Vincent, still the majority of the population were negroes. The island abounds with cocoanut and date palms which grow close to the water's edge. Bananas and plantain were the finest we have yet seen, and pineapples, mangoes, etc. were very plentiful.

There is any amount of fish in the bay, a party of our seamen caught enough to supply all hands for breakfast and dinner. Of course I went on shore and spent a very pleasant afternoon among the palm groves. I bought a cocoanut off the tree for 1 d, but it was not so good as when kept some time. When the green shell is on them they are twice as large as those you see in England. They grow in enormous clusters at the top of the tree, just underneath the branches. There were monkeys and parrots on the island, one of our boys bought a monkey for 9/6, and let him run up the rigging, when he was made to chase it for three hours until he caught it, and then had to throw it overboard so it was not a good speculation for him. Monkeys, etc., are not allowed in the ship until we are homeward bound.

The Governor of the Cape Verdes came on board before we sailed and looked over the ship. We took in 2 bullocks, 300 cocoanuts and 5000 limes for the ship's company and sailed on the 9th for St. Paul's Rocks. The Captain is going to run the African coast down as far as Cape Palmas, then sail along the equator to St. Paul's Rocks. This is almost doubling the distance for we shall be further away at Cape Palmas than we were at S. Tago. Today we are off Sierra Leone (or the white man's grave). For the last two or three nights the sea has presented a wonderful phosphorescent appearance in consequence of certain minute animals flourishing most abundantly in this particular portion of the Atlantic. The ship appears to be literally ploughing her way through fire, and the surface of the water is lighter than I have ever seen it on the brightest moonlight night.

August 29th. Made fast to a rock in mid-Atlantic. The depth between S. Tago and these rocks of St. Paul is on the average about 2 1/2 miles and some magnificant specimens have been obtained in the trawl net. We sighted these famous rocks on the 27th and have been here two days surveying and sounding round them. When we first sighted them they looked like a railway train rising out of the water and at 6 p.m. we steamed close up to them and made the ship fast to one of the rocks by a hawser. There are seven distinct shapes of rocks, and rocks such as I have never seen before, for all the world like rough pumice stone and the edges as sharp as a knife. The whole surface of them would not cover a square acre in extent. They are 850 miles from the African, and 650 from the American continent, and are only 90 miles from the equator. The sea all round them is 2 miles in depth. They only rise 60 feet out of the water and as it breaks all over them, landing is very difficult.

There is not a particle of vegetation on them and with the exception of thousands of sea birds, no animal life whatever, neither is there a drop of fresh water. They are out of the track of any ships, and as nothing is to be obtained, no vessel ever comes, the last known to call here was a man-of-war in 1845. The birds are called boobies and are about the size of a goose, but have very long sharp beaks and claws. They make no nest but lay their eggs on the bare rock, and feed the young ones on flying fish. The rocks are swarmed with them and are certainly their owners. When the boat first landed they were so tame that the men could knock them over with their sticks, but are much wilder now. The sea round the rocks abounds with fish and some scores of fine ones called cawalks have been caught, enough to last all hands two days.

Yesterday was a grand holiday on board, and all who wished could land and go fishing. Of course I went and stretched my legs and also had the skin burned off my neck by the great heat of the sun. But spent a pleasant afternoon in fishing and teasing the old birds, and should think am about the only Oakhamite who ever landed there. Today the boats are away sounding, and we sail tonight for the island of Fernando de Noronha, 400 miles distant. Pass onto the next island - Sept. 3. At anchor off the island of Fernando de Noronha.

We crossed the line at 1 p.m. on August 30th. No shaving, etc., was allowed, but the captain issued wine to all hands in honour of the event. We have now finished operations in the north Atlantic, having crossed it in three different directions and visited most of the islands south of England. I see by a book I am now reading that the Canary Islands were the first to be discovered by the Spaniards in 1390, next came Porto Santa and Madeira in 1410, after which the Azores and Cape Verdes in 1420, (page 160) all by the Portuguese. The Canary Islands was the final point of departure by Columbus on his voyage of discovery and at that time Teneriffe was throwing out fire and ashes from its peak. On his second voyage he sailed from the Cape Verdes, and the last land seen was the peak of Fuego, also an active volcano at that time. The town of S. Tago where we were the other day was burnt down by the English under Francis Drake in 1553. This island hove in sight on the 1st of September and we anchored off the town the same night. We sounded at 2000 fathoms just off the island. It belongs to Brazil and is used as a self supporting convict settlement. It is about 10 miles long and 2 1/2 broad ,and has 2 or 3 high peaks on it. The highest about 1500 feet, hangs over on one side (161) and looks as if it would fall with a slight push. The island is very fertile, but we have been unable to get a single thing here, and all the officers can manage to buy is a few turkeys, melons and bananas. We came on purpose to survey the island and harbour, and yesterday morning all the boats were got out and provisioned ready. Just as they were on the start, the Governor of the Island, an obstinate old fool, took it into his head that we had come to see what sort of an island it was; whether it would be a desirable possession at any time for England, so he refused to allow the boats to land or take a single thing from the island. The Captain went on shore and tried to explain what we had come for (162), but the old fellow was too stupid to understand, so the Captain returned on board.

The boats are all in again and in half an hour we sail for Bahia, distant 700 miles. It appears that everyone on the island is a convict, male and female, except the soldiers and officials, and they have to support themselves by cultivation, etc. The nearest land is 500 miles distant, so there is no chance of escaping. The convicts live in houses of their own during the day, but all sleep under a guard up at the fort at night, and anyone later than eight p.m. is flogged. They wear what clothes they like, and are allowed to traffic among themselves but not with strangers without the Governor's permission. Some of them are allowed to go fishing in tiny canoes made out of hollow trees and propelled with a small paddle (163) but they are not very safe, and afford no means of escaping unless it is on board a ship. For that reason they don't care for a ship to come here at all unless it is a Brazilian vessel with supplies, etc. They speak the Portuguese language but a few know English. One of them asked one of our boat's crew if he had any old European newspapers, as he had seen none for 10 years. Most of them are here for life. The murderers and worst criminals are strictly confined.

Sunday, September 7th. Five Hundred miles from Bahia. We have had bad winds and weather and at present are just this side of Pernambuco under steam. We sighted the American continent last night off Cape S. Roque and saw the sun set behind the land. Several vessels about. We expect to be at Bahia by the 11th or 12th (164) there to receive our letters and get in some fresh provisions.

Sunday afternoon, September 14th. Just steaming in to Bahia. We shall be at anchor again in an hour's time, and this evening hope to be reading one of your letters, and tomorrow have a look at the newspapers, etc. This has been a long passage, 60 days from Madeira. We have been steaming down the coast of South America all the week, and in sight of it nearly all the way. The land is not so high as the coast of Devonshire. We sighted Pernambuco lighthouse the other night and have been sounding and trawling all the week, depth sometimes 2000 fathoms, at others only 14. Some splendid specimens have been obtained in the trawl. We are burning the last ton of coal now, so shall have to fill up here for the Cape, (165) where we expect to be about the 5th of November and to remain until the 6th of December. I hope there is no sickness here as they had yellow fever when we were at Madeira. The weather is very hot although it is only the beginning of summer yet. Bahia is in lat. 13° south of the equator. This morning many miles from land we had some splendid butterflies come on board and at present the ship is swarmed with them, and suppose we shall soon have the flies and mosquitoes round us.

September 15th. Anchored in the Bay of Bahia. We had not enough coal to bring us in, so had to sail in and were too late to get any letters last night, but this morning the mail from England came in 30 hours before her time and I received seven letters, two being from you. I like to (166) hear of Joe Pepper's success. You can tell him that the Naval Surgeons are almost all Irish and Scotch men of very doubtful abilities, promotion is very slow, and the pay small until they are old men, but don't suppose he has any idea of joining the Navy, as it is only fellows who can't get on anywhere else that apply for an Assistant Surgeon's commission in the navy.

Regarding "Roger" I am more in a fog than ever, and shall read no more of his trial until its culmination.

The "Daily News" sent is the latest I have seen, as the mail was only 18 1/2 days on the journey, 5,200 miles, and calling at Saint Vincent and Pernambuco for coal, she stayed here 8 hours and sailed again for Rio, Montevideo and Valparaiso. From the British Consul at St. Vincent she brought news that the body of the missing schoolmaster had been found in a deep gully at the foot of a mountain, but owing to its having lain there for a month (167) they were unable to say whether the man was murdered or accidentally killed.

Bahia is a splendid city seen from the sea, looks very like Lisbon, and is quite as large, but shall tell you all about it after I have been on shore. The Bay is splendid and the harbour full of shipping. The oranges and cigars are beautiful and very cheap. The city is the 2nd in Brazil, and was once the capital. Rio De Janeiro which now takes that honor is 850 miles further south and where the Emperor lives. The country of Brazil is almost as large as Europe but the population including negroes and native Indians is only 12 million.

September 21st. The mail leaves to-night (168) so I must close up at once. I have been on shore and had a good walk about the town and into the country. I was more surprised at the luxuriant vegetation than with anything else here. The creepers and tropical plants grow as thick as a jungle, and the flowers and trees are beautiful. The banana tree is the most prolific of all in the world, and I believe it bears 15 times more abundantly than wheat. The cocoanut palm and bread fruit trees are most handsome, the latter also bears most plentifully and the fruit is very pretty and about as large as a child's head, the rind being irregular like maize when ripe. Guavas, custard apples and alligator pears also grow here to perfection and pineapples to an enormous size. The birds and butterflies are magnificent, I think humming birds most attractive, they are (169) like flying gems, and their plumage shines like gold, perching on to flowers as bees, and some of them are no larger if it were not for their tails. I shall bring some stuffed ones home with me from Rio De Janeiro, it is much larger than Bahia, having 300,000 inhabitants. The latter has about 150,000 of whom four-fifths are negroes, who are of the same species as those at the Cape Verdes, and originally came from the same part of Africa. They are very ugly, the women coarse and fat, the native indian women are much more handsome.

The greater part of these negroes are slaves and are let out for hire by their masters for about 6 d. per day. We had about 60 of them getting in our coal, while the ship's company went on leave and they (170) got in 200 tons in a day. They live chiefly on Manioc flour, the same root from which tapioca is made. Bahia is a well built town, the houses are of stone and 5 or 6 stories high, but the streets are very narrow and stink fearfully. The negroes empty all their refuse, etc. into the streets from the top story and if ever you come here, be sure to walk in the middle of the street. No wonder that yellow fever makes such havoc in this country, when the streets are so narrow and badly drained. The negroes occupy the greater part of the town. The European merchants, etc. all live at one end of the place facing the sea. Very few of the people can speak English. The money is all paper, excepting copper pennies, the loss is considerable in changing the money for English. The principal streets are all laid down for tramways, the cars being drawn by mules. Instead of cabs and omnibuses they use sedan chairs carried by negroes; some of our seamen spent a good deal in riding about in these chairs, one or two are absent and most likely deserted, as there is a tremendous lot of shipping here, a great many from America. The town is not very wide, but nearly 6 miles in length, and I never was in such a place for churches, which of course are all Roman Catholic, and such gaudy rubbishy affairs inside, all candles, pictures and gilding. There is a cathedral which is a little better than the churches inside and out as well, but even that is nothing compared to one of our own at home. I looked in at Evening Mass and it was crowded with negroes, chiefly women, and in full evening dress of course. The singing was very fair. The shops all close at six and after that the town is very quiet. There are very few amusements here, only one theatre and opera house I believe. The soldiers are almost all negroes about 4 1/2 feet high and are three times worse to look at than the Portuguese. The Brazilians also have a bit of a navy. There is a turret ship of theirs here now, which was built on the Thames, and the seamen are nearly all negroes and are thrashed a good deal at times. Just ahead of us is a large American man-of-war called the "Lancaster" but their men are not allowed on shore, as half of them ran away at Rio. They are paid very irregularly and bolt at every good opportunity. As far as we have gone in this ship the deserters have been the very worst among the ship's company.

The American Admiral was on board yesterday looking over the ship, and we have had a great many visitors off to the ship. Our brass band plays "Hail Columbia" after "God Save the Queen" every evening at 8 o'clock. We sail on the 25th of September for the Cape and arrive about the 1st of November remaining until the 6th of December. I enclose the latest instructions as to future dates and addresses. You will get this about the 12th of October, quite getting on for winter in England. The summer will be just commencing there and finishing at Australia, but (174) there is a little cold weather between the two. Must now conclude as the mail leaves in an hour and shall write again by the next from where we are.

Yours faithfully,

Joe Matkin.

H.M.S. Challenger, Tristan d'Acunha, Oct. 15, 1873

Dear Tom:

We are lying at anchor again, but at a far different place to where I wrote from last. The temperature at Bahia was 82° in the shade, and at this wonderful snow covered island today it stands at 45°, rather a sudden change in 3 weeks - a'nt it? Still, the change has driven the yellow fever out of the ship, which was the object of our captain in running so far south before standing to the east. However I will commence my letter from the date of closing the last -- September 23rd.

I was not over-struck with Bahia (176) and did not care to make a second visit on shore there; nearly every night while we remained we used to see a display of fireworks, etc., in the Cathedral Square, and the cathedral itself was generally illuminated, all in honour of the Saints and to please the niggers. Our naturalists procured some large serpents and native minerals before we left to practice on, but they are all dead now and preserved in spirits of wine. There was a large iguana, or immense lizard, which the negroes are very fond of in a stew, also a racoon, an ant eater and a large sloth, which was the sleepiest looking customer you ever saw, more like a bundle of old hay. He has a very thick skin which protects him from the bees when robbing their honey, is more active in climbing than at anything else. We lost two of our worst characters at Bahia by desertion, and the day before we sailed sent a man on shore to hospital suffering from yellow fever. This hastened our departure (177) for we should have had to go in quarantine, had we stayed any longer. On the 25th of September at 5 p.m. we steamed away from Bahia, and steered due south for 1100 miles so as to get into cool weather as soon as possible. One more man - a marine - was attacked, but by being kept on the upper deck in his hammock soon recovered. Captain Nares had also a severe attack of some sort of fever, but is all serene again now. We had a pair of goats on board, that we were to land on the island of Trinidad for breeding purposes, but the old gentleman died before we arrived so they ate the old lady and did not call at the island, but are to do so on our return trip in 1876. We kept down the South American (178) coast for some distance below Rio De Janeiro, then stood across for this island, sounding, dredging, etc., about every third day. The average depth thus far - from Bahia - has been about 2100 fathoms, but the dredging has been very unsuccessful and the bottom must have been very rocky, for we lost a dredge, a trawl net, and 2100 fathoms of dredging line which costs 8 d. per fathom, and the trawl a lot of money. The coal also for each day's dredging amounts to about £10 besides the time and labour lost.

We have had some very rough weather too this trip, been under double reefed topsail for 2 days. Only 2 vessels have been passed since leaving Bahia, for this part of the ocean is not often crossed. The only living companions we have had are albatrosses, cape hens, cape pigeons, petrels and a host of other sea birds. The albatross is the monarch of sea birds (179) frequently measuring 17 feet from wing to wing, and in flying does not flap its wings but keeps them spread out. These birds will follow a ship for miles in cold latitudes and have very powerful wings and beaks. Some years ago H.M.S. "Rutledge" on her way to Vancouver's island, lost a man overboard in a gale of wind; a boat was lowered but just before it reached him, an albatross swooped down and drove its beak into his skull, killing him on the spot.

Perhaps you have read Coleridge's quaint poem "The Rhyme of the Ancient Mariner" describing the calamities which occurred to a ship among snow and ice, through one of the seamen shooting an albatross with his bow, (quotation): "Is it he, quoth one, is this the man, by Him who died on the cross - With his cruel bow, he laid him low, the harmless albatross". (This is all (180) at present in reference to albatrosses).

At 4 p.m. yesterday morning the peak of Tristan d'Acunha hove in sight being a mass of snow and ice, rising 8300 feet above the level of the sea. We were 80 miles away then. In the early morning objects at sea can be seen much plainer than in broad daylight. We hove to and sounded at 2150 fathoms, then dredged but obtained nothing. At 5 p.m. we steamed in towards the land, but only anchored this morning at about 1/2 a mile from the settlement.

The island was discovered in, I believe, the year 1530 by a Portuguese navigator named Tristan da Canta, but owing to its isolated position in the midst of an unsheltered and stormy ocean, no one ever thought of settling on it until the year 1812 -- a few English, Scotch and American families settled there and have themselves (181) and their children remained ever since. There are two other islands forming the group, all three in sight of each other and rising very abruptly out of the water, this one almost perpendicularly to the height of 6000 feet. A goat could not ascent it. So of course there is no sea beach at all, but a terrific surf breaks all along the shores making it very difficult for a boat to land except in the finest weather. It is about 3 1/2 miles in length and two in breadth, but nearly all mountains, except a small tongue of land which runs about 1/4 mile to the west, here the settlers have built their cottages and graze their cattle. Corn does not thrive but potatoes, and many sorts of vegetable are plentiful, sheep, cattle, and poultry are the most profitable articles on the island and the principal inducement for a ship to call. Fish and seabird eggs are very (182) abundant. In the winter seals and sea elephants come to breed, from these they obtain their oil. Flour, tea, sugar, coffee, etc., they procure from any ships that may call, which are chiefly whalers, and English men-of-war. The inhabitants are very primitive and sociable in their habits, living almost like one family. The profits derived from bartering, etc., with ships are placed in a common fund, and equally divided among the children when they are sent out in the world to shift for themselves. The island will not support many, and as the population gets too numerous, some of the children are sent away to the Cape in passing vessels. Only three men of war have been here during the last eight years, the last one in 1867, was the "Galatea" under the Duke of Edinburgh, she took some of the (183) children to the Cape and her captain baptized all the children and married what eligible couples there were, for no clergy man resides there. As soon as we anchored the whole male population came off in their boats, bringing with them potatoes, albatrosses eggs, etc. They were dressed in various costumes and all wore sealskin shoes, and wove worsted stockings. They were a fine healthy looking lot of men, some of them born on the island and never having once left it. The women had a gipsy looking appearance, several of them were Creoles from the Cape and St. Helena, but the native born children were very handsome. There are no marriageable couples -- or our Captain would have conducted the ceremony, for as many as wished. The chief man went by the name of Mr. Green, he is over 60, and has his mother (184) living with him - aged 91 - to whom he wanted our Captain to give a passage to the Cape, at the old lady's request, but he declined fearing that she might die on the way. One man from each of the seamen's messes was allowed to go on shore and purchase provisions for his mess. Nearly all of them have sheep, pigs, potatoes, many of them geese and fowls. A bullock weighing 61 1/2 stones was procured for the ship's company and in exchange we gave them 2 casks of flour, 1 of vinegar, 1 of madeira wine, a case of sugar, 50 lbs. of chocolate, 20 lbs. tea, 30 lbs. tobacco, some salt, lamp wicks and flannel.

They were out of all these articles, but expect a supply shortly from the Cape. The present population is 84, the men all answer to their christian names -- except "Mr. Green". Tristan d'Acunha is the farthest from a continent of any inhabited island in the world, it is 1750 miles southwest of the Cape and 1000 southeast of Bahia.

About 8 months ago, a Portuguese vessel was wrecked on the other side of the island, with all her crew drowned. The present season is early spring here, but the snow is plentiful on the hill tops. The time is almost the same as in England, but we gain 16 minutes per day when under sail, as our course is due east. The men here report that on one of the other islands, 22 miles from here, there are two German seamen who have lived there two years. We are just leaving Tristan to sound, etc., round the other two islands and may hear or see something of the "German Crusoes".

October 16th, at Inaccessible Island. We anchored this morning close under the (186) lee of this wild looking island and in a small cove about 200 yards in extent, we saw the hut of the two Germans and themselves walking down to the beach. Directly our boat landed, they came off and asked the Captain to remove them from the island for they had been living on it for two years in great hardship and with no probability at present of being removed. After hearing their story he consented to give them a passage to the Cape, and has given them some clothes, etc., for their own were quite worn out and they had neither boots nor stockings. I have heard them relate their adventures and will give you the roughest particulars. They are brothers, Prussian seamen, named Gustave and Frederick Stoltenhoff, speak excellent English, and are very intelligent looking men. On the breaking out of the Franco Prussian war, they were enrolled and served in the army besieging Metz, the elder rose to be 2nd Lieutenant. In the early part of '71, they were discharged with their regiment, and joined an American whale ship, which arrived at this island in October '71. As is not unusual in whalers, they were, with there own consent, victualled and left on the island for three months to catch seals, while their ship went farther south, whaling, but she never returned and was in all probability lost. They had the misfortune to lose their boat soon after landing, and the beach where they had built their hut was entirely surrounded by cliffs, or rather mountains, so that there was no opportunity of getting to the other side of the island. The patch of land in question was only about 200 yards (188) in extent, and on it they had sowed potatoes and vegetables which thrived very well. The island covers about 3 square miles, and rises for 2000 feet on all sides, more or less precipitous. On their side it rose almost perpendicularly but fortunately there were several streams of fresh water running down the clefts in the rocks, caused by the melting snow and rain. They tried hard to scale the cliff but found it impossible, and resolved at last to swim round the island, in hope of finding an easier ascent to the summit. This they at length found and managed to reach the top -- which was comparatively level, and covered with rough vegetation; but it abounded with wild boars of such a fierce and ferocious description, that they soon found they should have to return again to their old haunt under the cliff. However they managed to (189) seize two tiny sucking pigs, and drag them to their hut through the surf, building them a stye, and feeding them on potatoes, etc. They soon increased, but not fast enough to supply them with food, and they had occasionally to swim round and ascend to shoot a boar. They had a good supply of matches and ammunition. Seals came in the winter and penguins in such numbers that the beach was covered with their eggs. These they used to eat, and feed their pigs on them partly. After this manner they have existed during the last two years, occasionally seeing a ship at a great distance, but never one near enough to attract notice, until last night when they saw a vessel coming under steam straight for their island home, and they never lost sight of its light until she appeared and anchored this morning, and found her name was the "Challenger", and this is the conclusion of the "Stoltenhoff" story. (190).

We have been sounding, etc., round the island all day, while the Germans have been picking up their traps, seal skins, etc., digging up their vegetables which they gave the ship's company, with the three remaining pigs and some hundreds of penguins's eggs, which they had stored up, knowing the birds would soon be leaving the island for a colder region. Their hut they burnt down, and are at present on board with their goods and chattels. They have a sum of money which the paymaster has taken charge of for them. They kept a log of their voyage and adventures, but were a day ahead in their reckoning, not having known it was Leap Year. They are translating their log into English, and some of the scientifics and officers are already concocting a regular (191) romance about it for the newspapers, which I have no doubt you will see, and find far more interesting than my account. We are anchored for the night close to the still smouldering hut, but leave early in the morning to sound etc., round the other islands.

October 17th, Nightingale Island. We steamed over here at 4 a.m. this morning and landed the scientifics to explore while we sounded round it. It eighteen miles from Tristan and eight from Inaccessible. It is the pleasantist looking of the lot, being covered with vegetation and rising gradually to a height of about 1000 feet above the sea level. There are three or four distinct hummocks of land, but the area of the whole is less than Inaccessible and there are no animals on it whatever. The great feature of the island is its caverns, of which there (192) are a great number all round the shores.

The artist and photographer have taken views of all these scenes. We have several penguins on board, for these islands swarm with them. They are the clumsiest looking creatures you ever saw, being half bird and half seal, having the head and feet of a duck with a seal's body and habits, except that they lay eggs. They are covered with a fur-like feather very pretty to look at. Several of our men have skins but they are only good for making muffs. We are laying off from the land and are to sound between the islands tomorrow, sailing for the Cape at night.

October 27th, 150 miles from the Cape and expecting to anchor tomorrow. We left the islands at 7 p.m. on the 18th obtaining a fine view of the Peak of Tristan, as (193) we stood away. We have had a slashing wind thus far and have sounded four times, depth over 2500 fathoms, dredging pretty fair. We picked up a fine piece of timber which was covered with fine specimens for the scientifics, but we have seen no vessel yet. The Germans are getting fat, one of them is reading sketches by "Boz", the other "Nicholas Nickleby".

October 28th. 8 p.m. Anchored in Simon's Bay, Cape of Good Hope. At 4 a.m. this morning we sighted Table Mountain and the adjacent headlands down as far as the Cape. We were about 60 miles away then and hove to for soundings, proceeding again at 9 a.m. under sail and steam. At 4 p.m. we entered False Bay and thence into Simon's Bay which is only a part of the former, but the most secure for vessels (194) of any in this part of Africa. We found H.M.S. "Rattlesnake" and a gun boat at anchor here as well as a Dutch frigate that is refitting for sea. Directly we had anchored the "Rattlesnake" sent our letters on board and I had the satisfaction of receiving yours dated Sept. 16th. The mail that brought yours has been here two days and we have newspapers to September 27. The next comes in November 5th.

The "Rattlesnake", Flag Ship on this station, has just returned from Cape Coast Castle and brings a bad account of the Ashantee War. Commodore Commerell lies on shore shot through the lungs and thigh, he is in a very bad state, and several of his boat's crew are badly wounded and some of them I believe were killed. You must have felt rather dull in returning to Barrowden after your London visit, amid so much dissipation and wandering away from your professed faith, among charming preachers, with strange doctrines; but hope you are still sound and unmoved after all this search and curiosity to behold these heterodox religions and preachers. You know what Dryden says of these sects and people -- "A rambling crew of dreaming lambs succeed of the true old enthusiastic breed; Garnel form and order they their power employ, Nothing to build, and all things to destroy".

The newspaper paragraph in reference to Joe Pepper was very satisfactory. I also read it in the London News and expect we shall have him Surgeon to the Queen, or something of that sort, before I get back. You have some quite noted cousins; can't you write a novel or invent something, so as (196) to keep up the family credit; discover a planet, then there will be an Astronomical Swann, as well as an Anatomical Pepper.

In consequence of our having had the yellow fever since leaving Bahia, we were placed in quarantine for 24 hours, so there is no communication whatever between us and the shore yet. We are to remain here until the 6th of December, so I shall get at least one more letter from you, and I will write again before we sail describing the country in general, etc. Cape Town is 22 miles distant from here by land and about 60 by water. It stands on the shores of Table Bay and the celebrated Table Mountain (which we saw at sea) lies just behind the town. I believe we are to go round to Table Bay next week so as to give leave to the ship's company in Cape Town; we shall be there about 10 days, and I believe the officers will give a grand Ball during the time. We shall return here to refit etc., for the Dockyard Arsenal is here and we (197) have a great deal to do to the ship, preparatory to going down south among the ice. There is a small town here called Simon's Town, where is the Commodore's house, in which he lies wounded at present. This Bay is about 40 sq. miles in extent and entirely surrounded by immense mountains, shutting out the sea view inland altogether. The coast has the same barren uninviting appearance it had off Barbary over 5000 miles further north, and from whatever part of the African Continent you look at from the sea, the view is everywhere the same, great mountains and sandy deserts until you get further inland. The Cape of Good Hope (198) lies just to the west of this, and is one of the boldest headlands in the world, but is not, as is generally supposed the extreme southern point of Africa. Cape Agulhas, 80 miles to the southeast extends nearly 40 miles further to the southward.

Sunday, November 2nd. The mail leaves us for England on the 4th and the one from there is expected on the 3rd, tomorrow. I believe the Captain has decided on not going to Table Bay, so in that case, I don't suppose we shall see Cape Town for it is very expensive riding up from here and there is not much to see for the money. At present the ship is stripped for refitting, the yards and top masts being on deck, the fore and mainyards are sprung and the dockyard carpenter will have to make new ones. We were three days (199) in quarantine and directly the yellow fever flag was hauled down, leave was given to one watch for 4 days, and the greater part of them are up at Cape Town. The ship is very quiet now for nearly all the officers and scientifics are also on leave. The new schoolmaster from England is on board, came out in the same mail boat that brought your letter. He is a young man and had been married five days when he received 24 hours notice to embark for the "Challenger". It has been very hot here today and I have landed on African soil for the first time. All hands went to church today, Catholics, Presbyterians, Wesleyans and "Anglo Catholics" each going to his own church. There is also a Dutch Reformed Church but we could not muster any for that, of course we have some who profess no religion at all, who have to look after the boats meanwhile. (200) We all went to the Dockyard Church and the color of the congregation was even more mixed than at Bermuda. There were the usual soldiers and sailors, with negroes, Kroomen, Hottentots, Malays, Creoles and children belonging to the lot mixed. This afternoon we have had lots of visitors on board, several from the "Rattlesnake" describing their exploits at the war on the coast. One of their men was killed on the very day that his 20 year's service expired, which circumstance caused a general laugh and the remark that he had not been kept a day in the service beyond his time. There are a good many Malays here who do washing and all sorts of such work; one of them has done mine better than I have had it anywhere since leaving England.

9 p.m. The mail has arrived -- 27 days from England. She came into (201) Table Bay this afternoon, three days before her time, but there was nothing of any sort for me, letters or newspapers, so must make up my mind to wait for another ten days at least.

November 3rd, I have read all the English news up to the 4th of October. I know more about the Ashantee war and the Rattlesnake affair from the newspapers than I knew from the account of the men who were there. I see Tichborne is not yet played out, and the pilgrimage to Paray-le-Monial "in the face of a scoffing and unbelieving world" has been fully carried out. I should think it has been very beneficial to the shopkeepers and hotels at Paray. You will get this about Dec. 2nd, my 20th birthday. We are almost going out of the world for the next 4 months.
Yours as ever,
Joe Matkin.

H.M.S. Challenger
in Table Bay
December 4, 1873

Dear Tom:

Your letter dated Oct. 21st reached me in Simon's Bay, Nov. 20th, having been only 25 days from Southampton. I see by the flag staff up on the Green Mountain another mail is in sight, about 50 miles away, so will be in by 2 p.m. She is one day before her time having left England on Nov. 5th. It is very hot here today and we can see the summit of the famous Table mountain quite distinctly; the sides are rugged and steep but the top is as flat as a table, about 2 miles in length, it is 3600 feet high. I shall go on shore tomorrow and intend to ascend it. Since I last wrote from Simon's Bay, a good deal has been done to the ship; has been newly rigged throughout, (203) caulked inside and out, and fresh painted. We have also filled up with six months provisions, coaled, etc., and fitted up stoves in all parts of the ship against cold weather. As soon as we get to sea, each man will have issued to him gratuitously — one pea jacket, one pair pilot trousers, one pair mitts and one pair flannel drawers. About 10 days ago news came from Port Natal that the Caffres had broken out, so the "Rattlesnake" was sent round at once with 300 troops to quell the disturbance. Our Captain had orders to be ready at a day's notice to take more troops round if any further assistance was required, but as we have heard nothing more I daresay it is all settled. Natal is 700 miles from here and the "Rattlesnake" is not back yet. Commodore Commerrel did not (204) go in his ship as he is not better yet. He was at church last Sunday and looked very ill indeed. The Caffres are a more warlike race than the Ashantees, and are considered the finest colored race in Africa, there is nothing of the negro about them, and are more like the North American Indians or Maories than any other. They come down here to buy rifles, ammunition, etc., and live chiefly by hunting.

The Malays here are principally fishermen and come from the Dutch settlements of Sumatra and Java, in vessels. The Arabs trade along the coast from Egypt and Abyssinia. The Hottentots belong to this part of Africa and are handsomer than negroes, and not quite so black, they are employed by the Dutch farmers and speak that language. The Kroomen are the blackest race of people on the face of the earth, they come from (205) the country round the river Gambia, not far from the Ashantees. These we see here belong to Her Majesty's Navy on the coast of Africa, and never leave it; they are lent to any ships that may be in the station to do the duty of stokers, being able to stand the great heat of the Tropics better than white men. They wear the same dress as our men but mess by themselves in the ship, one of their own race acts as foreman over them. They are paid about 10/- per week, and have all kinds of fancy names as very few can speak English, so there is any amount to answer to Tom Teapot, Flying Gil, Tom Gridiron, Dixie Land, etc. Simon's Town is not much of a place for going on shore, I went though, four or five times, and Sunday evenings generally went to the Dutch Reformed Church, where the service is conducted in (206) that language in the morning and in English at night. Great shoals of mackerel and salmon came into Simon's Bay last week and you could catch 20 lbs. in about 5 minutes, rather different to fishing in the Welland. On December 2nd we steamed away from there, to come round here, 60 miles further north. We had a party of ladies and gentlemen, friends of our Commander, come round with us, and they were seasick, just like the party we took for a cruise at Madeira.

Our Commander belongs here (his father is Sir Thomas Maclear, the Astronomer Royal at this place); he was appointed to this ship on purpose for astronomical observations. He has been on leave ever since he came here. The coast all the way round from Simon's Bay was wild and mountainous. We anchored in Table Bay (207) at 8 p.m. same night, but the party of ladies slept in hammocks in the Captain's cabin. When they were just ready for turning in, they found they were not able to do it, so called the Captain, and he lowered the end of the hammock down until they got in them and hauled them up, one at a time. They had to be hoisted out of the ship into the boats (like cattle) as it was blowing hard. We have been more than a year in commission, and I have only slept out of the ship one night, that was in Lisbon.

I think when we pay off I must bring my two hammock hooks away with me, that I hung up to for 3 1/2 years. They are fitting a stove close to mine, so I shall be warm in the cold weather. Table Bay is about as large as Simon's Bay, and similarly surrounded by great mountains; there is an island at the (208) entrance, upon which is a lighthouse. The bay is not so land-locked as Simon's Bay and does afford such good shelter for shipping unless they go into the dock basin.

There is a breakwater under construction being made by convicts and prisoners. Four or five of our seamen are working on it, who preferred going to Gaol for a month, and afterwards to a fresh ship, instead of going further in the Challenger. Five or six have gone to hospital and three have deserted to the diamond fields, but we shall fill up from the Guard Ship before leaving. Many will desert in Australia and New Zealand, as the men are very dissatisfied at not getting extra pay for this cold weather trip, and the work is so much harder for every one than in an ordinary man-of-war when the ship is in harbour six months at a time. Men who were in this (209) ship's last commission say she used to lie in Sydney for months at a time, and was a very happy ship then, but now when we go in harbour it's to refit, coal, or provision, and the men get scarcely any leave. Several of the officers are great bullies, the most popular of the lot is Lord Campbell. We are anchored about half a mile from the city of Cape Town, which has a very clean appearance, and looks something like Penzance in England, only larger; it is about four miles in length but not very broad, is well fortified, and there is a railway which runs up the country, the first I have seen since we left England, though there were some at Lisbon, Halifax and Bahia. We are to lay in our Christmas stores here and on the 8th the officers give a grand ball in the Royal Exchange on shore. We shall (210) have any amount of visitors on board here.

Last night the cable parted with one anchor and all today the diver has been at work picking it up and has now got it all right again. One the 10th we leave here for Simon's Bay again to fill up with coal, and also to take in a deck cargo of it. We leave there before the 15th December and are to inspect a lot of islands in the Southern ocean, to report which would be the most suitable for an expedition to go to from England next December and observe the Transit of Venus. Two or three parties are going from England to observe it in different parts of the world, and our party will watch it from some island in the China Sea. We call first at Prince Edward Island, and probably spend Christmas there, before going on to Marion Island and thence to the Crozet Islands (211), after that to Kerguelen's Land, a large island discovered by Kerguelen, a French navigator in 1763. Captain Cook was there in 1774 and lay a long time in the only harbour -- which he called Christmas Harbour. The island he called the Land of Desolation, as there was no vegetation on it, neither any animals except seals, sea elephants, etc., but there is ice and snow all the year round. The island is 100 miles in length and 50 in breadth; it is 2200 miles south by east of this colony. We are to lie a month in Christmas Harbour, and thoroughly survey and explore the island, which has never yet been done. Leaving there we steer south until we reach the great Antarctic ice barrier, then run up for Melbourne about the end of March, and stay there a week or 10 days before going on to (212) Sydney to stay five weeks, refitting etc. From there we go to Wellington and Auckland, after which warm weather and some far different islands. New Guinea is the first, then Timor, Borneo, Amboyna, and Manilla, Phillipine Islands; thence to Hong Kong, China and on to Yeddo, Japan, after which the Kurile Islands and Petropaulopchy, the cold capital of Kamchatka. Thence Aleutian Islands, Berring's Straits and down to Vancouvers, about May/75 after which begin again.

December 9th. We do not leave here for Simon's Bay until the 10th -- to-morrow, and sail finally on the 16th. The English mail has not yet arrived, but is expected hourly as she is four days behind time. She is a very old boat, the worst the company has and is always late. I dare say we shall receive another mail before the 16th and there is one sails for England on that day which takes this, the Captain is going to send his little boy home by it, as he is not strong enough for the next voyage, and has suffered very much from bad eyes since he came in here. The Officers' Ball came off last night on shore and was a great success, over 400 being invited. Our band was in attendance and came off this morning quite drunk, and couldn't carry their instruments. The inhabitants of Cape Town give a return ball to-night to our officers and we sail tomorrow night. We have been crowded with visitors since we came in, the ship if full of them now (one young lady just asked me to whom I was writing, I answering to you, my love). There's some very handsome (214) girls in this place, Dutch and English, very extensive about the bustle and in the latest fashion. We had the Governor, Sir H. Barkly and party on board on Saturday, also Sir T. Maclear and party, and they danced with the officers on the main deck, while the sailors dance on the opposite side. Two more have deserted since we came round to this bay. I was on shore yesterday morning until 7 p.m., and went to the top of Table Mountain. It is 3500 feet high, and I was 2 hours going up, the ascent was not half so difficult as that up St. Vincent, but the view was far better. Looking south you saw the Dutch town of Wynberg, and a level track of vineyard country until you came to the mountains round Simon's Bay, and the city of Cape Town spread out under your feet. It was intensely hot climbing up, but on arrival at the summit you were enveloped in a damp cold (215) mist which kept the sun off you completely, and made it very chilly and cold until you descended about 800 feet -- where it was as hot as ever. Cape Town is a pretty good place for business, but nothing to look at, not to be compared to Melbourne. There is not a single striking building or church in the place, all after the same heavy Dutch style. There are a great many Malays and Hottentots in it, about every 3rd house is a hotel. There are theatres, music halls, etc., here, and plenty of loafers, and that sort of people, flash women, etc. Peaches, apricots, oranges, strawberries are the cheapest fruits at present, but are not so nice as those at Madeira and the Azores. Two fine merchant ships have been here and gone since we came in, they were called emigrant ships, and had each on board about 500 coolies from Calcutta for Jamaica and Demerara, to work in the sugar plantations there. They go for five years and are paid (216) about 2 d. per day and are supposed to be voluntarily emigrating, but it is really a quiet way of importing slaves, for they are treated like those in the West Indies and very few ever live to get back to India again.

The ships lie a long way from the shore, and don't allow their emigrants to land, neither permit anyone on board. I was looking at them the other day through a telescope, they were dirty, miserable looking creatures, all wrapped up in blankets, having had cold weather beating round the Cape of Good Hope. They only remained here four days to take in water, fresh provisions, etc.

December 15th. In Simon's Bay. We left Table Bay with a party of ladies on board, and steamed round Robin's Island with them, returning the same night and landing (217) the visitors, after which we steered for here and anchored on the 11th. We found here the "Rattlesnake" again from Port Natal, she sails for England shortly having been out for four years. We have filled up with coal and have 70 tons on the main deck, as no ship could be procured to bring us any down to Kerguelen Land. We have 40 sheep, 5 bullocks and a large quantity of poultry belonging to the officers, also several goats for breeding purposes that are to be left on different islands. The missing mail came in on the 14th and brought me two letters, one being from you with two newspapers and shall have no more news this side of Melbourne. We sail tomorrow night for the long voyage and shall be at Kerguelen by the time you get this. Did you see the Illustrated London News for 1st November? It contained (218) a picture of our ship at St. Paul's Rocks.

I daresay you will hear of our arrival in Melbourne, about the end of March, as there is telegraphic communicaltion between there and England. Two more men have deserted and three are now absent, one boy tried to swim ashore last night, and has never been heard of since, the distance was 1 1/4 miles, and it was blowing hard and the boy had his clothes on. I have sent you a ball programme with the new device of the Challenger, drawn by our artist,

J.J. Wild. I have laid in my Antarctic provisions and clothing and expect to weather it admirably. So must conclude for this side of Melbourne.

Yours sincerely
Joe Matkin

(219) H.M.S. "Challenger" Off Prince Edward Island,
Christmas Day - 1873

Dear Tom:

Our 2nd Christmas on board has arrived and finds us in sight of two snow covered islands, but they are still 20 miles away, so we shall not anchor until tomorrow; the weather is just about the same as with you, and the day has passed away far more pleasantly than last Christmas in the Bay of Biscay, still the sea is very rough today, and the ship rolls a good deal, but we are pretty well used to that now, it was too rough for the regular church, but we had prayers as usual, and are now wearing our warm clothing for the first time, as the thermometer now stands at 40 degrees, and was down to freezing point last night; rather a sudden change as it stood 70 degrees only 4 days ago. We left the Cape on the 17th for this island, distant 1200 miles, and had a good wind, we sounded 2 or 3 times, depth about 2 miles, and the island hove in sight about 10 o'clock this morning.

All hands were on deck looking out for land till dinner time, 12 o'clock, when the band struck up -- "The Roast Beef of Old England" which sounded very nice, though the dinner was salt port, and pea soup. Of course we brought private stores with us, and had a fine dinner considering; the Captain walks round just to see the tables laid out, and tests each messes' plum duff, a very ancient custom in the Navy; there are 20 messes, but he only managed about 5; after 1/3 pint of Madeira was issued to each man, and the band played dance music, which they are (221) still doing, so I being no dancer have got this letter underweigh with two or three others. We were considering at dinner time where we are likely to be next Christmas, and find that we shall be somewhere in the neighbourhood of Hong Kong, and Christmas '75 close to Valparaiso. December 21st was the anniversary of our leaving Portsmouth, so the Captain issued wine to all hands. Just before we left the Cape our photographer deserted, so at the last moment Professor Thompson had to rush up to Cape Town, and engage a young fellow there; who has been very sea sick coming across here. We are now standing between the islands until morning, when we run up to Marion Island.

January 3rd, 1874 - Off the Crozet Islands.

On the day after Christmas we stood in to Marion, and landed an exploring party while the ship sounded round the island. It is (222) about four miles in length, and three in breadth, and has mountains on it about 3000 feet high, covered with snow nearly all the way down.

There was grass on it but no animals whatever except Penguins, Sea Elephants, and hosts of great Albatrosses, some of them measuring 17 feet from wing to wing. All these creatures, as well as lots of other sea birds, were there for breeding purposes, as the season lasts from November to May. The Albatrosses and Penguins are very friendly, the former generally makes his nest between two Penguins, which make none, but merely a hole in the ground and lay two eggs, but the Albatross has a regular nest of dirt and moss, and raises it about 4 feet from the ground, they also lay two eggs which are nearly as large as Ostrich's, after they are laid one of the birds sits on them until they are hatched. The old man goes to sea and gets (223) his belly full, then returns and sits on the eggs while my lady goes for a feed. A good many of these birds were killed for the sake of the breast of white down, and the web of the foot which our men make tobacco pouches of. They can't fly from the ground on account of the great length of their wings, but must start from some elevation. They are very tame, and would never leave the nest until toppled over with a stick. A large sea elephant was shot on the beach, but I did not see him. On the 27th we stood across to Prince Edward's Island, which is much smaller and rather higher, but no one landed. We had dredging between the islands and obtained some good specimens, and the same night we make sail for the Crozet Islands distant 540 miles. On the 31st of December we sighted Hog Island, but could not go (224) in very close on account of the fog.

New Year's Day was terribly foggy, but on the 2nd we sighted the 12 Apostles' rocks, Penguin Island, Possession Island, and East Island. In the evening we stood in for an anchorage off Possession Island, but found it was blowing too hard, with a very rough sea, so we stood out again, and obtained a good view of the island which was something like Marion, but larger. As the sun was setting the mountains in East Island came out right above the fog in the most wonderful manner, of which the Artist made a fine sketch; today we have been dredging, depth 700 fathoms but as it still keeps very foggy we are just going to leave the Crozets, to make sail for Kerguelen Land, distant 700 miles.

January 7th, 1874. Anchored in (225) Christmas Harbour, Kerguelen's Land.

We have only been 3 1/2 days coming the 700 miles, and sighted this island at 4 a.m., anchoring at 8, in this magnificant harbour, the best one we have yet been in, it is about a mile in length, and 1/2 a mile in breadth, and has deep water all round, it is surrounded on three sides by high lands, and there are two or three small islands abreast of the entrance, the land has a very dead appearance, the hills are covered in snow, and there is not a sight of a tree to be seen. There is a very peculiar rock at the entrance to the harbour, it lies in the middle of the passage, and has a tunnel through it large enough for a train to travel. This has been made by the ceaseless action of the water, and makes it look like a railway bridge. Christmas Harbour is at the extreme north west of the island; it is in lat. 49 degrees south (226), long. 70 degrees east, the same latitude as the Scilly Islands, and although this is the middle of summer down here, the hills are all snow covered. Several parties have been on shore during the day exploring and have returned again, bringing with them various kinds of sea birds, sea elephants, penguins, etc. I shall tell you more of the sea elephants after I have been on shore and seen them. There are four different sorts of penguins on this island, the largest and handsomest being the King Penguin, which stands about 3 1/2 feet high, and has a golden crest on its head. Our men say they look like the Russian Sentry's up the Crimea, for they stand as stiff and immovable as a soldier, with their flippers standing out straight. They are of a white and purple black colour, with yellow feet, and are perfectly harmless, and look so helpless when they are being killed. They stand on the (227) beach in droves, and in the evenings go through all sorts of military evolutions. Besides this kind there are the Jackass, Royal and common Penguin here, all breeding on the beach and rocks of this island. Then there are Petrels, Albatrosses, Cape hens, Tern, Sea swallows, Rock pigeons, and carrion hawks; the latter two kinds are land birds, but migratory and get their living along the sea beach. There are also plenty of wild ducks, but they like the rest are only here for the summer. Specimens of all these creatures, with a couple of sea elephants, and a large seal were shot, and brought on board, and are now stuffed and pickled for the museums. The seal weighed about 40 lbs., and the sea elephants each 1100 lbs. requiring a good number of men to hoist them on board. Bundles of the Kerguelen cabbage were also brought, which proves very (228) palatable, and eats something like spinach though rather bitter. It is the only plant to be seen on the island and grows close to the sea, is in shape something between a lettuce and palm cabbage. Captain Cook found it very efficacious in curing the scurvy among his crew, so we shall eat plenty of it. We go to sea again to-morrow for a cruise round the island, but are to come back here again before we leave it finally. It is snowing now, and very cold. This island was discovered by Kerguelen, a French navigator, who, on his return to France published a grossly exaggerated account of its capabilities and extent. In the year 1776 Captain Cook visited it, and called it the "Land of Desolation", from its dead and inhospitable appearance; it is composed of igneous rocks, which rise into hills from 2 to 3000 feet high. The island is 100 miles in (229) length, and 50 in breadth, there are a great many smaller islands round it, and plenty of bays and good harbours. The interior of it has never been visited by man, and perhaps never will, for the ground is frightfully irregular and boggy, so impassable that all progress is debarred inland. Captain Cook spent five weeks round its shores, and also visited Marion Island before leaving for the south. He started from the Cape of Good Hope, and after visiting these islands, penetrated to 71 degrees south, then ran up to New Zealand in 110 days. Captain Weddel in 1824, penetrated to lat. 74 degrees south, and in 1840 Captain Ross got as far as 78 degrees, 4 minutes south, the farthest anyone has ever been, or is likely to reach. His ships were the "Erebus" and "Terror", afterwards lost in the Arctic under Sir John Franklin. In lat. 78 degrees Ross found an impenetrable (230) barrier of ice, and also discovered land with burning volcanoes on it 10,000 feet high. The French, Russians, and Americans have each succeeded in sailing within the Antarctic Circle, but never reached so high as Ross.

Our Captain expects to reach Lat. 65 degrees south but his orders forbid him from forcing his way through the outer ice barrier, for he will only have three month's provisions left then, and dare not risk being frozen in.

February 1, off Kerguelens Land, bound south. We have finished surveying and exploring the island, so will give you further particulars before leaving it finally. On the 8th of January we left Christmas harbour and anchored the same night in Betsy Cove, a snug harbour, named after some whale ship. It is about 40 miles from Christmas Harbour further east, there are several small islands as you (231) steam along the coast, also plenty of rocks and shoals, so that a very careful lookout has to be kept, and soundings continually taken. The coast as we came along to Betsy Cove, and indeed, all round the island, presented the same dreary and desolate appearance, in some places the hills were higher, and quaintly shaped, but were always covered in snow; and a heavy fog hangs continually over the land, so that the view inland is completely obscured.

We remained in Betsy Cove eight days, while the boats went away surveying the adjacent bays and harbours, which were very numerous, and parties of officers and scientifics went exploring, shooting and botanizing inland, but they never succeeded in getting more than about 10 miles. Numerous birds, sea elephants, etc., were shot, and enough wild ducks to supply all hands two days for dinner. I went on shore (232) once with the Paymaster shooting ducks, and we went about five miles inland to see some wonderful cascades of water which come down from the mountains. The walking was something frightful, the island is one vast swamp. At every other step you sink up to your knees in the boggy ground. What looked like grass from the ship turned out to be moss, and it was the mossy ground which was the most treacherous. Not a tree or shrub was to be seen anywhere, no animals of any sort, neither insects on the earth though we looked carefully, except wild ducks and carrion hawks, we saw no birds, so that we may call it truly a "Land of Desolation". Just abreast of where we are anchored, on a prominent hummock of land were 7 or 8 gravestones. We were greatly surprised to see them when first we entered the harbour, (233) they stand upright, and being painted white are very conspicious, long before a ship is near enough to see what they are. They have been erected by whalers who rendezvous in this harbour, to the memory of their shipmates who have died or been drowned off the island. They are made of ship's timber, well shaped, and painted and, I need not say how solitary and desolate they look in this dismal spot. They are all English and American, some of them dating back to 1840, and nearly all read after this description -- "In memory of George Eccles, Second Mate of the Barque 'Julius Caezar' who was drowned whilst whaling off Desolation Island, May 1863." "And so he bringeth them into the haven where they would be".

Great quantities of kelp abounded in the sea round this, and other harbours, and (234) on one part of the beach we found an old ship's copper, and a lot of iron hoops that had been left by whalers years ago, after boiling down their whales. The beach was strewn with whale bones, some of enormous size -- much larger than an Elephants. A day or two after we came into Betsy Cove, we were surprised to see a small schooner standing into the bay, which anchored the same night and proved to be the "Imogen" whaler of new London, America. During the rest of the time we lay there the whale men were always on board our ship, telling us all about the island, their line of life, pay, etc. The Captain dined with our officers every night, and having been down in this part of the world for a good many years, was able to give us a great deal of information.

Their vessel had just come from Heard Island further south and was waiting to be joined by (235) another schooner from America, to commence the season's whaling. The crew composed English, Scotch, Americans, Negroes, most of whom came on board before we left. They join the vessel for four years, and are paid according to their success, but the average was much less than that of our men, while the hardship is something awful. They would gladly have changed places with ours, for from the time they leave America, until their return they scarcely see a strange face. These men have been here three years, and the only inhabited place they have landed on is Tristan d'Acunha. Once a year another vessel comes out to them bringing provisions, clothing, etc., and taking back their oil and skins. As yet they had none, having just sent their stock off. They carry casks, staves, and hoops as cargo, and when they kill a whale, take the blubber to the nearest island, and boil it down, the Cooper goes on shore and sets up as many casks as may be required, after which they are filled with oil, marked and left on the island until the store vessel comes for them at the end of the year. This one had a store of oil on one of the Crozet Islands and when their annual store vessel was removing it, one of the boats was capsized whereby the mate and three men were drowned. This island is their great rendezvous and they generally winter in Christmas Harbour. They live very well for they eat wild ducks, albatross, penguins, rock pigeons, sea elephants, sea leopards, and any amount of cabbage. Some of our men have tried these animals and approve them all. I have tackled an albatross and liked it, but don't care to try sea elephants. They have told us all about the latter, so will describe the animal to you. He belongs to the walrus and seal family, but is much (237) larger, and not so valuable, though the whalers often kill them for the sake of their oil. They weigh from 1200 to 1500 pounds; we killed one weighing 1100. They are covered with a coarse furry skin, which is only of value to themselves. They live in the sea in winter, but come on shore in the summer to breed the same as seals and penguins, etc. They live on the same food as seals and whales, and during the time they are on shore they eat nothing, so get very thin during their three months on land. Their head is exactly like that of a lioness, they have whiskers, but of course have no feet like animals, have large eyes, and two large flippers where their forelegs should be, and two very strong ones where their tail is situated, which he used to propel himself through the water, and by raising himself on them manages to hobble along on (138) land; they come to the island in November, with the seals and penguins from the south, for the purpose of breeding. The males come a week or two before the females, and wait on the beach until they arrive, who, on their arrival retire farther up, while the gentlemen have a very long and fierce combat for the possession of the best looking wives; after this little affair they choose their partners, and settle down comfortably. There is a sort of general confinement in May, during which time the ladies are very helpless, and the gentlemen most affectionate and attentive. They are also very savage if anyone attempts to intrude on the mother and infant, have been known to defend them to the last extremity. I read the other day Anson's voyages, in which was an account of a sailor who had killed the mother and calf, and while engaged skinning the latter, the male (239) animal came unperceived behind him, and getting his head in his mouth, inflicted on him such frightful injuries that he died. This was at Juan Fernandez.

About a fortnight after the calf is born, the mother seizes it in her mouth and throws him into the sea, for they do not take to the water naturally, but require preparatory lessons in swimming. After a few trials he manages it, and at the latter end of May the whole herd leave the island for the south again. They are quite harmless if let alone, if you poke him with a stick, he raises himself on his tail and makes a sort of helpless jump at you, but of course falls down. If you throw a stone in his mouth, he roars and shows his great teeth, grinding the stone to powder. An enormous quantity of blood comes from them when they are killed; the whalers generally spear them and (240) they tell us, that, like the elephant on land, they often shed tears while dying, and look at you with such a pitiful and accusing gaze. Seals and penguins have very similar habits.

On the 16th January we left Betsy Cove for another harbour further east. We had a severe gale during the night, which drifted us to the extreme east end of the island. We passed several small islands, and found the east coast very mountainous and wild looking, the mountains generally being sugar-loaf shape.

At 7 p.m. on the 17th we steamed into Royal Sound, and after steaming for about 8 miles where the navigation was very intricate (for the land was broken up into hundreds of small islands, rocks and reefs), we came to an anchor between three islands, and the boats were got out for surveying, the harbour, etc. Here we found another whaler called (241) the "Charles Colcott", also from New London, but in opposition to the "Imogen". The crew were mostly living in a hut on shore, where they had their oil stored in casks on the beach. On a small island opposite their hut was another lot of tombstones, all whalers but not belonging to this vessel.

The crew were very much surprised to see a large man of war, steaming into their harbour and fully expected that we should run on shore. Most of the men came on board while we were there, but the Captain, who was a regular churlish Yankee, refused to come, or to give our Captain any information about the island or harbour.

He invited him to come to church on the Sunday morning, and to dinner in the evening, but he wouldn't come. No Captain he says -- I ain't been to no church for 20 years, and (242) I guess I ain't going to begin now. We remained there three days, and on the 20th steamed out of Royal Sound, and hove the dredge, some good specimens were obtained, but no fish have been caught round the island. We anchored off the land that night, and after dredging again on the 21st stood in, and anchored in Greenland Bay, which is at the extreme south east of the island. Several parties landed there, but the island was exactly the same -- no animals or trees, and vegetation to be seen. On the 22nd we left and made sail for Christmas Harbour, distant 140 miles. On the 23rd we had a tremendous gale, during which we were struck by a very heavy sea which smashed the sounding platform, and went down the funnel into the stoke hole. On the 24th we anchored in Cascade Bay, and on the 25th in Betsy Cove (243) again, where we rode out another heavy gale. We had landed a pair of goats on the island before we left, hoping that they would find their way into the interior, and increase and multiply; but we found them grazing among the grave stones, and as soon as they saw the ship, they came down to the beach and commenced bleating. However, we left them there but whether they will live through the winter is a query -- no other domestic animals could I'm sure.

On the 26th we made sail again for Christmas Harbour, but were obliged to anchor that night in Hopeful Harbour. There we took in another good supply of Kerguelen cabbage, and on the 27th made another start. During that day we fell in with the "Imogen" and her partner the "Rossal King" also from New London. They were out on a (244) whaling cruise, and each vessel had two men on the lookout for whales. They anchored with us that night in Rhodes Harbour, and the two Captains came on board our ship to dinner.

Several of the crews of the vessels also came and we had the band under weigh, and some good dancing. On the 28th we got out the boats and surveyed the harbour, which is a very extensive one. There are plenty of good ones round Kerguelens Land but Christmas Harbour is the best. We anchored there again on the 29th and remained two days to get some specimens of coal which were found in the rocks and cliffs, and on the 31st we made sail from there, intending to leave the island for good. Previous to leaving, another good supply of cabbage was taken on board and a paper recording the ship's visit, and other particulars was buried on shore. All today, Sunday, (245) we have been sailing parallel with the land, and have just cleared the south point of the island. The west side we did not survey at all as Ross examined it pretty well in 1840; the south side is as barren as the rest, I think the mountains are higher, some quite 4000 feet, and shaped like church spires. We have been 25 days round the island, and anchored in most of the principal harbours. The mountains are now almost out of sight, and we are under all plain sail for McDonald and Heard Island, distant 300 miles, due south.

February 6th - Anchored in Whisky Bay, Heards Island. We have been 6 days coming this distance, owing to the frightfully foggy weather we have had, and the uncertain information as to the correct position of the islands. We sighted them twice but were obliged to keep away on account of (246) the fog; at 10 this morning we came up to McDonalds Island or rocks, which are a group very similar, and as barren as S. Paul's Rocks, the highest point would be about 400 feet.

Heards Island lies 20 miles further south, and is in the same latitude as the Falkland Islands. It is about as long as Marion Island and Whisky Bay is the only anchorage. The island looks like an immense iceberg, being covered with snow and ice glaciers, which are formed all down the mountain slopes. There are several men on it belonging to the "Imogen", who are here for the summer to kill sea elephants for the sake of their oil. The Captain landed and got what information he could from the men, and we leave for the south tomorrow, as any exploring party is impossible, for the snow lies several feet thick on the island.

February 16th - Within the Antarctic Circle - Latitude 66°,39'S. Off the great ice barrier, and surrounded by icebergs. We left Heard's Island on the 7th for the south, with a good breeze, which increased to a regular gale during the night; the ship was knocked about anyhow by the tremendous seas, two of the main deck ports were stove in and men knocked out of their hammocks by the sea, the carpenters were up all the night repairing the damage. It was considered the worst gale we have yet had, tho' not so dangerous as the one in the Channel.

We ran 214 miles during the gale, with (248) storm staysails only, the best part of the time, the gale moderated on the 8th Sunday, and we were in the latitude of Cape Horn.

On the 9th we were out of the track of navigation being in latitude 58°S and on the 10th we were in latitude 60°, 15'S and no icebergs in sight.

The thermometer stood at 33 1/2° in the shade, and the temperature of the surface water was exactly the same. On the 11th at 4:00 a.m. the first iceberg hove in sight, and we lay to, close to it, and hove the trawl. This iceberg was about a mile in length, and 400 feet high, it was quite square, and the summit was covered in snow. We found the depth 1,275 fathoms, the surface water was 32 1/2, only half a degree above freezing point for fresh water, and from this depth we brought up living specimens, the best being a large prawn, and a curious sharp-snouted fish about a foot long, and of a sort (249) hitherto unknown. We passed another large iceberg quite close the same night. On the 12th we were in latitude 62°, 40' S. and sighted several more icebergs; one we passed quite near which looked something like an ironclad ship with a splendid ram in front, it was a beautiful blue color, and the summit was frosted with snow, giving it the appearance of a lion's mane. There was an opening in its centre large enough for a ship to sail through, but the two, apparently separate masses, were joined together beneath the water.

According to Commodore Maury only one-tenth of a large iceberg appears above the water, so the weight and total extent of some of those we have seen must be enormous.

Great quantities of small ice was floating in the wake of this iceberg, which would have been invaluable to us had we wanted (250) any fresh water; for, you doubtless know when salt water is at freezing point, the salt sinks to the bottom, and the water frozen is fresh, and when thawed, fit to drink. Captain Cook obtained several supplies when he was down here. 27.2° is the freezing point for salt water at rest, but if in motion 25.5 is the average, this varies according to the degree of saltness. A strong under current drifts the icebergs to the north from 5 to 8 miles a day, and the prevailing westerly winds also drives them to the east, so that their course is about N.E.

By the time they arrive at latitude 50°S, they meet with a very warm under current from the Indian Ocean, which rapidly melts them beneath the water, and as soon as the submerged part is lighter than that above the surface, they topple over, and either sink or break up into small pieces. They seldom (251) reach farther than latitude 40°S, although they have been found as high as the Cape, latitude 34°S. Those in the Arctic Ocean generally drift down to latitude 50°N, where they are met off the banks of Newfoundland, by the warm current of the Gulf Stream which very soon settles them. Those banks have been formed of earth, rocks, etc., which the icebergs bear away with them from the land, and the sea above them gets shallower every year. The vapour which this icy current causes to rise from the Gulf Stream is the cause of the general fog to be met with off Newfoundland. The same meeting of the warm current from the Indian Ocean with the Antarctic current, cause those divers fogs we found off Prince Edward's, Marion, Crozets and Kerguelen Islands. After we were in lat 60°S, we lost those brave westerly (252) winds, and are now in a region of light wind and calm; if it were not for the very cold weather we could fancy ourselves in the tropics. On the 13th we passed numbers of icebergs, and on the preceding night nearly ran into one during a snow squall, nearly all the sail is taken in for the night on account of the icebergs, the latitude was 65°, 15' south and the weather mild for the region, and we began to think we were going to the South Pole. But during the same night we ran into the great outer ice barrier, for some distance, and had a job to get out again and as soon as we did the ship hove to until morning. Her course was much impeded by the great lumps of floating ice, and the roar they made against the bows of the vessel during the night, I shall never forget. It was like thunder more than anything else, and the grinding noise woke all who were (253) in their hammocks, and nearly every one was on deck. It was a beautiful sight to see the ship ploughing her way through it, and the light emitted from the ice made it nearly as light as day. This light is called by polar voyagers, the "ice blink". Twilight in these high latitudes lasts until 12 o'clock, and daylight breaks at 1:00 a.m. so there is night in one sense of the word. Of course this is the middle of summer down here, for 7 months in the year the sun is seldom seen above 65°S. The Aurora Australis was visible during the night, and the coruscations of light were much more brilliant than the Aurora Borealis we saw at Halifax. On the 14th over 30 large icebergs were in sight from the deck, and the great ice barrier about 5 miles away looking like lowland covered with snow, and a pale misty light hanging over it. (254) The icebergs were of all shapes and sizes from a Gothic cathedral to a haystack, and varied from 100 to 500 feet in height, and the largest were about 4 square miles in extent. Some had spires to them like churches, others bays and harbours running into them, and many were honeycombed with caverns extending through them in all directions. These had been formed by the restless action of the waves, and through these caves the sea rushed and roared with tremendous force, the spray often rising quite 100 feet alongside the bergs. These caverns were of a dark blue colour, the iceberg itself being of a starch shade. Several of them looked exactly like the Spithead Forts, but the majority were more like haystacks with sloping snow covered roofs. Many of them had great fissures through them, as if they had been stricken with lightning, these rents were of a (255) dark blue colour. Close to the ice barrier we sounded at 1,675 fathoms; the water temperature was 29°, the latitude 66°S. only 30 miles from the Antarctic Circle. After sounding, sail was made to the west along the barrier, in hopes of finding an entrance, the sea was as calm as a fish pond but covered with cakes of ice, the wind was very light, and not much progress made; a new kind of sea bird called the Snow Petrel was first seen on the 14th, they are white, and about as large as a dove, they breed on the icebergs but are never seen below latitude 65°S. On some of the icebergs we saw numbers of penguins, and on one we saw a large rock and some earth, showing that the bergs are formed in bays and harbours near the south pole. The artist made sketches of most of the large icebergs. We passed one on the night of the 14th, which looked something (256) like

Windsor Castle, and had a large cavern through it which showed the daylight on the other side. Nearly all hands were on deck to see it, and one of the men even said, he had often paid a penny in England to see not half such a sight. At midnight it was light enough to see to read, and the sky was still scarlet in the west where the sun had gone down. On Sunday the 15th, we had church in the morning, but only sailed 15 miles. Over 30 icebergs were in sight at once, and no two were alike. The thermometer stood at 27 1/2°, water temperature 29°. During the night we ran into the ice barrier again, but the ship was at once put about, and we sailed out until this morning when we were about 8 miles from it. The barrier extended from east to west as far as the eye could reach, and looked like a marble wall 50 feet high. We saw this (257) morning the largest iceberg we have yet seen, it was about 4 sq. miles in extent, and looked like a piece of ploughed land in winter covered in snow. It was over 500 feet high, and sloped up very gradully; if I can get you some photographs of these bergs will send some. We saw another that was quite blue, it having very recently turned over.

At 9:00 a.m. the sails were furled, and steam got up, and we steamed as far south as the barrier would allow us. The latitude was 66°, 40' S. longitude 78° E. Sail was then made to the west in hopes of finding an entrance to the southward, but the wind was very light and not much progress made. Wine was issued tonight to celebrate our entry within the Antarctic Circle. At present the barrier is still in sight, and we are surrounded by icebergs of all sizes and shapes. There are also any (258) amount of great whales in sight, blowing and having such a game among themselves. It is now 10 p.m. and the sun is still above the horizon, and the sky like fire, giving all the icebergs to the west a scarlet tinge. A fine breeze has just sprung up, but they will have to shorten sail on account of the icebergs. The Captain would have tried to force his way through the barrier, but his instructions from the Admiralty forbad him, and we have only 3 months provisions, and 80 tons of coal remaining in the ship. I hope we shall reach latitude 70°S -- everyone is in good health and spirits, and very few wish to turn back yet; and those who do are recommended by the others to get out and walk. We are all wearing our polar clothing, large caps, with flaps to them to cover the ears and neck, and great jackets, trousers, boots and mitts. I am considered to (259) look like the Shah of Persia in my cap. A great byword among the men at present is "Do you think you shall weather it Bill? Yes, I think I shall go round in her Bob".

Sunday, March 1st, bound to Melbourne, blowing hard. On the 17th of February we were in latitude 65°S and could find no opening in the ice barrier. We sailed through several fields of floating ice, and had some snow squalls; it was one of the coldest days as the wind came from the south pole. On the 18th it was still colder, the thermometer stood at 24° in the shade; salt water froze as it was thrown on the deck, and the surface temperature was 28 1/2°. We passed through more fields of thick floating ice, which shook the ship most terribly as she forced her way through it; her (260) sides leak in several places, and she will require docking at Sydney. Numbers of immense icebergs were passed on that day, one large one looked exactly like the pictures we see of the Coliseum at Rome; another like the great fort at Sheerness, and while we were all gazing at it, one of the natives of that port sang out -- "Change here for Sheerness".

The latitude was 64°, 30', and the longitude 84°E on that day. The Captain finding he could not get a passage through the ice barrier, made sail for Termination Land, a discovery of the United States expedition under Captain Wilkes in 1839-40. This expedition sailed from Sydney for the south, and consisted of 5 ships, but none of them could find their way through the barrier of ice, latitude 67°S was their farthest, about 20 miles beyond us. They discovered a few islands, and (261) this Termination Land. A French expedition came down here at the same time, which consisted of 2 corvettes, but they could not get beyond latitude 66°, 40', where the barrier stopped them. The ships were nearly lost amongst the ice, and only discovered a few islands. Sir James Ross was starting from Tasmania just as the French and Americans were returning; his ships were strongly protected against the ice, and he forced them through the outer barrier which extended for 200 miles, then he found an open sea teeming with whales, and free from icebergs. He reached to latitude 78°, 4' the first year, and wintered in New Zealand; the second year he reached to 78°, 11'S and wintered at the Falkland Islands, the third he reached 71°, 10'S and sailed for England. His ships the "Erebus" and

"Terror" were much damaged, but were repaired and sailed again with Franklin's expedition to the Arctic (262) region. Ross discovered the north magnetic pole, and found the position of the south which is in the interior of a range of mountains discovered by him in Victoria land. A Russian expedition under Bellingshauser penetrated to latitude 73°S and discovered Alexander Land. So we have been as far south as the French and Americans, and have been beaten only by the Russians, and our own countrymen. As some of our men say "We shall be able to talk Antarctic with anyone in England when we get back." On the 19th February we passed numbers of icebergs, looking like the chalk cliffs of Dover; the weather was very cold and the barometer stood at 28.5 inches, lower than in any other part of the world. We sounded that day at 1,650 fathoms and at night passed an immense iceberg, shaped like a castle on the summit of a cliff, and we had to lay to all (263) that night, the icebergs were so numerous. On the 20th we were in latitude 63°, 20'S., longitude 88°E., the thermometer stood at 27°, the barometer at 28.7 inches, decks covered with snow. On the 21st we were obliged to furl the sails and steam as there was no wind, and the sea was quite calm, we were surrounded by immense icebergs, 50 could be counted at once, the ship was steamed within 30 yards of one, and a 9 pounder shot fired at it which brought down tons of ice. On the 22nd, Sunday, there was no wind again, it was like being in the tropics only the weather was freezing. On the 23rd we were on the exact spot marked on the chart as Termination Land, and no sign of land was to be seen; soundings were taken, and the depth was 1300 fathoms which was a certain indication of no land in these high latitudes, for all round Kerguelen and Heards Island, the depth (264) was only about 100 fathoms. We steamed for two days in all directions, but saw nothing but ice, so may conclude that Termination Land has no existence, and the Yankees were deceived by a large iceberg, or well defined cloud. One of our men (quiped) it was low-water when they were down here. On several occasions land has been reported from out mast head, and had it not been for our having steam, we might have marked new lands down on the southern charts; but, although we could all have sworn that we saw land on one occasion, on steaming towards it, it proved to be a peculiar, and remarkably defined vapour cloud. We have passed over several spots marked on the chart as "Indications of Land" without finding any, and I daresay a steam ship would dispel several of the mythical discoveries in this part of the world. We had a magnificant (265) sunset on the 23rd, and 45 icebergs were sighted at once, besides any amount of penguins and whales jumping about all round us. On the 24th we sounded at 1300 fathoms and hove the dredge, when some good specimens were obtained. As soon as the dredge came up, it came on to blow, and all hands were called to make sail for Melbourne. The ship was steamed close under the lee of a large iceberg to allow the topsails to be reefed, and some undercurrent drifted her right on to the berg; the engines were turned full speed astern, but to no purpose and she drifted right on to it; but fortunately struck it very gently, though with sufficient force to carry away the jib boom, dolphin striker, and other head gear. As soon as the ship got free, the wreck was cleared away, and the carpenters set to work to make fresh spars, which took (266) them 2 days, and delayed us about 300 miles. The wind increased to a gale, and it was the coldest day we have had, snowing and freezing all the time; the thermometer stood at 24 degrees, and the wind was fearfully cutting. The latitude was 64°, 15' S. and longitude 95° E. The wind kept increasing, and the ship lay to under bare poles, the fog came on so thickly that nothing could be seen 50 yards ahead, and the snow was blinding. At three p.m., a large iceberg was discovered drifting right on to us; the hands were called to make sail, but by the time they got on deck the berg was only about 20 yards from us, and rose right above the ships masts. The confusion was something fearful nearly every one was on deck, it was snowing and blowing hard all the time; one officer was yelling out one order, and another something else. The engines were steaming full speed astern, and by hoisting (267) the main topsail, the ship shot past it in safety. A seaman fell from the trysail while they were hoisting it, and was much hurt. The gale still increased, and the fog was thick, three men were kept on the look-out all day and night. During that night the ship was put about 9 times to keep her clear of the icebergs. On the 25th there was 1/2 an inch of ice all over the outside of the ship, and while she was forcing her way through a large field of floating ice, the artist sketched her from a boat. It came on to blow again that night, and most of the sails had to be furled as there were such numbers of icebergs about. While furling a boy fell from the lower rigging overboard; the life boat was manned, but was not required as he had caught a stray rope and was hauled on board unhurt, but half frozen. On the 26th were in latitude 63°S. and (268) longitude 94°E. and there were plenty of icebergs to be seen. The new jib boom etc., was got out that day and re-rigged. We also sounded at 1,975 fathoms and hove the trawl, obtaining some rarities. It was the greatest depth since leaving the Cape, and a series of bottom temperatures were also taken which showed a warmer current beneath than at the surface. It came on to blow a regular gale that night, with snow, and a thick fog. The icebergs were so numerous that the Captain thought it would be safer to lie to, under the lee of a large one, than to drift with the wind; so for six hours we did so, until the wind shifted and blew us away from it. The ship was knocked about frightfully during the night by the great rolling seas, and everyone was glad when morning appeared. It was considered the worst and most dangerous night we have had, and the Captain never (269) left the deck for hours. Almost all the men's crockery was broken, and many messes used Australian meat tins for basins. Although we were all eager to see an iceberg, we are just as anxious to lose them now, it is so dangerous sailing these foggy nights with such masses of destruction all round us. On the 27th it cleared up a little, and we passed numbers more, one tabular-shaped was three miles in length, and was the very largest we have seen. Yesterday it blew very hard and snowed a good deal, and we only ran 60 miles. If you give your finger a slight cut, or knock, in these cold latitudes it takes weeks to get better. Today, Sunday, we ran 150 miles; we are in latitude 58°S., longitude 102°, 50' E. weather rather warmer; thermometer standing at 35°, we have passed several icebergs but expect they will be the last. We shall sail all night after this, and shall soon (270) get into the belt of westerly winds, we are only 2000 miles from Melbourne today, and expect to be there by the 15th March, the day I told you some time ago. We had church this morning as usual, and at present - 7:00 p.m. - the ship is sailing 10 knots per hour. I have got much thinner this trip, finding I have lost 12 lbs. since leaving England.

Sunday, March 8th - 960 miles from Melbourne, but a head wind.

On the 2nd March we ran 118 miles but ran nearly into a large iceberg during the night in a fog. We were going 9 knots per hour at the time and as soon as it was seen, the helm was put hard down, and the ship shot past it close enough to allow a biscuit to be thrown on to it, and had we struck it the ship would have gone down stern first; some of the men got so timid of them, that they used to remain up all night (271) in case the ship ran into one. For my part, although I always slept as soundly as in harbour, I don't care if I never see an iceberg again, except in a picture, as some of our men say - "We have had our whack of them". On that day we caught the brave westerly counter trades - the best winds for sailing to be found anywhere. Australian Clipper ships coming across here in the depth of winter have been known to average 334 knots per day, for eight days; one famous clipper the "James Bains" with a gale of wind behind her ran 420 knots, or 462 miles in the 24 hours. On the 3rd we ran 119 miles, and furled sails for trawling, etc., the depth was 2000 fathoms, the deepest since we left the Cape. It brought up some beautiful specimens, fish of the most brilliant colours and curious forms. On the 4th at 1 a.m., we had a splendid display of the Aurora Australis, and turned out of my roost (272) to see it; the flashes of light varied in colour, being white, orange, yellow and purple. It was a magnificant sight, tho' rather chilly the way I was dressed. We only ran 40 miles that day, but on the 5th, 175 miles and on the 6th 224; on the 7th 177 in 17 hours, when we sounded at 1800 fathoms and obtained some fine specimens in the trawl, notably a transparent star fish, that looked like red silk velvet. The creature's heart could be seen beating and some young ones inside it with the naked eye. Some curious fish with long tails like rats were brought up. We ran 120 miles today, but have a head wind, and only 40 tons of coal on board; unles the wind changes the Captain will put into Hobart Town for coal. The last two icebergs were passed on the 4th. Today we are 960 miles from Melbourne in latitude 48°S. and longitude 130°E.

Monday - March 16th - off King's Island, (273) 110 miles from Melbourne. As the wind shifted on the 9th we did not put into Hobart Town. Should have been there before this only had two days trawling - depth about 2,500 fathoms, much deeper than any since leaving the Cape, and some rare specimens were obtained. It is much warmer now, the thermometer at 70°in the shade, and the days much shorter, it being dark again now at 7 p.m. Yesterday at our church service, the Captain returned thanks for our safe delivery from the recent dangers in the ice country. We sighted a ship last night; the first for 13 weeks, except the whalers. We left the Cape, December 17th and shall arrive at Melbourne March 17th, three months to the day. We are now off King's Island, 20 miles from Cape Otway; it is about the size of Marion Island. There was a large passenger ship lost on it about 10 years ago, the passengers reached (274) here in safety, and were soon relieved from Melbourne. A child was born on the island the same night the ship was lost. As soon as they see us from Cape Otway they will telegraph to Melbourne, and thence to England, so that owing to the 10 hours difference of time, they will know there before Melbourne (according to the clock).

I hear the mail leaves to-morrow and on arriving at Melbourne hope to be reading some of your home news.

Concluding this long form
Believe Me
Faithfully yours,
Joe Matkin.

HMS "Challenger"
Hobson's Bay
March 25, 1874

Dear Tom:

The mail came on board the same evening we anchored, and brought me 7 letters, 8 newspapers, etc. I enclose you a splendid specimen of the aboriginal ladies of this country; who neither wears chignon or bustle as you'll see, still she has good pints about her, and in summer her dress is even less expensive than at present, as it is the fall of the year. However, I should like the ladies opinion before I commit myself, and its just possible I may be able to find a handsomer sort at New Zealand or the South Sea Islands, and one that a'int so (276) fond of dress. The first news we heard on arrival here was that Tichborne had 14 years. I think he has been dealt too leniently with, many better men than he have been hung for much smaller offences. We also heard of Bazaine's conviction and sentence, and of the conclusion of the Ashantee War. The English cricketers went home the day before we arrived, they were beaten on one or two occasions, and I believe quarrelled between themselves on money matters. I was very sorry to hear of Mr. Blackwood's death, my last letter from him I received at Lisbon. Soon after we anchored, two gentlemen came on board to see me; one an old schoolfellow at Oakham, he is a Draper, and lives 200 miles up the country, had come down to buy goods and wanted (277) me to return with him for a few days, which I could not manage, but spent two days with him and a friend of his at Melbourne, who was a Danish gentleman and had a great dislike to Germans, but admired the English because they were beaten at Copenhagen, under Nelson, and on other occasions. We went about Melbourne a good deal and I visited all my old favorite haunts and walks. It has increased wonderfully but must tell you more about it in my next letter. I also went out to Brunswick, three miles distant, to see some old colonial friends that were very kind to me when I was out here before. They are an elderly married couple, very well off, and I can go and live with them whenever I am ashore; I am going on Sunday (278) to dinner. They are never tired of hearing about our voyage and Mrs. Appleby has been all over the ship. The have been out here 20 years, and made a lot of money, and are soon coming back to England to spend the remainder of their days, but are first going to France and Italy excursioning, etc. They come from the neighbourhood of Ely, and have been home once for 18 months, and came out again with me in the "Essex", where I first made their acquaintance.

Enclosed is my portrait taken here. Until July 16th -- address Singapore, China.

Yours sincerely,

Joe Matkin.

HMS "Challenger"

Sydney, April 10, 1874

Dear Tom:

The English mail arrived here today from Melbourne and brought me only one letter from yourself dated February 6th. A mail leaves to-morrow for England via San Francisco and the Pacific Railway, and think it will reach England within a week of the last, posted a fortnight ago. We remained in Melbourne until April 1st and arrived here on the 6th, the distance is 580 miles, but we were sounding and dredging as we came along. I enjoyed myself very much in Melbourne, spent two or three days on shore with my old friends at Brunswick (280). We had such numbers of visitors on board before we left. The Officers gave a dance party on the 28th, over a hundred ladies and gentlemen came off. Our men say Melbourne is the finest place in the world, they were so well treated by the people; the railway authorities gave them free passes for travelling up the country. Many went up to Ballarat, the great gold mining metropolis and 6 of them never came back. I spent a fortnight there, when out here before, it is a fine town, over 90,000 inhabitants and is 100 miles from Melbourne. We read an account of the university boat race in the Monday papers after the event. On the 30th, two seamen tried to escape from the ship to the shore in one of the boats, but they were recaptured and are now in irons waiting court martial. On the 31st, I had to (281) go up with the paymaster to Melbourne to fetch £800 from one of the banks to pay the ship's company. We left on the 1st of April and sailed and steamed round; we sighted the coast nearly all the way and passed several small islands. The coast is moderately high, and wholly covered in forest, very unlike the African coast. We passed several ships and sounded once within 15 miles of the land at a depth of 2375 fathoms, 5 miles nearer the depth was 100 fathoms. This was our first sounding in the Pacific ocean.

We spent our Good Friday and Easter Sunday at sea, so you may be sure we were not over comfortable. The German frigate "Arcona" came round with us and arrived a few hours earlier. We entered Sydney Heads at 1 p.m. Easter Monday, and at 2:00 p.m. dropped anchor in Farm Cove, close to the "Arcona" and (282) HMS "Dido". It is 9 miles from the Heads to Sydney, and the scenery down the bay is magnificent, and the harbour of Sydney is justly considered one of the finest in the world. There are so many bays and creeks branching off from Botany Bay, which afford fine shelter for shipping. There are several small islands close to the town, on one of them there is a large suburb like New York and Brooklyn and steamers cross every few minutes. We are lying nearly a mile from Sydney and can't see much of it, but are within a stone's throw of the public park, in a fine bay reserved for the anchorage of men of war only. When we came in on Easter Monday, the park was crowded with people holiday making, picnicing, etc. The ladies saluted us bravely with their handkerchiefs and we were soon surrounded with pleasure (283) boats. The houses here are older than at Melbourne and the place has a more English appearance. Some parts of the harbour are very similar to that at Plymouth. This bay is not one fourth as large as Hobson's Bay, but much better sheltered being perfectly land-locked, we are unable to see the sea from where we are lying, but there is a fine view of the Pacific from the highlands of the town. The shores of the bay are covered with forest and park, with residences of the gentry peeping pleasantly out between the trees. There are some splendid merchant ships here; the famous China Clipper "Thermopylea" is at anchor. She ran from London to Melbourne in 58 days, and in one 24 hours ran 420 miles, but the finest and largest merchant vessel we can see is a new one, the "Samuel Plimsole" (284) from London. I have not been on shore yet, but am going for 2 or 3 days next week. All our men who have been, say that is inferior in every way to Melbourne. One watch is now on four days leave and returns on Monday next and on Tuesday the ship goes in dry dock at Cockatoo Island for some time and expect we shall lose more men during our stay. The weather is very hot although winter is coming on, the thermometer standing at 80° in the shade, but in the summer months Sydney is often cooler than Melbourne and Adelaide. I am anxiously looking out for English papers containing the termination of the Tichborne trial, the people here always thought him an imposter and rogue.

You will receive this by the end of May and if you write at once, and (285) address Sydney, it will be forwarded to us at the Fiji Islands. Put "elsewhere" on it, and its bound to reach us sometime. One of our men has his letters addressed "Challenger" voyage round the world (or elsewhere). After the middle of June until the latter end of July, address Singapore, and it will reach us at Somerset, Cape York, by the end of August. After leaving New Zealand, the Fijis, New Caledonia, etc., we stand west towards Torres Straits and New Guinea, calling at Cape York, the most northerly point of Australia, further particulars in my next.

Yours sincerely,

Joseph Matkin.

HMS "Challenger"
Sydney, May 15, 1874

Dear Tom:

I have only received a "Daily News" from you since last I wrote, and expect no more letters before we reach New Zealand. The mail that takes this starts tomorrow for Melbourne and England, being the last one homeward bound before we leave, the date for which at present is May 27th, but it will probably be later. We shall be 14 days going to New Zealand, as we have to take a line of soundings across the Pacific from Sydney to Wellington or Auckland, for a cable to be laid this year if possible.

(287) We have taken in 230 tons of coal and at present all hands are busy filling up with provisions, coaling, etc., to last us to Hong Kong, where we are to arrive the 2nd of November. We have lost about 24 men since we arrived in this country and only three have been recaptured. Two were tried by court martial today for desertion, and each sentenced to 12 months imprisonment, the third one only got 90 days. There are 3 men of war here now; our ship, the "Dido" and the "Pearl" -- Flag ship of Commodore Goodenough, which has just come from the Fiji Islands, now under British protection. The French man of war, the "Cher" is also close to us, she came in on Sunday morning from New Caledonia to make enquiries concerning Rochefort, and the other three communist prisoners who (288) escaped from there a few weeks ago and landed here. Our officers gave a grand ball on shore the other night to the nobility, etc. of Sydney, and tomorrow our ship's company are invited to a Tea meeting and Temperance lecture at the Masonic Hall on shore. The Tea meeting will be a great success, but the lecture won't allure many towards the teetotal brethren. Your letter addressed Sydney will reach me at New Zealand or the Fiji Islands, and I shall write you from both places. I have been on shore here several times, but don't like the place so well as Melbourne. I have seen some fine buildings, including the Governor's House, new post office, town hall, university, museum and Protestant Cathedral, the bells of which are very much like ours at Oakham; the building is a (289) very pretty one, the windows are all of stained glass and the organ cost 1500 pounds. The sittings are all free, but there is an offertory after each service. It is soon full after the doors are opened, and the lady part of the attendance dress very smartly and fashionably.

The children of Australia are not such strong healthy looking children as the English, but the colony of Victoria is healthier than New South Wales. They are very fast children generally, much like the American juveniles, but speak better English here, although they call a cow, a keow. We were only 5 days in dry dock at Cockatoo Island, as the ship's bottom was in very good condition; the ice did us but little damage, and when a ship sails through water of such varying (290) temperatures no barnacles or other secretions can accumulate on her bottom.

An English bargue (sic) arrived here the other day with the Captain's wife lying dead on board, having died the day before the ship came in -- in childbirth.

Professor Thompson and some of the scientific party are gone to Brisbane for a three week tour into the interior of Queensland. The rainy season or winter has commenced here, but it is quite as hot during the day as summer in England. We have had some magnificent sunsets here for the last month, and for rainbows I never saw a place like Sydney. A fine iron vessel called the "City of Benares" sailed hence yesterday for London, via Cape Town, but should not care to have taken the voyage in her, as (291) she was laden deeper than any ship I ever saw and it is the worst time of year for doubling the Horn.

The fine ship "Samuel Plimsole" sailed for London a fortnight ago. She is supposed to be a faster vessel than the "Themopyla". Wigram's fine steam ship "Northumberland" arrived at Melbourne last week from Plymouth in 51 days, 18 hours, via the Cape of Good Hope, which is faster than the mail boats do it from Southampton via Suez. Our officers have been feted a great deal since we came here, but the men have not been so well treated as they were at Melbourne. We have had the Governor and any amount of visitors on board, but we shall all be glad to get to sea again for a change. We shall have been nearly 8 weeks here before we leave for (292) New Zealand where we do not stay long. The time slips away very quickly with us, it seems as if we shall be in England again in almost less than no time. It takes us a rare lot of cash, which one is unable to see the wonders of the world without spending, and some more will have to fly in purchasing curiosities at Japan. Most of our men have drawn their money out of the ship's savings bank since we arrived here and talk of commencing afresh after leaving New Zealand. Until July 30th address Singapore, via Southampton. I expect it will be Hong Kong after August, and to Manilla I don't think there is any mail.

Your Sincerely,

Joe Matkin.

HMS "Challenger"
South Pacific
June 21, 1874

Dear Tom:

Your last letter reached me on the 2nd June, which was dated March 9th, and must have been delayed in England for some time, for the paper you sent on the 4th of April reached me on May 22nd.

We left Sydney at 4 p.m. on the 8th June for Wellington distant 1180 miles, S by E and we were to take a careful line of soundings across; to sound every two hours in the shallow water, for the cable that is to be laid from Sydney to New Zealand next year. We are still 25 men short of (294) complement, although we shipped 8 new hands as stokers, cooks, etc., and took those out of prison that were sentenced to three months for deserting. There was quite a crowd of people on the wharves and shores of the harbour to see us depart, and as we steamed past the "Dido" and "Pearl", their crews mounted the rigging and cheered us while their bands played "Auld Lang Syne". Our men returned the cheers and our band gave 'em "The Girl I Left Behind Me". We had been nine weeks in Sydney and were getting tired of it.

Until March 1875 our address will be Singapore, the letters to be forwarded from there to wherever we are; mails leave England every fortnight, so you can't make much mistake. We do not expect to be home before July /76 as we are a month behind time already. The Melbourne (295) Illustrated paper for June 13th had a picture of our ship at Kerguelen's Land and also amongst the ice. They were taken from our photographs, but have not been able to get you any of them, but daresay you will see the same pictures in the London papers. On the 9th of June we sounded in sight of Sydney Heads at 50 fathoms and 75 fathoms but a gale sprang up that night which stayed any further sounding and obliged us to run back and anchor in Watson's Bay for two days until the weather moderated. On the 12th we started again and sounded several times from 70 to 900 fathoms, on the 13th sounded from 400 to 700, and ran back to the land to verify the line of soundings. On the 14th (Sunday) it blew very hard and was too rough for church, but not for sounding the Captain (296) thought, so he sounded at 2275 fathoms, about 2 3/4 miles, the sea had deepened nearly two miles in that run of 40 miles. In hauling in the line 1500 fathoms were carried away which the men attributed to sounding on the Sabbath and not having had any surveying wine lately. The same night it came on a regular gale, the upper yards were sent down and everything prepared for it, the cutter was stove in and the patent life buoy carried away by a heavy sea in the night and a good deal of the men's crockery broken.

This life buoy is a new patent, there is a place for the man to put his feet in if he understands it and can reach it and a receptacle for 7 days provisons, and on being let go by means of a common bell handle and wire, a magnesium light ignites and burns for 20 minutes, water not affecting it. We (297) had only that one, though we have several old fashioned buoys. On the 15th it was rough, but on the 16th, we sounded at 2550 fathoms and carried away 2500 in hauling in, which line costs 9 d per fathom. On the 17th the depth was 2700 fathoms -- over 3 miles, and we obtained a few living specimens in the dredge. On the 18th and 19th it was a dead calm, and we had to steam -- depth 2600 fathoms. To-day, Sunday, we had no church again as it was too rough, but we sounded at 1975 fathoms -- nearly a mile shallower since yesterday. It is now blowing hard and the barometer falling.

Saturday night, June 27th.

Anchored under Long Island, Cook's Straits. Last Sunday night the gale increased and the foretop mast staysail was carried away. The ship stood it first rate, it was a frightful (298) night, every now and then a heavy sea would strike the ship and make her quiver again. On the 22nd, it cleared a little and we sounded at 1100 fathoms, a difference of two miles in a run of about 80. On the 23rd we sailed 141 miles and sounded at 275 fathoms only, (another mile shallower). We were then 240 miles from the nearest land, Cape Farewell, N. Zealand. From there to Cape Farewell the depth varied from 450 to 45 fathoms. At 1 p.m. on the 24th we sighted Mount Egmont 65 miles distant. It is 8200 feet high and of course was covered in snow, as it is midwinter here, still there is no snow on hills under 3000 feet high. The wind is frightfully cutting and we all are wearing our winter clothing.

There are several mountains in New Zealand over 8,000 feet high; the highest Mount Cook, is 13,200 feet above sea level, and is a fine landmark (299) for ships. The 2 large and 5 or 6 small islands of New Zealand are nearly as large as Great Britain and Ireland together, and most of the land is cultivable. There are only about 8 towns larger than Oakham, the 4 largest are Dunedin and Christchurch on the south island, and Wellington and Auckland on the north. Dunedin is the youngest and most go ahead place, there are some rich gold diggings there about.

Christchurch was formerly the capital and a nice English sort of town I am told. It gave place to Auckland, which although the largest place was superseded by Wellington on account of its more central position, which is at the south point of the North island, and Auckland is 580 miles north of it by water and Dunedin 630 miles. There are under 300,000 white people on N.Z. as yet (300) so there is plenty of room for emigrants. There are 40,000 Maories partly civilized left now, and all are on the North Island except 1,000 who are scattered about the south. They speak the same language as the South Sea Islanders, but were intermixed ages ago with the Papuans of New Guinea, who are supposed to have come from some of the Polynesian Islands about the year 1550. This supposition is borne out by their own traditions and war songs, which relate how they sailed here in their canoes and conquered and exterminated the original natives; with the names of their chiefs. The original natives were probably of the same race as the aboriginals of Australia. The Maories are the finest and bravest race of savages in the world and are good seamen. Although they were cannibals they lived in houses and tilled the ground when Cook (301) visited and explored the island in 1776.

On the 25th June at 1 p.m. we were close into the land and as it came on to blow, and we could not get through Cook's Straits, the ship was anchored in Amnesty Bay on the South Island. The coast was mountainous and something like Kerguelen's, especially coming through the Straits, except the hills being covered in forest. We had to remain all day on the 26th, caught lots of fish and got plenty of fine shell fish from the rocks. This morning at 3 a.m. the anchor was got up and we steamed out of the Bay for Wellington, distant 45 miles. We found the wind and sea as rough as ever on getting outside and the wind was right in our teeth. In 8 hours we only steamed 20 miles and were obliged to run under the lee of Long Island, and anchor until the weather moderated.

(302) We passed lots of islets and rocks today and the coast looks frightfully bleak and wild, the mountains on each side are covered in snow. The straits are about 20 miles wide just here and there is a fearful sea running. The Captain is in a great hurry to reach Wellington but the men are not while this weather lasts, and until further orders would rather lie here nice and snug catching fish. When we left the Cape on our long voyage we had 280 tons of coal, and had 10 tons left when we reached Melbourne. On leaving Sydney we had 220 tons and have burnt it all but 10, so what with the coal and the sounding line carried away, this will be a very expensive trip.

Sunday Night, June 28th, at Wellington.

The passage is over at last and so is the long voyage for one poor fellow who was drowned at 12 o'clock today, while everyone else was dining (303) in comparative comfort, drowned in broad daylight, whilst performing his duty and not one of us to see him go, or to throw him a life buoy; the ship went steaming on for Wellington, and he to his last long home.

Although it was blowing as hard as ever this morning, and a frightful sea running, the Captain had the anchor got up and started full speed on the last 25 miles of the journey. We had no church as it was too rough. The ship was cutting an awful caper but still riding like a duck on the water, the fore and aft sails were set and as the water is shallow in the straits a leadsman was in the chains sounding. At 10 o'clock we passed a dismantled ship at anchor under the lee of the land and at 12 o'clock they piped dinner. The officers then go to lunch, and all the rest of the (304) ship's company to dinner, except the lieutenant in charge of her, the 4 men steering, the leadsman and the boatswain's mate. The leadsman stands on a platform outside the ship to heave the lead. Just after the crew went to dinner, the man sounding got his lead and line fouled round the anchor, and was seen to climb up to clear it by a marine. Just at that time a frightful sea struck and broke over the fore part of the ship shaking her from stem to stern. It capsized lots of plates and basins on the mess deck, but only caused a general laugh; one facetious fellow said: "who's that knocking at the door", and another told the sea to "come in", that was all that occurred there, but on the upper deck the sea had come in and gone out again taking with it the poor leadsman from off the anchor, in all his thick winter clothing, sea boots and oilskins. Then the ship righted (305) herself again and went ploughing away for some 10 minutes; at the expiration of that time, the marine who saw the man go out to clear his line, happened to look out of the port and saw the line still round the anchor, but no leadsman there, when he ran and told the lieutenant of the watch, who at once informed the Captain and Commander; the Captain telegraphed the engine room to stop and all hands were called to put the ship about, and in 2 minutes she was steaming fast back over the original track. Some of the officers went aloft with glasses and nearly every soul in the ship was in the rigging looking out for some sign of him. After a few minutes some dark object was seen right ahead and about a dozen sang out, "there he is, right ahead", but on steaming up it proved to (306) be only seaweed, and nothing more of the poor fellow was seen. The ship then stood on again for Wellington and we dropped anchor half an hour ago, about half a mile from the town. The deceased Edward Winton was one of the finest and steadiest seamen in the ship, was about 25 years old and married just before we left England. He was an excellent swimmer, but had on an enormous lot of clothes, and no one knows whether he was stunned against the ship's side by the sea, or he might have been struck by the fans of the screw as he drifted under the stern. No boat could have lived in the sea that was running but the ship could have steamed up close enough to throw him a rope, had he been seen. No blame attaches to anyone.

June 30th. We have just made a subscription (307) on the lower deck for the widow of the poor fellow, and £20 were obtained from the crew alone, and I daresay the officers will raise another £30.

There were no letters here for us.

The Bay of Wellington is something like Table Bay, and the place is not unlike Cape Town. It is about as large as Stamford, but the houses are mostly of wood and it is as dirty as Halifax. Meat is 3d per lb and is better than the Australian; provisions are generally cheap, but rent and clothes are very dear. We are now coaling to last us to the Fiji Islands, and I hear we are not going to Auckland being so much behind time.

July 1.

The English mail has just arrived and brought me 3 letters, two from yourself, the last dated May 4th and addressed Auckland. It has not been long on the way and is the latest news I have from England. (308) We shall be at the Fiji islands about the 1st August and shall write you from there; they are in the tropics, the distance is 1250 miles, so we shall soon be in warm weather again. Any later letters you have written will be kept there until we arrive, or if after we have gone, they will be forwarded to Cape Yorke, Australia.

I have not been on shore yet, but am going on Friday. We expect to leave here on Monday the 6th, and will tell you more about the place in my next letter.

I have not yet told you of the loss of the "British Admiral" on King's island close to Melbourne. It has happened since we left there and 80 lives were lost.

Meat, potatoes, flour and bread are cheap here but clothes, house rent and drink are very dear. (309)

Wages are even better than in Australia, but are not so steady; a jobbing man won't work under 8 (shillings) per day and mechanics, etc., get 12 (shillings); still there are plenty of idlers and loafers from England, America, and Australia, some are continually travelling about to the different Australian colonies, and never work for a week together. After we leave the Fijis you will not get a letter for 2 months. We shall be dredging round the Malayan Islands and Polynesia, until March /76, when we go to Japan. The letters must be addressed Singapore and the Consul or other authorities there will forward them by private ships to wherever we are.

Yours faithfully,

Joe Matkin.

HMS "Challenger"
Tongatabu, Friendly Islands (now Tonga)
July 23, 1874

Dear Tom:

We are now with the savages of Polynesia, so will write up our adventures amongst them. We have only 210 men on board now, instead of 244, for we lost 6 more men at Wellington. I think I told you of my going on shore there, and what a dull place it is compared to Melbourne or Sydney. I saw some of the Maories and they are exactly like these natives, though more savage in their manner and appearance through being tattoed. We left Wellington on the 6th for these islands, distant about 1250 miles, N by E. (311) We kept close into the New Zealand coast for three days, sighting Poverty Bay and the East Cape, but we did not go to Auckland, as we were so much behind time. Our greatest depth thus far has been 2925 fathoms, and this is the deepest since we left the North Atlantic. Some wonderful marine curiosities, sponges, coral, etc., have been obtained in the dredge and trawl net. We passed the 180th degree of longitude on the 10th when the difference of time was exactly 12 hours between us and you. As we are losing time again now by going back towards Australia, we did not have the usual extra day but shall have it between Japan and Vancouver. We passed through the Kermadec group of islands on the 14th and sounded off Sunday Island, but did not land. They looked fertile, but don't think (312) they are inhabited. On Sunday 19th we sighted Eoa, the first island of this group, and after coming up to it sighted Tongatabu and anchored there at 1 p.m. This group received the name of Friendly Islands from Captain Cook, who was the first to communicate with the natives, but Tasman the Dutch navigator discovered them in 1642. They are just inside the tropics and extend from 300 miles each way. There are over 150 islands of all sizes but only about 30 are inhabited. The total population is 25,000 and Tongatbu is the largest island and the residence of the king. It is about as large as St. Thomas, but much more level, and its population is about 5000, and there are some 30 or 40 white people from Australia and New Zealand who are carpenters, coopers, bakers, traders, etc., and also a few missionaries.

(313) There are about 50 small islands in sight from here, they look like small gardens afloat, some are scarcely out of the water and not 10 feet above the water's edge. You seem to step out of the ocean into a paradise. There are several islands not as large as your back garden, but they are covered with vegetation down to the water's edge, Palm trees and bananas principally. Of course there are no inhabitants on these little oases, and it was suggested by one of our forecastle philosophers that the Captain should serve out an island to each man who cared for one, and after providing him with a wife, some rum and tobacco, leave him for the remainder of his days in virtuous retirement. We found 3 large American whale boats at anchor here, waiting a week or two until the humpbacked whales arrive, and they can commence their fishing season. They are after the sperm whales, and have no such hardships to undergo as those whalemen down at Kerguelen's Land, after the cold water whale. Several (314) boats of natives came out to meet us and we towed them in with us. They were fine able-bodied looking men of a light copper colour, almost red, and they had black curly hair standing up straight from the head. This they dye with a sort of lime until it is of the same colour and as stiff as tarry oakum. They were naked but as soon as they were fairly alongside, they put on a white linen sheet that reached from the waist to the knees, with great satisfaction and complacency. They could speak a little English and asked for tobacco. They looked over the ship and seemed much struck with the engines and the steam, for they don't (315) often see a steam ship at these islands. There was an Englishman in the boat with them, who does a sort of small export trade with any shipping that may call. He informed the Captain that King George had an Englishman imprisoned on one of the small islands for attempting to murder a native whilst drunk and that the King was waiting for a ship of war to arrive and try him, so our Captain investigated the matter and ordered the man to be sent to New Zealand or Australia at the first opportunity. He had been 5 years on the island and came from Yorkshire. The natives told us they would bring off fruit, etc., on Monday but they never traded on the Sabbath Day and always go twice to church. Some of our men told them they were "fools and should trade whenever they could get the chance", and were answered by the heathens, "You (316) no good, you too much devil, you no missionary". Well, on Monday morning swarms of canoes came alongside to trade. The canoe is made out of the hollow tree, and has a log framework to balance it on the lee side. There are generally two natives in it -- one on the bows and another in the stern who paddles, in it there is a large bunch of bananas, a basket of cocoanuts, one of limes, one of lemons, one of figs and another of shells, coral, etc., a few fowls, and in the centre of the lot, a small black and very quiet pig, which gentleman makes no noise and looks as if he had come out for a cruise in his own trough. The natives asked a shilling for each article and basket of fruit, etc., upon hearing which, the sailors cursed the missionaries and said they would soon (317) spoil the whole world, some of them were expecting to pass buttons for money, and think of getting to some islands by and by, where they can buy pearls, etc., for beads, and where a cold missionary is always kept on the table. However, as the natives didn't know the difference between a 3d piece and half a crown, things might have been worse they said. Only when the small money began to get scarce, the poor ignorant savages would not give change at the usual rate -- not 10 3d pieces for half a crown. I bought a large bunch of bananas, some melons, shells, etc., a fish hook made out of a shark's tooth for 3d, a paper collar and an old tie. About 50 native priests and instructors came on board on Monday and were very partial to collars and ties, they were dressed in the most grotesque rigs imaginable, some had old black (318) suits too large for them, relics of departed missionaries, some had a coat and a sheet, others a pair of trousers and sheet, and several had college caps but none shoes or stockings, and each had some little article to trade with.

Photographs of the native men and women were taken on Monday. The ship's band also landed and played selections outside the King's palace to the great delight of the whole island. Last night the chief missionary, the Rev. Baker (Wesleyan), his wife and 2 daughters, the three American whaling captains and their wives, and the King's 2nd son came on board and dined with our officers.

King George, who is nearly 80 years old, and his eldest son governs the northern island. The other son was a fine looking man, over six feet, he was dressed in European costume and could speak good English, and also play the harmonium and violin. He played and sang some (319) sacred hymns, to our officers and the whaling captains' great delight. The missionary seems to have more power than the King and is more looked up to; his cottage is a very pretty one, the best on the island. The royal palace is built of wood, with a thatched roof, and is one story high, and looks very much like a large stable. I went on shore yesterday afternoon and had a long walk inland. There is no landing place and you have to be carried on shore from the boat. The island is like an enormous garden covered with palm trees, etc., and overrun with a jungle of creepers and tropical vegetation. The roads are like the green avenues in our woods at home, only shaded with the palms. There are no rocks or stones but the ground is covered with sea-shells right inland, showing that these islands have not existed above the ocean for many hundred years. It was (320) a very hot afternoon and I had on my straw hat. Water is very scarce, the natives seem to drink cocoanut milk instead, which by climbing the trees you can get as many as you want, or by asking at the huts, which is the easiest plan, as they have the milk ready and it is rather a difficult matter to get the outer shell off a cocoanut. They -- with melons and bananas flourish all the year round -- but oranges and other sorts of fruit are out of season just now for it is mid-winter. Nothing appears to be cultivated, for everything the natives require grows spontaneously and they won't do any regular work for more than 2 days together. They pay a small tax to the King and missionary.

I believe there are some Roman Catholic missionaries on some of the islands, but the two sects are at variance, though they do not actually fight with each other. There are (321) plenty of flies and mosquitos, a few pretty birds, some gorgeous butterflies and lizards, but there are no wild animals or snakes, but any amount of pigs, cats, dogs, horses and fowls, which were originally imported and have greatly increased. There are not many sheep or cattle. We took in one day's fresh beef, but the men threw it away as it was so fat and oily through the cow having been fed on cocoanuts. On the highest point of land, facing the sea, is the principal church. It is built of wood, painted and thatched, is well seated and has a very clean and neat interior and would hold about 800. There is a nice organ and the singing was first rate. There are other places of worship and several schools, etc., which the native teachers instruct under the missionary. Nearly all the younger people can read and a great many write. (322) Some of the young women are very handsome and have fine long black hair, but they get fat as they grow old. They have fine teeth and good figures, and like most ladies are very fond of dress on Sundays. Some of them have silk gowns, in one of the huts I entered the girls were ironing their Sabbath muslins. On week days they wear nothing but the usual sheet, from the waist to the knees, the children wear a palm leaf. They smell rather disagreeably owing to their anointing themselves with cocoanut oil, which is very unpleasant under a tropical sun. This oil is about the only export. Copper money is not taken on the island. The native huts are framed of bamboo and thatched with palm leaves, etc. There is a hole in the roof for the smoke to escape and another in the side to enter by. There is no furniture (323), a few mats to sleep on and some rough cooking utensils. They are very hospitable and delighted if you will come and sit down in their huts, where you generally find the whole family squatted on their hams on the floor and grinning a welcome as you enter. The hostess invariably tells the girls to bring you a cocoanut (a large one holds over a pint of cool milk), and they also give you yams roasted in plantain leaves. It is a large root like an old tree stump to look at, and is like a potato when boiled, and eats between that, an artichoke and a turnip. This and the banana is the principal food of all the South Sea islanders and the natives of many tropical countries. I like bananas as well as any fruit I know and they are wonderfully plentiful in the Tropics. The ladies are very fond of tobacco and I made presents (324) to all those who entertained me. Some years ago the Chief of one of the Polynesian islands offered to sell all his missionaries for a keg of tobacco. The natives invariably ask you if you are a missionary, by which they mean a Christian, and bring you their Bibles and hymn books to look at. They have also almanack for 1874 hanging up in their huts, with local chronological events recorded for each day. All these books are printed in London by the Wesleyan Missionary Society in the native Tongan language.

In these 40 or 50 years the Wesleyans have instructed and civilized the natives of these and many other groups of islands far more than the Roman Catholics have done the negroes of Brazil, and other countries, in the course of 200 years. This island and the people is a credit to them and speaks well for the zeal (325) and care of the missionaries; they do their work thoroughly, and I doubt whether the Church of England missionaries would have made as much progress in the time, but shall be better able to judge when we get to some of the islands under the evangelism of the Established Church. The Wesleyan Missionary Society deserves the support of all denominations in England, and I should think their faith is the simplest and best for these primitive people. They have made great progress with the Maories. We are just outside of Tongatbu now, under sail for Kandavu, Fiji Islands, where we expect letters. There are plenty of flying fish, and several humpbacked whales to be seen. At night the sea is alive with beautiful sparkling phosphorescent creatures invisible to the naked eye, but emitting a bright light, and making the foam look like (326) fire as it is dashed from the ship's bows. The sunrise and sunsets, too, are beautiful in the extreme; more so in the Pacific I believe, than in any other part of the world. We are now in the S. East Trade Winds region and this will be favourable to us until we cross the line in Malaya, and we shall have some 4 or 5 months cruising in the tropics again now.

Sunday, August 2nd, at sea. On the 23rd we passed Turtle Island, and on the 24th stood in to Matuku Island belonging to the Fiji group. It was about 5 miles long, and 3 broad, and some 1200 feet above the sea level. A party of officers and men landed and explored the island. There were about 600 natives on it and like those of all the Fiji Islands, they are black and ugly. They are not to be compared to (327) the Friendly Islanders in strength or disposition, and have a fierce, morose look about them and there is more New Guinea blood in their veins than in the Maories or Tongans. On the 25th we arrived at Kandavu and found that our letters had been sent on to Levuka. Kandavu is an island about 29 miles long and 6 broad, and some 1500 feet above the sea level, and pretty fertile, though mountainous. There are not many natives on it and only a few white people. There is no town to speak of, but as there is a pretty good harbour, formed by a cay reef extending across the entrance and acting as a breakwater. The San Francisco mail boats call here for coal, and are met by the branch mail boat from Sydney and New Zealand. These mail boats, will I expect, eventually make Levuka their place (328) of call. We remained two days at Kandavu surveying, etc., and sailed on the 27th for the island of Obalan, distant 120 miles. We arrived the next day and anchored off Levuka, the capital of the Fiji group and received our letters -- old ones from Sydney. Obalan is about as large as Kandavu and mountainous.

The Fiji group numbers over 220 islands; the two largest are 300 miles in circumference and there are several larger than Tongatbu. Of course they are all in the tropics and vegetation is remarkably luxuriant. The bread fruit, banana, plantain, arrowroot, nutmeg, capsicum, teaplant and sugar cane will all grow here, but the first three, with the coocanut are the principal productions. Cotton also grows wild, though it is a great object of cultivation by the white colonists settled (329) on the banks of the river Renvi on the largest island of Vanu Levu. The whole native population is not less than 200,000. There are several different tribes and great chiefs, but Thakombau is the supreme governor of the whole group. He lives on the large island but has a house at Levuka. In the interior of the large island the natives are still very savage and uncivilized, and fighting frequently takes place amongst them. There are several missionaries of all denominations, but they don't find the natives so tractable as those of the Friendly Islands. Of course you read in the papers of the Fijis being annexed to Great Britain. King Thakombau has gradually contracted a debt of over £80,000, and finding himself unable to pay it handed over the kingdom to England (330) on the understanding that our government should be responsible for his debt and also pay him a pension of £3,000 a year, besides several smaller pensions to minor chiefs. He is to govern the natives, etc., but all financial matters will be under British management. The treaty is not concluded yet, but it is only a matter of time, and the transaction will ultimately prove profitable to us and beneficial to the natives. Just before we left Kandavu, we heard the French ship "Cher" that was at Sydney with us, had run on a reef some 300 miles north, and become a total wreck. She was taking Catholic missionaries round the Fiji islands. We passed several good sized islands before we sighted Obalan. Levuka stands at the foot of a range of hills, the houses are all built of wood(331) and the place is not unlike Wellington. There are no natives living near the town so I did not go on shore.

The white population numbers about 500 who are from all the colonies and America, and not of the most honest description, they are generally shop and hotel keepers, and call themselves the pioneers of the Fijis. There is a post and newspaper office and a German, French, American, and British Consul there. We had fresh meat and bread while we stayed and also took in 150 tons of coal that was sent from Sydney on purpose. HMS "Dido" arrived on the 31st from Sydney. King Thakombau was not at Levuka, or we should have had him on board. I saw one of his war canoes, a wooden house built on a double canoe, had a mast and a large angular sail made of native fibre (332) and it also pulled with oars. It was steered by an oar at the end of each canoe and was about 70 feet long. On it there were some 80 natives and they sang a sort of war song as they sailed past us beating time on their drums or tom-toms. On July 31st, the ship's barqe with a crew of 7 men, 7 officers and scientists, under the charge of the First Lieutenant left the ship for a long cruise round the larger islands, and are going up one of the rivers into the interior of Vanu Levu. They have a tent, rifles, cutlasses, etc., and a week's grub, and are to join us at Kanadavu next week. On August 1st, leave was given to all who wished to go for 4 hours, and more than half of those who went came back so hopelessly drunk that they had to be hoisted on board like cattle. The liquor sold to them by the "Pioneers of the Fijis" was such (333) poisonous stuff, that some of them were raving mad for hours.

We shipped at Sydney, as a chartroom servant, a young man of about 24 years of age, who had scarcely a rag to his back, and the Captain took him out of charity. It appears that his father is a Church of England clergyman and this son was such a wild scamp, that they were glad to get rid of him, and he came out to Australia with £400 some 5 years ago and has spent the lot. He has been the round of all the colonies, tried the gold fields and lots of speculations. He is an inveterate drunkard and has had the delirium tremens several times, so much that, when he is perfectly sober his hands are all of a shake, and his gait that of a decrepit old man. He is a good scholar, and when sober has the (334) manners of a gentleman, is not at all proud and very liberal in standing "glasses round" when on shore, so is rather popular with the sailors. He says he wants to save enough money by the time he gets back as will enable him to clothe himself decently before showing up at home.

Well! he went on shore at Wellington, and came on board beastly drunk; he went again at Levuka yesterday, and was the worst and most incapable of the lot, broke 17 shillings worth of glass, etc., on shore, that the paymaster had to pay out of his wages, and he smuggled 2 pints of rum into the ship by means of a bladder tied round his waist. It was taken away from him and he got so excited that he went mad for several hours, tried to stab one of the ship's police, broke 3 large lamps and did much other damage (335) until he was dragged down to the cockpit and put in irons just outside my door. His ravings were of the most blasphemous kind (worse than any drunken sailor) I ever heard, and he said that he had once been in irons for 6 months in Australia, and that they always treated him well in gaol.

This morning he is pitiful to look at, his one suit of clothes all torn to rags, his limbs too weak to keep him up, and one of the worst blackeyes I ever saw. He has no recollection of anything, is very willing to apologize to all, and says he will drink no more, which resolve I am afraid will be only very temporary, and it is easy to see that his years are numbered for this world. He calls himself "Dawson" but I doubt whether that is his real name.

We left Levuka at 4 p.m. last night (336) for Kandavu again, where we are to remain until the English mail arrives from San Francisco, surveying the harbour in the meantime. We are under sail at present and shall be there tomorrow. The British Consul, Mr. Layard, is accompanying us. He is a stout, jolly old man and has been out here several years. We have also on board 10 natives of the New Hebrides who have been working at the Fiji's for the white people for 3 years, on the cotton plantations. They each have a small chest of clothes and a rifle, with other arms, given to them as wages. We are to take them back to the New Hebrides to where we go from Kandavu. They are something like the Fijians, but not to be compared to the Friendly Islanders. Probably they were kidnapped in the first place by some British (337) vessel, for this system of slavery has been much resorted to by white people at the Fijis and in Australia. There are several men-of-war schooners fitted out at Sydney to prevent this cheap labour traffic, for it had become so dangerous, that it was unsafe for a peaceable ship to go near to many of the South Sea Islands, as the natives retaliated by murdering any white people who they come across. A short time ago the whole of the crew of a peaceful (barque) were murdered and eaten at the Soloman Islands, and to this system of revenge may be attributed the murder of Bishop Patterson some time ago.

August 4th, at Kandavu. We have had scores of native canoes alongside today, and I have invested my (3d bits) in shells. Some of the native women are (338) good looking, but not like those at Tongatbu, and wear even less clothing. A lamb was born on board this morning and is at present the centre of attraction with the sailors.

August 7th. The mail is not in yet but expected every minute. We are not going to sea until Tuesday now. We had several great chiefs on board yesterday and took their portraits, they were fine looking men. Our barqe has not yet returned from her weeks cruise and the Captain is getting very anxious about her.

Address Singapore until further orders.

Yours faithfully,
Joe Matkin.

HMS "Challenger"
New Hebrides, August 18th, 1874

Dear Tom:

As we are just about to make sail for Cape York, I will get a letter underweigh which I hope to send from there via Torres Straits and Singapore. My last letter I had to close at a moments notice, and the San Francisco mail never came in with ours, so shall not receive them until we reach Hong Kong or Manilla.

On Sunday, August 9th, I went on shore at Kandavu, Fiji Islands, and had a long walk, but not such a pleasant one as at Tongatbu. The roads were not so good, nor the island so fertile, neither were the natives as (340) handsome, and very mercenary. There were missionaries, but they have not made such progress there as at Tongatbu. We heard from Sydney that our government had refused to annex the Fiji Islands, if so, I believe one of the colonial governments will see what can be done. We left Kandavu on the 10th of August for these islands distant 450 miles west and sighted them last night. The depth across was about 1500 fathoms. We were caught in a heavy squall the other night and lost a spar, and some small sails before the sail could be shortened, but it was all over in half an hour.

I told you we had 10 natives of this group of islands on board, brought from Levuka; this morning we took their portraits and landed them on their native shore on the island of Assi. This group of (341) islands was discovered in 1606 by Jurros, the Spanish navigator. It consists of about 20, most of them of good size, for their area is almost as great as the Fiji group, like which they are of volcanic origin, but are more mountainous and there are several active volcanoes. The largest islands are Espirita Santa (200 miles in circumference), Tomna Erromango, Assi, Aurora, Mablicolo, Amboyna, Penticost, Santa Maria and Vanua Lava, and are about 300 miles north of New Caledonia. The inhabitants are something like the Fijians but more slender, are broken up into many different tribes and are always fighting, their weapons being clubs, spears, bows, and poisoned arrows and they have a very bad name. We sighted several peaks on the different islands last night, and lay (342) to, until this morning, when we steamed into Assi Island to land the natives. It is about as large as Tongatbu and has a beautiful appearance being covered with trees to the very top of the mountains, which are about 2000 feet high. There are not many palm trees and of course the island is not so fertile as Tongatbu. There are several reefs in the vicinity and the ship did not go in very close. We sent 3 boats in containing the 10 natives, their arms, clothes, etc., and several officers and scientists with fancy articles to make presents and barter with the natives. The boat's crew, officers, etc., were all armed in case of an emergency. The natives came down to meet them and were all armed, but as soon as they saw their returning countrymen they yelled with delight. Our 10 natives (343) belonged to several different tribes and each claimed their own men with their arms, etc., and marched away into the bush. Only one of them could speak English and the sailors called him Toby. When his tribe came down to claim him, he said to our men "All those men belong to me", and he and the chief stood on the beach and laughed at each other for about 10 minutes. The boats brought back yams, plantains, cocoanuts, curiosities, etc., and are all hoisted on board again, and we are now under sail for Cape York, distant 1500 miles northwest. The natives of Assi wore no clothing, merely a nominal wreath of leaves -- both sexes. There are no missionaries for they ate one at Erromango a short time since.

(344) Sunday, August 30th. Anchored in the Coral Sea off Raine Island. Our greatest depth on this trip has been 2,450 fathoms and we have had good trade winds and pleasant weather. We entered the Coral Sea today and are about 120 miles from the Australian continent.

The water was 1400 fathoms yesterday and tonight we are at anchor owing to the great number of reefs all round us. The great barrier of coral reefs extends for more than a thousand miles along the east coast of Australia, and runs for more than 100 miles out from the land. We sighted Raine Island this morning and can just see it from where we are anchored. It is not two square acres in extent and destitute of trees, being scarcely (345) out of the water. Of course there are no people on it, but there is a large stone beacon, 60 feet high on it, that has been erected as a landmark by the Board of Trade. Like St. Paul's Rocks, there are thousands of birds living on the island. We are 8 miles from it now and anchored off a long reef. It is something wonderful to see the number of reefs all round us. The Captain was up at the foretop with a glass as we came in. I believe Captain Cook ran on one and was repaired at Batavia. There are enormous quantities of sharks here about, as well as other fish, all hands are busy catching them now and over 20 have been already caught, some of them 8 feet long. The men cut off the tail, slice open his belly and let him go again; he generally swims (346) about then for half an hour, then dies and is eaten by his mess-mates. Other good fish have been caught, one was pulled up and just as he was level with the water's edge, a shark came and took half of him. We had no church on board today owing to the great number of reefs we were among. To-morrow we are going to land a party on Raine Island, and shall anchor again at night in the open sea.

September 4th. Somerset, Cape York. On August 31st we stood into Raine Island, and landed a party to overhaul it, etc. There was nothing on it but sea birds, and they were thicker than at St. Paul's Rocks, the ground was literally covered with them, their eggs and young. The soil was sandy but there was little vegetation to be seen, and in the course of time a soil will be formed from the deposit of the birds, and cocoanuts, etc., will wash on shore and spring up as they have done at other Pacific Islands. The island is of coral formation, and will probably rise higher out of the water, and enlarge every year. The stone tower was sadly in want of repair. On the top there was a cistern for catching fresh water, so that if any one was wrecked there, they would find a supply and be able to live on birds, eggs, etc., until succoured; but this cistern and the whole roof of the tower had fallen in. On the doors were records of the visits of different ships, but there had been none there for the last six years. A record of our visit was added and the party returned, after which the boats were hoisted in and (348) we made sail for Cape York; but owing to the reefs we anchored again the same night in sight of three other small islands. Lots more sharks were caught, I should think there is no sea in the world where they are more abundant. It came on to blow that night, and over 120 fathoms of cable were paid out to ease the strain on the anchor, this took three hours getting up in the morning when we made sail again for Cape York. We sighted the Australian continent again at 11 a.m. and anchored the same night, September 1st, off the settlement of Somerset and the coast here presented the same flat sterile appearance that it did towards Melbourne, more than 2,200 miles further south. There is not a hill to be seen over 600 feet high, and yet on the opposite side of Torres (349) Straits within 120 miles there are mountains on the island of New Guinea over 13,000 feet high, in sight half way across the Strait, and in the interior are some whose peaks are over 16,000 feet above the sea level. This mountain system may be traced across the Pacific from the Rocky Mountains in North America. It rises at the Sandwich Islands over 13,000 feet, again in Japan higher still -- still higher in New Guinea.

It does not touch the continent of Australia but stretches more to the east. It appears moderately high at the New Hebrides and Fiji Islands, and extends through the New Zealand Islands rising over 13,000 feet on the south island, and was found by Ross in the Antarctic Circle in Lat. 76°S where burning mountains were seen over 13,000 feet high. Everywhere along its course earthquakes are prevalent and owing to its near vicinity they have occasional shocks here that are felt in no other part of Australia.

The land here is covered with bush and trees and on the night we came in there was a large bush fire inland that could be seen by us out at sea before the land was visible. The colonists say these fires are caused by the great heat of the sun, and the excessive dryness of the grass, etc. A glass bottle has been known to act as a magnifier sufficient to set fire to the grass in Victoria, and here it is much hotter for it is only ten degrees south of the equator. The aboriginals of Australia are thicker here than in any other portion of the continent, and are very treacherous and troublesome.

This place belongs to the colony of (351) Queensland, which is a tropical colony and one-fourth the size of Europe, and West Australia a little larger. The whole colony is only one-fifth less than Europe. As soon as the Queensland mail was started via Torres Straits, Somerset sprang into existence. There are not many white people even now, but still they are all working men. The land is being cleared for cultivation and there is the nucleus of a town in the shape of a dozen substantial white verandah'd cottages, a barracks for the mounted police, a post office and some missionaries to keep the natives in order, and no doubt Somerset will improve during the next 20 years, for it is in one of the main thoroughfares of ocean traffic between America, Queensland and the East Indies.

(352) We took in a bullock today and shall have fresh meat while we are here. The two missionaries are on board now dining with the Captain, they call themselves Cameronians. I believe we go from here to Timor, thence through some small islands into the Indian Ocean, after which we return through the Lombok and Bali Channel to Amboyna, the Dutch capital of the Molucca Islands, thence to Celebes and Borneo to Manilla, after which Hong Kong where I have heard we shall be detained refitting until after Christmas, and that owing to this delay we shall leave out the trip to Vnacouver's Island and go from Japan direct to the Sandwich Islands, but this is not decided on yet. After January 25th, our address is Yokohama, Japan via Southampton.

(353) From Hong Kong, we go to New Guinea, New Britain, New Ireland and Caroline Islands before going on to Japan, where we are to spend three months surveying in the inland seas, etc. It is also decided that we go to Monte Video instead of Rio Janeiro on our way home, for which I am sorry, particularly wishing to see what Rio was like.

Soon after we anchored here our letters came on board, I receiving some from home, with one of yours, and was sorry you did not appreciate my mahogany colored charmer; you must please to remember she a'nt dressed, which makes a considerable difference, but she is not a circumstance to the females of Tongatbu, and wish I could send you the portrait of one I have (354) in my "mind's eye" now. You would find me much altered since I left England, am much thinner and as pale as Hamlet's Ghost, with hair getting quite grey. You see I get very little exercise and my work lies below the water line, where fresh air and daylight never penetrate, having to do all my writing by candle light, the "Challenger's" accommodation is very poor for all except officers.

September 7th. We expect to leave here tomorrow, but this will not go before the 18th. We had a party of native men and women on board the other day, they were similar to those of Victoria and New South Wales, and as thin as rats, the ugliest race we have yet seen; the Ashantees are handsome compared with them. We (355) had one of the missionaries on board yesterday to conduct our Church service. In the afternoon I went on shore with 5 mates and got lost in the bush, for the land is one great forest and there are no roads, or animals, and but little fresh water. Parrots, cockatoos, etc., were very plentiful, there were some magnificent butterflies, also lots of snakes, centipedes, lizards, mosquitos, flies and ants, the latter are the pest of the settler. We got entangled in a mangrove swamp, up to our knees in mud, it came on dark, with the tide rising into the swamp in which lizards and even alligators abound. I separated and struck off into the bush, arriving on board at 8 p.m., the others coming in this morning by way of the shore, having slept in a tree all night until the tide went down.

Yours sincerely,
Joe Matkin.

HMS "Challenger"
Arra Islands, Sea of Arafura
Sept. 15, 1974

Dear Tom:

We are now within 5 degrees of the equator again, and are undergoing a sort of mild roasting, which is aggravated by the ship being continually under steam and there being no wind to speak of, I need not say that this does not improve my health, being shut up all day between decks and getting no exercise. Do you see the pictures in the "London News" of the ship at Kerguelen and amongst the ice?

Great alterations have been made in our cruise since last I wrote. We are proceeding to Manilla by an entirely different (357) route to that originally laid down. We do not go to Timor or Borneo, Celebes or any of those islands, and after leaving Hong Kong, do not again visit New Guinea or New Britain, Solomon Islands, etc., but go direct from the Caroline Islands to Japan. This alteration is owing to our being so much behind time, and to the refusal of the Admiralty to extend the voyage beyond April 1876, so that you may expect me home about May. After leaving this group of islands now in sight, we go to New Guinea, thence to Amboima, Mollucca Islands, and on to Manilla, reaching there the 1st of November; from thence to Hong Kong, arriving about the 15th, to refit and do not leave before the 27th December, so that we shall have a Christmas in China. From Japan in end of June we proceed direct to the Sandwich Islands and do not go to (358) Vancouver's at all. The remainder of the voyage is the same except one part we go to Monte Video instead of Rio Janeiro, but this arrangement may possibly be altered again. We left Somerset on the 8th and steamed out through Torres Straits for these islands distant 500 miles; the straits are about 100 miles across in their narrowest part. We did not sight New Guinea but called at two small islands for a few hours, there are several situated in the straits, some are inhabited, but those we called at were not. As soon as we cleared the Straits we were in the Sea of Arafura, as this part of the Pacific is called. The depth is only about 40 fathoms and we have dredged and trawled every day with great success. We passed a Singapore mail boat the other morning bound to Brisbane (359) but she had no letters for us. The same day we passed a large

Dutch merchant ship under full sail for Batavia, the Dutch have many valuable possessions in this part of the world. Thunder storms and vivid flashes of lightening are very prevalent after sunset in this part of the world. The southern island of this group is now in sight but our place of call is farther north. The doctor is now serving out quinine to the boat's crews who have to land tomorrow as a preventive of fever, ague, etc.

October 2nd, at Banda, Nutmeg Islands.

We were a week round the Arra Islands, they are a group of small extent lying about 90 miles west of New Guinea. The population is about 60,000 and is a mixture of the Malay with the Papuan or Austral negro (360) family. They are good seamen and were formerly great pirates -- the terror of the old China Sea clippers and other merchant ships that came this way, but our steam gun boats have stopped all that sort of thing. On the night of the 14th September we anchored about 7 miles from the island of Tronyan, the largest of the Arra group and the next evening we steamed in for the island of Dobba and anchored off the town of that name. It was a beautiful island, but rather low, but covered with a dense vegetation and forest abounding in parrots, cockatoos, birds of paradise, and enormous butterflies and lizards. Soon after we anchored, three large praus or native canoes came alongside with the principal chief of the island. These canoes and several flag staffs on shore flew the Dutch flag. All the groups of islands hereabouts either belong (361) to the Dutch, or are under their protection. Our men of war seldom come this way, and they go through the Straits of Malacca to China. This route to China is called the Molucca Passage, and is little frequented by any but Dutch ships, so here they reign supreme and have it all their own way. There was not a sign of a European in the island, but lots of Chinese trading and scraping a fortune together. All the rest were natives. Those in the canoes came alongside in great style, singing their war songs and beating their tom-toms or native drums. The singing was something frightful, all in one key, and sounds very doleful and monotonous. The chief with a few Chinese came on board and were received by the Captain and Professor Thompson in the cabin, leaving again after having refreshment and cigars. The chiefs were dressed in Chinese costume, but the other (362) natives had only a cloth round the loins, and were the ugliest race of people we have yet seen, except the aboriginals of Australia. They were slender, ill shaped, with irregular features and horrible mouths; this latter deformity is caused by their chewing a root called betel nut which rots their teeth away altogether, destroys their voices and their mouths look like a piece of raw liver. They are Mohommedans and live chiefly on fish, eggs and vegetables, they are very chary about letting you see their wives or females of any sort. Cocoanut trees and bananas grow there, but not abundantly, and fruit was very scarce. The town consists of a lot of bamboo huts, two storys high, thatched, and open at the gable ends to admit a current of air right through. I went on shore one afternoon and had a fine swim (363) in a salt water lake, the water of which was hotter than any I ever before bathed in. The people and houses were very dirty. Some of the Malay children were pretty, those who had never chewed the betel root, or been scorched in the sun. The betel root is a shrub common to the East Indies and China and is a species of pepper vine. The lower story of the huts is used by the pigs and fowls, a bamboo ladder leads into the upper loft, and as soon as the women and girls saw us coming, they bolted up this ladder like a shot, while the men and boys stood below and laughed. Those women we did see were very ugly. The Chinese do all the trade, keep stores, and sell rice, rum, tobacco, etc., and they buy all the birds of paradise and pearls the natives can get (364). I saw two or three Chinese women, but they were very shy about showing themselves, though they were very fair looking. In the middle of the streets were wells of fresh water and the Chinese community bathe at the mouth of these wells by drawing buckets of water and pouring over themselves, so that the water finds its way back into the well again, this way of bathing is economical, but not our style. The Chinese brought off lots of birds of paradise, ready stuffed and cured and sold them each at 10/ (shillings). I did not buy any but may do if we go to New Guinea, where they are natives of, but a few of them find their way to these islands. They are about as large as a thrush, but have golden tails over 2 feet long. They look beautiful while flying but are very timid and difficult (365) to shoot. Our officers went to several of the other Arroo Islands in the steam pinnace and shot a few birds of paradise, as well as other splendid parrots, etc. They also shot some large flying foxes, caught a young cassowary or emu and several snakes, butterflies, lizards, etc. Some of the butterflies were as large as English sparrows. The native canoes of the larger sort are thatched over and look like floating haystacks. When they go to sea the whole family -- fowls, pigs, etc., go also -- and they make voyages of 11 to 1200 miles at a stretch, for the sea about here is as calm as a mill pond generally, and gales of wind are unheard of. On arrival in port they draw the canoe upon the beach and live in it the same as at sea. These are the migratory Malays. Their sails are made of cocoanut fibre, and also their ropes, and they live on fish when at sea. The natives gamble and play at cards to a great extent. The Chinese have taught them to gamble, and the Dutch to play cards. The real natives of the islands are Papuans; the Malays and mixed races being emigrants. On (366) the 21st September, the sun crossed to the side of the equator, and the southern summer commenced. On the 23rd, we left Dobba for another group called the Ki Islands, about 80 miles farther west. We sighted the largest of the group, called Great Ki, the next day. It was about as large as St. Thomas and much higher than any we had seen since leaving the New Hebrides. Off these the sea deepened to 800 fathoms. Lots of natives (367) came off there in their canoes, drum-beating and singing the same old tunes. They were very similar in appearance to those of the Arroo Islands, but not quite so ugly. All that day we steamed through the Ki group, which is very numerous though of small extent, and anchored at night in a bay surrounded by beautiful islands. The sunsets in this part of the world are splended and nearly every night lightening, without either rain or thunder. We had a whole tribe of natives off that night, and they were allowed to climb the rigging and ramble all over the ship. After dark they were had on the quarter (deck) to dance and sing their war songs. All hands stood round them and the Captain burned a blue light to illuminatae the scene, after which they had a feed of biscuit and departed.

We left on the 25th and anchored again at night (368) at another beautiful island of the Ki group. On the 25th we left for the Nutmeg Islands distant about 330 miles and passed numbers of others on the passage. On the 28th we sighted Banda and took soundings at the enormous depth of 2875 fathoms, the next day we anchored there. It is the largest island and capitol of the group called Banda or Nutmeg Islands, which consist of nine, all belonging to the Dutch. Banda is a very clean little town, and is used as a convict settlement for the natives of all the Dutch possessions in the East Indies. There were many women convicts, and they were employed in making roads, etc. There is a large fort and barracks built by the Portuguese before the year 1700 after which the islands were taken by the Dutch. Banda and nearly all Dutch possessions in the east were taken by the British in 1775 but they were nearly all (369) given back again at the conclusion of the war, except Ceylon, the richest island in this part of the globe. The natives of Banda are Malays, Papuans and all sorts of mixed races and a few Chinese merchants; but there are not many Dutch or white, except soldiers and officials. We saluted the Dutch flag with 21 guns, and are to do so at all their possessions we visit. The governor dined on board one day. Fruit, fowls and eggs were plentiful, but other provisions were dear. The sight of the town is the volcanic mountain of Goomong-assi, 2,200 feet high and still active. There is a book on board written by an American-professor Beckford -- describing his visit to these islands and his perilous ascent of the burning mountain. He relates how he had native guides, and all sorts of appliances for making (370) the ascent, and that it took him 2 days. There is also a picture of him hanging on to his eyebrows to the side of the mountain with all the blocks of lava cinders rolling from under his feet. The mountain rises very abruptly, and the ascent is certainly difficult and dangerous, several people have lost their lives in the attempt at different times, and not long ago an Englishman was suffocated while looking over into the crater. On the day after we arrived several of our officers ascended with guides, and were only five hours absent from the ship, and had had a rest in the town. On the following day, myself and a messmate went on shore, and after having a look over the town, started to go up the mountain, without guides or anything. We were 2 1/4 hours going up and 50 minutes coming down. The last half (371) of the ascent is very dangerous as the surface of the mountain is nothing but a mass of loose cinders, which rolled down with us 2 feet for every three we ascended. On arriving at the summit we saw a flagstaff erected by our officers at the mouth of the crater, which was about 100 feet deep, and a mass of sulphur inside. The ground is hot enough on the surface to cook eggs and dense volumes of smoke and vapour rose from the crater and numerous cracks in the earth. It is always smoking, and we were obliged to cover our faces whilst we looked over into the crater, for the whole air round the summit is suffocating. We made the ascent in the heat of the day, and forgot to take any water with us, but we soon got some from a Malay hut at the foot of the mountain. We descended at a rattling pace, for there was no walking down the first half of the way. It is nearly 100 years since the last great eruption which was accompanied by an earthquake that divided the island asunder, and separated the mountain from the town, and the sea is now a 1/4 of a mile wide between the two islands and very deep -- we had to cross in a native canoe.

The Dutch fleet was left high and dry for some hours during the earthquake, by the waters retiring from the bay, but as the sea returned again to its former position, they received very little damage. I had a fine bathe at the foot of the mountain, then we visited the spice plantations. The clove tree is very pretty and the buds that grow in clusters at the top of it form, when dried, the spice called cloves. The nutmeg tree is very like a pear tree, and (373) the fruit when ripe resembles an apricot, and nearly as large; the outer shell is yellow and is allowed to rot off as a walnut, leaving the nutmeg enveloped in a thin membramous, sweet scented substance, which when dried, forms the spice called mace. Yesterday we went out to sea to look for a disabled Dutch mail boat, but found nothing of her so returned at night. We are not going to New Guinea until we return from Hong Kong, as this is the rainy and sickly season. This evening we leave Banda for Amboina, distant 150 miles north. We are only about 200 miles from the line and the weather is roasting.

Sunday, October 25, at Zamboanga. We anchored off the town of Amboina on Sunday, October 4th, and remained until the 10th, coaling, etc. Amboina is the capitol of the Molucca Islands (374) and has about 30,000 inhabitants. The town has 16,000, mostly Malays, Papuans, mixed races, Chinese, Arabs and Europeans. There was a large fort and lots of soldiers there, and we had the Dutch governor and numerous visitors on board. I went on shore several times and also played cricket, the first time for two years. The island is mountainous, but fertile, is a large size and has a good bay. It was intensely hot there, 140° in the sun and over 90° in the bottom of the ship.

Cloves and spices are the principal export and fruit of all kinds was cheap and plentiful. The colored people are all Mohammedans, I looked through the windows into one of their Mosques, which was built of wood and shaped like a Chinese pagoda; the interior was quite bare and (375) the floor of stone; the natives stood up to pray and went through all sorts of antics. The Malay people do washing beautifully, they use no soap, but beat the clothes on the stones in the river beds. They are very fond of wearing white garments when they do have any clothing, and some of the children who had not been scorched in the sun, were very pretty, had splended eyes and teeth and long black hair. They paid us a month's money at Amboina in Dutch dollars at 4/2 each. We had fresh meat, vegetables and bread there for two days for our health's sake. The meat was 2/5 per lb., vegetables 1/6 and bread 1/ per lb. The Admiralty allow 2/6 per lb. to be paid for fresh meat and vegetables when a ship has been long at sea and the doctor recommends it. I was reading the other day the voyages (376) of Cook and other English navigators amongst these islands over 100 years ago; they used to bury 2 or 3 men each day at the Arroo Islands. In those days lime juices and quinine were unknown in the navy. We left Amboina on the 10th for Temati, another of the Molucca Islands, 50 miles north of the line. We passed several others of the group and crossed the equator on the 13th at 10 p.m. in longitude 127°30' east.

On the 13th we anchored off the town and island of Temati, on which was another volcano 3000 feet high and very active. On one of the adjacent islands there is another 5000 feet high. The town of Temati was not so large as Amboina but much cleaner and prettier. There was a fort and barracks and a Dutch man-of-war at anchor off the town. I went on shore there and spent a pleasant (377) evening. Fruit was very plentiful, especially pineapples, which sold 1 1/2 each. Fowls were 6d each, and eggs 1/2. On the 17th we left there for the Phillipine Islands, passing lots more on which were volcanoes, and sighting the large Dutch Island of Celebes, on which were 3 active volcanoes. The Dutch Islands and possessions are very quiet, dead and alive sort of places, there is no enterprise or progress to be seen anywhere; no railways or improvements of any kind and the people are the same as they were 100 years ago. I wonder what the Spaniards, Dutch, or any other people think when they visit Melbourne, Sydney or any English colony. We sounded in the Celebes Sea

Sea at 2,375 fathoms and 2,675 fathoms, and on the 22nd sighted the large island of Mindanao, Phillipine group, which group is large (378) and very valuable; they are in the North Pacific and belong to the Spaniards. They were discovered in 1521 by Magellan, and taken possession of in 1570, in the reign of Philip II after whom they were named.

They number nearly 1000, but only about 150 are inhabited. Luzon is the largest island and is only one-fifth smaller than England. Mindanao Island is only a trifle less. They are rich, abounding in all sorts of fruits and minerals; even gold and diamonds have been found and there are also coal mines in Mindanao. They are mountainous, volcanic and subject to earthquakes. They export rice, tobacco, cigars, hemp, etc., and Manilla is the capitol. The whole population is over 8 million and about 2 million are either Spanish or of Spanish descent, that (379) portion are Roman Catholics, the remainder Mohammedans, or Idolaters. There are two tribes of natives, the Aboriginals, called Karasoras, of Papuan origin, and the Malays and mixed races. The Karasoras are nearly yellow, small, ugly, with long black hair; something between the Maories and Papuans. There are also great quantities of Chinese. On the 23rd we anchored off the town of Zamboanga, which is the capitol of the large islands of Mindanao. The town stands at the foot of a range of high mountains, which are clothed to their summit in dense forests of ebony and sapan wood. There is a large Spanish man-of-war at anchor here, and we have had most of the officers as well as the Spanish governor on board. The town looks something like Amboina, but is much larger, stronger fort, (380) more soldiers and is much dirtier. There are great quantities of cocoanut trees here and fruit is very plentiful, especially oranges, guavas, pineapples, shaddocks and bananas, as well as the bread fruit. There are lots of wild creatures, serpents, etc., wild buffalos, and small half-wild horses, called mustangs, inland. The buffaloes have been tamed and crossed with the domestic ox and are used for all sorts of heavy draught labor. The small horses are very fleet and pretty and were to be hired, with a native attendant, for a dollar per day. Lots of our men had them and astonished everyone, as well as themselves, by their riding. This morning we had Church and after the heat of the day was over I went on shore and had a good walk and look about. The Spanish half-caste women are very handsome and have beautiful (381) black hair, almost reaching the ground. The natives here are far more industrious than at the Dutch islands, in cultivating the soil and any manual work. The town trade appears to be in the hands of the Chinese, but the principal export trade in the management of the British and American merchants. I looked into one of the Roman Catholic churches during service, there was an organ and the singing good. Just opposite the church was the Spanish officers' quarters. They invited all our officers this evening to come and see a native dance. The dancers were natives, with Chinese girls, women, and some men, and were dressed in Chinese fancy silks and all sorts of costumes, the music was horrible and the dancing peculiar.

They build the houses two story's high with open verandahs, so from the street we could see (382) all that was going on. The native houses are built of bamboo on piles, and were similar to those at the Arroo Islands. We leave here tomorrow for another large town further north and shall pass very close to the island of Borneo, but shall not touch it. The weather is still roasting and we are almost always under steam, the decks have to be kept constantly wetted to keep the pitch from melting. Mindanao is very rich in minerals and coal, but the Spaniards are too lazy to work the mines, and all the coal used by steamers here comes either from Sydney, or the British Island of Labuan, to the north of Borneo. We hope to get some letters and English newspapers at Manilla next week.

November 11th, off Luzon under steam for Manilla.

We left Zamboanga on (383) the 26th and on the 27th sounded at three miles in depth, and that night there was lightning from every quarter of the heavens, such flashes as I never saw before and neither rain or thunder. On the 28th we sighted the island of Panay in this group and anchored at night off the capital town of Iloilo (pronounced Elo Eli). It is much larger than Zamboanga having 60,000 inhabitants and is the second city of importance in the Phillipine Islands. It stands on a river in a wide marshy plain, at the foot of a chain of mountains, is notoriously unhealthy and very dirty my messmate said, so I did not go on shore, there being nothing to see different to Zamboanga. We had the Spanish governor on board and also took in fresh meat, vegetables and bread, the meat was only 6d per lb. We also took in (384)

50 tons of coal, English coal. We heard news from the English merchants of Banzaine's(?) escape, and of a terrible typhoon near Hong Kong, and that some of our letters had gone down in the mail boat there. We left on the 31st for Manilla, distant 350 miles and on our passage, saw scores of fine fertile isles, all mountains. Are now off the large island of Luzon, which is nearly the size of England, and tomorrow expect to be at anchor at Manilla by 3 p.m. hoping to receive some welcome letters.

Sunday, November 15, in the China Sea.

We anchored at Manilla at 4 p.m. on the 4th and received our letters at 9 p.m. Mine numbering nine, besides newspapers.

We anchored nearly 2 miles from the city of Manilla, which stands on a flat peninsula at the bottom of the bay, which is as large (385) as Table Bay, and surrounded by high lands. Nothing but the spires and domes of the churches could be seen from where we lay, but the city had a very pleasant appearance especially at sunrise and sunset, when the great chains of mountains situated some 15 and 20 miles inland came out very distinctly. Luzon is the seat of government for all the Phillipine Islands, its capitol, Manilla, stands on a river, which is navigable up as far as the town and was full of shipping, I think even more than Bahia, which town it somewhat resembles, though a much busier and gayer place, and quite equals it in dirt.

We saluted the Spanish flag with 21 guns and the same number was returned from Fort St. Philip, which defends the city. Manilla is the oldest European city in this part of the world, it was founded in 1571 and was formerly much more important than it is now. The Spanish treasure ships used to sail from Acapulco in Mexico across the Pacific to Manilla and home to Spain by the Cape of Good Hope.

Commodore Anson took one of these galleons worth over one million pounds sterling.

Its present population is about 230,000 of all colors, but the majority are Malays, Papuans and Chinese. Of course there are Spaniards and there is a Spanish squadron always stationed at Manilla, as well as lots of troops, but the principal foreign trade is in the hands of the British and American merchants, the chief exports being cigars, rice, indigo, tobacco, hemp, coffee and sugar.

The British Consul gets £1100 a year. He, with his wife and family, were often on board during our stay. Fruit, eggs, were (387) plentiful and we had fresh meat, bread and vegetables all the time we were there.

A month's money in Spanish dollars at 4/ each was paid to the ship's company, and leave was given every night from 4 till 10 p.m. The steam pinnace did all the boating as it was a long pull for a rowing boat. The weather was much cooler at Manilla and we had plenty of rain. We had the Spanish Governor and Admiral, with lots of military and naval officers and men, Catholic priests, ladies, etc., on board during our stay, and the day before we left the Captain gave a lunch and dance party. The ladies were tolerably handsome and well dressed. I like their style of dancing better than the English. I went on shore one evening but it so soon got dark that I did not see much of the town, which is lighted by oil lamps.

(388) There is a fine cathedral, and several large churches, and also some enormous government cigar manufactories, employing thousands of native women. Most of our men have laid in a stock, but being no great smoker, I did not go in for a bargain. The price of the very best is 8d per hundred, and you could buy the same quantity for 3d. The houses are built of stone two storeys high, with flat roof and open balconies, but there is nothing pretty about the best streets and the back ones where the Malays and Chinese reside were something horrible. There was a bit of a park, full of well dressed people, for it was Sunday night, and the military bands were all playing. The ladies wear no bonnets only lace veils, and many of them smoked cigars in their carriages. Horses were very (389) plentiful, and vehicles of all descriptions were to be seen driving about the fashionable streets, carriage exercise is the principal amusement. The natives were about the same as at the other islands, they and the Chinese seemed to be the only hard workers in the place. Altogether, I think Manilla is the finest place we have visited except Lisbon, Melbourne and Sydney, but everything is very dear there. At 2 p.m. on the 11th we got up anchor and left for Hong Kong, distance 700 miles. We were two days getting clear of the Phillipine Islands and are now in the China Sea,sailing with the northeast monsoons very strong and two days and nights we have had very rough weather, the worst since we left Wellington. We were only 170 miles from Hong Kong today at 12 o'clock, and expect to reach there tomorrow night. We have been two years in commission today. Are expecting the weather to be comfortably cool at Hong Kong as it is in latitude 22°N; from there I shall write you by the next mail, which of course will be all about China and the children of the sun.

November 17th at Hong Kong.

We anchored yesterday at 2 p.m. and received our letters. Shall not tell you anything of the place or people this time, but am delighted with both, this does not go until the 29th. Expect if we stay here six weeks I shall be able to tell the women from the men, but can't at present, as they dress exactly alike. Miss Kong Whop has just taken my washing and I was telling her "lets have it off sharp, young fellow", when one of our old sea-dogs said, "Why he's a gal, you donkey".

Yours faithfully

Joe Matkin.

HMS "Challenger"
Hong Kong, Dec. 16th, 1874

Dear Tom:

From my last you are aware we arrived here on November 16th and expect we do not leave until the middle of January.

We have taken in all our provisions, etc., to last us until April 15th, when we are due at Yokohama. We have coaled and they have almost finished refitting; we are not going in dock.

The island of Hong Kong or "Fragrant Streams" belongs to the Ladrone group of islands, and is only 29 square miles in extent. It is mountainous and barren, although it is in the Tropics, it is about 15 miles from the mouth of the "Pi Kiang" or "River of Pearls", generally called the Canton River. (392)The city of Canton is 85 miles from Hong Kong, and the Portuguese settlement of Macao is 40 miles up the river before you reach Canton. Macao has been a Portuguese possession over 200 years. The island is separated from the mainland by a narrow intricate strait called the Ly-ce-moon Pass, about a mile wide in its narrowest part. It is shaped like a half-moon; the two ends of the island approaching the peninsula of Kowloon, and forming one of the most magnificant harbours in the world. The capital town of Victoria stands in the hollow of the harbour, at the foot of a range of hills terminating in Victoria Peak, which is 1875 feet above (393) the sea level. The town has at least 200,000 inhabitants, besides an immense floating and migratory population numbering many thousands. From the harbour of Hong Kong nothing of the sea can be seen, it is surrounded by mountains both on the island and mainland. These mountains have a very bleak sterile appearance but present a beautiful scene. Looking at the splendid landlocked harbour, you would wonder how the recent terrible typhoon could cause the damage it did to shipping; over 1,000 lives were lost in this little harbour. This you would not be surprised at if you saw the myriads of Chinese junks and sampans in which the floating population live and die. Lives count for nothing in this country. It was the dollars absorbed by the typhoon that made it such a terrible calamity. (394) The sea rose many feet into the town, which stands off on a steep slope, the water was as high as the 2nd story in those houses facing the bay, ships were driven from their anchors, and thrown almost into the town. Two steamers are now lying one on the top of the other close to the wharf with their masts only above the water. The captain of one of them, a Spaniard, with his wife were drowned, and their bodies washed into the 2nd street from the bay. The typhoon extended as far as Macao up the river, and no one knows how many Chinese lives were lost up there. There was not a single man of war damaged although there were three or four lying here.

(395) Hong Kong was ceded to us in 1842 and the opposite peninsula of "Kowloon" in 1851. Of course it was not taken for its richness or fertility, for nothing grows on it, but as a military and naval station for the protection of our commerce and as the centre of an immense export trade, its value cannot be over-rated. The amount of shipping that comes into Hong Kong in the course of a year, on their way to Japan, and the sea ports of China, is something enormous. Hong Kong was the base of operations during the long Chinese war between 1848 and 1859, and from its position at the mouth of the great Canton River, its possession by us is of the greatest importance. We have a dockyard and victualling yard here to accommodate our numerous fleet on the Chinese station, and its fine harbour (396) is the admiration and envy of all other European naval powers. At present there are at least 300 vessels here of all nations and flags, and myriads of Chinese coasting junks. There are 10 British men-of-war lying here, two American, one Russian, two Portuguese, one Siamese and three Chinese. Every vessel and junk carries a light at night and the bay looks like a town. Hong Kong is well lighted with gas (or rather Victoria), and it has a very brilliant appearance at night for the streets rise one above another for 800 feet. There is a Governor here, a General, a Commodore in charge of the dockyard and the Admiral in command of the fleet. There are not many European merchants or people of any sort except (397) soldiers, the white civilian population is under 1000. All the trades people are Chinese, the whites are either merchants, chemists, doctors, hotel keepers, etc., the minor trades and all branches of manual labour are monopolized by the Chinese, and no European could compete with them in prices, etc. Seen from the water, Hong Kong is something between Lisbon, Levuka and Wellington in appearance, the climate is generally healthy and dry, there has been no rain since we have been here. We had two cold days and nights; the rest of the time has been as warm as an average English summer. There are three old three deckers and line of battle ships here; one the "Victor Emmanuel" was a hopsital ship at the Ashantee war and has just come out, the 3 decker, the "Princess Charlotte" was flagship at the battle of Navarino and is the only (398) 3 decker that has crossed the equator.

There are 8 or 9 large gun boats for going up the river, etc., and chasing the numerous Chinese pirates; two corvettes, one at Shanghai, and one at Yokohama for the winter, and the flagship "Iron Duke", Admiral Shadwell; she is a sister ship to the "Invincible" and "Audacious" and has been out here four years. She is the largest and heaviest ship that ever came through the Suez Canal, being towed by a smaller man-of-war, and grounded 17 times on the mud. The "Audacious" is now on the way out to relieve her.

Soon after we anchored here, scores of small Chinese junks and sampans swarmed around us, containing tailors, shoemakers (399) washermen and women, dealers in curiosities, provision boats, one of which was nominated to the ship all the time we remain here. These boats are called in the navy "Bum-boats" and supply the men with provisions from the shore. The Chinese bum-boats had bread, all sorts of fruit, foreign butter and cheese, fried fish and prawns and boiled and fried eggs, the eggs are very large, being all turkeys and ducks and they have been a 1/2 each all the time.

Very sweet mandarin oranges and bananas are the principal fruit, the oranges run 3 a penny, other fruits are dearer for it is the winter season now. All these provisions and those sold on shore come from the mainland and are brought by the numerous junks, etc. These boats come (400) alongside the ship every meal hour, so also do the other boats containing washer women, tailors, etc. I should think there were 500 people in these boats when we came in, and other ships were similarly surrounded. These boats as well as the largest junks, are built in the shape of a Chinese slipper. The reason for this is reported by tradition to be as follows -- Some 3000 years ago the people of China began to build their vessels after all sorts of patterns and shapes, so the Emperor was consulted concerning this innovation against precedent, and asked to furnish a model for all future generations in naval architecture; so he threw down his slipper for a design and it has been adhered to to this day, even their steam war junks are built on this fashion, (401) and looking at these vessels from the stern, you see an exact likeness to a Chinese slipper. The smallest boats are decked over, and there is a sort of bamboo hood built over the stern, after the style of a gipsy's caravan. Between the deck and the bottom of the boat is the sleeping apartment, and the smaller ones generally carry one man, two women and any amount of children, the larger boats carry several families. They live on fish and rice chiefly, but nothing comes amiss to them. At meal times they come alongside and send all the children on board with bags to pick up the scraps and broken victuals.

About 10 boats attended the ship day and night to take anyone on shore who wished to go, the fare is 10 cents at night and 5 in the day. (402) The money here is in dollar banknotes and Mexican silver dollars, value 4/3 and 100 cents to the dollar. There is also Chinese and Japanese copper money.

The floating population of China is estimated at over 15 millions, the total population 400 millions. Before arriving here I considered this a gross exaggeration, but can quite believe it now. Canton has a million and a half of people within its walls, Peking has more, and there are dozens of cities with over a million inhabitants. Still this immense number counts for nothing, for they can scarcely be called a united nation. There are distinct languages and religion among them and not the slightest fellowship or national feeling whatever. If the people here were to hear that Canton had been destroyed by fire, or any other cause, they would send no relief or help whatever to the sufferers, and evince not the least concern unless it touched their own pockets. Human life is considered of no account, during the recent typhoon scores of people were drowned in sight of their countrymen, without the slightest notice being taken of it. The Chinese have a very numerous army and navy and their government is even more despotic than the Russian, but to say that our empire in India is in danger from them is all moonshine. They are well able to defend themselves, but as an offensive power they count for nothing, they have no ambition, no curiosity and very few of them know there is such a country as India. I mention this (404) because I read an article in a leading magazine the other day, wherein their designs on India, in the future were distinctly foretold and also that of the Japanese. The Chinese do not recognize such a division of time as a week, and have no Sabbath, if anything, they appear to be busier on Sunday. They are idolaters, and each household and junk has its own peculiar deity. Notwithstanding this is a British colony, they have not adopted a single custom of ours, nor introduced any article of European dress. They live in the same style as their forefathers 2,000 years ago and use the same mechanical tools. Their motto is to "adhere to all that is established and to reject all that is new". They have condescended to erect sign boards (405) over their shops in English as well as Chinese characters and this is the only innovation I could detect when I have been on shore. There is no alphabet in their language, each character represents a distinct word and this is what makes it so difficult to learn. I enclose you my washing bill written in Chinese characters, as a sample, they write with a small brush, and wonderfully quick they do it.

I need not describe their dress, the long cotton blouse and very wide trousers -- white gaiters and clumsy looking shoes. Their dress is generally blue and costs very little, their pigtail reaches nearly to the ground. The women dress and look very similar to the men, they generally wear earrings, and all their hair, which is the only means of distinguishing the two sexes. The men (406) and women afloat wear no shoes or stockings. I saw scores of women with the proverbial small feet, on shore, they are bound up and compressed into shoes about 3 inches long, and they amble along with great difficulty, "like a cat on hot bricks". This cruel custom, I think, is falling into disuse, for I saw no children being sacrificed to this queer national fashion, and imagine it is now confined to the upper ten thousand. The women work terribly hard, on the water they invariably do all the rowing and steering, it is nothing unusual to see a boat full of men being rowed by two women, and they can navigate one better than the men. They carry their babies on their backs in a sort of gipsy sling and nurse and work just the same. The baby's nose is compressed close to the mother's back (407) and this is what causes the Chinese to all have very flat noses. They are a dirty but very industrious, and, in many things, a clever people. I have been more struck with this country and people than with any other we have visited, and it is the only one that has exceeded my expectations. Provisions, clothing, etc., are cheaper here than in any other part of the world. Any sort of manual labor can be performed at about half the European price, and in many articles they can compete with machinery. Rice is the principal food, and they can exist on a halfpenny a day and a whole family of the middle class will subsist on three shillings a week. Their vegetables are the best I ever tasted, they eat very little animal food, though fish and game are very (408) plentiful, they drink nothing but water, and their only vice is opium smoking, and eating, which is too expensive for the majority to indulge in, but they smoke tobacco and cigars. All our carpentering, plumbing, repairs, etc., have been effected by Chinese mechanics and nearly all the workmen in the government dockyard are Chinese. They are good citizens and very little trouble in the town, but are a mercenary and treacherous people and would do anything for money. During the Chinese war they attempted to murder all the European community by putting arsenic in the bread, but they used too large a quantity that its presence was detected and they were discovered. They do not scruple to rob a drunken man in the streets, or even murder him, and piracy is still very (409) prevalent on their coasts, although the penalty is death. We get good meat, vegetables and bread here and also English beer in the canteen at night. All sorts of provisions are cheap, especially poultry, eggs, etc. We often have geese for dinner and sometimes a Chinese dinner of curry and rice from the bum-boats. Cats, dogs, etc., are great delicacies in this country and have no doubt I have tasted both since we have been here. You can get a good suit of clothes for 30/, the cost of making is only 6/-, and a pair of English-style boots and shoes from 3/ to 6/, made of kid or catskin and they will wear a long time if not wetted, and are very comfortable.

Scores of artists come on board every time the men's wages are paid, who do oil paintings from photographs, very tolerable, for from 8/ to 10/ each, also ship's landscapes, etc. The Chinese invariably ask twice as much as they expect to get and are wonderful fellows at driving a bargain. Their English is very peculiar, they say, "can do" and "no can do" for "yes and "no"; instead of saying "this is good", they say "this number one piece", and they always pronounce the letter "r" as "l". In jewellery, carving, etc. they are very skillful and can imitate things to a nicety. If you go to a tailor and order a suit of clothes, he will scan your figure, and say "can do", without measuring you at all; fit you to a nicety, and in a very short time, for they are so eager to get the money. Washing is only 1/6 per dozen and they will take it ashore one day and bring it off the next. Any rubbish, ashes, etc., thrown overboard is eagerly collected, and nothing in the shape (411) of food is thrown away as refuse. On the day they paid us our money the ship was swarmed with traders of all sorts and a good deal of money was spent. An article worth a dollar, they will ask 2 1/2 for, and say "No have got two tongues, only one price"; and then if you offer them a dollar, show them it, and walk away, they yell out "can do" and its the same in the bazaars on shore, if they only see the money, they will sell you something. I have spent a lot of money here in curiosities, oil paintings, clothes, etc., and have bought a fine large camphor wood chest to keep my clothes in, only cost 3 dollars and would fetch two pounds in England. The wood smells so nice and no moths or insects will come near it. A man could soon spend a fortune here in silks, fans, ivory goods, cabinets, etc., and when you (412) visit one of their bazaars, you can't come away while you have money in pocket. I intended going up to Canton, but have spent so much that I can't afford it.

Lots of our officers and men are up there now, for it is the race week, and I must get a description of that wonderful city from some of them. You can get a box of good tooth powder here for a penny, the box would cost that in England, for it is made of wood with a sliding lid, like a slate pencil box. Our officers have played several cricket matches here, and every one is enjoying himself as much as possible.

Our photographer who was engaged at Cape Town left us here, making the third we have had, but we have got another.

The carpenter of the ship has deserted, and also a boy, but we have taken in (413) 60 new men and boys, the latter just out from England, and are now full up again. Some have been invalided and I don't think there are more than 60 hands left of the original 240 that commissioned the ship. But the greatest alteration of the lot happened a few days ago, when our Captain Nares received a telegram from England to say that he was appointed to the command of the new arctic expedition that leaves England in April, and was to proceed home at once, Lieutenant Aldrich, the 1st lieutenant, was also to accompany him. The Captain would have preferred remaining in this ship until the cruise was finished, but he could not refuse it.

Professor Thompson was in a great way about it, and talked of throwing up the whole affair and coming home, but the Captain (414) persuaded him not; however, he will go long before we get back. The officers gave a farewell dinner, and made the Captain a handsome present, who made a short speech and said "how sorry he was to go", and "how he should often be thinking of his old shipmates, and that he hoped to be back nearly as soon as us". They will be away one winter and two summers and return about September 1876. The recent Austrian expedition is, I think, the reason for the present hurry in getting away.

Captain Nares said he owed his command to the zeal of his officers and men in the present expedition, and their great success, and he said it was an off-shoot of the "Challenger" cruise. I don't think he is quite strong enough for such a voyage, he suffered from rheumatics in the Antarctic, and he is (415) rather a timid man, not enterprising enough for such a command. He was up in the Arctic 16 years ago, in the "Resolute" and another ship after Sir John Franklin, he was a Lieutenant at that time, and they were frozen in so hard that they abandoned the ship, and made their way to a settlement over the ice. Some years after the "Resolute" was found in the North Atlantic by an American whale ship, having floated there, nearly 2,000 miles from where she was frozen in. She was taken to New York, and put in a thorough state of repair, and presented to the Queen at Portsmouth, by the American Government. On December 10th the Captain and Lieutenant left in the mail boat, and will be home long before you get this. They go overland from Alexandria. (416)

The Captain took with him his steward, and his coxswain, one of the finest and most popular seamen we had in the ship. He was rowed on board the mail boat by eight of the junior officers, all hands mustered on the rigging, and gave him 3 good cheers, and the band played "Auld Lang Syne". We are all sorry to lose him, for he was a very kind and good man.

A new Captain has been appointed and will be here in two days from Shanghai, where he is in command of HMS "Modiste". His name is Thompson, and bears a bad character on this station. He plays the fiddle, and I believe, is a preacher of his own sermons, but will tell you more about him by and bye. (417) His coming will probably make our commission longer. We have a new lieutenant from the "Iron Duke" named Carpenter.

The Transit of Venus was distinctly visible here, but there was no party of observation hereabouts. I wonder how they got on at Kerguelen's Land. We generally go on board the "Princess Charlotte" to church, she is a roomy old ship with 5 decks; she carried 110 guns and 1,200 men. I have been on shore several, times but the first was the greatest novelty. The town of Victoria extends from east to west for four miles, but is of no great extent from north to south. The houses are mostly of stone, three and four story's high, with open balconies, and they are wonderfully thick and overcrowded, and fires are very frequent here. The population is estimated (418) at 110,000, but if you could see the immense crowd in the streets, you would, like me, fix it at over 250,000. There are no cabs or omnibuses, so the traffic is not confined to the road sides, instead of cabs, there are hundreds of sedan chairs carried on bamboo poles by four chinamen; you can hire them for a dollar per day or for 5d an hour. Very few white people ever walk, and soldiers and sailors invariably use these chairs. It is a very common occurrence to see two or three sedan chairs coming along the streets, each containing a sailor with cigar in his mouth, and one foot out of each of the small windows. When they reach a public house they sing out "shorten sail" and out they all get, keeping the chairs waiting until they have got pretty well "three parts seven-eights" as they call it, then mounting and off again. Very often they will meet an opposition party of Yankee seamen, and there is generally a fight until the patrol comes and separates them. The Russian and American seamen generally fight also; and last Christmas day there was a regular pitched battle between the "Iron Duke's" and the Yankees, and several were killed and severely hurt. The "Iron Duke" always sends a party of seamen and an officer armed with cutlasses to patrol the streets whenever they give leave. The police of Hong Kong are Sikhs from India, they wear a blue uniform, and a white linen turban, and are a very fine body of men. The Chinese never mingle in these street quarrels, and take no notice, (420) but walk on about their business as solemn and staid as can be, and give the police very little trouble, except for stealing and quarreling in the gambling houses. The people dry their clothes on long bamboo poles thrust out from the balconies, and if you look down a street you will see nothing but these flags of blue clothes.

Besides being lighted with gas, each house and shop burns a large paper lamp like the Chinese lanterns you see in England and the streets look very brilliant at night and thronged with people. On each side of the road are fruit stalls and movable Chinese restaurants, where you get a good dinner of ice and sundries for a halfpenny.

The streets and houses are very dirty and smell very disagreeably. There (421) are but few European shops or bazaars, as the Chinese can undersell most of the trades. There are among the Chinese a great many shops where they sell silk, ivory goods, jewelry, cabinets, and curiosities of all sorts, in which you could easily spend a small fortune.

There are scores of artists, photographers, printers, book binders, carpenters, coopers, cabinet makers, stonemasons and above all barbers. About every 10th shop is a barber's, and they do gossip in them while they are getting their heads shaved and their pig-tails dressed. The undertakers make a fine show of coffins; these are made something like a slipper in shape, generally of camphor wood. The manufactures are chiefly silk, cotton, (422) paper and porcelain, but the great export is tea. There are some immense stone quarries here worked by a small army of Chinamen, and there are several docks round at Aberdeen on the other side of the island, and also at Kowloon on the opposite peninsula, there is also the prison. There are three British regiments here and one Lascar regiment from Bombay. There are several fine public buildings and merchants houses, there is a fine sailor's home for the benefit of the numerous merchant seamen of all nations. There is a Roman Church, and a Protestant Cathedral -- for Hong Kong, Canton and Shanghai form a Bishopric.

I was at St. John's cathedral the (423) other Sunday afternoon. It is a very pretty one, and so neat inside, there is a fine organ, and the singing was good. There are several monuments in it to the memory of crews of different British ships that have been wrecked in the China Seas at various times. In the grounds is a large granite monument to the memory of the brave Captain Thornton Bale R.N. who was killed under the walls of Canton in 1859 when the city was taken by the English and French. There is a fine public botanical garden in which is situated the Bishop's Palace. No other people could have made such a garden on the steep slope of a mountain some 600 feet above the sea. The women work at many manual trades as hard as the men.

December 22nd.

Our new Captain has arrived from Shanghai, with his servants, his fiddle, and his piano -- he seems a nice sort of man, but it is too early yet to form much of an opinion, as the old saying is "New brooms sweep clean", but if he proves equal to his predecessor, we shall have no reason to complain.

There was an awful wreck here last week of the steam ship "Mogul" just off the island, but must tell you more particulars next time, also of another terrible disaster near here, the destruction by fire of the steam ship "Japan". She was the American mail boat from San Francisco to Hong Kong (425) and Japan. There are only seven survivors out of about 700 so far, but the two American men of war, and a British gun boat have gone to the scene of the disaster to look for survivors.

The English mail has just arrived, and we shall receive one more here before leaving for the south and Japan. I hear that we shall leave on the 8th of January for the Phillipine Islands, Caroline Islands, and New Guinea, and we shall be at Japan early in April, and all future letters must be addressed to Yokohama.

The two American men of war have just come back, I don't know with what result, but can see several bales and packages on their decks. H.M. troop ship "Adventure" has just arrived from Sydney, and brought three of our old deserters back.

December 23rd.

The Prussian man of war "Arcona" has just come in, the one that was at Sydney with us. The mail leaves tomorrow. We are just going to make our Christmas pudding.

Yours sincerely,

Joe Matkin.

HMS "Challenger"
Hong Kong. December 28, 1874.

Dear Tom:

I am afraid we shall be going to sea before the next English mail comes in, January 7th; if so, shall get no more letters until April. The ship has been inspected today by Vice Admiral Sir. Chas. Shadwell, and we expect to leave here on the 4th. Our address until May is Yokohama, Japan, and a telegram will appear in the English papers, about the beginning of April to announce our future destination, expect it will be Vancouver's Island.

Christmas is over again and passed away very pleasantly with us, but the (428) weather was so warm that it seemed less like an English Christmas than our two previous ones, in the Bay of Biscay, and the southern ocean. As far as provisions go this is as good a part to spend it in as any foreign place in the world, and expect the Chinese did a rare trade with all these men-of-war here. The Prussian ship "Arcona" is here again, I believe there was some fighting on shore on Christmas Day between the Russians, Prussians, British and Americans. I was at St. John's cathedral yesterday afternoon, it was very nicely decorated with evergreens and reminded me more of home than anything else.

Our new Captain's name is "Thomson". He has not given us any of his sermons yet, and does not even read the service, so the Commander does it. He has two (429) fiddles, and a piano, and seems a rather gentlemanly sort of man. He also brought with him his favourite tom cat, a very good ratter, the men get him up on deck at night to fight with the old tom we brought from the Cape, and Thomson's generally gets licked, "as the sayin is".

I think I told you of HMS "Adventure" arriving here on the 23rd from Sydney, and bringing three of our old deserters back, they were imprisoned there for three months, and said they had returned for their Christmas dinner. You would see in the papers of the wreck of the steamer "Mogul", and the total destruction by fire of the American mail boat "Japan", one of the steamers running from San Francisco to Japan and Hong Kong. Another of the same line the "Alaska" (430) is on shore on the other side of the island, driven there by the typhoon. Our men who have been to Canton described it as the dirtiest and most overcrowded city in the world, there are exactly 2 millions of people within its walls and the streets are so narrow that only about four people can walk abreast. There are no vehicles in the city, the heavy work being done by porters who carry loads across a bamboo pole, and also by the river and numerous canals. The walls are high and wide, and you can't pass out of the gates after 6:30 p.m.

The river is more crowded than the streets, thousands of people live on the water entirely, where there are shops of all sorts and even theatres. There are lots of European merchants there, also at Shanghai, 700 miles north. Yokohama is(431) 1,600 miles northeast and steamers run every week. Pekin is about 1,000 miles north, and inland, but you can get to it up the river Tientsien. It was taken by the British soon after Canton and concluded the war. The Chinese, then according to Treaty, threw open five ports for European commerce, since then they have voluntarily opened several others; still, in social progress and enterprise they are far behind the Japanese.

The bamboo is the most useful tree in this part of the world, and is put to an incredible number of uses. The other day I was watching some large junks unloading fat pigs from Canton, which they did without any bustle or noise. A sort of cradle was slung across two bamboo poles, and carried on the shoulders of two men, two pigs were placed on their backs in the cradle, and carried away to be killed.

At the street corners here are professional ear cleaners, whose stock in trade consists of a three-legged stool, and a wooden skewer, this latter is bored into the patient's ear and twisted round a few times, so as to extract any cockroaches, etc.; the charge for which is about a halfpenny for both ears, and very picturesque these groups look at the street corners, almost as well as the barbers at the road sides. I have had supper once or twice at a Chinese resturant (European fashion) as they call it. There were about eight dishes, consisting of fish, ham, eggs, steak and onions, mutton chops, grilled fowl, curried cats, etc., tea or coffee, tarts, bananas, oranges and cigars. The whole affair for one shilling. If you are not too particular you may do very well, and the (433) eggs, fish and fowls are always wholesome and to be depended upon. Our Christmas dinner comprised geese, turkeys, ham and plum pudding (made by our joint efforts and a great success) also a rum cake made by the Parsee baker of Hong Kong -- "Nowrojie Dourojee". Some of the English sign boards over the Chinese shops read very funny, one over the door of a stone mason read as follows, "Sun Wong Hing will erect a most handsome monument over the grave of any person". This shop is on the way to the cemetry, and the sign is both appropriate and impartial. When I was on shore the other day I looked into a Chinese Joss House, or place of worship. The building was similar to others, but on the roof were a lot of ugly porcelain gods. Inside, facing the door was a sort of alter of gilt work covered with carved ivory and wooden gods, (434) and all sorts of queer animals and reptiles. Several lights were burning, and the whole affair reminded me of the Transformation scene at a Christmas pantomime. There was one worshipper kneeling before the altar, and a priest officiating. In front of the worshipper was his offering, consisting of a large dish of roast pork. The priest kept pouring some liquid out of a teapot into some small glasses and handing them to the worshipper, who placed them on the alter, and prostrated himself to the ground. Neither spoke a word, the priest wore a particular dress and appeared to take it pretty cool, but kept a hungry eye on the roast pork, and looked rather impatient for at the door was another devotee, with an offering of oranges and bananas. These offerings are the priest's perquisites, and would account for his being such a stout party. They (435) sell sticks of scented wood, similar to cinnamon sticks, to the people for burning in their houses and junks to their own particular gods. The Chinese worship the moon, and have special services when it is at the full. I had a walk the other afternoon to the top of Victoria Peak, there is a fine zig-zag road leading to the very top, and it is so cleverly made that a horse can go up, you can ride up and down again in a sedan chair for a dollar. This road was made by the Chinese, and must have taken a long time, and cost a lot of money, these sort of jobs they can do better and cheaper than any other people, and the Great Wall of China, and the Grand Canal will testify to the stability of the work. On the summit is a signal staff and a telegraph (436) leading to the town, so that as soon as a vessel is sighted and made out, it is known long before she arrives. A gun is fired from the summit on the arrival of the English mail. There are several houses up there and a cottage for the governor during the sick and hot season. There is also a barracks for sick soldiers, a fine breeze is always blowing up there. The view is wonderfully striking, you can see the wild mountainous coast of China for miles and miles, and away inland the peaks of mountains over 8,000 feet high. Looking out to sea you can count scores of lofty sterile looking islands belonging to the "Ladrone" group. From the mouth of the great Canton river you will see scores of junks standing across for Hong Kong, loaded with provisions and merchandise. Right under your feet (437) is the city and bay, with its numerous shipping, and opposite is the barren, desolate looking peninsula of Kowloon. Altogether it is one of the most wonderful panoramas you can conceive. Although the coast of China has such a forbidding appearance, there is no country in the world so fertile and well cultivated. Victoria Peak is 1,875 feet above the sea, but I would rather go up there four times than ascent that volcano of Goomong-api once. All the roads of Hong Kong are in beautiful order for there are no vehicles of any sort to break them up. About one mile from the town of Victoria is a gully between two ranges of hills, called "Happy Valley", here, vegetation flourishes and the whole aspect of nature is changed. No one, to look at the general barren (438) appearance of Hong Kong, would imagine there was such a pleasant spot on the island. Out this way is the cricket ground, and a small, but well kept race course, on which is a grandstand. The horses that run are principally those of the military officers. Here, also are all the foreigner's cemeteries, the Chinese being on the other side of the island and nothing to look at. The first and largest cemetry is the Mohammedan, which is surrounded by a good wall and looks very bare, the stones are all lying down. There are many Mohammedans in Hong Kong; the Sikh policemen, and the Lascar troops are all of that sect, and there are lots of priests knocking about. On the other side of the Mohammedan wall is the Catholic cemetry, also surrounded by a wall,(439) and just beyond that is the Protestant, the best kept of the three, and in which are buried a great many brave soldiers and sailors, who were killed during the long Chinese war, and there are scores who died on the station from the effects of the climate, and there are many stones to seamen who have been killed by pirates on the coast. There are a great many American men-of-war men buried there and scores of merchant seamen of all flags and nations. Some of the monuments erected by the different regiments and ships are very large and handsome. The "Calcutta" (flag ship during the Chinese war) has one to her officers and men, to the memory of over 100 of them. The favorite walk of the European community on Sunday afternoon is out this way; when I say walk, it should be ride in a sedan chair, merchants, hotel keepers, clerks, (440) soldiers and their wives, all use these. They dress and live very extravagantly and generally above their means. It is a common thing when a seaman volunteers for the Chinese service, to hear some old sailor say, "There goes another candidate for the Happy Valley." I have not yet seen anything in the papers of the new arctic expedition. I hear the English mail has left Singapore this morning, so we shall probably wait for her, it is 1450 miles from here and they generally come in five days, if the monsoons are not too strong against them. There is a fine line of French mail boats running here and to Shanghai, via the Suez Canal, Bombay, etc., from Marseilles, calling at the French possessions of Saigon, Cochin China. (441) The fare from here to England by the mail boat - 1st class, is 98 pounds. Opium is the principal import here, it chiefly comes from British India, and there is an immense profit on it, fortunately it will not grow in China. The weather here is very dry, and generally warm, with very sudden changes.

December 29th.

We have been outside the harbour today to adjust compasses, and have a little dredging, and about 40 ladies and gentlemen accompanied us to witness operations, but they appeared to enjoy the luncheon and dancing most. We are just steaming back to our anchorage again, have had a good view of the Ladrone Island and the mainland of China. It is very cold up in Japan now, but will be getting (442) warm before we arrive there. We are going down into the broiling weather again, which everyone dislikes, and would much rather go a trip down to Kerguelen Land. After you receive this you may expect no more letters for 3 months and I shall get none either. One of these British regiments here is going to the Fiji Islands in the troop ship "Adventure". I expect the natives there will decrease rapidly during the next 10 years. I don't think we are going to Petropavlovsky at all now, or anywhere north of Japan on this coast, as we are so much behind time. Should much like to have gone there, and also to the Aleutian Islands. When we leave Japan, we may consider ourselves homeward bound, we shall be about a year and a half after that before we reach Old England.

December 31st.

Another Russian man-of-war has arrived flying an Admiral's flag, and the Prussian frigate "Arcona" has left here for the south. We were paid a month's money again yesterday and the Chinese traders, with that sublime pecuniary instinct, got scent of it and swarmed alongside with curiosities, etc. Half the men are on a day's leave and the rest are going when they return and we shall then be ready for sea.

January 1st, 1875

The French ironclad ram "Monteulieu" came in yesterday afternoon, and another Prussian frigate. The French Admiral saluted the British flag with 21 guns, and the British Admiral with 13, this was returned from the shore battery and the flag ship. The Prussian ship then saluted the French Admiral, and he saluted the Prussian Admiral.

The American ship had gone out, or the saluting would have been more intricate still. The flag of the nation being saluted is hoisted at the fore of the ship saluting. We expect to go to sea tomorrow morning, so am afraid shall miss the mail.

Your sincerely,
Joe Matkin.

HMS "Challenger" at
Hamboldt Bay, New Guinea
February 24th, 1875

Dear Tom

I had not time to write you from Manilla, as we only had a few minutes notice that there was an opportunity for sending letters.

We left Hong Kong on the 6th of January for there, and had pretty good weather across the China Sea; during the voyage we sounded at an average depth of 2,000 fathoms. On Sunday the 10th, we sighted the large and mountainous island of Luzon, at about 100 miles north of its capital, Manilla. The wind falling we got up steam, and when about 60 miles from the town, we sighted a small dismasted (446) vessel, and went out of our course to examine her. She proved to be a small Spanish coasting schooner, and from her appearance looked as if she had been plundered by pirates. We towed her in to Manilla, and being of no value, she was given back to her owner, who lived there and had been out looking for her for some time. Her name was the "St. Mayana" and proved to have been robbed by Chinese and Malay pirates, and her crew murdered.

We anchored for the second time in Manilla Bay on the 11th. The place looked as pretty and sleepy as ever, and on going on shore one evening found the same stagnant peculiarity which all Spanish and most Catholic countries seem to exhibit -- soldiers, priests, ladies in carriages, bands playing, church bells ringing, natives hard (447) at work and white folks doing nothing but smoke, perspire and drink coffee. There are a great many Chinese in the Phillipine Islands, and they work harder than anybody; but a Chinaman does not labour for society, or for anybody's good but his own. He wants the approbation of no man, and cares not what you think of him so long as you pay him. They will work very hard in such countries as America and Australia and are invaluable, if not too numerous.

Our ship brought the news per telegram received at Hong Kong the day we left, of the elevation of Alphonso to the Kingdom of Spain. The government at Manilla refused to credit this information, or to allow of its being published in the papers until they had received two telegrams of their own (448) confirming the same, which will probably reach them during the present year.

We found a Spanish frigate, a Prussian corvette and a Russian frigate lying in Manilla Bay, and the British gun boat "Elk" which sailed the next day for Singapore and took a small mail for us to be forwarded to England. The Prussians are well represented in their navy in this part of the world; lots of their officers, as well as Spanish and Russians visited our ship during the stay, and our officers gave the usual dinner party before we left. Our new Captain is a regular ladies' man, and a frightful old growler, and spinner of incredible yarns, commencing "When I was a midshipman 20 years ago". He is also fond of his cigars and good living.

We left Manilla on the 14th for (449) Cebu, another of the Philippine Islands, 300 miles further south. We steamed through some very intricate straits, with small islands sprinkled about like mushrooms. Lots of lofty islands were passed and the weather got warmer every day, over 90° in the shade.

On the 17th we passed hundreds of sea serpents averaging 2 feet long, floating on the surface of the sea; they were beautifully marked with black and yellow stripes, and were so active in the water, that it was not an easy matter to catch them. On the 18th we sighted Cebu and Matan an adjoining island and steamed through the strait between the two, the scenery on either side being beautiful, anchored off the town of Cebu the same day. The strait is only half a mile wide near the town. Cebu is a volcanic island, tolerably high and (450) Matan is of coral formation, scarcely above the sea level, but very fertile. Magellan discovered the Philippine Islands, and was murdered by the natives of Matan in 1521, and lies buried where he fell, on which spot there is a large monument erected to his memory; our photographer went to Matan on purpose to take a view of it and I have managed to obtain one copy. There was a large monument to Magellan in the great square at Manilla.

Cebu is about 100 miles long and 30 broad, and is a great tobacco growing island, it being sent on to Manilla to be made up into cigars. There was a fine British merchant ship at Cebu from Sydney with coal, enroute for China for a cargo. It seems strange that Sydney should be sending coal to such places as the Philippine Islands, where it lies almost on the surface of the earth! There was also a French barque at anchor, and she sailed the next (451) day for London with a cargo of cigars. There was a British, American and German Consult at Cebu, as it is a place of considerable trade. We obtained fresh meat and vegetables there from a German contractor. Fruit was very plentiful, and cigars could be bought by hundreds for old clothes, knives or razors -- these article being luxuries and unobtainable by the natives. I got 1100 there for a few knives and fancy articles, if it were not for the custom house I should bring them home. The people are much handsomer than those of the other Philippine Islands we have been to and were more like Polynesians than Papuans. The women were very fond of dress, without being at all overburdened with it. (452) The bottom of the sea round Cebu is covered with gauze looking creatures called "Venus Flower Baskets", which are spun by a sort of water beetle. and look like columns of frozen lace. I went on shore one evening and had a very pleasant walk into the interior. The town was nothing attractive; there were the usual Catholic churches, in front of which quantities of fireworks were sent off every evening, for the amusement of admiring crowds of natives, while the bells of all the churches discoursed sour music, like those at Bahia, Brazil.

I was in conversation with a Spaniard on shore, belonging to Cadiz, who had been in Australia and America. He said the Philippine Islands were the oldest European colony in the east, and almost in the world, and it (453) was the most backward; this he attributed to the inherent laziness of the natives. If he had also said to the strange deterioration of the Spaniards since the days of Cortes, he would have been nearer the mark.

On the 20th we took in 75 tons of coal and on the 23rd a Spanish steamer arrived from Manilla with news of the political changes in Spain, and owing to them, appointing the following day a general holiday. So on the 24th flags were streaming from all the houses, the church bells rang louder than ever, and fireworks were going off in the evening to a frightful extent. The natives seemed very well satisfied with their new king and would be ready for any further political changes at a very short notice. We left Cebu on the 24th for Mindanao, the second sized of the Philippine Islands, and about as large as England.

On the 25th, we passed the large island of Bohol, and on the 26th, touched the small volcanic isle of Camuiguin, and landed a party thereon. It was about 5 miles long; one end was flat, fertile and inhabited, the other, a black sterile burning cinder, rising 1,500 feet above the sea level and smoking night and day, it was far more active than any other volcanos we have seen, and dense clouds of smoke ascended from caves level with the water's edge, without affecting the temperature of the sea. We left again the same evening and sighted Mindanao the next day.

For 12 days we sailed parallel to the western side of the island and on the 29th dropped anchor for the second time off the capitol, Zamboanga. We brought despatches to the Governor (455) of Mindanao from Cebu concerning the new King, and the following day the six Spanish gun boats lying there, and the town itself, were dressed with flags. The same evening we steamed across to some small islands, 10 miles to the south, and the next day landed an exploring party thereon, while the ship steamed away to make some magnetic observations, returning to Zamboanga the same night. On Sunday, the 31st, I went on shore and had a nice walk into the country, and found that the rice crop had been gathered in since we were there last, and it being the rainy season, the fields were under water. Cock fighting is the great Sunday amusement at Zamboanga, which takes place in the centre of the principal street, most of the Spanish military and naval officers looking on, and betting on their pet birds. The birds belong to the natives, and to the (456) Chinese, and the owner backs his bird for so much. Cock fighting is about the only amusement I ever saw the Chinese engage in, but as they are great gamblers, this is not to be wondered at so much.

I was on shore again before we left, and looked at the old fort, 300 years old, but think I described the place in a previous letter. A party of our officers, seamen, naturalists, etc. went on a 4 day's excursion into the interior of Mindanao, but as they only penetrated about six miles, they can't know much more about its capabilities and resources than we who stayed on board. They shot some monkeys, and other queer animals, and (457) brought a tiny monkey back, whose mother they had shot, but in about ten days it pined away and died. Fire flies were very numerous there. On the 23rd of February we got up anchor, and steamed to Port Isabel on the same island, to coal. In getting up the anchor we brought up from the bottom, two other old anchors, and long lengths of cable attached, which, from their corroded appearance must have been there many years. Port Isabel was a convict settlement for natives, and they carried the coal on board, and were rigidly overlooked over by Spanish soldiers. We took in 100 tons, making 240 on board to take us all the way to Japan, via New Guinea, etc., against the N.E. trade wind.

We returned to Zamboanga on the 4th and found a Spanish frigate at anchor, (458) with an Admiral's flag flying. On the 5th, we took in some breeding goats and pigs for landing on uninhabited islands, and left Zamboanga for New Guinea. On the 6th one of the pigs foolishly committed suicide by jumping out of the cabin into the sea. On the 8th, we sounded close to the S.E. point of Mindanao at 2,025 fathoms, and on the 9th we lost sight of the Philippine group altogether. On the 10th, we sighted the Mianclin Islands and trawled off Luboc the largest of them. The depth was only 500 fathoms and the trawling very successful. Luboc was 2000 feet above the sea level in its highest part, the island looked fertile. A canoe came off from it flying the Dutch flag, and brought several beautiful birds which were bought by our naturalists.

(459) The natives were almost black, and seemed of pure Papuan origin. On the 12th, we trawled at 2,550 fathoms, but got nothing, the bottom being of pumice stone. On the 13th, we were getting close to the equator, and were out of the trade winds region into that of constant precipitation, which region extends for about 40° on either side of the line, and is one of the most uncomfortable and depressing portions of the world. Evaporation is going on day and night to an incredible extent. The vapour after ascending into the cloud region is met by an icy current of air from either pole, which condenses a great deal of it again, and causes these constant rains that are here met with, which every few hours comes in torrents. I never saw it rain to such a degree elsewhere (460) and mariners have described the surface of the sea immediately after a heavy down fall of rain, as being almost fresh enough to drink for a short time. Some times it rains one side of the ship and not the other, and you can see the squalls coming for miles before it reaches you. But it is not only the rain that makes it uncomfortable but the damp oppresive nature of the air, which seems to take all the energy and life out of a man. The atmosphere looks hazy and you can scarcely see 10 miles, your clothes and boots get covered in blue mould and require airing every day. Men subject to rheumatics suffer terribly and can tell when the rain is coming long before it does. The sun does not seem so hot as the air, and the inside of the ship is (461) like an oven, especially if we are under steam. Strong squalls of wind come with the rain, and these assist ships across this region in a few days, but we are not like other vessels, as we shall be in this part for the next month, steering east when we leave. On the 17th, the temperature of the sea on the surface and the air in the shade was exactly the same -- 86° -- that of the sea seldom reaches higher and varies if you are steering north or south 4 or 5 degrees a day. We were seven days sailing 200 miles and crossed the equator in longitude 138°E on Sunday 21st at 9 a.m. I might say we flopped across it, going about half a knot per hour, and it rained all day. The same night we got up steam as there was no sign of any wind and proceeded to New Guinea, 100 (462) miles distant south. On the 22nd, we sounded at 2020 fathoms and passed enormous masses of dead mangrove trees and bushwood, etc. Dolphins and sharks also became very numerous. Yesterday at 12 o'clock we sighted New Guinea out of the fog about 12 miles away. The land was high and covered with vegetation and as the weather cleared a little, several mountain peaks appeared above the clouds. They were at least 6,000 feet high, but on the opposite side of the island there are ranges whose peaks exceed 16,000 feet and what there may be in the interior no man knows. At 6 p.m. we steamed into Humboldt Bay, and dropped anchor about 3 miles from the shore. We soon saw some lights dancing about on the beach, and at 8 p.m. two canoes came off to the ship, (463) but for a long time they would not come alongside. A blue light was lit and though it startled them a bit at first, they soon gained confidence, and came close enough to receive several little presents, and bundles of cigars. They were entirely naked, and tattoed and painted in a most horrible manner. They were armed with bows and arrows, spears and stone hatchets. They could all say "Segar, Segar" and smoked away with great delight. At 9 p.m. they returned to their village to fetch others, and all night long we could hear them gathering round the ship and jabbering like magpies.

New Guinea or Papua was discovered by Torres in the middle of the 16th century and the strait which separates it from Australia is named after him. It is 1200 miles long and averages 250 broad, and is more than three times as large as England. It is the headquarters of the Papuan or Austral negro race, which on this island alone is supposed to number several millions. Of its interior nothing definite is known, one or two travellers have succeeded in penetrating a short distance from the western side of the island, but the determined hostility of the natives prevented any connected exploration. The natives being broken up into different tribes hostile to each other proved the greatest drawback. One German traveller estimated the mountains in the interior as exceeding 20,000 feet in altitude, and of course where there are such mountains, there must be rivers of considerable extent. The western portion of the island being contiguous to the (465) Dutch and Spanish possessions, has been visited by their ships at intervals for the last 200 years, and it is certain that the Chinese were acquainted with it much earlier. In exchange for iron and fancy goods, they obtained from the Papuans ambergris, tortoise shell, small pearls, and birds of paradise, of which country the latter are natives. No permanent settlement has ever been made onthe island, and even its coasts have not been properly surveyed.

Bouganville, the French navigator, surveyed Humboldt Bay and other parts of this side in 1769, and the Russians have also visited it during the present century. One or two British men-of-war have been within the last 20 years, one the "Basilish" has just gone home from making a survey of the coast (466) opposite Australia, with a view to making a settlement in that direction. A year or two ago a report was spread in Australia that gold had been discovered in New Guinea, so a party of diggers and adventurers started from Sydney as the pioneers of the new El Dorado, and some of them never returned, the climate and natives killing them, so the expedition came back again to Sydney without seeing a sign of the precious metal. The place where they landed is over 1,000 miles southwest of Humboldt Bay. Those missionaries we saw at Cape Yorke make occasional visits to the southern portion of the island, but as yet their progress has been small compared to that confined space, and the work of evangelizing the Papuans will be one of difficulty and danger and will necessarily take a long time.

(467) The natives in the interior are supposed to be a very different race to these near the coasts, where they are frequently mixed with the Malays. By daylight this morning about 30 canoes were alongside, containing some 150 natives. They were of a dark brown colour, tall, well built men with long wooly hair, were entirely naked, and most of them were tattoed and painted with red and blue ochre; a great many had spear wounds and arrow holes in various parts of their bodies, which had evidently been received in battle. Their canoes were something similar to the Fijians and they brought off cocoanuts, bananas and native war implements for trading purposes.

Cigars and iron hoops were most sought after by them, not caring much for clothes, beads, or fancy articles, and had no idea of tobacco or pipes. I should think they have been visited occasionally by vessels from the Philippine Islands trading with cigars, etc. The iron hoops they straighten and sharpen, and grind them into fighting hatchets. Their own knives and axes are made of a hard green stone sharpened, it is exactly like that you see brooches made of occasionally. The noise they made alongside was deafening and trading in Papuan war implements has been going on all day long to an incredible extent. Most of them had bones through the nose and ears, and ornaments of bone round their arms and ankles, a row of cock's feathers round the crown of the head, and a necklace of human teeth. No women or children have been near us, but can we see them down on the beach. Their huts are neat (469) looking conical structures, over 30 feet in height and apparently built of bamboo and grass, etc. They all chew betel root to a frightful extent, and have no teeth or voices, owing to this habit, still they were a finer looking race than the Arroo Islanders, and far superior to the aboriginals of Australia.

At 7 a.m. we got up anchor and steamed in towards the settlement, the band playing all the time, which startled them at first but they soon ceased to notice it. They yelled with delight when the anchor came up, but evidently could not make out what it was that moved the ship. All the boats were got out at 9 a.m. preparatory to a week's stay, surveying, exploring, etc.

Steam was got up in the steam pinnace and the boat's crew were all armed, and at 10 a.m. the Captain left the ship for (470) the native settlement, taking several presents of hatchets, fancy gear, etc. Just as he approached a crowd of naked women rushed down to the beach, armed with spears, bows and arrows, etc., and frightened our brave Captain on board again in very little time, after seizing everything in the boat they could lay their hands on.

The women were much uglier than the men, and quite able to look after themselves. Another boat tried to land at a village near, but was served in exactly the same manner. They evidently knew the use of fire arms, and it was the sight of these alone that prevented them from active measures. This afternoon the steam pinnace with an armed party effected a landing in an uninhabited part of the bay and the naturalists shot several cockatoo parrots, etc.

Lat. 20°S.

These islands are 400 miles due east of Humboldt Bay. On the 26th, we lost sight of the mountains of New Guinea, and passed Fiju and Matty Islands, made the usual slow passage across, and had wet miserable weather. On the 28th we passed Bertrand Island and sounded at 1,025 fathoms. We sighted several of the group on the 2nd instant and anchored on the 3rd in our present position. In 1642 Tasman visited these islands, but they were probably discovered by the Spaniards at an earlier date. Bouganville visited them in 1767. They are a considerable cluster situated to the W.N.W. of New Ireland, only one is over 100 sq. miles in extent, this is tolerably elevated and (472) of volcanic origin. The remainder are small level islands of coral formation, they are all fertile, and several are inhabited. The total population is not over 4,000. We are anchored in a bay between the large island and several smaller ones, surrounded by extensive coral reefs, over which the sea rushes and roars tremendously, especially during the night. Our officers have surveyed this bay and called it "Nares Bay".

Several canoes full of naked warriors came out to meet us, and numbers of them have been alongside all the week, trading with their native war implements, cocoanuts, bananas, yams, etc. for iron hoops.

They had no idea of tobacco or cigars, but the hoops and hatchets were prized above anything and there is scarcely one left on board now. They are great thieves, and are (473) not at all afraid to come on board to have their portraits taken. They are something like the Papuans, but not so fierce looking. They are evidently mixed with the South Sea Islanders, and is a great diversity of features and colour amoungst them; are more used to the sea than the Papuans, and swim and dive like fishes. They chewed betel nut, and their weapons are similar to the Papuans, only made of different material. They fight among themselves, one island and tribe against another, and there is no sign of any missionary ever having been here. They wear large mother-of-pearl shells round the neck as a charm, and do not care to part with them.

The islands are out of the track of regular navigation, and are seldom visited. The natives are tattoed and wear bones through the ears and nose. The disease called (474) elephantiasis is very prevalent here. I bought a cocoanut the other morning with a young palm tree growing out of it, and on opening it was never so surprised with anything before: the young tree holds the nut suspended by several long white fibres, which completely envelope it and their province is to supply the young tree with nourishment until it no longer requires it. On opening the inside I found the whole of the milk absorbed and the nut quite dry but full of a sweet pithy substance. The cocoa palm flourishes in a sandy soil, and the young tree bears fruit in about 3 years. Shooting parties have been away every day to the large island and shot enough pigeons (of a parrot species) to last all hands twice. The natives act as guides and lie down (475) when the gun is being fired and yell with delight on seeing the bird fall.

The Admiralty Islanders are Polygamists. One of the chiefs offered our Captain two of his best looking wives for a hatchet. Yesterday two couples of breeding goats were taken over to the main island and landed there to remain to increase and multiply; lots of pigs are there already, but being no cocoanut palms, there are no natives residing on the island. I was on shore yesterday for a few hours. The island is about 2 miles long, and a half broad, and contains about 600 inhabitants who live in large huts, and chiefly on cocoanuts, yams, fish and pigs; which are very numerous. The women are the ugliest human beings I ever saw and are horribly painted and tattoed. The men are quite handsome compared to them.

(476) They wear nothing but a branch of palm leaves round the middle, and when about 50 of them danced a war dance to the music of tom-toms, anything more suggestive of the "Infernal Regions", I never saw. In a physical point of view they are superior to the aboriginal women of Australia.

At the entrance to one large hut, were two life size, roughly carved figures, representing a naked man and woman, but the natives did not appear to pay any reverence to these deities. Last night we fired off several shell rockets which frightened them a great deal.

We are just leaving these islands for the Caroline and Ladrone group further north, and we hope soon to be in more pleasant weather again. At present it is raining very heavily.

April 8th, Lat. 30°N, Long 137°E.

We crossed the equator on the 12th and sounded every other day and trawled occasionally. The average depth up to Japan is 2,300 fathoms, the highest was 2,550 with one exception. On the 21st, we sighted one of the Caroline Islands, but a long distance off, and we stood on for Guam, the chief of the Ladrone group, but the wind drove us to leeward of it and we stood on for Japan. The 23rd of March was a great day in the annals of the "Challenger", as we took soundings at the enormous depth of 4,550 fathoms (5 1/2 miles); the lead was sent down twice to make certain. The temperature on the bottom was 35°; at the surface 80°. It is the greatest reliable depth on record, and was obtained in Lat. 10°16'N, Long. 143°16'E, about midway between the Caroline and Ladrone Islands. It must (478) have been some deep ocean valley, for the sounding within 100 miles of either side of it was 2,400 fathoms.

On Good Friday, we signalled the first ship for six weeks, the "John Nicholson" from Sydney to Manilla with coal. On the 6th of April, there was an eclipse of the sun visible from here between 3 and 5 p.m. We expect to get in by Sunday, the weather is getting very cold and are now hungering for fresh provisions, letters and newspapers, having been 100 days without any, our latest English paper being November 23, 1874.

Yours sincerely,

Joe Matkin.

H.M.S. "Challenger" at
Yokoska, April 30th, 1875

Dear Tom

We arrived here at 6 o'clock on the night of the 12th and received our letters and papers soon after and all were most eager to read the news. The railway accident was a most terrible affair and I think the English companies might learn a great deal from the Japanese, although the railway between Yokohama and Yedo is on the American system. The marine disasters of the "La Plata" and "Cospatrick" were pitiful events, as regards the latter, I hope more survivors may turn up and that we may learn more particulars as to the cause of the fire, and the means taken to overcome it. How the newspapers gloat over the details and horrors of the events!

Since my arrival here I have been "up to town", for Yedo is a town, and excepting London and Paris there are no European cities larger; however, I am not going to give a description of its wonders in this letter, the next one must be reserved for that. We are now in the Japanese Imperial Dock at Yokoska, a town and bay in the Gulf of Yedo, 18 miles east of Yokohama, for the purpose of refitting, etc.

This letter is a sort of introduction to the descriptive one which is to follow, containing an account of European progress, etc., in Japan, up to 1856, when the country was opened for commerce and intercourse with all nations. It is gathered from various (481) books. In the year 1278, Marco Polo the great traveller of Venetia was at Pekin soon after Kublai Khan had over-run China, on his return to Europe in 1295, he pointed to the eastern margin of the Yellow Sea, and said there was a great island there named "Xipango" or "Cissango", peopled by a highly civilized and wealthy race, who had bravely rolled back the tide of Tartar conquest in the days of Kublai Khan. His countrymen smiled with incredulity at this wondrous tale, and for several subsequent centuries Europe knew but very little more about Japan. It was to search for the mythical land, that Columbus sailed from Spain in 1492, and discovered the great American continent, which, he for a long time thought was the same fabulous Xipango. Before Europeans found their way round the Cape of Good Hope, China (482) was allowed to send 15 junks annually to and from Nagaski, a port at the extreme south of the Japanese Empire, for trading purposes. The Japanese group was inhabited long before the commencement of authentic records, whether peopled by refugees from China, The Corea Peninsula, or from the great deserts of Scythia is not certain. The ancient history of Japan says that 650 years B.C. a hero known as the divine warrior, firmly established a dynasty which has flourished to the present day, in a line of 122 male and female monarchs. Of their reigns, far better records exist than the oldest European Empires can boast, the early monarchs combined in their persons the double office of high priest and generalissimo. Chinese historians assert that Japan was voluntarily tributary to the Celestial Empire, but (483) this may be doubted. Kublai Khan after he had subjected China, sent envoys to the Emperor of Japan demanding his submission, which was refused, and when the great Tartar conqueror invaded the country with a Mongol Chinese army, he was boldly met by that of the Japanese, and totally routed and driven back. The "Mikado" or Emperor, was assisted at this juncture by a "Tiegoon" or assistant emperor, who took the command of the armies while the Mikado performed his spiritual part of praying for their success. The office of Tigoon was then made hereditary and since then there has always been a "Spiritual" and a "Temporal" Emperor in Japan, until 1868, when the present Mikado defeated the reigning family of usurpers, and ascended the throne as sole Emperor.

After the Mongol hordes were driven back, the Japanese retaliated by (484) ravaging the coast of China, and for several subsequent centuries, their bargues were the terror of the China Seas. The Portuguese were the first to rediscover Xipango, when Fernando Mindes Pinto accompanied a Japanese bargue from Ning-po, China, and reached Kin-sin, Japan. His report on reaching Europe in 1542 was hardly believed, but from then to 1579, and after the Spaniards were firmly established on the Phillipine Islands, numbers of Spanish and Portuguese missionaries under the great Francis Xavier, who was afterwards martyred in China, visited Japan, and converted one million of the natives. In the year 1579 Saiko Sama, was the Temporal Emperor, who one day asked a Spaniard how it was that the King of Spain had managed to possess himself of half the world? -- The reply was -- "He first sends priests to win the people, his soldiers then are sent to join the native Christians, and the conquest is easy". Saiko Sama was so much struck and alarmed that he swore "no priest should be left alive in his dominions". In 1587 the first edict for the banishment of the Catholic missionaries was issued, the native Christians were sent away to fight in the Corea, and were decimated. In 1596 the edict was reversed against Christians. All missionaries were ordered to quit the country, twenty-three disobeyed and in 1597 suffered death at Nagaski, and were duly canonized in 1627 by Pope Urban VIII. Saiko Sama's warrant has been preserved, which reads as follows - "I have condemned these prisoners to death for having come from the Phillipine Islands to Japan, under the pretended title of ambassadors, and for having persisted in (486) my land without my permission, and preached the Christian religion, against my decree. I order and wish that they be crucified in my city of Nagaski". A few Portuguese were allowed to remain in Japan, but they were obliged to disown their religion and conform to the native habits and laws. In 1767 the Abba Sedotti learnt the Japanese language from refugees at Manilla and sailed from thence with several missionaries to make another attempt at converting the Japanese. He was landed on the coast and from that hour has never been heard of. Christianity never flourished in Japan after this.

In the year 1600 the Dutch made their appearance there, notwithstanding the hostility of the Spaniards and the bulls of the Pope, and were allowed to establish a factory at Fesando, and from that time until within (487) the last 30 years, they have remained master of the field, as regards trade with Japan.

The pilot on the Dutch ships on their first perilous voyage was "William Adams" a native of Gillingham, Kent. They were two years on their passage out, the fleet being separated and dispersed near the Straits of Magellan. The "Erasmus", Adam's ship, was the only one that reached Japan. The Portuguese misrepresented the character of the new arrival, and endeavored to have the crew treated as thieves and robbers saying "that if justice was executed upon them it would terrify the rest of their countrymen from coming there anymore". Adams, and one of the Dutch sailors was brought before the Emperor in whose presence Adams spoke up manfully -- "I showed him" says he, "the name of our country, and that our land had sought out the (488) East Indies for a long time", and after explaining the purely mercantile purpose of the voyage, the King asked him whether our country had wars? "I answered him, yea with the Portuguese and Spaniards, being at peace with all other nations". This was the best reply he could have given and probably saved the lives of the whole party. They were treated kindly by the Emperor, but they and their stout bargue were never to leave Japan. The "Erasmus" was ordered to the city of Yedo, the temporal capitol of Japan. Adam's merits were so appreciated that he obtained great influence and when in 1649 the next Dutch ships visited Japan, considerable privileges were conceded them through "the good offices of Will Adams". By those ships he sent letters to England, and had been 15 years in the country when he learnt that (489) a vessel bearing the red cross of Old England had reached Firando. She was the "Clive" of London, belonging to the East India Company (then in its infancy) and commanded by Captain John Faris, furnished with a letter from King James I, and suitable presents for the Emperor. The "Clive" left the Thames on April 11th, 1611 and reached Firando on the 11th June, 1613, having spent two years trading on the way. Adams was sent from Yedo to Firando to greet his long expected countrymen. Thirteen weary years the old man had looked forward hopefully, and at last his prayer was heard. He, with Captain Faris, and 10 Englishmen started for Yedo, bearing the royal letter and presents, and the influence of Adams soon obtained from the Emperor a favorable treaty granting (490) to England the most important privileges ever conceded by Japan to a foreign country.

In 1613 an English as well as a Dutch factory was established at Firando. The English for political reasons very soon withdrew and so avoided the trouble that overtook the rest of the European residents in Japan. Will Adams was employed at Yedo in building ships for the Emperor and was advanced to the rank of Imperial Tutor, being acquainted with geometry and mathematics.

He acted as interpreter to the East India Company, and possessed an estate about 2 miles from where we are lying in dock. He left about 800 pounds in his will to be divided between his English and his Japanese family. There are people in this neighbourhood who claim to be his descendants. About 3 years ago, his tomb and that of his (491) Japanese wife, was discovered by an Englishman living at Yokohama, and all Europeans visiting Japan endeavor to see the grave of the first Englishman who reached the country. It is on the summit of a hill on his own estate, being buried there at his own request, and the Japanese Mrs. Adams lies beside him. I went yesterday to visit the tomb. There is a Budhist Temple near it; the priest of which says that Adams used to worship there. The hill commands a splendid view of the Bay of Yedo and of the surrounding country, the scenery is magnificent, and is considered the finest in this part of Niphon. There is a religious feast observed at Yedo in June to the honor of Will Adams, the "Man of Kent". After his death the English factory at Firando was abandoned and in the following year the (492) persecution against the Christians again began, and ended in the withdrawal of the English, the expulsion of the Spaniards and imprisonment of the Dutch to the island of Decima, Nagaski, where they were not allowed to worship according to their religion, or even to observe the sabbath. Under these conditions the Dutch factory continued at Decima until the recent treaties with European powers.

Nagaski is at the extreme south of the Japanese empire. Firando is a little further north. The empire of Japan or Niphon as the natives call it, consists of four large islands and about 300 small ones -- many scores of which we passed coming into Yokohama. The large island of Niphon, or Japan proper, an island over 800 miles in length.

From the shores of Japan to those of China is 450 miles in a direct line. (493) The area of Japan is about 160,000 sq. miles (one-fifth larger than Great Britain and Ireland together), and the population is estimated at 30 million. It was formerly governed by some 200 Daimios, or native princes, who were tributary to the Emperor, but very turbulent and independent, but in 1866 this feudal system was abolished and the present Mikado is sole Emperor (temporal and spiritual) and he frequently sees the ambassadors at Yedo or Tokio, as the natives call it (sic); which means eastern capital. It has only been the metropolis since 1690 before which time it was a paltry fishing village. The ancient capitol of Japan was Kamakura, an insignificant little town about 8 miles from Yokoska and which I could see from Adam's tomb yesterday. In the 16th century according to the Jesuit priests, it contained 200,000 houses. (494) Japan is fertile and beautifully cultivated. It is rich in minerals, including coal, possesses plenty of magnificent harbours and its seas abound with fish. Agriculture is the principal native pursuit, rice is largely cultivated and exported. The chief manufactures are those of silk and cotton, lacquering or japanning, and porcelain. The internal trade is very extensive and rigid regulations are in force for protecting and encouraging home industry. Foreign trade was far from being popular until the last few years. In 1853, the American fleet under Commodore Perry forced its way up the Gulf of Yedo, and after proceeding to active measures forced a treaty in 1854 between Japan and the United States. The ports of Osaka, Kanagama, Yokohama, Nagaski and Kakodeki, were (495) thrown open for foreign trade in 1859, when all the great European powers arranged separate treaties with Japan. The second treaty between Great Britain was concluded by Lord Elgin in 1859 soon after the fall of Canton. There was a "Spiritual" and a "Temporal" Emperor of Japan at that time. The former lived at Micao, a city 350 miles further south and according to Japanese etiquette the "Spiritual" Emperor never leaves his palace.

Our government in 1859 presented him with a fine steam yacht to travel round his palace and grounds. Osaca is the sea port of Micao. Micao has nearly a million inhabitants. The Japanese are of a yellowish complexion, with thick black hair, are not much like the Chinese in appearance and quite different to them in temperment, being a cheerful, contented, jolly people.

(496) I consider them the most wonderful and interesting race we have yet met with, their curiosities and manufactures in wood and bronze work are infinitely more artistic and pretty than anything the Chinese ever produced, but must tell you more about them in my next letter. The weather here is rather warmer than England in the middle of the day, and certainly colder in the evenings and early mornings. Volcanoes, hot springs, sulphur springs, etc., are very plentiful in Japan and earthquakes are thought nothing of. The atmosphere is wonderfully clear here and the peak of Fusi-Hamu, 60 miles inland, looks scarcely more than 6 miles away at sunrise and sunset.

Fusi-hama or the "matchless mountain" of Japan, is the prettiest mountain in the world. It is 11,500 feet high and stands (497) in the middle of an immense plain, so that we can see it two-thirds of the way from the summit, it is covered in snow more than half way down. In August, there is scarcely any snow on it and then you can easily ascend it. Lady Parkes, the British Ambassador's wife has been to the top. It can be seen 100 miles out at sea and was sighted a few weeks ago by the Captain of the "Sylvia", English man-of-war, from the summit of another mountain, 140 miles further north. It is quite a baby among mountains, having made its appearance according to reliable Japanese authority one evening about 500 years ago. Its birth was accompanied by a tremendous earthquake, and for 400 years, Fusi-hama was a volcano of the most active kind, but at present it is only a moderate smoker. The British Ambassador here, Sir Harry Parkes, lives at Yedo. He has been out here many years and has done more towards opening the country for trade than other European. The Gulf of Yedo is one large harbour, 40 miles long and 12 broad, containing scores of beautiful little coves and bays, where ships can lie securely.

About 30 miles down the Gulf, on the southern shore, stands its seaport, Yokohama, where ships lie that could not get up to Yedo, which great city is on the opposite side. It is 12 miles from Yedo by water and 18 by rail and contains over 300,000 inhabitants including about 3,000 Europeans and Americans, and about the same number of Chinese, who are considered foreigners in this country. There are not as many vessels lying in Yokohama Bay as at Hong Kong, but still (499) a large number; the British, French and American flags being most numerous. There are 8 good sized Japanese men-of-war lying there, 6 here at Yokoska, and others elsewhere. The flagship was built at Aberdeen and is nearly as large as the "Audacious". Most of the Japanese men-of-war were built in England or America, as their dockyard has not got in proper swing yet, it is very compact and situated in an impregnable and secure position, has been made by French engineers and the leading hands are Frenchmen. The ships are manned entirely by Japanese sailors, trained at the naval college at Yedo, by English men-of-war's men, who receive from 300 pounds to 500 pounds a year. The officers arae partly English and American, as well as natives. The scenery round here is magnificent, something like the Isle of Wight on a larger and grander scale. Will continue by next mail.

Yours faithfully,

Joe Matkin

(500) HMS "Challenger"
Yokohama, May 4, 1875

Dear Tom

I find we shall be leaving here in about a week for our cruise in Japanese waters, so will commence another letter.

We do not have such a crowd of junks round us here as at Hong Kong and there is no floating population at all, the sailors and fishermen all live on shore the same as other countries. The Japanese junks are built more substantially than the Chinese, but something after the same style, they are rigged differently, having only one square sail, and they are propelled at a good pace by sculls. You see (501) no women or children in the junks, working like horses; if there are any afloat, they are passengers. Neither do you see the Japanese women working in the fields or doing any kind of rough work at all; their duties are domestic and confined to spinning, cooking, nursing and smoking, which habit they all indulge in this country, but their tobacco is very mild and the pipes only hold about 2 grains. The married women have their teeth blackened and their eyebrows shaved off. In appearance the Japanese are a small clumsy looking people, with heavy regular features and a look about the eyes and mouth as if they had just woke from a comfortable sleep; still they have a much healthier and fresher appearance than the Chinese. They seem to be of Tartar and Chinese extraction and yet (502) there is something of the Malay about them. Their dress is a long dark woolen robe, fastened round the waist, with sleeve holes and open in front. If it is cold weather they wear two or three of these, one over another. The women dress exactly the same as the men, only it is opened round the neck and wear a sort of panier behind. Their hair is differently dressed. In this country no shoes or stockings are worn indoors, but wooden clogs in wet and dirty weather, and in fine, neat straw sandals. The poorer classes wear no underclothing whatever. In the towns the men have tight fitting pantaloons, exactly like the harlequins in a pantomime, and both sexes wear a small, tight-fitting stocking, shaped like a mitten, with a thumb hole for the big toe, which holds the sandle on by a loop. Neither sex use any (503) head covering, except in cold weather, when they tie a scarf round the head. When it is wet or hot, they have pretty umbrellas for shelter, made very ingeniously of bamboo and prepared paper.

In Yedo and Yokohama, many of the better class of men are dressed in European costume, and several in a sort of half and half, like the native priets at Tongatbu. But they seldom look well in European dress and their clothes have a Jewish appearance.

None of the women use the European style, and their clothes are generally of a plain dark colour, and wear no jewelry to speak of, unless in their hair. They paint very much, but seldom are improved by it as they have very fine rosy complexions.

Bread and meat are rather dearer than at Hong Kong, but the meat is much better and the prices are lower than in England. (504)

The vegetables in this country are something wonderful, even superior to those in China. There are carrots and turnips 3 feet long and the same thickness from the root to the head.

Green peas, etc., are just coming in, but there will be no fruit for another month. We have provision and curiosity boats alongside every day and you may see some wonderful cabinets, workboxes, tea-caddies and knick-knacks of all sorts tolerably cheap. If we were only allowed space to keep things, we might bring wonders home from the different places, but, as it is, we have to stow everything into our chests. The Japanese have the same system of extortion as the Chinese, but are always good tempered and civil. They are very clever and ingenious in imitating anything, and are not so prejudiced against innovations and improvements as the Chinese.

Such things as locomotive and marine engines as large as the "Challenger's" are already constructed in this country, and you see lots of sewing machines-American, of course. Labour is not so plentiful in Japan as China, and there are not so many helplessly poor people, have never seen a professional beggar in the country. A few years ago the Japanese seemed as if they were going to adopt European habits and dress entirely, and English and American newspapers began to speculate as to how long it would be before they learnt the English language and altered their own national systems, but a reaction appears to have lately set in, and they are fast falling back into their own customs and usages. The Japanese are a more united (506) people than the Chinese and better governed, but they are still frightfully and disproportionately taxed, the burden all falling on the poorer classes. However, there is a great reform going on, and there are already native newspapers printed at Yedo, which are commencing to agitate, and to "want to know, you know" and ask "why such things should be?" I learnt this from translations in the English papers printed here. They wash and get up linen beautifully, even better than the Malays or Chinese and do everything so neatly. The shores of the Gulf of Yedo look more like England than those of any other country we have visited. There are lots of batteries on the commanding points, and some immense earth forts in front of the city of Yedo, built on small and conveniently situated islands. The town of (507) Yokohama stands in a hollow and we cannot see much of it from the ship. More of Kanagavu is visible on the opposite shore.

The Japanese sailors are dressed like our men and their officers similar to ours. Their national flag is white with a red ball in the centre. They do not wear pigtails but most have the crown of the head shaved, have no sign of any beard or whisker and a long beard is greatly admired in this country, especially by the fair sex. Lots of leave has been given to the crew since we arrived -- more than they have money enough to take advantage of. A few days after we arrived two clerks belonging to the French bank here absconded with 37,000 dollars, and bought a small vessel and hired a crew to take them to Manilla. As soon as their absence was discovered a steamer (508) was sent after them, as it was known the wind had been unfair for their getting out of the Gulf of Yedo. The steamer took with her a sub-lieutenant and 10 armed men from HMS "Thalia" which is stationed here, and came up with the schooner the same night -- becalmed. Before the vessel was boarded the two clerks went down to the cabin and shot themselves -- one through the head and the other through the heart, after which they shortly died and the money was recovered. One was an Italian, the other an Englishman. They had been several years in the bank and held a very considerable position in the European Society of Yokohama, but gambling and betting proved too much for their integrity. The Europeans here, like those at Hong Kong, live very extravagantly and try to cut a dash. They must have their horse racing, club house, etc., the same as in England, only about 10 times dearer, and they are little gods in their own tin pat way, but on returning to their native country many of them find that they are rather ordinary personages after all, and not infrequently return again to the place of their former glory.

On the 19th of April I went on shore for the first time, and returned again on the evening of the 20th. There are three daily English papers printed in Yokohama and one weekly, also a "Japan Punch" for the select few which is a feeble imitation of its English prototype, for unless you know everybody of consequence amongst the Europeans, you don't see exactly where the joke lies and soon get bewildered.

There is an English, a French, an American, (510) a Dutch and Japanese Imperial Post Office. Also an English and a French landing quay and an English and French quarter of the town -- called English and French Hatoba. There is also a Chinse quarter, where the celestials may be seen scraping money together and minding their own business, for they are under the same regulations as other foreigners. The English community and the foreign consuls, etc., live in the most healthy part of the town, on some heights called the Bluffs, from where a fine view can be obtained of the town and the Bay of Yedo. Their houses are built almost entirely of wood, for earthquakes are not rarities in the country, but most of them are very pretty erections and have nice flower gardens attached. Japan is a fine country for wild flowers and I have gathered lots of violets in the fields. There are about twice as many hotels in Yokohama as there ought to be -- English, French and American (511) -- very large buildings too, considering that all Europeans of any standing have private houses, it is a mystery to me how they are supported. There are only three churches, an English, Roman Catholic and a Presbyterian, which is an American. In this respect Yokohama is scantily supplied compared to Lisbon, Bahia and Manilla. The first thing that strikes one in Japan, after visiting China is the beautiful roads, and clean streets, there are none of those fearful smells that you find in Hong Kong or Manilla. The streets are wide and straight and kept clean by the people, each householder sweeping and watering his frontage.

(512) Proper labourers mend the roads and there is an efficient police force, but they appear to have very little to do. There is no drunkenness in this country and everyone can read and write the Japanese language, so one of the girls at the tea gardens told me -- who spoke English and said they went to school until they were over 13.

The Japanese houses are built almost wholly of wood and plaster, generally two storys in height, with carved gable ends and roofs. The fronts and backs of them can be opened and closed at pleasure for ventilation, etc., and the interior is kept beautifully clean. The rooms are partitioned off with wooden partitions, sometimes only paper, and the windows are made of thin but strong paper which will keep out wet, and yet admit light. (513) The floor of the house is raised about two feet and covered with beautiful white rush mats on which cushions are spread at night for sleeping. The Japanese pillow is simply a small wooden trestle which they cover over with a roll of cloth or paper. The pillow itself is exactly like those used by the natives of the South Sea Islands. There is a porch inside the door before you mount on to the raised floor, in which they leave their shoes or sandals, wearing either their socks or going barefooted indoors. They expect all visitors to take off their boots unless they are very clean indeed, though they admire European boots and shoes more than any other article of dress. They are the most hospitable people I ever met with. Paper enters largely into the use and domestic wants and arrangements of the Japanese, and they are unrivalled in their manner of utilizing straw and paper to the best advantage. You can buy a Mackintosh made of prepared paper, and capable of keeping out wet, as well as another, for about 2s/ and you could not distinguish it from an ordinary one. Over these capes the fishermen spread thick straw overcoats to keep out the cold in winter, and by spreading a bamboo frame from the head to the stern of the boat, they make it water tight and warm by fixing movable sheets of straw. They have a charcoal fire in all the boats, and when hauling in their nets they beat a wooden rattle to charm the fish. The fires in the houses are all charcoal; the fireplace is a movable one and generally stands in the middle of the room. The charcoal comes from the great interior forests where many thousands are employed in its preparation. Of course there are no chimneys to the Japanese houses.

The horses, which appear to be (515) very scarce in Japan, are shod with plaited straw shoes. Oxen and sheep are far from plentiful as there is no demand for them. Pigs are met with everywhere, and poultry and game there is a good supply of. You seldom see a butcher's shop, but fishmongers are numerous, as the natives live chiefly on fish, rice and eggs. There is a great number of ravens, may be seen on half the housetops in Yedo. Except European private carriages, there are scarcely any horse conveyances, the passenger traffic is performed by neat little cars called in Japanese "Jinrickshaws" (our sailors thought "Jenny Rickshaws" best). They are drawn by one man who stands between the shafts, and trots along very much faster than a London cab horse. These cars are cushioned, have hoods for wet weather, lanterns at night, and are numbered like cabs. (516) They are an American introduction and have appeared within the last 20 years, and are far more comfortable and proceed faster than the Hong Kong sedan chairs. Their number in Yokohama and Yedo alone exceeds 200,000, and the men who draw them are mostly from the country, so that the agricultural pursuits have suffered in consequence. You can ride about five miles for a (shilling).

Money here is principally Mexican and American silver dollars, Japanese silver, and copper and paper money which is very difficult to understand and is being withdrawn for a more convenient system of coinage. The Europeans here, as at Hong Kong, invariably ride if they have many yards to go. Soon after I landed I went to the railway station, a large stone building with every convenience for passengers and directions printed in English, French and Japanese. The (517) railway is 18 miles long, and is, I believe, the only one open in Japan, but they are now talking of making one from Yedo to the northern part of the island. The present one was opened about 12 years ago, is a double line, and winds round the shores of the Gulf of Yedo all the way. It calls at 4 towns on the journey and is greatly patronized by the Japanese, there are no tunnels, but lots of bridges. The station-masters and engine drivers are mostly Englishmen, but the clerks and all the other officials are natives, these and the police all dress in European clothes. The fare to Yedo, 1st class is 3/, 2nd class 2/6 and 3rd class 1/3. No European travels by the latter, and are only used by natives, but many of them occupy 2nd and even 1st. The carriages are constructed on the American principle, the entrance (518) being at the ends, and not at the side as in England, and as they are of glass, the guard can see every carriage interior as far as the engine; and there is a platform running the whole length of the train, so that if he is wanted in any particular carriage, he can walk outside the cars and not through the doors of each. The seats are all round and the centre is open for traffic, without disturbing the rest of the passengers. As both sexes smoke, there are spittoons let in the floor of the carriages. The sides as well as the fronts are all glass, so that the carriage is entirely open in fine weather, and there are venetian blinds to keep out the sun and dust. The trains run every half hour from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. and take an hour to accomplish the journey to Yedo. You have a fine view of the gulf on one side and the (519) surrounding country on the other; which is another advantage you do not have in English carriages, unless they are empty and then you only catch a glance as you shoot past. The country is richly cultivated and there are houses and market gardens all the way. Rice is the principal cultivation and the fields are under water at present. The men working in them are entirely naked except for a strip of linen round the waist.

The religion of Japan is Buddhism and Confucianism chiefly, the latter, with Chinese letters, writing, etc., was introduced A.D. 285. Buddhism found its way through China and Corea, from India, about the year 552 A.D. In travelling in Japan the tourist will continually meet with saint shrines, Buddhist temples, wayside idols, images and tablets of various kinds, the outward (520) evidence and superstition of the Japanese people. In a Buddhist Temple are drums, bells, candles, images, books and a variety of alter ornaments. There are many "off-shoots" and "schools" etc., off the original doctrine. They worship Buddha and a host of minor deities, and pray to a vast number of saints. They believe in the transmigration of souls, have a high moral code and are influenced in their actions by the fears and hopes of the future. You will often come across a shrine with candles burning in front of it, at the corner of a street, and each household appears to have one favorite deity, the same as in China. There are Buddhist temples all over the country generally built on an eminence, surrounded by trees or else in the midst of a garden. There are temples in all the towns, and of course priests (521) to look after them, who are generally rich and are unfavourably looked on by the government on that account. The largest and finest of the temples at Yedo was burnt down a few years ago by government -- completely it is thought, as it was getting enormously rich. Besides temple gardens, there are large tea gardens on the outskirts of the city, where there are nice walks and all sorts of amusements for the people, and scores of tea houses for refreshment. Every day they are thronged with holiday makers and the temples with worshippers, and on special saint's days (which occur about as often as in catholic countries) half the population is to be found there. I took a Jinrickshaw from the station to the largest existing temple, about five miles from thence, but still in the city. The building stood in a garden, at the bottom of an avenue, (522) and was an enormous structure of carved wood, gilded and lacquered beautifully, and would be a great wonder in Europe. In shape it was like no other building I have seen, and seemed to be all projecting gables, something after the style of a Swiss cottage on a large and elaborate scale. It was about 100 feet in height and covered 3,000 sq. yards of ground. The wood carvings about it represented all sorts of griffins, dragons fabulous serpents and birds etc., carved and gilded very beautifully. There were several gilded idols to be seen inside, and priests capering about as bad as your ritualists at home. There were steps leading up to the temple on which the people knelt and prayed to their particular gods, and put their offerings in a large receptacle for the purpose. The interior could only be (523) seen from a distance, as it is fenced round with lattice work and only opened on special occasions. I could see therein all sorts of pictured allegories, representing the effects of different crimes and their punishment, etc. The temple grounds are fenced in and at the entrance you may see from 500 to 600 Jinrickshaws waiting for the return of their passengers. About three-fourths of the people in the gardens are women and children in holiday dress. Occasionally you may see the father and mother with all their family drive up to the entrance, looking as if they had come to enjoy themselves and meant to do it. Everyone looks cheerful and contented, and always ready to laugh even against themselves. In front of the temple was a large carved and gilded Dove Cote, and hundreds of the most beautiful pigeons I ever saw flying round the roof of the temple and amongst the people as tame as chickens. The visitors bring all kinds of food for them, corn and rice principally, but am not able to say whether they are held peculiarly sacred, or are only tolerated as pets. The people are not at all bowed down to their religion, and if they see a foreigner laughing at their devotions, they join in it quite heartily. In one place there were figures of wax and bronze images, representing all sorts of torture and horrible punishments, executions, monster demons, etc. and everybody seemed to laugh at these. One was an enormous dragon (something like S. George's) attacking and trampling under foot a whole Japanese army; another a minotaur attacking a fleet in the bay; one represented a tiger about to devour a women for doing something (525) wrong; and a still more remarkable one of an enormous bird flying away with a queen on its back.

The metal work and building of the creatures was beautifully done, but the wax figures were not equal to Madame Tussauds. There were also live monkeys climbing up poles, archery tents presided over by pretty young ladies, children's toy shops (greatly patronized), and lots of Tea shops. From the temple I went to some large tea gardens, which were thronged with holiday makers, and here the same arrangements were to be found. There were penny peep-shows, the pictures of which were beautiful, representing splendid scenery and temples inland, the Mikado's Palace, and himself in his state robes; the Tykoon (office now obsolete) or "Spiritual Emperor" in his palace at Miado; Japanese armies besieging castles, and all sorts of native scenes and personages. The tea garden was situated on an eminence from which a great part of the city could be seen, but not the whole, by a long way. You must remember that there is no smoke hanging over Yedo, the fires being all charcoal, so that the atmosphere is very clear, there are no factories or large buildings in the way anywhere. Yedo covers a larger space of ground, in proportion to the inhabitants than any other city. The streets are on the average wider than those of London (excepting the larger thoroughfares) and there is not more than one family occupying a single house. The city covers over 70 sq miles of ground and the population is about a million and a quarter. Some of the streets are as much thronged as the (527) great London streets, but as there is no carriage traffic, the passengers move along much quicker in such wide throughfares. Those of Yedo would be very suitable for tramways, and they are talking of adopting them.

These gardens are so pleasant and rural that you could fancy yourself in the country, but for the busy hum to be heard all round, and the dense crowds moving under your feet are features that indicate convincingly to the traveller that he is in one of the largest cities in the world. The houses of the richer Japanese are in the suburbs, most of them are finely carved and have nice gardens attached. The girls at the tea-houses are very sedulous in soliciting customers and very kind and attentive in their manners. The tea is very nice and almost colourless being newly gathered, it is drunk without (528) milk or sugar, and in the tiniest china cups imaginable. They bring you a teapot to yourself, with fancy cakes, eggs and fruit, if it is in season. If you choose they will play the guitar and sing to you, but their music is not inspiriting and I fancy they charge extra for it. The cost of a good tea is about 9d, but they will get more if they can, appearing to think it an excellent joke if able to impose upon you. I forgot to mention that there was a large bronze god in the temple gardens, which seemed to be credited with extraordinary healing powers, as mothers would bring their scrofulous children, and after rubbing their affected parts stroke the corresponding part of the deity, but without any visible result. The old gentleman's brass face was partly smoothed down with constant rubbing, giving to the features a most benevolent appearance.

There are several salt water canals at Yedo, spanned by good bridges, and the bay facing the city is crowded with fishing smacks, the fish-mongers living in the adjacent streets, and are very numerous and you can buy almost any kind of fish. Enormous porpoises weighing half a ton, great turtles over 300 lbs in weight, and all sorts fo shell fish, including good oysters. Near the railway station was the Japanese Naval Training College, and in this neighbourhood are a few European hotels, and here live those Europenas who are allowed to reside at Yedo, their number is very small. I did not see them from the time I left the Yedo Station until I returned again at night, reaching Yokohama at 6 p.m. after having spent a most wonderful day.

There is a telegraph from Yokohama to Yedo, and a cable to Europe and America via Shanghai and Singapore, and across the Atlantic, another via Pekin and across Siberia to St. Petersburgh, but the Pacific has none yet. I stayed at the Temperance Hotel at Yokohama all night, and spent the following day looking round that place, returning on board at night, have not been on shore again yet, but shall do so before we leave.

We have refitted and are now provisioning to last us to Vancouver's, have taken in our coal, and are almost ready for sea again. We were a week down at Yokoska, and I was on shore several times, and visited lots of little villages. In that vicinity there are plenty of temples, particularly one at Dai Butsu of Buddha, in which there (531) is one of the largest images in the world, except perhaps the famous Colossus of Rhodes.

It represents the god Buddha, and is cast in bronze, it stands over 44 feet high, and will hold 60 people inside. There is also the ancient capital of Japan, Komagawa, and in that neighbourhood have been fought some of the most terrible battles recorded in Japanese history, to which people the town and district is classic ground. Not less interesting to us is the solitary grave of Will Adams, the one Englishman whose name and memory stands out from the obscurity of 250 years, as the representative of our nation in Japan, and who, when such men as Francis Xavier, and the numerous Spaniards and Portuguese who were contemporary with him are utterly forgotten, still has descendants, who are proud to (532) claim him as their progenitor. From his tomb you can see the beautiful island of . Yokosha is a good sized town and the people very clean. There are eight bath houses, where both sexes bathe promiscuously; their sense of propriety being sacrificed to that of cleanliness. The natives could speak French; at Yokohama they spoke English, and down at Nagasaki they speak Dutch, as well as Japanese of course.

May 9th.

There is no mail in yet, and we are to leave tomorrow afternoon for Kobi -- 300 miles south, shall probably be back here by the 10th of June. I was on shore again yesterday, and had a beautiful walk out into the country to Mississippi Bay, with numerous potations of tea on the way; there being houses for its sale everywhere. The (533) natives pay about 1/2 for a cup. I went through a whole lot of tea fields, the tree is something like a sloe bush and the leaves are similar. The San Francisco mail boats are the fastest and most regular steamers that come to Japan. They run every fortnight now, and have purchased three of the White Star Line, the "Oceanic", the "Belgic" and the "Gaelic"; the former will be here next month. They run from San Francisco to this port in 18 and 19 days and sometimes bring mails from England in 35 days. The P&E Company's steamers take 50 days from Southampton. My old ship the "Audacious" is expected here every day. Another Japanese man-of-war came in yesterday, she was formerly HMS "Malacca". I have read of some of Dr. Kenealy's vagaries in Parliament, today, from telegrams in the (534) English newspapers. Latest information concerning "Challenger".

HMS "Challenger"
Kobi, June 1st, 1875

Dear Tom

We left Yokohama on May 12th and arrived here on the 15th, after a rather stormy passage round. The coast of Japan is very rough and not unlike that of Barbary. We had to anchor on the 14th in Osaka Bay, a pleasant anchorage off the mainland of Niphon. The bay contained 13 good sized villages and the cultivation all round them was wonderful. The fishermen in Japan tie their nose up at night to prevent ague, fever, etc.

We entered the "Inland Sea" of Japan at 1 p.m. on the 15th, and were at once in smooth water. This sea or strait is over 300 miles in length, and separates (536) Kin Sni from Sikoki at its south eastern extremity, and Sikoki from Niphon in the north. It varies in breadth from a quarter of a mile to 20 miles, and contains therein some 2000 islands of all sizes, between which there are hundreds of different channels where small vessels can push through, and of course plenty of good bays and harbours. The navigation for a ship like ours is very intricate, and large ships always anchor every night and generally take a Japanese pilot. It is only with the last 15 years that large vessels have adopted this passage, and it took several years properly surveying by the British, French and American vessels. It cuts off about 100 miles of the voyage from Yokohama to Nagasaki and Shanghai, and enables the numerous junks to run (537) from Nagasaki, etc., to Kobi in comparatively smooth water. Kobi is just inside the northern entrance of the inland sea and is 330 miles from Yokohama, and 400 miles north of Nagasaki. It is situated in an enormous gulf or bay in the main island of Niphon, called the Bay of Osaca which is about as large as Hobson's Bay, Melbourne, and contains the ports of Hiogo, Kobi and Osaca, besides scores of fishing villages. Osaca stands at the extremity of the bay, Kobi is 20 miles to the south and Hiogo is close to it, the two towns running into each other, but Kobi was substituted for the latter as an open port, on account of its better anchorage, the same as Yokohama for Komagawa. The two towns look something like Wellington and Cape Town, as to position, being situated at the foot of an amphitheatre of hills, but they look more like English than those places, and the population together is about 200,000. Osaca contains about 300,000 and with Hiogo was one of the Treaty Ports opened in 1859, but the anchorage is bad, and ships have to lie a long way from the town, so in 1867, Kobi was opened as it afforded better facilities for shipping. There are a good many Europeans here, but it is not such a place for trade as Yokohama. The early ports opened by the Japanese for foreign trade were the worst they could choose, and they did all in their power to disgust foreigners from coming. The pilots were encouraged to run the ships aground, and an extraordinary system of espionage was practised towards them. Officials were set to watch them wherever they went, and the shopkeepers were not allowed to take foreign (539) money, or pay away the native coin. If a foreigner purchased anything, he, and the shopkeeper went with the goods to a government official, who priced them and received the money, paying the poor trademan again in native money, and cheating him frightfully, until they dreaded to see a foreign customer enter their shops. Officials boarded ships long before they came into port,and had to find out why they were coming, and how long they meant to stay, etc. If it was a man-of-war they had to report all particulars concerning the armament, number of men carried, and what was her object in coming. They had to write all this down, and another set of officials kept a check on them, and if there was the slightest sign of anything suspicious in their reports, or behaviour, they were handed over to the executioner.

(540) The captain of an American man-of-war writes in his book an account of his entry into the port of Nagasaki about 20 years ago. Long before he was near the place a two-sworded official was seen coming out in a small boat, and making signals with his face to be taken on board, but the "Stars and Stripes" sailed on and took no notice of his frantic gestures, until after the ship had left him behind when he was seen to kill himself by falling on his own sword, rather than survive his disgrace, which by the law of Japan, would have included his family, as well as himself. The American captain remarks, "that the most awful sign of despair he ever saw depicted on a human face, was on that of this poor baffled man, as the ship shot past him".

Soon after the Treaty with the Americans in 1853, there was a (541) terrible typhoon along the Japanese coast, accompanied by an earthquake, which destroyed an immense amount of shipping and property, as well as lives. A deputation of Japanese officials waited upon the European residents to inform them that such sort of occurrences were very common in Japan, and that a repetition might be shortly expected, so that if they would avoid the catastrophe, they had better leave the country as soon as possible and never return. The deputation was as civilly received, and was about as successful as that of the three Quakers who went to St. Petersburgh to advocate peace, just before the Crimean war. Since that time a real change has come over the Japanese people, and they are encouraging foreign trade more and more every year. They are undoubtedly of an inquisitive and commercial (542) turn of mind, and only want a few missionaries to make them a great people. There are now a few in Japan and China, but it will be many years before Christianity has established a footing in either country. I think the English language will be taught in the schools of Japan for the future, as well as the native, for the latter is not sufficiently copious to allow anyone to express himself on any subject unconnected with Japan, without introducing a host of new words. It would not be possible to translate the Bible, without first arranging a grammar, and making many new words. So it is highly probable, that our language will eventually be spoken.

The new Japanese silver and copper money is very pretty and similar to our's at Hong Kong. I am a great believer in the future of this (543) country, but until Christianity is taught, I don't think the people are prepared for such radical changes as the American and English newspapers presage. These writers seem to forget that the people are influenced and controlled by the priests, more than by the ruling powers.

In 1867 just before the present Mikado ascended the throne there was a general rising in this neighbourhood against Europeans in general, which was doubtless incited by the priests. A boat's crew belonging to the French man--of-war "Duplex" was murdered (cut in pieces) and their bodies sent off to to the ship. This occurred at Osaca, a port 20 miles down the bay, but the men were buried at Kobi. The French Admiral demanded from the Japanese authorities 500 dollars for the friends of each of the men, and a certain number of heads as satisfaction for the outrage (544). The heads were forthcoming in any quantity, collected promiscuously from the different prisons, and the money was also eventually paid. The British Ambassador, Sir Harry Parkes, was at Osaca at the time, and had to fly for his life, some of his mounted body guard being wounded by the excited Japanese people. Sir Harry has had several narrow escapes of his life in Japan and China, but he is a very courageous man, and not easily intimidated.

Just before the China wars he was carried naked round Japan in an iron cage. He was secretary at that time to the British Ambassador and was then Mr. Parkes.

On May 17th, I went on shore here and looked over Kobi and Hiogo which are something like Yedo on a smaller scale. There are Consuls of all nations here, lots of Europeans and Chinese, a few European hotels, a catholic and a protestant church, and railway from Kobi to Osaca. It is more of a country place than Yokohama, and there are some fine walks here. Lots of curiosity shops abound in Kobi, and the goods were quite different in design to those at Yokohama. The town will soon be lighted with gas. There are not so many Jinrickshaws here, but there is a race course for the fashionable Europeans, and a daily paper printed. In the vicinity of Kobi there are two beautiful waterfalls situated in a deep gully between the highest hills. There are scores of tea houses up there which command beautiful views of the waterfalls, the bay and the city of Osaca, and several islands at the entrance of the "Inland Sea". Every fine day these islands show out most distinctly, and the tea houses are crammed with people chattering, smoking, tea-drinking and studying nature. I have been up there several times and always enjoy it. The weather is much warmer now and the people wear brighter garments, and all use pretty painted parasols to shelter themselves from the sun, so that a crowd of Japanese holiday makers forms a very picturesque scene. The waterfalls are each about 150 feet in sheer descent and are the prettiest of the kind I ever saw. There are several gardens and temples near Kobi -- all of which I have visited. There is a temple of the sun at the foot of the hills, crowned by an enormous gilded globe representing the sun. There is also a Temple of the Moon built on the summit of a steep hill, over 2000 feet high, however it was erected up there I can't (547) imagine, as most of the materials would have to be brought up from below by manual carriage, for the road is narrow and steep and there are 250 stone steps leading up to the temple after you have almost reached the summit. The building itself is of carved wood, but the interior is magnificant. We had to take off our boots before entering, but were allowed to touch and examine all the altar ornaments, which, with the altar itself were of bronze and gilt work beautifully carved, and there were massive gilded candlesticks weighing 400 or 500 lbs., any amount of candles and tapers burning, as well as beautiful smelling wood which scented the whole place. A large steel mirror stood on the altar which was supposed to represent the moon, and any amount of food offerings in the shape of rice, fish, etc., were placed on shelves near the altar, which affair loked something between a Royal Throne and a large state bed and near it was the finest sounding bell I ever heard. It was a sort of large metal vase on another hollow metal vessel, with a large silk cushion between the two, and it was beaten with a wooden mallet. A journey up to this temple is considered a sort of salutary pilgrimage, and you see lots of old women toiling up this road every day most perseveringly.

The Japanese have large burying grounds outside the town. Their monuments are solid stone pillars standing on a flat base, and another flat stone fixed on the top, the column bears the inscription in deeply engraved (549) characters. The Chinese grave stones are generally shaped like a horse-shoe and occupy more space than the Japanese. The European cemetery contains the graves and monument of the murdered French seamen, and also those of the crew of an American Admiral's barque who, with himself were drowned at Osaca in crossing the bar, about the same time as the French massacre. There is an upright tablet for each of the 10 seamen, and a large monument in the centre to Admiral Lee, whose body, a few days after he was interred, was taken up again and sent over to America in a man-of-war for interment.

I have been on shore several times here. One afternoon I visited a large tea roasting shed belonging to a company of Chinese merchants. The sheds contained some 300 small coppers in rows, and I thought at first the women were washing clothes, for they were half naked. Each copper had a charcoal fire burning underneath it, the inside of the copper was blackleaded, and I fancy that has something to do with colouring the leaf. Each copper contained about 4 lbs. of green tea leaves, which the women shook up with both hands continually. Chinese overlookers superintended the firing process, after which it was weighed and packed for export to San Francisco. Most of the Japanese tea is consumed in America, but it is not so good as the best China tea. The tea shrubs are like small gooseberry bushes, and bear about three crops of leaves a year, the leaves are like those of the sloe. Our ship's band (551) used to land sometimes of an evening, and play in front of the British Consul's house, causing a great gathering of natives to hear the music.

The Japanese have a native spirituous drink called Saki, which tastes like strong cider with a dash of spirit in it, and will produce intoxication. In some of the Japanese temple grounds there was a white horse, which had a carved stable, and a man to look after it, and seemed to be greatly venerated, the people fed it with small plates of beans, which were sold by the man who looked after it. Every Japanese house contains a shrine and a particular deity shut up in a sort of cupboard, in which offerings of fish, rice, etc., are placed and changed daily. (552) The family pray in front of the shrine whenever they feel disposed, but I think the women do the praying for their husbands, who smoke approvingly in the background.

On the 20th of May I went on shore with two shipmates and took the train to Osaca, which railway has only been opened 12 months, and is still a great source of amazement and admiration to the people hereabouts. It is only a single line with sidings at each station for the trains to pass each other. The same regulations and prices are in force as on the Yokohama and Yedo line, the engine drivers are all Englishmen, and the rest of the officials Japanese. The carriages are English (built at Birmingham) and are not half so comfortable as the (553) American built cars. The railway is 22 miles long, winding round the shore of the bay, and calling at 4 stations. The train occupies over an hour running the journey, and passes through a beautifully cultivated and very populous country. There are villages everywhere and I should think this part of Niphon is more populated than any part of England. Wheat and barley are almost ready for cutting and also rice, but they get two crops of that every year. The rice fields are under water for several weeks after being sown, but at present they look like an ordinary barley field, the ear is exactly like that of barley only shorter and twice as thick. When ripe, all the corn, rice, etc., is pulled up by the roots, and threshed almost directly. The grinding is accomplished by water mills, on quite a different system to ours in England. The force of the falling water raises a large upright beam which falls into a small pit and crushes the rice. This is a very rude and primitive contrivance, and I have no doubt it will very soon be superseded by steam crushing mills. The country people seem to grow a sufficient quantity of tea for their own consumption and dry it in the sun, the firing process described previously is only effected on that which is intended for export and is done, I am told, to prevent the tea from getting sea sick. If it were not served in this manner it would lose its virtue entirely before it reached England.

Osaca proved to be a very large and dull sort of place. I have been there twice. The streets are long and rather narrow compared to those at Yedo, some of them were five miles in length and there were lots of large wooden bridges over the numerous creeks. There are scarcely any Europeans there, and the people stared at us as if we were great curiosities.

There were scores of public bath houses conducted on the same principle as at Yokosaka. Few vessels go to Osaca now as they are unable to get close up to the town. About 40 miles from it is the old "spiritual capital" of Micao, which contains nearly a million inhabitants, and beyond there some 50 miles, is another large city called Kiola. The new railway which is being made from Osaca to Yokohama, a distance of 320 miles, (556) is nearly finished as far as Kioto. The European and the native name of the Japanese towns is frequently different.

There was a large Japanese citadel at Osaca, a really strong fortress surrounded by very thick high walls, encompassed by a deep wide moat, and flanked at each angle by a large pagoda-shaped tower. It covered some 200 acres of ground and was guarded by Japanese soldiers armed with long swords. I saw no sign of any cannon on the walls, and the soldiers seemed to have no rifles. I and my friend entered one large temple at Osaca, which was crowded with worshippers, but we had to come away quickly or should have disturbed them with laughter. About 30 yellow-robed skull-shaved priests were singing the (557) most doleful, monotonous slow music I ever heard in my life, commencing with a single voice pitched very high and ending in succession of deep howls and groans in which the congregation joined with loud fervency. It takes a good deal to make me laugh in a foreign country, for I generally wear my features screwed up into an unconcerned indifferent sort of focus, but on this occasion had to run for it although I stood it better than my friend.

Every fishmonger's shop in this country contains stewed "Devil-fish" which are considered great delicacies in Japan and are very numerous in its seas. During the last few days there have been many processions in the streets of Kobi, for May is a sort of festival month. Two enormous carved wooden cars (558) have been dragged about the streets by hundreds of young children of both sexes in fancy costumes of cotton, silk and paper. At night each child carried a red paper lamp and the cars were lit up. The carving on them was magnificent, and there were some splendid embroidered silk curtains to them. The cars are kept at the temple and are dragged by a long rope. There were also processions of young girls in fancy silk dresses, straw hats, flowers in their hair and painted faces, and were accompanied by a native band of fiddles, gongs, and tom-toms, and in each street, they went through a queer sort of posture dance, moving like marionettes. There were other processions of women dressed as men, and men as women, but they were of a noisier character. I don't know what these affairs all mean but the streets are crowded with people and everybody seems highly delighted and interested, except the Chinese community who appear to take no notice. In walking along a street in Japan you will see in the porch of each house all the clogs and sandals belonging to the inmates, as the people never enter in their shoes. Occasionally you may see a few pairs of flash English (sic) shoes among the group, and you can conclude they belong to some British sailors taking tea up-stairs.

On the Queen's birthday, our ship was illuminated, and the British Consul gave a ball. This afternoon our officers gave a luncheon and dance party and the old Japanese governor and his native interpreter came. They wore the usual (560) black dress clothes, and white chokers, sitting up on the bridge in arm chairs the whole time, trying to look as if they enjoyed it.

On the 25 May we left Kobi for a four day's cruise in the Inland Sea, returning again on the 29th. We did not go to Nagasaki after all; it being too far, but went about 120 miles through it and came back, having anchored every night and landed parties of officers at the settlements. According to the Treaty, no one is supposed to land except at the treaty ports, but these orders are not so strictly carried out now. Everywhere we anchored boat loads of native men and women with children came off to the ship, and seemed vastly pleased and astonished with what they saw. Of the scenery in the "Inland Seas", I can truly say that it is the finest I have ever seen. There are nearly 2000 islands sprinkled therein of all sizes and shapes, and the main islands of Niphon and Sikota, which are tolerably high lands, are generally hidden from view by the smaller ones. The narrowest part we passed through was about 4 miles broad, but lower down it is less than a mile. The number of junks and fishing vessels to be seen on the Inland Sea is something enormous, and exceeds anything I have seen off the coasts of England or China. The men in them are almost naked and of a copper colour, to see them sculling their boats along and hear them singing their wild discordant choruses, is to be irresistibly reminded of the South Sea Islanders, and the Malay fishermen, but there the similitude (sic) ends.

(562) The marvellous and unrivalled cultivation to be seen in every direction around, affords abundant testimony to the superior industry and civilization of the Japanese people. Some of the islands are very lofty and at every point rounded, the secenery seemed to change like a grand moving panorama. At one moment we seemed to be passing one of the tropical islands of the South Pacific, and before the ship had fairly got past it, some miniature Kerguelen's Land would start up -- a mass of sterility and desolation! In the morning one could imagine that he was steaming through Cook's Straits to Wellington, and in the evening he would find himself at anchor in the counter part of the Bay of Naples -- scenery more varied (563) and diverse in character it is impossible to conceive. The number of villages passed during a run of 50 miles is extraordinary, and the cultivation is something wonderful.

Islands rising quite abruptly to a height of 1500 feet, were cultivated, to the very top and the produce would support 50 such little villages as were situated at their foot, whilst others similar in size, shape and altitude, and scarcely a stone's throw away -- were pictures of solitude and sterility! We leave Kobi tomorrow for Yokohama. We have on board now an amphibious animal called a "salamander", purchased from the shore, I believe there are some in the Crystal Palace Aquarium. They are something between an alligator and a sea serpent, and would astonish most people.

Yokohama, June 16th.

We arrived here on the 6th after a very rough passage round, and received our mail. The other evening our ship's company were invited by the Temperance Society of Yokohama to an entertainment of songs, recitations, etc., with the addition of refreshments, in the shape of sponge cakes and tea, strawberries and cream, which were provided by the ladies of Yokohama. The other British and American ship's companies were invited, but the affair was got up specially for the "Challenger's" crew, and our band was in attendance.

Yesterday we went out to sea for three hours with a large party to show them how the dredging and sounding (565) operations were carried on. There was a grand luncheon and dancing on the quarter deck. Besides a large party of ladies and gentlemen resident in Yokohama, there were among the company the French and the Japanese admirals, with other naval officers, the British ambassador, Sir Harry Parkes and Lady Parkes, and several Japanese state officials, including the Prime Minister of Japan. The latter party were dressed in European costume, with Wellington boots outside the trousers. Sir Harry Parkes is a fine looking man and so is the Japanese admiral.

We have taken in seven more hands to fill up our complement, they came from the "Audacious" which ship came in on Saturday from Shanghai (566) and is now in the Imperial Dock at Yokoska.

(567) H.M.S. "Challenger"
North Pacific, July 13, 1875

Dear Tom

We are within 900 miles of Honolulu, so must commence my letter as usual. At 3 p.m. on the 16th of June we left Yokohama for England with the homeward bound pennant flying and the band playing "Home, Sweet Home" as we steamed past the other ships. I can't say that I felt particularly "homeward boundish" or cheerful, thinking how altered everything seemed since we sighted Japan on the 11th of April previous, and were so eager to get our letters, from which I first heard of my paternal loss at home, casting a gloom over everything now.

Fusihama stood out above the clouds long after the coasts of Japan had disappeared, and when that had also faded away, I suppose I had seen the last of that interesting country with its queer people and quaint customs. Miss Midgi Maru said as I paid her the night before we left for my 55th cup of tea that "She very much sorry when Challenger go." Miss Maru and her married sister kept a tea house on the highest hill near Yokohama, which commanded a splendid view of the town and bay. Miss Maru could speak very tolerable English and was on that account a martyr to every "intelligent traveller" like myself. I calculate that I asked her several thousand questions as to statistics and customs etc. of Japan, and think I pumped her pretty dry, and was able to tell her more about the productions, position and population etc. of the cities of Japan than she herself knew. The Japanese are very ignorant about everything of this sort, and scarcely know the size and extent of their own country. Miss Maru was quite in a fog about everything 10 miles from Yokohama, and concerning the history of Japan could only relate her own experience and her papa's. If I asked about her religious views, she would only laugh and point to a large neighbouring Buddhist Temple, and to the English Church and say, "That is my church and this is yours", after which she would change the subject to the price of ladies clothing in England. Of course, I was particularly well up on that subject. I think I told her a complete costume (570) for a respectable English lady would cost something under

£2,000 including a set of teeth and some back hair. Miss Maru was very pretty and genteel, her manner of bowing and receiving payment for refreshments, I have never seen equalled. I have her portrait, and find about 50 others in the ship have it also. Her ideas of the position of the Sandwich Islands, and of most countries were very vague, and could only jerk my hand out to sea and say, "It's a month's journey out there." On the day before we left Yokohama, the American ship "Kearsage" arrived, she was the vessel that sunk the "Alabama" off the coast of France. One of our men deserted just before we sailed and one died the day after we left from the effects of poison taken by himself, whilst in a state of intoxication. (571) He was a Scotchman named James Macdonald, was sick berth steward, and had been many years in the Navy, and joined the "Challenger" at Sheerness. He was an intemperate man when he could obtain liquor, and was the man who was robbed whilst drunk at St. Thomas, West Indies, and wished to be brought off (sic) in a newspaper and analyzed to see what kind of drink they had sold him. When at sea he was all right, and a very steady, saving and industrious man, he earned over 30 pounds by a sewing machine which he bought at Melbourne and used to work in his spare time. In harbour he would squander away an incredible amount of money, and was never quite sober, but at sea he was more careful over a penny than the generality of Scotchmen, and to hear (572) him holding forth to the sick seamen about the evils and lamentable effects of intemperance and immorality, you would have thought him a paragon of excellence and self-control. He was also a dabbler in scientific pursuits, and of an inquiring disposition, and was a great admirer of the poet Burns. I could not help thinking as they lowered his body into the sea, of the epitaph that Burns wrote for himself and how applicable it was to the deceased -

Yet runs himself life's mad career,
Wild as the wave
Here pause - and through the starting tear Survey this grave!

The poor inhabitant below,
Was quick to learn, and wise to know,
And keenly felt the friendly glow,
And softer flame:
But thoughtless follies laid him low,
And stain'd his name!

He was buried on the 18th and directly after the funeral we took soundings at the enormous depth of 3,900 faths. 4 1/2 miles, the second deepest sounding we have ever obtained. We have come nearly 3,500 miles since leaving Japan, as we have not steered direct for the Sandwich Islands, but nearly due east, and tomorrow the course will be altered to south as we are already in the longitude of the Islands, so shall soon be in hot weather. We have 980 miles more to run and are at present under steam, with calm pleasant weather. We have taken a fine line of soundings, having sounded about every 200 miles. From Japan the depths have been 17th June 1875 faths, - 18th 2,900 faths - 19th 3675 faths - 21st 2900 faths - 23rd 2300 faths - 24th 2575 faths - 26th 2800 faths - 28th 2900 faths - 30th 2775 faths - July 2nd 2050 faths - 3rd 2550 faths - 5th 2950 faths - 7th 3000 faths - 9th 3050 faths - 10th 3000 faths - 12th 2675 faths. The dredging and trawling have been very unlucky, for the bottom of this part of the Pacific is very rough being of volcanic formation. Several trawls and some 10,000 fathoms of line have been carried away, the value of which is nearly £500.

A few good specimens have been obtained, and lots of great boulders of pumice stone which contained the fossil remains of animal life. Serial (sic) temperatures have also been taken, and the strength of the current (when any) has been ascertained. We have had good winds, but damp, wet, unpleasant weather: this we shall leave behind shortly and pick up the dry north east trade winds. Our lat. today is 38° N. long. 158° W. We are rather ahead of our time for reaching Honolulu, and the Captain says he will drive the ship home by the first week in May 76. We have only seen one vessel on the journey across; the American mail boat "Mohawk" from San Francisco for Yokohama on the 1st of July. We are now on the Pacific Admiral's station, which extends to the 180° of long. and includes the coast of America from Alaska to Cape Horn.

(576) Last week with us contained 8 days, and we had two Sundays as the Admiralty allow us no pay for the extra day, one of the Sundays (your Sunday) was kept as a holiday. Of course, we are now twelve hours behind England, but that we shall gain again on the homeward voyage through Magellan's Straits. I see by the papers that the Americans have managed to obtain one of the Sandwich Islands as a naval station for their Fleet, and persuaded the King to refuse this privilege to any other power. This is another smart piece of Yankee diplomacy and I expect before long they will succeed in annexing those islands.

July 24th - We expect to reach Honolulu on Tuesday the 27th as we are only 300 miles away. We have picked uup the N.E. Trades, and the weather is much warmer (577) but pleasant. The depth since the 15th has been about the same, but we have lost another 1500 fms. of line in dredging. We shall probably sight land on Monday night, for most of the islands are lofty, being of volcanic origin. The Pacific Islands generally lie in groups and clusters. The Sandwich group numbers 13, 8 of which are inhabited. Their (sic) total area is about 6000 sq. miles and the population 60,000. The group was discovered by Captain Cook in 1778 and named after Lord Sandwich, 1st Lord of the Admiralty. Cook estimated the population at 400,000, so that in all probability these people will have entirely disappeared before the lapse of another century; and like the aboriginals of Tasmania, who also numbered several thousands when Cook visited there. The Kanakas as they are called, were described by Cook in his journal as the finest, the most civilized, and the best disposed of all the South Sea Islanders. I believe Captain Cook treated them fairly and was a good, humane man, but the conduct of several of his officers and crew was cruel and disgraceful, and in a squabble at Owhyee in 1779 caused by the impolicy of some of his crew, Captain Cook fell a victim to the sudden resentment of the natives. Owyhee, or Hawaii, is some 200 miles S.E. of Oahu and the other islands, and was not discovered until 1779 when Cook returned from the Arctic to the Sandwich Islands again.

It is the largest island, its area being over 4,000 sq. miles, and the population (579) 27,000; and it contains the stupendous volcanoes of Mauna Loa and Mauna Kea, each over 13,000 feet high, and still active. The Kanakas belong to the same family as the Maories and Tongans, but are unmixed with the black Papuan race. The present king is Kalakua, elected in 1874. The islands are just in the tropics, and very fertile, growing sugar, coffee, cotton, rice, arrowroot, cocoas, breadfruits, and various West Indian fruits. The islands are well situated and the seat of considerable commerce, with America chiefly.

Honolulu, Oahu, is the capital, which we reached on July 27th. We sighted land at 3 a.m. in the morning and at 5 a.m. the islands of Molokai and Oahu were in sight. We dredged between the two all the morning, but got nothing, so proceeded (580) onward under all sail and steam. The islands were lofty and very irregularly shaped, and looked about as large as Fayal, Azores. At 2 p.m. we passed Diamond Head at the south eastern extremity of Oahu, and at 3 p.m. anchored outside the reefs in front of Honolulu and made signal for a pilot to take us over the bar. A native pilot soon came out and took the ship through the narrow shallow channel between the reefs and we anchored again by 4 p.m. within a stone's throw of the town, when the mail was at once sent on board, and another is expected tonight from San Francisco for Sydney. There are a few whaling vessels lying here and the American flag ship "Pensacola." The usual contractors, washermen etc. came on board at once. Fresh meat, vegetables, and bread are very (581) cheap considering - only 2 1/2 each per lb.

Provisions in general are cheap. Butter made on the island is only 1/3 per pound, and this is a great rarity in the tropics. The meat is quite as good as in Australia, but fruit is not so cheap as it ought to be, and washing is 5/ per doz. About half the population of Honolulu came down to the wharf to see the ship moored, and after seating themselves as comfortably as possible, gave a half holiday, apparently, and took a good long view of us for about 2 hours - then went home to supper. From my short experience I should say that the Kanakas are about the most cheerful, good tempered, indolent and impulsive people under the sun. One old gentleman came on board and introduced himself to me (582) as Mr. John Williams, shook hands and said he had had the pleasure of seeing me in Calcutta. I told him I had never been there, so he shook hands again, and said it must have been my brother, and told me to come on shore and see him at any time. The Kanakas in appearance are the very counterpart of the Maories of New Zealand, and much darker than the friendly islanders - being as brown as Malays. Still, they have pleasanter features than the Maories, and look very different to the Fijians, and Admiralty Islanders. They are a fine made people and wear European dress. I have not seen any ladies yet except at a distance. Of course the Kanakas are Christians converted by American missionaries chiefly, and they are undoubtedly the most civilized of the (583) Pacific races, but unfortunately it is this civilizing process that is killing them so fast. They are a very sensitive people and one of our seamen, who has been here before, assures me that they can lie down and die whenever they feel disposed, so unless they intermarry "say the Chinese" or unless they introduce the Mormons into their country they will soon belong only to the past. I saw that the measles had carried away about one third of the Fijians since we were there, so the English and Chinese will soon have it all to themselves in that group. There are lots of Chinese at these islands, and a very hard-working race of people they are, too. The island of Oahu has a very pleasant rural appearance, but the scenery is certainly not tropical, as seen from the ship (584) and if it were not for a few cocoa palms dotted here and there, one could fancy the island to be one of the Azores. It is not to be compared to Tongatbu or the Fiji islands, and the town of Honolulu has a very straggling unimposing appearance. The weather is much hotter here, thermometer 85° in the shade, and over 120° in the sun, and the ship is already full of flies, whilst the ravenous, but playful mosquitos are only waiting for us to turn in before commencing their onslaught. I shall tell you more about Honolulu after I have been on shore. The mail for Sydney is in sight, but will not be in before 11 p.m. so shall not get our letters until tomorrow morning.

July 28th - The mail has just arrived and have received our news, shall have to wait (585) for another until the 1st of November, the day we are due in Valparaiso. This one left England July 1st and as they only leave San Francisco once a month, shall get no more while we are here. We are now taking in 240 tons of coal and as soon as it is in, leave will be given to each watch for 48 hours.

The American Admiral was on board here today, quite a rough looking chap. The men's wages were paid today in American dollars - value 4/2 sterling. H.M.S. "Petrel" arrived today from Panama. I see by the Illustrated papers that the Arctic Expedition has gone; and also saw a portrait of Captain Nares which was very good, indeed. I hope they will be successful, I should much like to have gone. Last night we heard of the death of Lady John Franklin, per telegram received at San Francisco on the 19th of July, and their papers of the same date announced it, and as the death only occurred in London on the evening of the 18th, it was very quick work. Honolulu is 2200 miles from San Francisco.

August 4th - There were some pictures in the Illustrated London News of the Admiralty Islands, and New Guinea, which were sent by our artist, and very good. They appeared in the middle of June. I have been on shore here twice and went horse-riding both times. Honolulu is quite a civilized place, more like England than any town we have been to since leaving Wellington. There are some fine shops of all kinds, and a very considerable white population, principally American settlers (587) and merchants. Consuls of all nations, missionaries of all sorts, and invalids from America. There are several churches, native, American, Wesleyan, Methodist, Roman Catholic. The native is the largest, and is just like an English Dissenting Church; is nicely seated and contains a good organ. The King's seat was under a crimson velvet canopy and in the centre .stood a large spitoon, containing several ends of cigars; other pews contained the same, so I suppose the Hawaiians smoke during service. It was a week-day when I looked in, so of course, I can't say that is the case, but they certainly smoke there some time or other. There are only four hotels allowed in Honolulu, and they have to pay a very heavy tax to the King, which makes the drink very dear and promotes temperance. There are lots of Chinese shopkeepers, and they have native wives and generally very pretty children. They work hard, and on that account are looked down on by the natives. Of course, the natives do work, but in a desultory sort of manner, and they want very high wages. About 40 of them helped to coal our ship, under an American overseer. Their pay was 5/ per day and the overseer offered them another 4/ to work until 10 p.m. one evening, they laughed at him but refused the job, and told the Yankee to do it himself. The natives can nearly all read and write the Hawaiian language, and most of them speak English. Their books etc., are printed in the native tongue, (589) and they only talk English to foreigners. They live in nicely furnished houses, and are altogether quite as comfortable as the working classes in Europe. Their living costs them very little, and they work when they like, and on a Sunday they dress in the latest fashions, and strictly observe the Sabbath. They are straightforward and religious, without being at all gloomy or strait-laced. The town is laid out exactly like an English one, with good horse-roads for there is a large carriage traffic. On week days the men wear shirt and trousers and go barefooted. The women wear a long coloured loose night gown reaching to the knees, no shoes or stockings, and their long black hair hanging either in two long plaits, or loose down the back, in it they wear natural flowers, and also in their little straw hats. This is their weekday rig; on Sundays they dress rather more expensively than an English lady bound to a flower show, are very fond of high laced up French boots. The real native women are not so handsome as the Tongans, but the half-castes are generally very pretty, and many are married to Europeans.

There is an upper, a middle, and a lower class even amongst the Kanakas. The principal amusements are swimming and horse riding; all the natives can ride and swim. One may see mothers bathing and throwing their children into the sea to teach them to swim before they can walk. I believe there are more horses on the small island of Oahu than in the county of Yorkshire. (591) They breed so fast that every native who likes can have one, and, of course, every white person keeps a horse and carriage, and they are to be found grazing all over the island. The women ride astride the animal, the same as men, and to see them on a Saturday afternoon in their long white muslin dresses, galloping along the streets by scores, with their long hair streaming behind, and a baby sitting in front, is to see a very pretty sight. Saturday afternoon is a general holiday with them and they dress up, trim their hair and their horses with flowers before starting out. They generally use the clumsy Mexican saddle, which with the bridle costs more than the horse, which animal you may buy for a pound, but unable to hire one for a short time under 2/6. (592) The last horse I rode was a donkey at St. Michael, Azores, but have had two long rides here and am going again tomorrow. Honolulu has been thronged this week with sailors on horseback and am sure it's a great mercy no one has been killed. I must not forget to remark on the number of cats, dogs and pigs there are on the island, especially the former, which you may see in all the houses, on all the roofs and walls, and in every garden, and even following people about the streets. Pigs are to be met with everywhere. I saw a party of natives cooking one, of which they invited me to partake, but not being hungry preferred to decline, as they cooked him whole, just as he was killed in a pit full of red hot stones, and when he was sufficiently roasted they poured buckets of cold water over him. Cocoanuts are rather scarce here but bananas, melons, guavas, oranges, native apples and mangoes are plentiful, but come from the large island of Hawaii.

The natives are very fond of elaborate funerals. I met one on Saturday afternoon with hearse and plumes in grand style, and the natives all in the deepest mourning, but chattering loudly and affable as they marched along. The cemeteries are very pretty and the natives are very fond of gravestones. The finest building on the island is the King's palace, built in 1872 by Kamehameha the 5th. It is something like a gentleman's hall in England, with a square tower in the centre. The state officials here, officers etc. are mostly Americans, there is a native cavalry regiment, one of infantry and a military band. The population of Honolulu is 70,000, about one-third of whom are foreigners. You can't hire a horse, buy a glass of ale, or do any sort of bartering with the natives on Sunday, it is the Sabbath with men and beast, and they considered it a great sin, sometime ago when an English, a French, and an American Man of War all sailed from the island on a Sunday morning. They don't mind a ship coming in, but detest to see one sail. Our men who were on shore last Sunday could buy nothing or get any drink anywhere, and they say they walked about the town all day with their pockets full of money like a lot of codgers. For such a large town I (595) never saw quieter or more orderly streets, the shops are nearly all shut after 7 p.m. and the streets are as quiet as on Sunday evenings in England, and there is evening service in nearly all the churches.

Most of the houses are built of wood, nicely painted, with pleasant gardens surrounding them. Water is very plentiful on the island, but still it is not fertile for the soil is all lava cinders, and everything has to be cultivated. I consider these natives far superior to those of the Philippine Islands in civilization, and social improvement etc. although they were cannibals but a short time since. The first missionaries landed here in 1820, in the brig "Thaddeus" from Boston, U.S. The white ladies here, of course, ride horses as they do in Barrowden, but where everybody (596) sits astride, a side-saddle looks ridiculous. Lots of the native women are over 6 ft. high. As compared with a similar sized town in China or Japan, there seems a scarcity of children in Honolulu and the girls seem twice as numerous as the boys. Of course, there are newspapers printed here, and even a monthly magazine, but they are after the American style, and the tone is not equal to our own local papers. Yesterday we had a lot of the native ministers etc. on board, and today we have had King Kalakua himself with his son, and several officers, etc. Kalakua is a stout man about 40, almost black as a negro, and in figure like a small edition of Sir Roger. He was dressed in an old dark suit of clothes and a straw hat, but his son, and his officers (597) were elaborately dressed. All our officers were in full uniform, the yards were manned and the band played the "Sandwich" anthem, and he was received with as much honor as we show Queen Victoria. He stayed to luncheon and had his portrait taken afterwards.

I should like very well to live in Honolulu, and should keep a horse with a litter of cats, dogs and pigs, the same as other Christians here. The founder of the Hawaiian Kingdom was Kamehameha the 1st who conquered and ruled the islands for 20 years. He was born 25 years before Cook discovered the islands, and was a very remarkable man. His memory is still regarded by his countrymen and he is often called the Napoleon of the Pacific Islands. Before his time they were broken up into petty kingdoms like the Fiji Islands. He was succeeded by four other Kamehamekas in succession, then Lomailo, who died last year, and should have been succeeded by his Queen Emma, but the Americans, after a serious riot had occurred among the natives, succeeded in getting Kalakua elected to the throne. King Kamehameha II with his favorite wife visited England in 1820, in a British merchant ship, and were very kindly received by King George IV. He and his Queen both died while there of the measles, within 8 days of each other, and their bodies were brought back to Honolulu by Captain Lord Byron, in H.M.S. "Blonde" and buried here. Kamehameha IV also visited England and France in 1849 when he was heir apparent. We expect to leave here on the 10th for Hawaii, Tahiti, Marquesas Islands before reaching Valparaiso. We received today from H.M.S. "Petrel" an animal called a "terrapin" or land tortoise, brought from the Galapagos Islands. They have several which are to be sent to the Zoological Gardens London. Ours is dead, and weighs nearly 300 lbs, but they have been known to be 1200 lbs in weight. They are not amphibious and are found only in that group of islands, and will soon become extinct, as the whale ships kill them for food.

August 10th - We sail in the morning for Hilo, 200 miles distant. On Sunday I went to the English Church, a very poor one for a bishop's, and the service was burlesqued by that mixture of mom millinery and tom foolery called "Ritualism." In the even to the American Free Church, which was quite a healthy change in an opposite direction from the "posture" and "imposture" practiced (600) at the Cathedral.

The American Illustrated Papers I have seen here are full of copies from the "Graphic" and "London News," and the local papers contain the novels of the best English authors, printed in chapters and without the author's permission. I mentioned this to an American and he said, "Of course, they do the same in England with ours, or they can do if they like.

Yours sincerely,

J. Matkin

H.M.S. "Challenger"

Hilo, Hawaii August 19/75

Dear Tom,

We left Honolulu on the 11th Aug for this island distant 200 miles, and arrived on the 14th having to steam against a head wind. Before leaving we received from H.M.S. "Petrel" two of the Galapagos turtle, which I told you of in my last letter, one weighs nearly 300 lbs, and the other, a small one, about 50 lbs. The larger can walk away with a man on its back. They are very ugly creatures, the head is like a serpent, the hind feet similar to an elephant's, and forefeet like the flippers of a seal. They have five toes on (602) each foot; live entirely on green stuff, but do not masticate their food, swallowing it whole like a large python would a monkey. If possible we shall bring them home alive, the men polish their shells with bees wax and oil, when cleaning their guns in the morning. We sounded on our passage across about 12 miles from the island of Maui at the depth of 2,075 faths. Maui was a lofty island but inferior in altitude to this of Hawaii, which is the highest in the Pacific.

On the night of the 12th, the blazing volcano of Mauna Loa was visible, hut we were 90 miles away and were steaming parallel with the island of Hawaii all day on the 13th, for the town is on its eastern side, and the prettiest of all its ports. The island is about 75 miles (603) in length, and 55 in breadth, and seen from the sea has a beautifully verdant appearance owing to the large amount of rain it receives through the attraction of its high mountains. In the manner that it sloped upwards from the sea, it reminded me very much of Madeira, but the great rents, fissures and upheavals everywhere in the soil were more indicative of a volcanic origin. On the morning of the 14th we anchored in the Bay of Hilo, about a mile from the town and close to the American flag ship "Pensacola." The natives who came out to us with a pilot, were wearing H.M.S. Repulse's hat ribbons round their straw hats, and they told us that the "Repulse" had gone round to Kalikahua Bay on the other side of the island, and the place (604) where Captain Cook was murdered. They abused the Americans frightfully, said they never had any money to spend, and that the "Repulse's" men were rolling in dollars, that Admiral Cochrane had behaved like a father to them, had thrown his ship open, and found boats to bring them off, and refreshments when they were on board. The "Repulse" is homeward bound, so I suppose the Admiral wished to leave behind a favorable impression. He is the grandson of the famous but ill-used Admiral Earl Dundonald.

The Americans here, through their great political influence, succeeded in getting King Kalakua elected to the throne, against the wishes of the majority of the natives, which caused terrible riots at Honolulu at the time. They have settled down (605) now to their new King, but after his return from America he tried to pass a law for the cession of Pearl River, Oahu, to the U. States for a naval depot, which they fiercely refused to part with, or a foot of their soil, and the discontent and distrust of foreigners in general, gave rise to their new rallying cry . . . "Hawaii for the Hawaiians." "America gave us the light" said a native pastor in a sermon at the time, "But now that we have the light, we should be left to use it for ourselves." There is no doubt that the Americans have had all the work of civilizing and educating these people, and have done it well, but this does not establish their right to the island, if the natives would prefer "British protection." The ancient chiefs (606) are all dead, and foreigners here seem to think there will be no more kings after Kalakua's death, but the remnant of the people will then decide what form of government they would prefer. When that time comes there will probably be rows about the matter. Since the last election, the Americans here do not feel quite safe unless one of their ships of war is cruising round the island.

The town of Hilo is much prettier than Honolulu, the houses are generally white, and surrounded by trees and gardens. There are about 3,000 inhabitants, including a couple of hundred white people, and plenty of Chinese. There are Americans, English and Roman Catholic missionaries and churches.

The Chinese work chiefly on the sugar (607) plantations, which are very numerous on this island; at the back of the town are some sugar mills where the cane is crushed. Sugar growing and cattle and sheep farming are the principal pursuits here, but the planters are losing because the native laws do not permit them to make rum, which article is the most profitable item in a sugar planter's income, but there will be plenty made here by and bye. This island is as large as Mauritius, and that produces half the sugar and rum consumed in Europe. The cattle farms are on the slopes of the mountains, where grass is plentiful and the climate temperate. Some of the farmers have 20,000 sheep and thousands of cattle, the main profit of them being the wool, tallow and hides, for meat is so abundant and cheap, (608) that it hardly pays for bringing in from the station. We paid 2d per lb for beautiful beef, and the regular inhabitants pay even less. Fruit is plentiful, especially pineapples and mangoes, a delicious Indian fruit. We had one good view of the mountains the day we arrived, they are 25 miles apart, the extinct volcano Mauna Kea, was covered with a small patch of snow, but the active one of Mauna Loa was free from snow. They are each over 13,000 feet above the sea level, and slope upwards so gradually that a mule can climb to their summits. They are not conical shaped like Teneriffe or Fusihama, but merely rise from a chain of mountains which is 10,000 feet high for (609) several miles near the culminating point. There is an active crater near the summit of Mauna Loa, and an immense burning lake of fire in its side, about two-thirds of the distance from the base. This wonderful lake of fire is what all travellers coming hither try to go to see. Nearly all our officers have been, but as it is a two days journey, and you require horses and native guides, none of the ship's company have been able to go, and I was much disappointed, but to compensate for this, last Sunday night, the upper crater of Mauna Loa burst out brilliantly, burning more than it has done for the last six years, and we had a splendid view of the strange subterranean fire. We have not seen it since, and the (610) people say that you may be here for months without seeing it burning. It is the upper crater the inhabitants fear most for when it bursts out the burning lava rushes down the sides of the mountain toward Hilo. There have been about six eruptions during the present century, the last and worst being in 1868. A good many of the foreign settlers then left Hilo for Honolulu thinking their town was about to be buried like the "Cities of the Plain." Those who could not leave sent men out on horseback towards the mountain to see what course the stream of fire was taking. It came direct for

Hilo burning and destroying everything in its course, but about 10 miles from the town, it entered the earth, and flowed underground until it reached the end of the town, when it burst out of the ground, and ran into the sea, forming a long narrow peninsula nearly a mile in length, which is now covered with cocoa palms and beautiful vegetation.

Horses are as plentiful here as at Honolulu, and every native seems to possess one. I was on shore yesterday afternoon with two ship-mates, and we went horse-riding, but there are no good roads here like those at Honolulu, the whole surface of the island is lava rock and cinders, overlaid with a thin soil, which is very productive on account of the abundance of rain. Water is very plentiful and there are scores of creeks and rivers in which groups of natives may be seen bathing all day long. We bathed and rode, ate fruit and sugar cane, and joked with the natives. They are about the (612) most hospitable race we have seen, and so cheerful and pleasant. The young ladies decorated our horses and us with flowers, and brought us fruit to eat, while they had a gallop themselves. We saw lots of children surf-bathing or riding into the beach on the top of the great rolling waves, which break all along the shores of the island; they balance themselves on these waves, and shoot into the beach at the rate of 40 miles an hour or more. We are just steaming away from Hilo, and shall soon have seen the last of the Hawaiians, and their pleasant land. We are bound for Tahiti, distant 2,200 miles south.

September 15th
South Pacific, Lat 10°S

We are some days behind time again (613) and are still 300 miles from Tahiti, owing to the light wind, and the numerous soundings we have had to take. We have sounded about every other day and the average depth from Honolulu has been about 2,700 fathoms, the dredging and trawling have also been successful. We had the usual unpleasant and hot weather in the rainy latitudes near the equator, but caught the S.E. trade winds 300 miles north of the line, and have them now, though very light. The equator was crossed at midnight on the 5th in Long. 151°W. We have had another sad death on board since leaving Hilo, and this time it was one of the scientific staff, a fine healthy looking man, too. Dr. Von Suhm joined the ship at Sheerness as a naturalist, under Professor Thompson and (614) was very clever in his profession, quite an enthusiast in hunting up rare specimens of natural history at the different countries we have visited. About a week ago he was laid up with a severe cold which produced Erysipelas in the head and caused delirium. On Sunday he was so bad that we could not have church and the bells could not be struck; was worse on Monday, and in his wanderings he gabbled away in German, which Mr. Buchanan, the chemist, could understand and answer. He talked of the battles he had helped to gain during the late war, in which he served as a common soldier, and was wounded. On Monday evening he got out of bed, and said he must pay a visit to his father and mother, and he died at 3 p.m. the next day. He was buried yesterday morning at 9 a.m. (615) the ship's company being dressed in white, and the officers and scientific gents in full uniform. We sounded in the afternoon at 2,650 fathoms. Professor Thompson helped to carry him to the gangway, and was very much cut up about it as were all the scientific staff. On the day before he died the anchor was got ready for anchoring at a small group of islands called the Carolines, so that he might be kept more quiet, but we passed over the exact spot - according to the chart - where they should have been, without seeing any sign of them, so we proceeded onwards for Tahiti. Several groups of islands in the Pacific are positioned incorrectly; we found the Admiralty Islands a long way out.

Dr. Van Suhm had a brother at Manilla who used to be constantly with him during our two visits there. He was a native of German Holstein and about 26 years of age. All his books and effects will be sent home from Valparaiso to his father, but letters will be forwarded to his friends from Tahiti.

Sunday, October 3rd
At Tahiti

On the 16th of September we brought up from a depth of 2,350 fathoms the head of a harpoon, and several whale's teeth; so we must have dropped our dredge on the skeleton of some hundred whales. On the 17th evening we witnessed the most beautiful sunset I ever remember seeing in my life, and at 4 a.m. the next morning we sighted Tahiti and Moorea, another of the Society Islands at the distance of about 60 miles. (617) Both islands were lofty, the highest peak of Tahiti called the Diadem, being over 8,000 feet above the sea level. The elevated portion of both these islands is very irregular - a mass of pinnacles, ridges and gullies, thrown up by volcanic agency in a wonderfully curious and striking manner. We sounded between the islands at 1,525 fms. then steamed in towards Tahiti, and anchored within 200 yards of Papeete, the capital of the island.

Tahiti or Otahiti was discovered in 1767 by Captain Wallis R.N. and in 1769, Captain Cook came to observe the Transit of Venus. He visited it four times, and discoverd the surrounding 7 islands, which he called the "Society Islands" after the Royal Society, which was the instigation of his coming hither, as it is of the voyage of the "Challenger." The appearance of Captain Wallis at this island in 1767 did not create among the natives so much surprise as you would imagine, for it was but the realization of a prophecy of one of their sages. This personage had foretold "that at some distant period, a canoe without outriggers would come to their shores." I think I told you that a Polynesian canoe was balanced in the water by a framework like a hurdle; so of course a vessel without this appendage was a great curiosity, and when it did appear in the shape of H.M.S. "Dolphin," the Tahiti islanders soon made friends and traded with its crew. They and the natives of the adjoining islands, have always had the name of being the handsomest of the (619) Pacific races, they are also the laziest, the most cheerful, and the most immoral. They are lazy because there is nothing to induce them to work; their island produces spontaneously everything they require for sustenance, and is naturally the most fertile island in the Pacific or elsewhere. The Tahitians are wonderfully like the Hawaiians, but are whiter, taller and better featured. They are just as kind in disposition, of a similar temperament and speak nearly the same language, but are even lazier, fonder of gay clothes and music, not so well educated, and far more immoral. Their island is frequently called the "Gem of the Pacific," which it undoubtedly is, and is also termed the "Corinth of the South Seas" on account of the universal immorality (620) and the inherent lightness and gaiety of its people.

This island and people have caused more desertions and punishments in the British Navy than all the rest of the Pacific Islands together. Captain Cook lost several men here for some weeks, and the natives stowed them away, until he recovered them by stratagem. It was this island, and the pleasant memories it excited among the harassed and oppressed crew of the "Bounty," that caused that ship's company to mutiny in 1789 near Tongatbu, set their wretch of a captain with 19 of his officers and men adrift in an open boat, 3600 miles from any European settlement, and return with their vessel to Tahiti again. Here many of them settled down and married native women, while the remainder, nine in (621) number, taking with them some Tahitian men and women, sailed away to the southeast and found a home on Pitcairn Island, 1,000 miles away, where they remained undiscovered for 20 years. Meantime their Captain Bligh had after suffering incredible hardships, succeeded in reaching the Dutch island of Timor, by way of Torres Straits, from whence he proceeded to England and gave his own version of the mutiny.

The "Pandora" frigate was sent in search of the mutineers, and discovered the portion who had remained at Tahiti. They were torn from their wives and children, and put in irons on board the "Pandora" for passage to England. The frigate was totally wrecked on the great coral reef near Cape York, but the whole of her crew reached Batavia in the ship's boats, and eventually arrived in England. The mutineers were tried, and and several of them hanged. The Pitcairn mutineers included the ringleader Lieutenant Fletcher Christian: they destroyed the "Bounty" and after getting settled on their fertile and almost inaccessible little island, lived comfortably and peaceably together for about 3 years, after which a great quarrel took place about the women. Five of the mutineers, including Lieutenant Christian, were killed by the native men, and the latter from motives of self defence were also killed by the remaining 4 seamen. Soon after this two of the seamen succeeded in manufacturing a native spirit and were continually intoxicated: one of them killed by a fall from a (623) cliff, and the other was killed by his comrades for the sake of quiet; leaving but two of the original mutineers, a midshipman, and an able seaman. A great change then took place in the moral character of these two men, they discovered an old Bible, and a prayer book, which led them to alter their mode of life. They observed the Sabbath, taught their wives and children and began to lead honest Christian lives. At this juncture Young the midshipman died leaving John Adams, a rough uneducated English seaman, only 24 years of age, the sole protector of a helpless colony of women and children. How he did his work, all the world now knows; he succeeded in establishing such a community as had been the dream of poets, and the aspiration of philosophers, and he died in 1829 at the age of 65, Chief Magistrate and Pastor of Pitcairn Island, in the presence of his children and the flock he had guided so well.

His youth had been marked by terrible and unusual events, but his end was peaceful and noble, and I think there are few lives in history so strange and instructive as that of John Adams, the mutineer. In 1831 the Pitcairn Islanders having increased to 87, a great number of them removed to Tahiti, where they were very kindly received by Queen Pomare, now reigning here; but the manners and morality of their Tahitian cousins proved quite repugnant to them, and they soon returned to their old island; but in 1856, when they had increased to 130, the colony was removed, with the general consent, to Norfolk Island, near New Zealand - the convict establishment having been previously removed. There the majority are now, but a few returned again to Pitcairn, and we shall probably visit them on the way to Valparaiso. In 1842 the French Government took forcible possession of the Society and Marquesas Islands, and established their seat of government at Tahiti. This transaction was nearly the cause of a war. with Great Britain, but the storm blew over, and the two powers bound themselves by treaty to respect the neutrality of the Hawaiian Islands. Prior to the French occupation, Tahiti had been visited by British and American missionaries, who had converted the natives, and introduced schools, etc. Even now the majority of the natives are Protestants, although there are any amount of Sisters (626) of Mercy, and Catholic Priests on the islands.

In most of the houses I visited, there were Bibles, and other books printed in London by Spottiswoods. Queen Pomare was not dethroned by the French, for they found her influence very great, and her authority useful, so she receives a pension from the French Government, and has a palace guard, etc. but no real power - that is centred in the French Military Govenour (sic).

There is a coral reef in front of Papeete harbour, and an island at the narrow entrance of the tiniest size, but covered with cocoa palms, etc. and being further adorned by a small battery of guns. This small island is set apart for the isolation of lepers, for leprosy is as prevalent here as at the Hawaiian Islands, and there is the same fearful decrease of population (627); that of Tahiti is now under 10,000 and Captain Cook estimated it at over 200,000 in 1778, and he also describes in his journal, a grand naval review he witnessed at this island, where there were 150 large canoes manned by 7,000 warriors. Tahiti is about 50 miles in length and about 12 in breadth, and in Lat. 17°S it is well watered, being mountainous and wonderfully fertile. The general productions are about the same as at the Hawaiian Islands and Fiji group, but the indigenous fruits and roots are much more plentiful. Sugar and cotton are produced, but in no great quantity.

When we got close into Papeete, I thought I had never seen such a beautiful place in my life, and now as we are leaving it, I think so still and the longer we stay, the more we seem to like it, (628) and the people - natives as well as Europeans. The houses are all hidden by cocoa palms, bread-fruit trees, orange and banana trees and tropical greenery of every kind, and the great mountains which rise just behind the town, are covered with vegetation, with the intervening valleys and plains richly cultivated, and watered by numerous creeks in which the natives seem to be bathing and washing clothes the whole day. Right opposite Papeete, about 20 miles distant, is the mountainous island of Mooree, from which the most beautiful oranges I ever tasted in my life are brought and sold in Papeete, 50 for a shilling.

Behind this island the sun sets every night, painting its mountains every imaginable colour for about 10 minutes. There were two French warships at anchor in the bay when (629) we came, one of which sailed the other day for Brest, with time expired soldiers, prisoners, etc. I omitted mentioning that immediately after sunset, it is at once as dark as with you at 9 p.m.

There is a military governor, an Admiral and any amount of officials and soldiers stationed here, but of working Frenchmen of the agricultural or industrial class, there are none. Either they are too fond of the parent country or are not encouraged to emigrate, and this is the great cause of French failure in colonization. They failed in Canada, in Louisiana, in Madagascar and the East Indies, and also at New Caledonia, at the Marquesas Group and here also. The French possessions in the Pacific must cost the home government a lot of money every year, here at Tahiti, there are scores of officials, soldiers, priests and Sisters of Mercy, all drawing money and yet there is nothing to show for it. There is scarcely anything exported from these islands, and no shipping trade to speak of, whereas if the British or Americans had them, they would be the West Indies of the South Pacific. I should think the Fiji Islands are already producing and exporting more cotton and sugar in one year than these islands have done since they were under French protection. Papeete is not to be compared to Honolulu for business and fine shops, etc. What trade there is, is in the British and American hands, the richest merchant and shipowner here, being an enterprising Scotchman named John Brander, who is married to a princess - Queen Pomare's cousin, one of the handsomest women I ever saw. There is no newspaper printed here, the people get their news and mails at uncertain intervals from San Francisco, in sailing brigs belonging to Brander and Co. The French people here make no pretence about working, there are a few French cafes and restaurants, but they have no shops. However they enjoy themselves as much as possible, and are very hospitable to strangers. I looked over the soldier's barracks and was very much pleased with everything, the soldiers seemed so comfortable, civil and contented, was very sorry I could not converse with them in their own language, but hope to master it by and bye. Some of the French soldiers came on board our ship and I showed them round, and were much interested with the curiosities from Japan, China, etc. I also got acquainted with some very nice English, American, Danish and French people on shore, who all spoke English. I and a few of my messmates went to meet them every evening at their houses, and they entertained us first rate with music, dancing, etc. They came on board the "Challenger" and saw the ship's albums, containing photographs of all the countries and people we had visited.

One evening we all went to a grand ball out in the country and we did enjoy ourselves. Have felt more at home here than at any place since we left Sydney. We have had the French Governor, and other grand officials on board, as well as Queen Pomare and (633) the Royal Princes and Princesses to an afternoon dance and luncheon. Queen Pomare is quite an old woman now, and rather reminded me of grandmother - if she were about two shades darker, and a good deal stouter. Her Majesty was received with the usual honors, the yard being manned, and the officers and ship's company in full uniform. As she came over the gangway the band played "God Save the Queen," and the old lady bobbed at our Captain as much as to say "go along with you." The French Governor and officials came with her, but she seemed more at ease when they went on shore again, and left her to see the dancing. She was dressed very plainly and seemed a nice old lady; her sons and daughters are fine looking persons, speak English and French, and play the piano first rate. They were dressed in pink muslin generally, their dresss made like those of the natives of all these islands and the Hawaiian group. They are what used to be worn in Europe many years ago, and were called Sacques I think - being shaped like a dressing gown with no waist, they were introduced here by the missionaries wives, and many of the European ladies here wear them. I should not be surprised if they were to become fashionable again, for they look very nice and comfortable in hot weather. Before Queen Pomare left the ship, she asked to see a sailor's hornpipe danced. She is much liked by the natives and very partial to English people.

There is an English church here, where the service is (635) conducted in English in the morning and French in the evening, also, two Roman Catholic churches; and the only schools on the island are managed by the priests and sisters. Nearly all the British and American girls speak French, having been educated in these schools, and they also speak the native language. They reminded me a good deal of the Australian young ladies, but they grow much quicker than they even; at 14 they are as tall and fully developed as girls of 20 in England, and there are several under 16 who were married, and had children. When a lot of them are together, and they don't want you to know what they are saying, they jabber away in the native tongue - which seems to me to have no backbone to it.

The natives here dress more like the Tongans, than the Hawaiians, resembling the former people very much, but are fonder of pleasure, and more addicted to drink, especially the men. I have been on shore here several times, and think the place prettier every time I go. The island seems made for the people, and they for it. Our crew have had lots of leave here, and I spent a good deal of money, and an enormous lot of curiosities from New Guinea, China, and Japan have found their way on shore. There are five men now in irons for swimming on shore, and remaining all night, and one has deserted altogether: there are lots of leave-breakers to be punished as soon as we get to sea. There are Consuls of all nations residing here.

Coral is very plentiful here, and so (637) is fruit, especially oranges, plantains and bread fruit. The bread fruit tree is as large as a walnut tree, and covered with fruit, which when ripe is much larger than a cocoanut, and covered with a rough serrated skin. It eats (sic) something between new bread and custard, and I like it very much. An English merchant captain is now in prison here for kidnapping round the islands, and his vessel lies close to us. There are lots of Chinese here, but they are about the laziest Chinamen I ever saw. One of them told me he should never go back to China any more, "too muchy work there, Tahiti plenty food, plenty wife, no work." There are no horses here like there were at the Sandwich Islands, neither are there any cattle or sheep, although grass (638) is plentiful on the hillsides. The cattle and sheep for consumption here are brought from Honolulu, and we pay 10d per lb for very inferior beef. Other things are much dearer than at Honolulu except fruit and drink.

At the French Police Court the other day, a Chinaman for breaking into a house, was sentenced to 10 years transportation to New Caledonia; another Chinaman for deliberately murdering his fellow countryman, only received six months imprisonment. All the roads here are shaded by palm and bread fruit trees, and it is certainly a lovely island. There are lots of mosquitos, but no noxious animals.

These natives are wonderfully fond of music, and when our ship's band (639) used to play on shore, they used to dance until they dropped, and got so excited. They all asked eagerly what the "Challenger" had come for, and seem to have some vague idea that the British will one day come and drive the French away, who they hate wonderfully. Were greatly struck with the "Duke of Edinburgh" when he came here a few years ago in the "Galatea." At one large native house they showed me his portrait, where he sits leaning on some native young ladies in a manner that the Duchess would not like. At this house I dined with the family in the open air, off roast pig, baked in a hole under hot stones and roasted plantains. They all ate with their fingers, but accommodated me with a knife and fork, refusing to accept (640) any money I offered them. They had a large picture of Queen Victoria in her state robes before marriage and they asked me if she were a good Queen, and how many children and grandchildren she had. This family consisted of an old grandfather and grandmother; their married sons and daughters and a host of children - about 50 - all living in one large two-roomed house, and very happy they all seemed. After dinner one of the young women asked me if I was a Mormon and what I thought of Mormonism? I told her there were never any Mormons in England and that the faith was dying away in America - the only country where the existence of such a community was possible. They seemed rather disappointed at this and after a bit, one of the men dressed in a black (641) shirt, and silver mounted spectacles, and of a generally clerical appearance, brought me a piece of parchment to read which explained it all. It ran as follows - "This is to certify that Taranei has been duly elected a member of the Mormon brethren, and is hereby authorized to preach the gospel of Jesus Christ, as it was revealed to his servant Joseph Smith" - signed by two of the original 70 elders of that church. He then told me that all the family were Mormons, but this the young women denied, though I believed they spoke falsely. They brought me Brigham Young's portrait to look at and to write his name thereon; so I endorsed it "Brigham Young, American Impostor." I (642) presented the grandfather with a Sheffield razor and came away very much amused. We received a mail here, but there were no letters for me as usual.

Are just leaving Tahiti for Valparaiso - distant 5,000 miles and in another hour we shall have seen the last of the brightest and most beautiful land we have yet visited.

November 15th

At Juan Fernandez

We only arrived here on the 13th after a smooth passsage from Tahiti, sighting on the way the island of Tubuai, one of the Austral Group. Before we had been 3 weeks from Tahiti we were in Lat. 40°S. and found it very chill indeed. This island and settlement reminded me very much of Tristan D'Acunha, and rises quite as abruptly (643) from the ocean to a height of 3,000 feet. The hillsides are covered with vegetation and forest, and large flocks of wild goats may be seen feeding on the steep slopes of the hills. The island is 10 miles long and 5 broad, well watered, but far from fertile, the soil being wretchedly poor; the island has a very solitary appearance. It was discovered in 1563 by Juan Fernandez, and in 1703 Alexander Selkirk was left here on account of some quarrel with his captain, and was not rescued until 1709 by a Bristol privateer. From Selkirk's journal De Foe pinched the materials for his interesting romance of Robinson Crusoe. Omson touched here in 1765, and his crew caught several goats, the ears of which were supposed to have been clipped by Selkirk. (644) Soon after Omson's visit, the Spaniards from Chili settled here, and built the fort of which the remains are still standing. When the Chilians gained their independence at the beginning of the present century, they claimed the island as an appendage of Chili, and established a convict settlement here which has since been removed to Magellan's Straits. At present the island is rented from the Chilian Government for a term of years by Don Fernandez Lopez, a Chilian who employs about a dozen families of Chilians in seal fishing and the rearing of cattle. Their chief trade is with the numerous American whale ships that call here during the year for fresh provisions, etc.

There are lots of fine cattle, horses and goats here, but very little cultivation, and the people seem very lazy. They charge (645) very dear for everything - 1/ for meat per lb, and they are very independent. The working men look to me like convicts, the women have an Indian cast of countenance, and the children are very healthy looking. There is no priest of any sort on the island and they can only communicate with Chili about thrice a year. The sea round this island abounds with fish, especially fine crayfish, and hundreds have been caught by our crew. Our botanists, naturalists, photographers etc., have been hard at work here, there are some very rare humming birds in the forest here. We have a young kid, and a young tame seal, which we shall take away as pets from Robinson Crusoe's island, the latter animal cries just like a child. The island has a wonderfully (646) wild and deserted appearance. I was on shore yesterday for a few hours, and mounted the elevated promontory, whereon poor Selkirk used to gaze seaward in search of that friendly vessel which was to bear him to his distant home. I could not help thinking of Cowper's beautiful poem - "O solitude where are the charms, which sages have seen in thy face? Better dwell in the midst of alarms, than reign in this horrible place." At the back of this settlement are some enormous caves in the hillsides and in one of these, Selkirk is supposed to have lived in in winter. Many suppose them to have been made by bucaneers as a hiding place for their treasures; but I think they are natural, or nearly so. The largest is about 50 feet long, 20 broad, and 20 high, and the (647) sides and roof are covered with green ferns and stalactites, which give them quite a fairy-like appearance. Hundreds of English and American names are carved on the sides of these caves and, of course, added my own to the number. I dined today off a descendant of one of Selkirk's goats, which ate very tough.

We are just leaving for Valparaiso, distant 360 miles, and the captain has issued wine to all hands as this is the third anniversary of the "Challenger's" commission. The average depth across from Tahiti is about 2,000 fathoms and tolerably level bottom.

November 21st

At Valparaiso

We arrived on the 19th and I was very pleased to receive 15 letters, (648) including 4 from yourself. I have been on shore here already and hope to describe Valparaiso next mail. The weather is beautiful and we are getting new potatoes, peas, strawberries, cherries, etc. We can see the snow covered peaks of the Andes rising above the clouds some 80 miles inland. Our cruise is extended until the end of June, so shall not be home before July. Next address Monte Video and Ascension, you will get letters oftener now. Shall be in the Atlantic by the time this reaches you.

Yours sincerely,

Joe Matkin

H.M.S. Challenger

Valparaiso, December 7th, 1875

Dear Tom,

Since writing your last I have received your October letter, and expect no more until we reach Sandy Point, which will be about Xmas day (sic). I also received another letter from home, and think that all my missing ones have now reached me. I was greatly surprised to hear of the loss of the "Vanguard," having served in two of her sister ships, and knowing them to be such fine vessels.

We are having beautiful weather here now, and fruit of all kinds is in season. Chili is a great country for cherries and strawberries and is not a bad place to live in, although there is an earthquake about every other night.

After a longer stay I find Valparaiso much better than I thought, and the people more tolerable also; they are certainly a little more lively than the Spaniards or Portuguese, and not such bigotted Catholics - especially here in Valparaiso where there is a very numerous foreign community. I believe the people up at Santiago and inland are more "priest-ridden" and prejudiced against Protestants. Religious processions are very common in this city, there was one the other day half a mile long which completely stopped all ordinary traffic for more than an hour. A short (651) time ago if you met one of these processions you had to take off your hat until it passed; but this is not insisted upon now, and the Protestants have their own places of worship, and enjoy the same privileges as their Catholic neighbours. I believe Chili is the best governed, and the most prosperous of all the states in South America and its history has not been so turbulent and sanguinary as that of the other little republics. In these Spanish settled countries there is always a party fighting against the government and a war on hand. Peru and Bolivia have been the worst for this, and I believe the priests are the instigators and fomenters of all these quarrels.

There were never such upstirs in America or Australia, or even in India where so many different races are peaceably and quietly governed by British laws and impartial policy. I think the Chilians are beginning to see these things, and to keep the priests in their proper position. In a young country like this, I did not expect to find so many poor and uneducated people as there are, in which respect it is very different to Australia and America. In Valparaiso there are just as many poor as there are in Lisbon, and they are quite as ignorant, except for the better classes; schools are rarely to be met with.

Chili was conquered from the Incas of Peru by two lieutenants of Pizarro, the famous conqueror of Peru in 1532. The Indians have dwindled away (653) by degrees, but as they intermarried with the Spaniards, there are many half-castes. Some pure Indians may be met with at the back of the Andes, and also in Patagonia, but they won't work like the natives of the Philippine Islands, and as there are no Chinese here as yet, the Spaniards have to work themselves, so there are many poor people.

The Chilian Revolution broke out at Santiago in 1814, and after many years fighting, the Spaniards were compelled to acknowledge the independence of Chili. About the same time Peru and Bolivia and other Spanish states obtained their independence, but have been fighting amongst each other ever since, and are only now getting settled down. The great influx of foreigners, the railways, telegraphs, and numerous mail boats constantly running now from England, have done more to establish stability in these countries than any internal influence and improvement, and newspapers have done more than priests for the people.

I have noticed in the shop windows here Dicken's works translated into Spanish, and also those of many other British authors. That popular periodical the "British Workman" is also translated and republished out here, and has a great sale, I believe it is also translated into Russian and Italian.

The two leading figures in obtaining the independence of Chili were Admiral Cockrane, Earl of Dundonald, and General O'Higgins, an Irishman. Cockrane commanded the Chilian (655) navy and O'Higgins the army against the Spaniards. Cockrane's great exploit was the cutting out of a treasure ship from Callas, and at the conclusion of the war the Chilians quarreled with him about some money he had advanced from his private estate, and he left them in disgust. Cockrane was one of the most daring admirals we ever had, his feat of destroying the French Fleet in Basque Roads, with fire ships, is said to have determined Napoleon against his meditated invasion of England.

Cockrane was dismissed from the British Service on account of some stock-jobbing panic he is said to have caused, but it was proved many years after that he was quite innocent. After fighting for the Chilians he commenced the command (656) of the Greek Fleet against the Turks until the independence of Greece was established and recognized. He then remained unemployed for some thirty years when his innocence was established and acknowledged everywhere but at the Admiralty. The Americans and other nations began to cry out about his ill-treatment, and at length he was re-instated by Queen Victoria and made an Admiral. He died in 1861 at the age of 92, and was buried in Westminster Abbey with all honours, but it was the Americans, I believe, who, by writing a correct account of his life effectually cleared his good name, and pointed out to his countrymen and the rest of the world, that the bravest of British Admirals, and the man who had wasted his fortune in obtaining (657) the liberties of others, had been driven by harrassing creditors from his country and died in debt. However bad the Chilians treated him when alive, they are very kind of his memory, and proud of his exploits. Here in Valparaiso there are Cockrane streets, squares and hotels, there is a fine iron-clad ship, built in England for the Chiliean government called the "Admiral Cockrane", and in the centre of Cockrane Square is a fine statue and monument of him in the attitude of declamation, erected last year with splendid ceremony. I think he and O'Higgins have done more for the British name and credit in this country than most people imagine. The British residents, although Protestants, are more liked, and get on better with (658) the Chilians than their Catholic neighbours, the French or Italians.

The richest two merchants in Chili are Englishmen, and the greater part of the busiest portion of this city is owned by an English banker, resident here. In no other city we have been to were there so many foreign residents, a great number of whom are British and German, also lots of Italians, French and Dutchmen, but scarcely any Americans, not being nearly so well represented as in China and Japan. The richest of the merchants are British and Germans. The French and Italians are generally hotelkeepers, some of which are first-class houses. The harbour here is more crowded with shipping than any other we have anchored in. There are some splendid mail boats running direct to Liverpool, and a whole fleet of coast steamers, nearly all of which fly the British flag and are manned by English crews. The railway employees and the mechanics on the docks are mostly English also.

There are two fine streets in Valparaiso over two miles in length, for the city is built at the foot of a range of hills, and, like Hong Kong is about four times as long as it is broad. In these two streets there are some splendid shops, and tramways extend the whole length of the city. There are three large squares and some public gardens; but although the business portion of the city is very tolerable, the remaining larger part is miserable and wretchedly dirty. The houses are mean and built of wood, the streets (660) are narrow, and the people naturally very unclean in their habits and ways. There are some fine Catholic churches, one, the finest I was ever in, though nothing to be compared with our English cathedrals, there were some fine oil paintings on the walls, and at the service the solo singing was very good, there was a large organ and three small ones. I always notice in these Catholic churches that the congregation is nearly all ladies.

I have been on shore a good deal, on duty, and on pleasure, and like the place much more than I did at first, if I were staying on this station, should certainly learn Spanish. Valparaiso is a much better place than Bahia or Manilla, and more like an English city than any we have visited, since leaving Sydney. (661) The Chilians dress very extravagantly, especially the ladies who are tolerably handsome, they have fine dark hair and eyes, good teeth and very small feet, but a cheerless impassive sort of countenance. They wear no bonnets and many of them smoke, dancing is their chief amusement. There is a British consul here and a resident minister at Santiago. I think it is the most expensive place we have been to, a dollar won't go as far as a shilling in England. Wages are very good, especially for mechanics, but there are an awful lot of idlers and loafers about the wharves. The landing wharf is crowded by them all day, and directly a passenger lands, they fight over him and his luggage, and demand to take him somewhere or (662) anywhere for half a dollar.

There are no police to check, for they are the smallest, sleepiest and most miserable looking lot of policemen and soldiers I ever saw anywhere, and the sailers are not much better. The other evening I went to a circus, on purpose to have a good look at the Chilians of all classes, and to see how they took their amusement. The principal feature in the programme was an allegorical representation of the Republic of Chili; it being represented by a painted young female in scanty classical garments who galloped about the ring and kept the Chilian banner in the most insane manner, whilst a small army of Chilian soldiers, gentlemen and ladies rode round her with drawn swords (663) and kept the rest of the world at a respectful distance. The band played the Chilian anthem, and red fire added to the sublimity of the edifying spectacle, which was re-demanded by the patriotic but excited Chilians, about six times, until the foreign portion of the audience could stand it no longer - the Frenchmen coughed scornfully, the Germans and Dutch grunted impatiently - and the British portion winked at each other and shouted "Encore" after every one else was tired. Directly this was over for the last time a very large merchant skipper, weighing some 20 stones, and frightfully intoxicated, made a rush across the ring after the procession. Three Chilian soldiers averaging about four feet in height fisted him and forced him back, but every now and again he would make another dash, and the people would hiss and yell at him until you would have thought he would be glad to get away; but all he did was to make an elaborate bow to each part of the house and sing out pitifully, "Once more, do let us have it once more." He was either an Englishman or an American, and was fined 10 dollars next day.

The population of Valparaiso is over 200,000 and it covers a large area of ground. Santiago is 70 miles inland by rail, and is a very fine laid-out city; most of our officers have been up. Sub Lieut Lord Campbell and Balfour left the "Challenger" on Thursday for Santiago, thence across the Andes to Buenos Ayres, and Monte Video, where they will catch the steamer that brings this letter. (665) The journey across the Andes is rather a dangerous one, but more interesting than that by Magellan's Straits. We have a new sub-lieutenant Lloyd, from H.M. Ship "Teredos" out here. The "Repulse" is expected in here shortly with Admiral Cockrane, son of the famous Dundonald, and the Chilians will make a great fuss with him. We have taken in all our coal and provisions to last us to Ascension, and expect to sail on the 9th for Sandy Point.

I was on shore on the 2nd (my 22nd birthday) and had a good ramble all by myself. I also posted the second volume of my Journal to mother, which I think will be more interesting than the last, as it describes a less known part of the world. Some day I hope to copy the three volumes (666) into one book. I climbed the hills at the back of the town for a view of the snow covered Andes - the noblest range of mountains we have seen. There are many peaks over 20,000 feet high and one Aconcagua is nearly 24,000 feet above the sea level, and the highest mountain in the world that can be seen from the sea level. I am going on shore again tomorrow, as it is a grand religious festival day, being the anniversary of the burning down of the great cathedral at Santiago some 10 years ago, when so many ladies were burnt to death. The shops will all be closed and there will be special services in all the churches. We have lost a few men here by desertion, and some are also to be invalided, for this voyage is very trying to weak constitutions, but don't think I ever felt better than I do at present and like the prospect of a cold weather trip better than a repetition of the tropics. We have taken in a fine bullock for Xmas, and shall be about in the same latitude as on Xmas Day /73 off Prince Edward's Island. The land round Valparaiso is very bleak and sterile, but soon improves as you get clear of the sea.

The mail leaves tomorrow so shall write again from Sandy Point, and you will get letters more frequently now, as our long voyages are pretty well over.

Yours sincerely,

Joe Matkin

(668) H.M.S. "Challenger" in Messier Channel, Patagonia
January 5th, 1876

Dear Tom,

We are gradually getting nearer to Sandy Point, so will begin to get my Patagonian letter ready. After closing your last I received no more from anyone, but of course shall get some at Sandy Point.

We lost six men by desertion at Valparaiso and sailed from there on the 10th of December but had to return the same day as it was too rough to take the magnetic observations required. We made a fresh start on the 11th and had a head wind which blew us right across to Juan Fernandez, so we sounded and (669) trawled off that island, but did not go in again. The wind still being ahead, we were, by Xmas day in Lat. 42°S and Long. 89°W, and the weather began to get very chilly. On Xmas Eve we had a concert which proved a great success, and is to be repeated once a fortnight for the remainder of the commission. In addition to the ship's band, there were 4 violins, violoncello, piano and harmonium. and of course there were readings, recitations, dances and laughable farces. The captain played a very nice solo on the violoncello with piano accompaniment, and several of the officers and scientific gents assisted as well as the crew.

Great cooking preparations were made the day before Xmas, in the shape (670) of plum puddings and cakes, and as we had brought a fat bullock along with us, we did very well in the provision line.

After dinner there was dancing on the main-deck, and in the evening wine was issued to all hands. The paymaster sent me a bottle of madeira for my dinner. This Xmas passed as pleasantly as any of the four we have had in the "Challenger;" all the more so, I think as it will be the last, but the pleasantness only lasted until tea-time, for the seamen had managed to smuggle a great deal of liquor into the ship before leaving Valparaiso, which was brought out on Xmas night, and soon did its work. More than half of the crew were helplessly drunk, and the quarreling and fighting was something awful, especially among (671) the Irish portion of the crew, and one poor fellow had his jaw broken in three places. Since leaving England we have lost a great many men by desertion and have demanded others in their places from any men of war we have fallen across, who have invariably sent us their worst characters - generally Irish; so of course they are pretty numerous. An old German at Valparaiso, who spoke good English, and had been in Australia and America, remarked to me that the worst class of men he had fallen across were the Irish of America, and I think the Irish of London and Liverpool are equally as bad, and much worse than the native. They are nearly all Roman Catholics, and when in liquor are very noisy and eloquent (672) about the wrongs of "Ould Ireland."

On the last day of the old year we sighted the coast of Patagonia, and anchored in a bay off the peninsula of Tres Montes, or three mountains. The coast of Patagonia has a very dismal forbidding appearance even in that latitude; the land being high and covered in interminable forest, without exhibiting a sign of human being or habitation.

The country is inhabited by wild romantic tribes of Indians, who live by hunting and fishing, some of whom we shall see by and bye. Chili claims sovereignty over the whole of this country, from the Atlantic to the Pacific down to Cape Horn, but there are no white settlers south of Cape Tres Montes, except a Chilian convict settlement down at (673) Sandy Point. On the 1st January we crossed the Gulf of Penas and entered this channel to do some surveying.

Messier Channel is about 150 miles in length and averages 3 in breadth, so that it is more like a canal than a strait, on the east side it has the mainland of South America, and on the west Wellington Island, which is 130 miles in length and uninhabited. The scenery through the strait is very bold and striking, but presents the same monotonous aspect everywhere, and is very different to the beautiful Inland Sea of Japan. The land on each side runs abruptly from the water to a height of more than 1,000 feet, so that very little of the interior of either the mainland or the island can be seen. This channel is completely sheltered from the wind, and the sea is as calm as the Welland.

The hills are covered in forest and those over 1,000 feet high are clothed in perpetual snow, although this is the middle of summer, and we are only in Lat. 49°S. The interior of the country seems a mass of undulating forest clad hills, and snow covered mountains, and by the way it is broken up it is easy to see that volcanic eruptions have been very active here at some distant period.

The land too seems strangely destitute of animal life. You see nothing but wild ducks and geese, and at night everything is as still as death, and seems even more forsaken and uncanny than Kerguelen's Land. The channel varies in depth from 500 to 50 faths (675) in the centre, and there are scores of splendid bays and harbours, but as the strait has not been properly surveyed as yet, very few vessels come through, but the passage is far preferable to that in the open sea outside Wellington Island.

Sailing vessels could not come through as there is scarcely ever any wind and the channel is very winding. On New Year's evening we anchored in a

We left again on the 2nd and anchored that night in a bay under the lee of the mainland, which was one of the most secluded and romantic looking spots in which we have ever anchored. (676) We lay close under the land which seemed to rise right above our mast head, and was covered in beautiful forest. Early the next morning several exploring, shooting, botanizing and photographic parties landed, and leave was also given to the crew to wash their clothes in a fresh water creek. Some of the parties managed to set fire to the bush, which spread so rapidly that by 5 p.m. the whole country was in flames in all directions, and after sunset the scene was grand beyond description, the fire being even more extensive than that we saw at Cape York, North Queensland.

The different parties returned in the evening, bringing in various spoil, but Mr. Wild, the artist, who generally rambles (677) about by himself was found to be missing, and his non-appearance up to 7 p.m. caused great anxiety, as the fire seemed to be spreading over the whole country, and several search parties of officers and men went out to look for him, taking with them rifles, bugles, etc., and guns were fired at intervals from the ship. All hands were on deck to see the fire, and listen for any tidings of the missing gentleman. One of the parties went round the coast in a boat, and the crew landed at the back of the burning tract of country; here they found the old gentleman, and very pleased he was to see them. It appears that he lighted a fire before going sketching to a distant spot, to serve him as a beacon on his return, but the flames spreading (678) so rapidly, completely frustrated the object in view, and compelled him to make a long detour whereby he lost himself altogether. They brought him alongside at 9 p.m. and the ship's company gave him three cheers for being so kind to relieve the general monotony by getting lost. When we left the next day, the fire was burning as fiercely as ever, and the ship was covered with ashes. We proceeded about 60 miles and passed through the "narrows" where the channel is only 240 yards across, and the navigation is very ticklish. We anchored last night in another well sheltered bay and shot four seals. In this bay, we found a Peruvian steamer which had been abandoned by her crew. She was bound from Callas, I think, to Hamburgh with copper ore, hides, leather and a (679) general cargo, and in coming through the "narrows" in Messier Channel, she ran on a rock and knocked a hole in her bottom.

Her crew managed to bring her into this bay and run her aground. Soon after a French surveying vessel came along and the Peruvian crew are supposed to have gone away in her, but this is not certain. Anyhow the Frenchmen appropriated all the steamer's boats, sails, and various deck fittings, as her share of the spoil, and sailed southward. Some 10 days ago, a British steamer came this way and found her, which of course became her prize. She left her chief officer and 3 men in charge and went on to Valparaiso, whence she will send assistance to repair her and bring her to that port. With her cargo, I fancy (680) she is worth nearly £10,000, and the crew of the vessel that picked her up only numbers 24. The chief officer came on board our ship to dinner last night, and attended the concert which was afterwards given. We exchanged some flour and preserved meat for beer, butter and walnuts, part of her cargo. The Patagonians came down to her the night before we arrived, but were soon frightened away by firearms.

We heard from her that the French surveying vessel was wrecked somewhere lower down, but it may not be true.

We left that bay at 4 a.m. this morning, and have come about 50 miles, to the end of Messier Channel. We are now anchored between the Madre Archipelago and the mainland, and shall remain two or three days.

(681) January 12th

In Magellan's Straits

We passed a Chilian man of war on the 6th, and a merchant steamer yesterday bound north. We remained two days in the bay off Madres Island, to do some surveying in the different channels. On the night of the 6th it came on to blow with tremendous force, and steam had to be got up at midnight as there was great danger of the ship dragging her anchor. The stern of the ship swung within 20 yards of some large rocks, and 40 of a small rocky island. The wind was blowing right onto these rocks, so that it was impossible to get up the anchor and move until the wind lulled; it was about the most dangerous position the "Challenger" has ever found herself in.

We left on the 8th and steamed (682) through Innocent's Channel, into Sarmients Channel, where we anchored for the night. The next day, being Sunday, we remained at anchor and on the 10th steamed through into Smythe Channel where we anchored, steaming through that yesterday and entered Magellan's Straits, anchoring at night in this bay, Port Tamar. A ship entering these straits from the Pacific, does so at Cape Pillar, some 30 miles west of our entrance from Smythe Channel. We have come all the way from the Gulf of Penas, through a series of channels separated from the Pacific by a continued chain of islands, the largest being Wellington, Hanover, Madre and Queen Charlotte Islands. The generality of ships keep outside these for the channel navigation is very intricate, and must anchor every night. The (683) mountains that rise so abruptly from the sea in this part of the Patagonian coast are a continuation of the great chain of the Andes, which, rising to a little of the north of the equator, extend southward for 4,000 miles, and passes through Colombia, Peru, Bolivia, Chili and Patagonia, disappearing finally in the Fuegan Archipelago. The coast of Patagonia south of the Gulf of Penas, is indented with deep and narrow inlets, which penetrate within the mountain masses in a similar manner to the fiords on the west coast of Norway.

Since we have reached above Lat. 50°S, the scenery has changed again, the land is now destitute of trees, and almost of vegetation of any kind. The islands and mountains present the same bleak (684) aspect - bare lava and basaltic rock, and except from the numerous cataracts which fall from the hills, you hear no sound anywhere. Of course snow is more abundant, for we are now in Lat. 52°S.

Latterly we have fallen in with a new kind of duck called the "Steamer" which in its manner of locomotion is a perfect masterpiece. It weighs from 20 to 30 lbs and its feathers are so thick that ordinary shot will not penetrate them. They are splendid divers but cannot fly. Their wings are double jointed and they move them backwards and forwards like a beam-engine in the old steam boats. Our steam pinnace chased one the other day, but as she could only steam 10 knots an hour, and the duck 17, the latter won the race. It generally takes about (685) a dozen close shots to bring one down, they are not good eating, but our men had a taste of them. We had a heavy thunder storm the other night with frequent lightening and snow and hail all at the same time. We passed through some very narrow places yesterday, and are now anchored in a bay of King William IV's Land, and Desolation Island - part of the Euegan Archipelago forms the southern side of the Strait, which here, is about five miles wide. This morning our anchor broke clean in two by dropping on to a hard rock when let go, and the ship drifted within 50 yards of the rocky shore before the other anchor could be let go, or steam got ready. We are now anchored in a bay which is completely surrounded by mountains, and must at some time, I should (686) imagine, have formed the crater of an extinct volcano, like Xmas Harbour, Kerguelen's Land. In this latitude it rains and snows every few hours and a dense fog continually hangs over the land, which weather we shall have until we reach the Falkland Islands next month.

Ferdinand Magellan, the discoverer of these straits, was a Portuguese by birth, but sailed in the service of Spain. In 1519 the Molucca Islands being claimed by the Portuguese and Spaniards also, Magellan thought he could reach them by sailing round the southern part of America and started from Spain with five ships and succeeded in reaching these straits. They are 360 miles in length and he lost two vessels on the passage through. He was 110 days crossing the Pacific, (687) when he discovered the large group afterwards called the Philippine Islands; at one of which - Matan - he was murdered by the natives. (We saw his tomb and monument there.) Only one of his fleet, the "Vittoria," succeeded in reaching Spain, by the way of Cape of Good Hope, and this vessel was hauled on shore and long preserved as the first ship that circumnavigated the globe. She was 3 years, and 14 days on the voyage, and Francis Drake's ship, the "Golden Hind," was about the same time, performing the voyage 56 years later. He, however, had over a million pounds worth of Spanish gold in his hold, plundered from Valparaiso, Lima, etc. and after refitting his ship at Temati in the Moluccas (visited by "Challenger") reached Plymouth in safety. His voyage so troubled and terrified the Spaniards that they resolved to fortify Magellan's Straits, and thus forever keep the English and Dutch from the South Seas. For this purpose an expedition left Spain in 1581 under Sarmiento, who built and fortified a city near Sandy Point, but disease, cold and famine soon caused it to be deserted, though not before three-fourths of the settlers had perished, for when, three years later, an English adventurer, Candlish, came through the straits he found the city in ruins.

In 1615, Schonteu, the Dutch navigator found his way round Cape Horn, which he named after his native town, Horn, in Holland. I forgot to mention before, that H.M.S. "Challenger" was totally wrecked in 1838 near the Gulf of Penas, on the Patagonian coast and many of the crew were drowned.

(689) The Archipelago of dreary, barren, mountainous islands to the south of these straits was called by the Spaniards - Terra-del-Fuego (land of fire) on account of the volcanoes which appeared at distant intervals to illuminate the perpetual snow which prevails in this region. Narrow channels, strong currents, and boisterous winds render it unsafe for a sailing vessel to enter this dangerous labyrinth.

The Atlantic side of the straits is more favored by nature than the Pacific and there, a few trees and animals are to be found. Penguins and other Antarctic sea-birds flock to these shores and pursue their prey without molestation. The Terra-del-Fuegan natives are said to be the filthiest and most depraved of (690) all the races under the sun. They are undoubtedly the least favored by nature as regards country, climate and subsistence, but shall be able to tell you more about them by and bye, as we shall most likely see them, and also the Patagonians as we proceed towards the Atlantic. We are 200 miles from Sandy Point where I expect to post this.

January 14, at Sandy Point.

We anchored here this morning and received a mail. Two of our deserters are here, having been sent on from Valparaiso by mail boat; they were captured by the Chilian police three days after we sailed.

On the 17th we sail for the Falkland Islands. Our Captain has just received a letter from the (691) King of Spain, thanking him for towing into Manilla that derelict schooner which was worth about 10 bob. He calls our vessel "The Werder" which is very much like "Challenger".

We have just missed the homeward mail, so it will be some time 'ere this reaches you. Will tell you about Sandy Point in my next, it appears a miserable looking place. There are two Chilian men-of-war here. Our next address is Ascension or St. Vincent.

Yours sincerely,
Joe Matkin.

HMS "Challenger" at
Stanley, Falkland Islands
February 6, 1876

Dear Tom:

We remained four days at Sandy Point, and I was on shore several times. Sandy Point, or Punta Arenas, as the Chilians call it, is the most southerly inhabited place on the globe, excepting of course the opposite coast of Terra-del-Fuego. The settlement stands on a flat sandy point of land, and consists of about 80 rough wooden houses, a wooden fort, Catholic chapel, etc. The place has sprung up within the last 10 years; was originally a convict settlement, but the discovery of (693) a coal mine in the neighbourhood proved the making of the place and induced other settlers to come. The Liverpool Pacific Mail boats call there once a week for coal, and remain six hours. A German line of steamers, as well as casual steamers passing through Magellan's Straits also call occasionally. The coal mine is six miles inland, but there is a tramway and a steam engine which drags the coal right on to the "apology" for a pier which the Chilian government has erected, and the coal is shot through holes in the pier into barges underneath. The mine is owned by a company, the shareholders being mostly British and German. The employees at it and on the tramway are all British getting enormous wages. The coal is not to be compared to English, being very small (694) and found almost on the surface of the ground. There is a Chilian Governor there, an English surgeon in charge of the hospital, a British Consul who flies the flag on a clothes prop stuck out of the roof of his house; also a considerable force of miserable looking Chilian soldiers. There are a few convicts, but are only exiles, and do no hard work. There is a gold mine in the vicinity worked by two or three old Australian diggers, but they say they are not making much out of it.

The population is about 500, mostly Chilians of very dilapidated and miserable appearance, but there are a good many British and Germans, and a roving population of hunters, mostly British who go on horseback immense distances inland to hunt on the great pampas, or plains (695) of South America; they also trade with the Indians in tobacco and fire-water for skins, which fetch a pound each at Sandy Point, and when they have gathered sufficient skins to load two or three horses, they start for Sandy Point to dispose of them. This they call "coming to town". Puma, Emu, Guanaco and other skins are the most plentiful. The Patagonians make periodical visits to Sandy Point themselves for trading, and a tribe was expected there every day, but had not arrived when we left. There were several grog shops and stores there, and we used to get fresh beef and vegetables every day; meat was 7d per pound, other things dearer in proportion. There are any amount of cattle near, but sheep will not thrive; there are settlers now 50 miles inland, and they can grow (696) potatoes, turnips and cabbages, but no grain.

The country at the back of Sandy Point is tolerably well wooded, and abounding with various wild animals and birds, particularly ducks, geese, ibis, and snipes.

Sandy Point is in 53°S and the climate at these islands is very much colder in summer than England in spring, but still although the winters last nearly six months the cold is not so severe as in England, and the ice on the lakes is seldom strong enough to bear a man. The grass there, and also at these islands is very coarse and large, but suitable for cattle and horses; near Sandy Point there are plenty of wild horses, all the Patagonians have them. Mushrooms were very plentiful near the settlement, and also wild cranberries. Lots of shooting parties landed (697) there every day with great success, and the Governor presented our naturalist with a young puma or American lion, which he had captured, but it died the other day, and has been stuffed since.

There were two Fuegan girls and a woman at Sandy Point picked up in the straits by a steamer, and left under the care of the hospital surgeon, who was trying to civilize them a little before sending them back. I saw them once or twice in a hut, crouching over a smouldering fire; they were washed, and partly dressed, and I must say they are not half so ugly or degraded as they have been represented by various travellers, particularly by Commodore Wilkes, USN the discoverer of the mythical Termination Land. They were over 5 feet high, and their limbs were (698) as well formed as those of other races, were very broad across the shoulders, and had wonderfully large flat faces, and stiff coarse locks of hair; their eyes are something like those of the Chinese, and altogether look between Chinese, Malays and Indians.

The youngest girl had quite an intelligent appearance, and were all queens compared to the aboriginal women of Australia, the Papuan, or Admiralty Island ladies. We took in a little coal and left Sandy Point on the 18th, anchoring again the same day at Elizabeth Island, 25 miles further east. There we stayed two days shooting geese, ducks and tern, which were very plentiful.

I was on shore with a shipmate and we shot nine wild geese. They build their nests in the grass in the interior (699) of the island; the young ones were nearly ready to fly, and could run like partridges. The English mail to Valparaiso went past while I was on shore, but our ship could not communicate with her, as she was a long way off; the straits being 18 miles wide just there. The birds called "Tern" lay their eggs on the bare ground close to the sea; they are something between Kingfishers and Swallows; on that part of the island where they were breeding it was impossible to walk without treading on their eggs or young, and the noise they made when we intruded on them was exactly like the roar of the surf on a coral reef.

We had another concert on the 18th and sailed on the 20th for these islands, which are about 230 miles east of Cape Virgin, (700) the Atlantic entrance to Magellan's Straits.

The depth across here was only 50 fathoms; we sighted one of these islands on the 22nd and anchored on the 23rd, Sunday, off this settlement which is on the eastern side of the eastern island. This group was discovered in 1592 by Davis, and named in the reign of James 1st after Viscount Falkland; it comprises two large islands, east and west Falkland, and over 200 smaller islets and rocks, the whole area being not less than 7000 sq. miles, of which East Falkland comprises 4000 and West 2000 sq. miles.

There is not a tree on the whole group but abundance of coarse grass upon which feed enormous herds of half wild cattle and horses, and flocks of sheep. Of course they have been introduced recently. Albatrosses, wild ducks, geese, snipes (701) penguins, etc., are wonderfully numerous, and rabbits which have been brought quite lately are more plentiful than in England.

The coast round these islands is very rough, but there are numerous good harbours, the soil is boggy; the land of moderate elevation, with an undulating surface.

Of course grain will not grow here, and there is not a fruit or any other tree to be seen, but potatoes, cabbages, and the hardier sorts of vegetables are successfully grown.

The principal exports are wool, hides, tallow, horses, etc., and the islands are frequently visited for fresh provisions by whale ships, and vessels bound round the Horn. The French were the first to colonize these islands, after losing Canada in 1763, they abandoned them a year or two after, and the British formed (702) a settlement here. The French turned over their colony to the Spaniards, and in 1770 these islands were nearly causing a war between Great Britain and Spain. Dr. Johnson wrote a pamphlet against pushing the matter to extremity on the ground of the worthlessness of the disputed territory. Both countries forsook them as useless in 1774, and in the early part of the present century the Governor of Buenos Ayres occupied them, and formed a settlement at Port Louis, on this island, but his was destroyed in 1830 by the Americans, and three years later the Governor of Buenos Ayres surrendered their claim to Great Britain. The whole of them were then annexed, and this settlement of Stanley established; the harbour of which would be one of the finest in the world if the hills (703) which encircle it were only higher; it is completely land-locked, and has a lighthouse at the entrance. The settlement is built on the slope of the hills, the houses are two storys high, and generally whitewashed, some are of stone, others wood, they stand in blocks, and are laid out in tolerably regular streets. It looks far more clean and pleasant than Sandy Point, but the surrounding country is even more dismal than Patagonia, there is not a tree or scarcely a sign of vegetation to be seen -- it is a second Kerguelens Land. There is a small detachment of marines here, and barracks, the present Governor is Col D'Arcy whose salary is £1000 per annum; there is also a Bishop and two or three missionaries who make periodical visits to the Fuegan Islands to try to civilize and convert the poor (704) outcasts of those desolate regions. They have brought some of the men over here, taught them English, and are now teaching them farming, gardening, etc. By and bye they are to be sent back with presents of a few cattle, sheep, horses, garden seeds, and implements to see what they can accomplish in the way of social improvement among their countrymen. We had one of the men on board here, quite a well made man, spoke English and laughed at everything; so after this I shall consider the Fuegans as nothing inferior to their antipodean fellow-creatures, the Samoides and Laplanders of the northern hemisphere, although they are by nature the least favoured of all her children, as regards their land and the means of subsistence.

There is a Dissenting Chapel here (705) as well as a Church of England, and also a Catholic Chapel for the Governor's wife is a Roman Catholic, and insisted upon having one. I have been on shore several times, and if there were but nice gardens and fields could fancy Stanley was an English village. The people wear real English working dress, the children are so numerous, and healty looking. There are horses and carts, any amount of stray poultry, cows, cats and dogs, and for the first time since we left New Zealand have found English money. Copper coin we have been strangers to for more than a year.

Outside of every house is a peat-stack instead of a coal shed, the same as in the south of Ireland, and this peat burns better than wood, and is wonderfully abundant. There are several stores (706) and more public houses than in Barrowden, here also, as in your place, everybody knows everyone else, and his business. The best of beef, pork and mutton may be bought for 3d per lb. and geese, ducks, snipes and rabbits in any quantity may be shot at the back of the settlement; we have never lived better since we left England than at this place; still everything is dear except meat. Butter is 2/ per lb. and eggs 4/ per dozen. Many of the houses have vegetable gardens attached and there are tolerable roads here.

Our concert party gave a very successful entertainment on shore one evening, which was well attended, being a novelty; the proceeds were given to the school funds. We have taken in 150 tons of coal, and given leave to all (707) hands, when of course the grog shops were extensively patronized. A month's money was also paid in English silver. The mail here is brought from Monte Video every six weeks, by small schooners, which also do all the trading to and fro.

Our band played on shore once or twice, and the Captain and officers have given several parties; one afternoon there was a dance party on board, but the ladies are a very sleepy lot compared to those in Australia, and other places we have been to. Last Sunday, Dr. Stirling Bishop of the Falklands, conducted the service on board, and preached an excellent sermon. He said that we had all done our duty to our country on this remarkably interesting voyage, and he had heard that the crew of the ship (708) was one of the most united company's ever afloat ("especially the deserters" JM). He did not doubt but that there were many scores of people in England who were counting the weeks and days that would elapse before we could arrive; and hoped we all should find friends well on our return, and the money that we shall have so hardly and honorably earned will not be squandered in the first English port we touch at, but spent pleasantly among our own friends and people. Dr. Stirling comes of a naval family; one of his brothers was a Commander with me in the "Audacious" and was married at Hull, one is a Commodore and another, a Captain R.N. was drowned with his wife in the "City of Boston", on his way out to join his ship in North America. His father was (709) Admiral Stirling, so he knows all about the sailors. On Jan. 31st we took in a lot of wooden piles brought from South America, to form a fence round the cemetery of Port Louis, where we were to arrive on the day following. The same evening the Officers gave a large dinner party, and the visitors left the ship at 11 p.m. in the steam pinnace. When the boat returned several of its crew were the worse for liquor; just as it got close to the ship one of the men Thomas Bush, able seaman, fell overboard and, being intoxicated, was perfectly helpless in the water. Lieutenant Carpenter at once jumped overboard, and succeeded in the darkness in finding the drowing man; after great exertion he brought him along side the boat, and they were both rescued and brought on board. The water (710) was very cold, and Lieutenant Carpenter was quite exhausted, but recovered after a time. Although the promptest measures were taken by the surgeons, and numerous volunteers to restore animation to the unfortunate seaman they were of no avail, and after persevering for upwards of an hour in the usual method for the resuscitation of the apparently drowned, they were compelled to decide that life was extinct. The next morning we steamed round to Port Louis, 25 miles further north and anchored off the small settlement of about half a dozen farmhouses. We landed the timber for the cemetery fence, and sent a party to dig the grave, of him who only 12 hours before had helped to get the wood on board. At 11 a.m. the next day the bell tolled for the funeral, and nearly all hands (711)assembled to attend it. The sad procession left the ship in six boats, towed one behind the other by the steam primace, and as soon as all the party had landed they proceeded slowly over the boggy ground towards the roughly enclosed cemetery. The coffin was borne by the messmates of the deceased and the burial service read by Commander Maclear. There were only about half a dozen graves in the enclosure, and like those of the whale fishermen down at Kerguelen's Land, they seemed to add to the general solitude and desolation of the surrounding country. It was a wet, miserable day, and altogether in its incident one of the gloomiest we have experienced in the Challenger. The deceased was a remarkably fine, well made young man, and joined the ship at Sheerness in 1872; he was (712) looking forward to marriage on his return, and as a seaman will be much missed in the ship. We erected a wooden tombstone over his grave, and after doing some surveying returned to this port on the 4th.

Yesterday all the school children of Stanley, Protestant and Catholic to the number of about 80 came on board, and were shown all there was of interest to be seen in the ship. The Galvanic Battery, the Galapagos Tortoises, and the playful amusing little goat we brought from Juan Fernandez amused them most. After being regaled with tea and cakes, they returned to the shore after giving three cheers for the "Challenger" and singing the National Anthem.

It was quite a novelty to us to see so many English children around us, and I think we all enjoyed it as much as they. (713) Today, as we were to sail, we flew the long "Homeward bound pennant", and at 4 p.m. the anchor was got up, and we steamed away for Monte Video, distant 1100 miles north. The band played "Homeward Bound", and "The Girl I Left Behind Me" as we steamed past the settlement, and a couple of nursery maids responded by waving their pocket handkerchiefs.

The population of the Falklands is about 1000; we are now nearly out of sight of the most southerly, as well as one of the quietest, and pleasantest of Her Majesty's foreign possessions. For a ship in want of fresh provisions after a long sea voyage, there are few better places to touch at than the Falkland Islands, and although the country is naturally sterile and unproductive, being three degrees further south than (794) Kerguelen's Land, British settlers and industry have managed to utilize it to the best advantage, and to turn what was only intended at first as a military and naval centre, into quite a commercial and postoral little colony.

February 16th at Monte Video:

We arrived here yesterday after a rough but quick passage of 10 days from Stanley, sounding etc., by the way, average depth across 1200 fathoms. We received our letters last night dated up to December 10th but shall get two other English mails before we leave. We leave here about the 29th, and shall reach Ascension by the end of March. Letters to S. Vincent only take 10 days from England.

The difference of climate here, and at the Falklands caused a good deal of (715) sickness, rheumatic fever, etc. This place being in 35°S latitude and now is the middle of summer, it is hotter than that season in England. There are all kinds of fruit, but I have not been on shore yet.

February 24th:

I have been too busy since we came in here to get my regular descriptive letter ready, but shall have lots of time on the way across to Ascension, and as everything is written down in my Journal, shall have no trouble about it; the reason for my extra work is owing to the long sickness of the Ship's Steward -- my opposite number. He contracted a dangerous illness at Hilo and Tahiti, and has been confined to his hammock almost ever since, and is no better yet, so have his duty to do as well as my own, which, as my Paymaster tells me is a great honour, but of no material benefit to me; if he were to go to Hosptial, I should receive four times as much pay as I am now doing, and he would also receive his; but as long as he is borne on the "Challenger" books he alone takes it.

We invalided home on the last mail boat, a Sub-Lieutenant dangerously ill from a sickness also contracted at that southern paradise -- Tahiti. His father is, I believe, domestic chaplain at Windsor Castle, and don't know what he will think when he learns the nature of his disease. He, Sub-Lieut. Swire, was the tallest, strongest and finest looking man we had (717) in the ship, but now, through bad surgical treatment, he is physically ruined. We sent home in the same vessel a seaman, who was with me in the "Invincible" and "Audacious". He seemed a strong man then but the peculiar voyage of this ship as regards climate has brought on a galloping consumption, and am afraid the poor fellow will never see England again. I have been on shore, but shall tell you all about that in my next. The weather was intensely hot, much more so than where we are lying, about 3 miles out in the Rio-de-la-Plata; it is about the same as in Melbourne and Sydney at this season. We have received two other mails here.

A rebellion is expected to break (718) out next week, but as this is the normal state of Uruguay, it creates very little anxiety among the people unconnected with the government. The English papers seem strangely unsettled in their tone as regards the general peace of Europe. The Buenos Ayres Standard of yesterday (English paper) contains a telegram from Lisbon, asserting that enormous naval preparations were going on in the English dockyards.

We sail tomorrow morning for Tristan d'Acunha, and Ascension, and shall reach the latter in about six weeks, when I shall write again.
Your sincerely,

Joseph Matkin.

Dear Tom:

I will now commence my Monte Video letter, which I hope to post at Ascension a month hence.

We sighted the mainland of South America, near to the entrance of the River Plate(sic) on the morning of February 15th and as soon as we were fairly within the river, full steam was got up, and we proceeded full speed for Monte Video, which is 90 miles up the river. The land was low and very similar to the South American coast (720) near Pernambuco and Bahia. In steaming down the La Plata, you would almost think you were in the open sea, if it were not for the freshness and turbid color of the water; the immense body of fresh water which it pours into the ocean is perceptible for more than a hundred miles out at sea, and causes a powerful current among its waters. The La Plata is formed by the union of the rivers Parana, Paraquay, and Uruguay, as well as many tributary streams, and ranks second among the rivers of South America.

The Parana has its source in the Bolivian Andes, and is navigable for vessels of light draught for more than 1800 miles. The river La Plata is 2,350 miles in length, the area of (721) its basin being 1,240,000 square miles. It is over 150 miles wide at its mouth, and about 90 up at Monte Video: at Buenos Ayres, 100 miles above Monte Video, it is about 15 miles in breadth. It was discovered in 1514 by Juan de Salis, who was murdered by the natives in making a descent into the country. For some time it was called the river Salis, but in 1526, Sebastian Cabot, then in the Spanish service, visited it, and having procured much silver from the natives, he called it "Rio-de-la-Plata" -- "River of Silver". It is comparatively shallow and we passed lots of vessels at anchor as we proceeded. At 10 a.m. we passed the lighthouse of Maldonado, a small sea port 50 miles east of Monte Video. (722) It was near this port that the British line of battle ship "Bombay" was burnt with over 70 of her crew in 1863. She was Flag Ship of Vice-Admiral Eliott, who remained on shore at Monte Video whilst the ship steamed down the river for target practice. She caught fire whilst the crew were at dinner, it was supposed in the Spirit Room, and was burnt to the waters edge in a short time. The Captain (so I have been told by men who were in the ship) called his Galley away as soon as the fire was discovered and laid off from the ship. There were not boats enough to save all hands, and when some of the drowning men swam alongside the Captain's galley, he ordered his coxswain to chop off their hands if (723) they attempted to get into his boat.

Commander Stirling who was with me in the "Audacious" was a lieutenant in the "Bombay", and was promoted to Commor. for his efficiency on that occasion.

From Maldonado down to the anchorage off Monte Video, we raced with a French Man-of-War, and beat her by a mile. We were obliged to anchor about 2 1/2 miles from the city on account of drawing over 20 feet of water, but it is possible to go in nearer. There were nearly as many vessels (merchant) lying close into the town as at Valparaiso, and several Mail Boats -- Spanish, German, French, and British. There were two British Gun Boats alongside the town, and about 15 gunboats of nearly all nations. Monte Video derives its name (724) from a small mountain in the vicinity of the town, upon which is a lighthouse. Seen from the sea it looks very compact and imposing -- something like Manilla, being built on a level plain -- but like all foreign places it disappoints on a closer inspection. There is a wall round the older portion of the city, for it has stood more seiges than any other in the New World. It is the only good port in the La Plata, for vessels drawing more than 12 feet of water cannot approach within about 12 miles of Buenos Ayres, which is the parent city and greatest enemy of Monte Video, but fortunately on the opposite shore of the river. The city of Buenos Ayres was founded in 1535 by Pedro Mendoza; and Monte Video was founded by a colony from Buenos Ayres; (725) for a long time it was a bone of contention between Spain and Portugal, as the Portuguese claimed the whole of South America, north of the La Plata to the western boundary of Brazil. Soon after Brazil was erected into an independent kingdom, the people of Buenos Ayres threw off the Spanish yoke, and the Brazilians seized on that event as a pretext for taking forcible possession of Monte Video which was recovered again by Buenos Ayres in 1814 after a long siege, and after that retaken by the Brazilians in 1821, when it became what it now is -- the capitol of the Republic of Uruguay, by Treaty. Buenos Ayres is the capitol of the Republic of that name, which is the head of the Argentine Confederation of States. It is a remarkably fine and (726) well-built city, so our Officers, who visited it, said, -- with a population of over 200,000. Monte Video has over 120,000 inhabitants, and although they are of Spanish descent, the same as the Buenos Ayrians, they hate each other. The City was besieged in 1852 for more than 9 years by Rosas the despotic ruler of Buenos Ayres, who did great damage to the city, and almost ruined the commerce of Uruguay. Since the restoration of peace however, the city has rapidly increased in size and importance, and the country has made great progress; the city is now well fortified, and there is a Uruguayan Army and Navy in perspective, so that the people consider themselves quite a respectable and formidable power. Buenos Ayres was (727) taken by the British in 1806, but retaken soon after by the citizens, and the British were driven away with considerable loss, owing chiefly to the impossibility of naval cooperation, on account of the shallowness of the river -- there being no gun boats at that time. Buenos Ayres and Monte Video were visited a few years ago by that scourge of South America, Yellow Fever, which almost put a stop to all business and foreign intercourse. There will probably be a row before long between Chile and Buenos Ayres concerning Patagonia as both those Republics claim the eastern coast of that large country. The area of Uruguay is about a sixth greater than that of England, and the total population is about 500,000. It is more of a grazing country than any other in South America, and the chief wealth (728) lies in its immense herds of cattle, horses, and sheep. The chief exports are wool, hides, tallow, and the famous Liebig's (?) Extractum Carnis works near Monte Video.

Uruguay has a national debt of over £9,000,000. There used to be a British Minister residing at Monte Video, but at present there is only a Consul. There was a rebellion only a few weeks ago which was with difficulty suppressed. Our Steam Primace used to do all the running between the ship and the shore, on account of the long distance. Meat was only 2d per lb. at Monte Video, but everything else was dear; fruit of all kinds was very plentiful but expensive. The weather was to us, coming from the Falkland Islands in 10 days, intensely hot in the day time, as much so as Sydney and Melbourne.

(729) On the 17th of February a German Frigate called the "Gazelle" came in, and remained two days before sailing for Kiel. She went to Kerguelen's Land with a party of Astronomers, etc., to observe the Transit of Venus in 1874, and since that time has been on a various cruise taking occasional soundings, trawlings, etc., at moderate depths. She was fitted up after the manner of this ship, and her scientific instruments for soundings, etc., were borrowed from Plymouth Dockyard. Most of her officers visited the "Challenger", before she sailed. Uruguayan paper money is at present worthless in its capitol city, and as there is no native coined money except copper, all kinds of gold and silver coins are taken; but Spanish and Brazilian money bring (730) the best value; on French, Dutch, English, and American you lose considerably; an English sovereign was worth 4 dollars 70 cents, and a shilling would only pass for 20 cents. A month's money was paid to us in English sovereigns, and the first leave given on Sunday the 20th when most of our men went on shore. I did not go that day, but all who did attended the bull fight, which takes place outside the city every Sunday afternoon; entrance 2 dollars to the seats in the shade, and 1 dollar to those in the sun. If the fight had been on a week day I should certainly have gone, for the say of the thing; as it was I had to get a description from some of my mess mates. Eight bulls and six horses were killed, and two of the "Matadores" or bull fighters were within (731) an ace of being killed. Our men describe it as cruel and brutal sport; some of the horses were literally ripped open, and the poor maddened bulls are pricked with spears and knives, irritated by coloured flags, and terrified by combustibles made fast to the handles of the spears, which explode as soon as the spear is thrust into the animal's body. The combatants consisted of eight men on foot armed with sharp prods, and carrying coloured flags to irritate the beast, and three men on horseback armed with long spears, which they try to thrust between the animal's shoulders, so as to reach the heart, avoiding at the same time the headlong charges that he makes. One bull which was very much cheered by the audience -- especially the numerous (732) ladies -- succeeded in killing three horses, one after another, tossing one with its rider completely into the air, and taking away the whole side of the horse with its horns. This bull before he received his final thrust exhibited a horrible appearance, bleeding from scores of wounds.

The Matadores are gaily dressed, and loudly cheered when they make a particularly successful thrust. If they bungle at it, they are hissed, and if unlucky enough to get gored by the bull, the audience applaud the animal, singing out "Bravo Toro". My informants assert that when a matadore is killed he is buried with disgrace on the spot where he falls, but this statement must be received with caution. Only one bull is let into the arena at once, (733) and if he does not exhibit sufficient ferocity then and there, he is lassoed and slung out to make room for a "gamer" animal. When the bull is killed, four white mules come in and drag him out, as well as any horses he may have gored. At the conclusion a very small bull was let in and killed by amateurs, many respectable looking gentlemen presenting themselves as candidates for the sanguinary honour. This very edifying national Sabbath amusement lasted over three hours.

On the 22nd we received six supernumary seamen from the Gunboat whose time of foreign service /3 years/ had expired, for passage to England. I went on shore that afternoon and spent the day rambling about the city and neighbourhood. When you get close into the place, Monte Video (734) has a much meaner and dirtier appearance than Valparaiso, but it is in reality much cleaner, and of course better laid out, being built on tolerably level ground. There are fewer idlers and loafers to be seen on the wharves, but still Valparaiso is the busier and finer city in the business part of the town. No two buildings seem alike in Monte Video, but the streets are very regular, and there are more tramways laid down than at any other place I have visited. The tram cars are not so comfortable, nor so showy as those at Valparaiso; they are drawn by 4 mules, and the prices for riding are very moderate. There are one or two fine squares in which Military Bands play every evening, and crowds of remarkably well dressed ladies and gentlemen promenade (735) until 11 p.m.

There were several large Catholic churches of the regular stereotyped Spanish style; most of them were undergoing repairs, and the interior of them exhibited more tawdriness as regards images, paintings, ornaments, etc., than any of the Catholic Churches we have seen anywhere. The waxen figures of various male and female saints were so outrageously ugly, and unlifelike that an audience at a penny peep show would have scoffed at them. One figure, gaudily decorated, of a female saint (apparently the Virgin Mary) was represented as a daughter of Ham -- she was as black as a crow, and so were many of the surrounding worshippers, for colored people and half-castes are very numerous in Monte Video (736). There are no slaves in Uruguay now, and you see lots of nicely dressed colored ladies; the colored people of Uruguay seem far more comfortable and respectable than those in Brazil.

The generality of the shops were not so large or so fine as those in Valparaiso, but the public buildings are finer, and there are many splendid residences in the suburbs. Monte Video is not so well fortified as Valparaiso, for the country is very poor on account of the frequent political disturbances, and the generally turbulent and unstable character of the people. There was a rebellion there a few weeks ago, and the Foreign residents report that another is brewing. There is a very numerous and influential Foreign population, British, German (737), American, French, Italian and Spanish residents, but there are more Americans and fewer Germans than in Valparaiso.

There is an English daily paper printed at Buenos Ayres, and brought to M.V. by train three hours after publication; but it is very feebly conducted, and its foreign information is seldom reliable, the European telegrams being copied, apparently from the native newspapers. The railway which runs parallel to the La Plata until opposite Buenos Ayres, is owned by a company, the shareholders being mostly British.

The soldiers and vigilantes of M.V. are about on a footing with those in Valparaiso and Brazil, their clothing, accoutrements, etc., being of the most common description. Their manner of (738) marching and going through their evolutions is peculiarly their own, being totally unlike anything I have ever seen before. When they are on duty the drums are always beating, and the buglers play the most original "calls", each performer appearing to have his own peculiar tootle.

There are three fine spacious markets in different parts of the town; the meat, vegetable, and fruit supply being splendid. A quarter of mutton weighing 15 lbs. cost half a dollar 2/.

Everything is much dearer in M.V. than it was a few years ago, on account of the recent disturbances, and the worthlessness of the paper money. There are several fine Hotels, one, the "Oriental" being the largest in South America. Most of the Hotel keepers are Frenchmen (739) and Italians. The weather in the middle of the day was as hot as Melbourne and Sydney. Of course Monte Video, Bahia, Manilla, Valparaiso, etc., are not to be compared to Melbourne and Sydney for general business and convenience, neither are they laid out so well, nor do they possess the comforts and luxuries that are obtainable in our large Colonial Cities. The great majority of the population of these Spanish settled countries are apparently wretchedly poor, ignorant, and isolated from those above them. There seems no prosperous lower trading class in these cities, and the Catholic religion and style of education does not appear to conduce anything towards drawing the various local classes nearer together. Most of the Officers, naval and military, serving in these South American states are Americans or British, and the children of the upper classes are frequently sent to Europe or America to be educated or "finished off". The public officials of most of these little states are invariably incompetent men, and notoriously venal and corrupt. Only a day before we sailed the Uruguayan Chancèllor of the Exchequer was kicked unceremoniously out of office; still in the present state of Uruguayan finance, that is not a very satisfactory situation. The windows of all the houses in M.V. are protected with thick iron bars; those who cannot afford them have wooden ones. The houses are almost all of stone and brick -- there is an English Church, and Clergyman attached to the Consulate. The week after we sailed was "Carnival" week, and great preparations were being made for it, especially by the sellers of masks, dominos, and fancy dresses, some of which were wonderfully quaint and ridiculous. Fightings, quarrelings, and even assassinations are very frequent during Carnival time, and the predicted rebellion is expected to show itself during that delectable period. Foreign residents and people unconnected with the Government take these little political explosions very calmly.

On the 25th February we steamed down the La Plata, and had seen the last of the Spanish settled cities we shall visit in the "Challenger". Our course was to "Tristan-d-Acunha, thence (740) to Ascension, a distance by our necessary route of 3700 miles. We have to sound every day until we reach our old track of soundings from Bahia to Tristan-d-Acunha in 1873. We have also taken dredgings, trawlings, and serial temperature; have lost a lot more line and discovered an undercurrent of very cold water travelling from the S.E. towards the Equator. We are about 1200 miles from Tristan today: the average depth across has been 2,800 fathoms so far; on the 2nd we caught a shark over 10 feet long.

On the 13th we sounded over the same spot where we sounded 2 1/2 years ago, on the voyage from Bahia to the Cape. It is not often that a ship sails round the world and reaches the (741) same latitude and longitude again -- after having ploughed a nearly straight furrow round; we are only 40 minutes behind English time today and about 200 miles N.E. of Tristan-d-Acuhna, but the wind has shifted dead ahead, and as we have not much coal in the ship, the Captain has decided on not going to that island again, but on proceeding direct for Ascension.

April 3rd at Ascension.

We arrived here on March 26th and received a few letters and papers. We have provisioned, etc., to last us to England and coaled to supply us to S. Vincent; have also received several seamen for passage to England making our total number borne 254. This island was discovered by a Portuguese navigator on Ascension (742) Day 1511, and taken possession of by England as soon as Bonaparte was sent to S. Helena. It is only 34 square miles in extent, and one of the most desolate, rugged, and inhospitable looking spots on the globe, is nothing but mountain, cinders and land, and except on the top of Green Mountain, where the hospital is situated, there is not a tree or sign of vegetation visible.

The island produces nothing, and every one on it is on an allowance of provisions and water, the same as on board ship. It is used as a Naval victualling and refitting depot for the Fleet on the African station. There are about 200 people on it all under government; the Governor of the island is a Naval Captain, and the discipline, regulations, etc., are something like a convict prison, only the people need remain but 2 years. Being so close to the equator, the climate is fearfully hot, and it only rains hard about once in three years. There are no springs or wells of fresh water on the island, that for drinking, etc., has to be condensed from the sea.

There are no shops or hotels, and there are sentries and boards of regulations stuck everywhere, so that altogether the general routine is so irksome to all but officers, that the place may be said to merit the name it bears of the "Sailor's Hell". Turtles are more plentiful here than at any other place in the world; they land at certain seasons to lay their eggs in the sand, and are then caught and placed in ponds for consumption or export. The Mail Boat generally takes some to England.

(744) We had four given us averaging 300 lbs in weight, two of which we have eaten. They often weigh 600 lbs. and when first hatched are no larger than frogs; the flesh is as good as beef and makes most excellent soup. The eggs are quite white and round, as large as a hen's, the shell is as supple as parchment; one of our turtles contained 300 eggs, which were all eaten before it was dead, for they are several hours dying. They had over 100 turtles in the pond when I was there.

On one part of the island the sea bird called (Wide-Awakes) have their rookery; it covers several acres of ground, over which it is impossible to walk without treading on the eggs or young; the place is called "Wide Awake Fair", and is one of the sights of Ascension. We found HMS "Supply" at anchor here; she took stores down to Kerguelen's Land, in connection with the "Transit of Venus", the year after we were there. Her officers report that they experienced the worst weather they have ever known on the voyage to that island. Such a fearful surf breaks all round the shores of Ascension that it is impossible to land except in one particular place, and the rollers are something awful. Seen from the sea, the island looks like a great red and black cinder, and after you have landed find it nothing but a mass of lava rocks and clinkers, thrown up without shape or form, and the whole surfce is broken up more strangely than S. Vincent, for which island we are just (746) starting. You most likely remember my account of that rugged spot; it was where our schoolmaster was accidentally killed.

April 11th, Saturday, Latitude 5°N, 180 miles west of Sierra Leone.

We crossed the Line for the sixth time in the "Challenger", on the 7th in longitude 14°W. The average depth from Ascension has been 2,200 fathoms and we reached our old track of soundings on the 10th, so between this and England very little more sounding or scientific work remains to be done. Yesterday morning I saw one of the most wonderful sights I ever saw in my life -- an enormous water-spout, said by our old seamen to be the largest they had ever seen. It was a cloudy morning, but no rain fell near us; it was first (747) seen at 6:30 a.m. about 10 miles away, and travelled slowly for some 4 miles, and disappeared finally at 7:00 a.m. The column looked like an enormous semi-transparent factory chimney, its base resting in the sea, and its summit enveloped in a black cloud, out of which came frequent flashes of lightning; the sea at the base was in such a violent commotion that it looked like a ship on fire without flame. The water could be discerned ascending the column spirally in dense volumes, and the spout was almost perpendicular until the wind caught it, and bent it in the centre, when it looked like the trunk of an old tree, breaking soon afterwards. It disappeared in the centre first, and the lower part (748) seemed to sink in the sea, and the upper part to vanish in the clouds very slowly. A smaller one was also formed close to it, which travelled parallel with it, but with much greater rapidity and disappeared in about 5 minutes. Some scientific men say that these water-spouts are formed in the clouds, owing to their being greatly overcharged with rain, but the general opinion is that they are columns of water raised by an ordinary whirl-wind from the sea to the clouds, but the amount of water is very small, being nothing but the spray from the agitated spray. My own observation leads me to believe that immense volumes of water are carried up from the sea, but should like to know more of it, (749) you will probably read accounts of this wonderful phenomena in the papers from our scientifics.

April 19th at S. Vincent.

We arrived at this dismal looking spot last night from St. Jago, where we stayed 24 hours for fresh provisions, etc., that place and St. Vincent I described in 1873, but since we were there, the latter has greatly increased in size on account of the frequent calling of various line of Mail boats for coal. A telegram was sent to England last night to announce our arrival, as we sail for Portsmouth on the 26th, so this will be the last letter from the "Challenger" before reaching "Home, Sweet Home".

Yours Sincerely,
Joe Matkin.

(750) HMS "Challenger".
Spithead, May 25th, 1876
Dear Tom:

We arrived here at 9 p.m. last evening and must commence my description from leaving St. Vincent.

On April 26th the anchor was got up at 5 a.m. and proceeded out from Porte Grande Harbour, under sail for England, having no further places to call at according to the projected route. The distance is 2,300 miles. There was scarcely a breath of wind, and the ship was in sight of St. Vincent all day, sailing round the southern point of the opposite island of St. Antonio on account of the wind.

(751) May 20th.

We have had nothing but headwinds since we left St. Vincent; we were blown to the westward of the Azores, and then right onto the coast of Spain, when, being short of provisions and coal, the Captain decided upon putting in to Vigo. The Spanish coast was sighted at about 10 a.m. ten miles ahead; several steamers and small sailing vessels were passed during the morning, and the entrance to Vigo Bay was passed at 2 p.m. when the British channel fleet were discovered lying at anchor off the town. As we steamed past the Fleet the band of the "Defence" played "Home, Sweet Home". The Fleet consisted of the "Resistance", "Monarch", "Iron Duke", and "Lively" Despach Boat belonging to the (752) Channel Fleet and the "Hector" and "Defence", part of the Coast-guard Fleet, under the command of Captain Charles Webley Hope, late of the "Invincible" and "Audacious". The other division of the Channel Fleet are lying at Lisbon. The anchor was let go at 2:30 p.m. about half a mile from the town, and some English papers were sent on board. Lots of contractors, bum-boats, etc., came alongside as soon as we anchored, and did a good trade as everyone was hungry. Eggs were only 6d per dozen and the other things were cheap in proportion. Vigo is a favourite rendezvous of the Channel Fleet and when here, trade is pretty brisk with only half of it, as at present the shop keepers have the victualling of nearly 4000 additional people. Vigo is a quaint, old fashioned, but pleasant looking town (753) of the regular Spanish pattern. It is very irregularly built on the slope of a range of hills, and looks like a poorer edition of Lisbon. Judging from the size, the population is about 30,000; there is a very dilapidated ancient looking Moorish castle on the summit of a high hill overlooking the town. The houses are very lofty and ugly, and the streets seem narrow and crooked. The country round the shores of the Bay looks beautiful, and is apparently fertile and well cultivated. There are white houses visible through the trees in all directions, and in its general aspect the country looks very similar to that in the neighbourhood of Lisbon, only there are not so many windmills for crushing the grapes. An English merchant ship, and several small (754) Trading vessels are at anchor in the bay, but Vigo is not a place of any considerable export trade. During the summer months great numbers of cattle and eggs are sent to Falmouth and Plymouth from this port. It was just outside this port that HMS "Captain" foundered in 1870. After getting close to the land very little wind could be felt, and the sea was quite smooth; the sun seemed to strike warmer, and by the time we came to an anchor, we appeared to be in a different climate; in the evening the seamen of the other ships were bathing overboard, and this morning our men were wearing winter clothing.

May 21st, Sunday.

Took in 100 tons of coal to last us to England, the hands working all (755) night, and finishing cleaning ship by 10 a.m.

The five-master Ironclad "Minotaur" arrived at 8 a.m. and anchored close to us. She is a splendid looking vessel bearing the flag of Rear Admiral Beauchamp Seymour, commanding the Channel Fleet.

Fresh meat, vegetables, and bread sufficient to last us four days were taken in during the morning, and an officer and one seaman joined us from the "Monarch" for passage to England. At 2 p.m. the anchor was got up once more for another attempt at reaching England. Our band played "Homeward Bound" and "Auld Lang Syne" as we steamed through the Fleet, and the "Monarch's band responded, but we could not hear what tune they played. After getting two or three miles down the bay (756) the splendid ironclad "Black Prince" was met on the way to join the rest of the fleet at Vigo. It was a beautiful warm day at the anchorage, but as soon as we got outside the Bay, the cold wind began to be felt. The distance from Vigo to Plymouth is 520 miles -- to Portsmouth about 650; when the "Captain" was lost, HMS "Inconstant" took the news to England and was 29 hours steaming and sailing to Plymouth.

May 24th.

Sighted old England once more at 7 a.m. when Start Point hove in sight about 15 miles north; stood away up channel under all possible sail and steam. The wind was very light, and the weather beautifully cool and clear. There were more vessels passed during the day than (754) we have seen at sea since we left the channel in December 1872. The Bill of Portland was passed at 4 p.m. within signalling distance; the distance from Portland to Portsmouth is 60 miles so it will be late before we can arrive at Spithead. The Needles were passed at 7 p.m. and soon after 9:00 the anchor was let go and the mail came on board as well as lots of officers' friends, etc.

May 25th.

We find it very cold today almost like winter to us. The ship is full of people, friends and relatives of the officers, crew, etc. -- among others, Mrs. Captain Nares and family. In addition to these there were scores of outfitters, bum-boatmen, Jews, and sharpers, selling sham jewellry, boots, and every conceivable (755) article.

Most of the scientific staff landed and went on leave, and the crew and officers had leave to go on shore, until 10 p.m. Close to us are lying the "Valorous" and "Sultan". The latter, a splendid ship of war, under the command of the Duke of Edinburgh. The supernumary seamen, invalids, prisoners, etc., were discharged to the "Duke of Wellington" today, and orders were received for the "Challenger" to proceed to Sheerness to-morrow to pay off all standing, that is without shipping, ready for recommissioning.

In the evening the officers of the "Pandora" dined on board. She is about to sail again for the Arctic regions, and will take mails, etc., for the (759) "Alert" and "Discovery", to be left at the entrance to Smith's Sound, should the ships not be met with. At 6 p.m. thirty-six supernumary seamen came on board for passage to Sheerness, and the ship was ordered to proceed to that port as soon as possible. The anchor was got up at 10:30 p.m. and we steamed from Spithead up channel; about a dozen of the ship's company who were not able to get on board in time were left, and will have to join the ship by rail.

Yours sincerely,
Joe Matkin.

(760) HMS "Challenger".
Chatham, June 11, 1876.

Dear Tom:

This is the last letter you will receive from this famous discovery ship, and shall conclude the description of our long voyage by retracts from my "Journal" since leaving Spithead.

On May 26th we were under full steam all day; the weather wet, cold, and miserable completely shutting out all view of the land. A Swedish Gun-boat was passed, and any amount of merchant shipping. Dover was passed at 2 p.m. and at 6 p.m. the anchor was let go at the great Nore about 8 (761) miles from Sheerness, the fog being too dense to allow us to proceed with safety.

May 27th.

Got up anchor at 5 a.m. and proceeded into the Medway, anchoring about 4 miles below Sheerness. Thirty supernumeraries were discharged to the "Duncan" flagship of Vice Admiral Chads, one of the finest line of battle ships in the service. This being kept as the Queen's Birthday was a general holiday in Sheerness, all the Men of War were dressed with flags, and the "Duncan" fired a royal salute at 12 o'clock. The ship was full of visitors and we discharged powder and shell.

On the 28th, Sunday, all hands went on shore to the Dockyard Church. Leave was given to the ship's company.(762) Ship was crowded with visitors of all classes -- Lieutenant Lord G. Campbell, late of the "Challenger" being among the number.

On the 29th the ship was inspected by Vice Admiral Chadd, Commander in Chief at the Nore, who expressed himself highly satisfied with the appearance of the ship and her company. All the deep sea sounding, dredging and trawling apparatus was rigged for his inspection, and will remain in position, as the ship is to be thrown open to the public for the next few days. Crowds of visitors came on board during the day from London and elsewhere, but there is very little for them to see as all the marine curiosities, etc., have been sent away. The next day a grand luncheon party was given by the officers to some of the Lords of the Admiralty, (763) Members of the Royal and Geographical Societies, etc. The ship was crowded with visitors all day, special trams running from London for their convenience; the ship was moved yesterday from her moorings of Queensboro' and towed close alongside the Sheerness Town Pier, which is near the Railway Station. HMS "Duncan" lies close to us.

Since Wednesday crowds of visitors have daily visited the ship, and today orders were received from the Admiralty for the ship to be taken down to Chatham ready for paying off. We left Sheerness at 7 p.m. and entered the repairing basin at Chatham dockyard at 11 a.m; the Ironclad "Rupert" coming out to make room for us. In the afternoon other orders (764) were received for the ship to be taken out of the basin, further down the Medway alongside the dockyard jetty, to be ready for paying off on Monday at 9 a.m. Nothing but the provisions and scientific stores have to be taken out, as she is to be recommissioned again shortly for coast guard service at Harwich, the crew of the "Penelope" turning out to her from that ship.

Another very distressing occurrence took place at about half-past six this evening when Sub-Lieutenant Henry C.E. Harston committed suicide by poisoning himself. He was subject to fits of despondency, and on this particular evening refused to come to dinner and retired to his cabin, where he was heard to make a peculiar snoring noise, and found on inspection to be black in the face. The (765) surgeon was fetched as soon as possible, but he was already dead. The body was removed from the ship, and an inquest held, when after hearing the evidence the Jury decided that the deceased poisoned himself by drinking chloral hydrate whilst in a state of temporary insanity.

Wm. Harston was a fine looking you man, and a son of retired Captain Harston, R.N. who was dreadfully grieved when the news reached him. The deceased left a letter to the surgeon apologizing for the trouble he had given, and giving a few weak reasons for his act.

Sunday, June 11th.

All hands are busy clearing out storerooms, etc., ready for paying off. On the 8th we were returning stores and closing books and accounts -- Professor Wyville (766) Thomson presented several of the leading hands of the scientific and surveying party among the crew with silver cups as a souvenir of the voyage.

June 12.

Ship inspected by the dockyard authorities; the savings bank money was paid at 11 a.m. and the wages due to the ship's company at 2 p.m. when the ship was paid off, and the crew granted 8 weeks leave. Several of those who were entitled took their discharges from the Navy -- myself among the number -- finding sea life nought but vanity, and vexation of spirit, especially the latter -- my opinion of it coinciding with that of Dr. Samuel Johnson's A.D. 1776 -- with which quotation I will conclude my long series of letters from (767) HMS "Challenger".

"A ship is worse than a jail. There is in a jail, better air, better company, better conveniency of every kind; and a ship has the additional disadvantage of being in danger. When men come to like a sea-life, they are not fit to live on land.

Men go to sea before they know the unhappiness of that way of life; and when they have come to know it, they cannot escape from it, because it is then too late to choose another profession; as indeed is generally the case with men, when they have once engaged in any particular way of life."

Hoping to see you to-morrow,
Believe me,
Sincerely yours,

Joe Matkin.

Brief autobiography of the brothers Stoltenhoff, who were removed from "Inaccessible Island", South Atlantic; where they had been living for nearly two years in great hardship, by the "Challenger" and landed at the Cape of Good Hope, October 29th, 1873.

Gustav Stoltenhoff (the younger)

Born at Arxem(?) in 1852, I was educated for a year and a half at the German seamen's school in Hamburgh. My first voyage was in 1869, to the River Plate, in a Hamburgh vessel -- the "Wilhelmina" as an apprentice, returning via Bahia with a cargo of sugar, which was discharged at Bristol the same year. I returned home (801) and remained the winter. In 1870 I joined another Hamburgh vessel as ordinary seaman; she was bound for Pernambuca for sugar which was taken to Greenock. The Franco-Prussian war having commenced the crew were discharged at Greenock; but not being old enough to serve in the German Navy, I was sent back to Hamburgh.

On August 1st, 1870, I joined the English ship "Beacon Light" belonging to St. John's, Newfoundland, about to sail for Rangoon. I shipped as ordinary seaman. The cargo consisted of coal, and while on the passage out the coals caught fire. We were then, so the Captain told us, between 600 and 700 miles to the N.W. of Tristan d'Acuhna. For three days all hands were engaged pumping water into the ship, and clearing her again; the hatches being closed, and (802) every precaution taken to prevent air getting to the cargo. During this time the ship was nearing Tristan d'Acuhna. On the third day the hatches blew up about 7 p.m., the second mate being carried overboard with main hatch on which he was standing at the time of the explosion. All the crew who were near the hatches were more or less burnt. The boats had been provisioned ready for leaving the ship, and were at once got out, the first -- the long boat -- successfully. In this went the Captain, cook, steward, and I think two men. I was placed in this boat being ill at the time from the effects of a fall from aloft. In getting out the other boats, two of the crew were drowned, and the remainder numbering 16 were stowed in the long-boat. The Captain steered S.E. and the weather was squally. This was on (803) Thursday evening, and we had a sufficient quantity of provisions, but very little water. On Sunday afternoon about 4 o'clock we sighted Tristan d'Acuhna, distant 30 miles; on the following morning at 6 a.m. we saw a boat coming round the point to our assistance; she contained 5 or 6 of the Islanders, and they towed us into their settlement. On landing every attention was shown to us, and we were quartered by twos among the different families. I was with Thos. Glass, the chief, by seniority among the settlers and was well cared for. My shipmates were equally fortunate, and helped the Islanders in their daily occupation, such as planting potatoes, etc. After 8 days stay an American whaling barque called, and took away our carpenter and one of the crew. (804) As she was cruising, and not bound for a port, the remainder of us did not ship, and no objection was made to our remaining, to my knowledge, by the islanders. Two or three days later, two more American whalers called for refreshment, and on the 18th day of our stay the English ship "Northfleet", Captain Oates, bound Aden with coal, hove to off the settlement, and we all went in boats to her. Arrangements were made with the Captain to take us all to Aden, and after staying two hours, the ship sailed with us. We took our
