

Subject: How Did We Get Here?

From: "John Winston" <johnfw@mlode.com>

Date: 25/03/2011, 05:43

Newsgroups: alt.conspiracy.area-51

Subject: How Did We Get Here?

Mar. 24, 2011.

This suggest that we were all seeded.

.....
.....

Message from S-irit, Wicahpe To Hoksila (Blue Star Boy)

Received in Spring Equinox Ceremony 03.21.2011

Sent by Chief Blue Star Eagle.

6. Everyone should remember their origin from the stars.

Chapter 6 -- Seeding from the Stars

Sometimes it is easier to accept a Creation story like the one we've been following than it is to believe there are aliens who might one day show up on our front doorstep for a visit. Perhaps this is because `G-d' seems so nebulous and so much less personal, while aliens on the other hand could be so very, very close and real.

Statistics suggest that more than 57 percent of Americans believe in UFOs, while fifteen percent say they have seen a UFO, and as many as 5 percent say they have been abducted. These figures seem very low after my speaking with people from all over the world, and working with abductees for a number of years - abductees who have a completely different figure in mind, something more like 40 to 50 percent!

The one common thread that ties so much of the native mythology of all nations together is the idea that our ancestors came from the stars. This is certainly common knowledge to just about every Native American tribe, and many other indigenous peoples as well.

In Mali, West Africa, lives a tribe of people called the Dogon. The Dogon are believed to be of Egyptian decent and their astronomical lore goes back thousands of years to 3200 BC. According to their traditions, the star Sirius has a companion star which is invisible to the human eye. This companion star has a 50 year elliptical orbit around the visible Sirius and is extremely heavy. It also rotates on its axis.

This legend might be of little interest to anybody but the two French anthropologists, Marcel Griaule and Germain Dieterlen, who recorded it from four Dogon priests in the 1930's. Of little interest except that it is exactly true. How did a people who lacked any kind of astronomical devices know so much about an invisible star? The star, which scientists call Sirius B, wasn't even photographed until done by a large radio telescope in 1970.

The Dogon stories explain that, according to their oral traditions, a r-ce of people from the Sirius system called the Nommos visited Earth thousands of years ago. The Nommos were ugly, amphibious beings that resembled mermen and mermaids. They also appear in Babylonian, Accadian, and Sumerian myths. The Egyptian Go-dess Isis, who is sometimes depicted as a mermaid, is often linked with the star Sirius.

According to the Dogon legend, the Nommos lived on a planet that orbits another star in the Sirius system. They landed on Earth in an "ark" that made a spinning descent to the ground with great noise and wind. It was the Nommos that gave the Dogon the knowledge about Sirius B.

Such credible witnesses as former U.S. P-esident Jimmy C-rter have admitted on record to having seen a UFO, though he is not the only public figure to have done so. Voice recordings of N-SA astronauts publicly available tell how the astronauts have seen UFOs from the space shuttle's windows. NA-A astronauts such as Neil A-mstrong and Buzz A-drin, Ed W-ite and James M-Divitt, James L-vell and Frank B-rmann, Walter S-hirer, and Gordon C-oper, all testified before the U-ited Nations that UFOs are repeatedly visiting this planet. Russian film footage of their cosmonauts working on the space-station Mir show obvious UFOs circling the area in the background as the cosmonauts do their work.

Ed Mitchell, Apollo astronaut, appeared on Dateline NBC in April, 1996, and indicated that NASA was covering up what really happened at Roswell.

There is also evidence to suggest that Cro-Magnon man was doing drawings of UFOs as long as 13,000 to 30,000 years ago in French and Spanish caves, places where there were no sources of light at the time.

Prior to 1947 and the Roswell Incident, there had still been as many as 1000 books written on the incidence of Unidentified Flying Objects. Since the early 1980s, the number of books on the subject has grown exponentially. Former U.S. President Ronald Reagan is famous for his public comments made in 1987 alluding to an alien threat that would force the feuding countries of the world to pull together in a common act in order to repel hostile invaders. He even concluded one statement in September 1987 with the rhetorical question, "And yet I ask you, is not an alien threat already among us?"

Medieval paintings of religious figures show flying saucers clearly visible in the background.

Until recently, 1997 had been the busiest year yet reported for UFO sightings in South America. Yet still the military and governments of most countries of the world deny that aliens and UFOs exist. What purpose does it serve to deny this fact when they are so very obviously real? The Brookings Institute did a report in 1961 at the request of NASA on what the effects might be of disclosing information about the reality of aliens to the public. The recommendation was a resounding not to do it. The report suggested that such a release of information at that time would cause society as we know it to collapse. But would it? Or is it just that the threat of alien 'invasion' could be used against the people as a way of keeping them 'in line'?

At what time of an adopted or orphaned child's life should it be appropriate to tell them who their parents really are? Is there any easy way to do it? And what would the repercussions be on those children after being told? This is the scenario we currently face here on planet Earth.

We are not orphans. We are not abandoned or adopted children. We do in fact have parents, and grandparents, and great grandparents, and great, great grandparents as well - and somewhere back along the way, there are at least one or two of our ancestors who really were alien. It is more than probable that there is not just one or two either, but lots of them. That 'sons of G-d' stuff in the Christian Bible is a story about us and our beginnings. All of us have had many lifetimes on this planet, and indeed much of this history of the planet and of the universe that we are talking about is simply about us in former lives and the planetary places from which we recently moved or from which we incarnated into the present lifetime.

Those who do not learn from history are doomed to repeat it. And repeat it. And repeat it.

Therefore, when we decide that we want to take a look for the origins and the causes behind our history, the best place to go is deep within ourselves to our own DNA and to our very own cellular memory. Although there are many evolutionary processes at work in the Universe, it is a fact that no human life on this planet has ever evolved from anything other than an intelligent, flesh and blood human, or proto human-like life-forms.

Now that this has been said, how does it make you feel? Does it make you feel like society will suddenly collapse down around your head? No? The only thing that might collapse is the power structure built on the lies and subversion that have held our history hostage for way too long.

I know it will take time before the full implications of this statement sink in, but somewhere deep inside you, you never could believe that 'crawling out of a swamp' stuff anyway. Perhaps the best thing then to do would be to take tomorrow off from work to think about the ramifications of this fact and then it will perhaps become clearer for you. The next best thing to do then would be to set aside some time this weekend to rearrange your priorities. But, other than that, your life will go on as usual.

Even though some of the illusions that you once held so dear may have been brushed away along with the digestion of these facts, you will, however, only be left with a much clearer vision of who and what you truly are; and who that alien appearing quite human and standing next to you is. You will also be a person who is much less likely to be used or controlled by those trying to enslave you.

Before you begin this process, however, wait until you have finished reading the rest of this chapter. This is where our history in the lower worlds begins - on this, the most beautiful planet in the Universe. It is a time when the planet is almost devoid of all life-forms other than some evol-ing animals and vegetation formed by a-gelic realm beings. Many of these Beings are now in-arnated upon the planet and can remember this time of helping form the new d-vine matrices which we now see around us.

The "go-s" whom this honeymoon retreat was created for are now absentee landlords, so why let a good thing go to waste?

Oh, a few visitors stopped by every now and again to rest their weary space-legs. Most of these left again after a short time of refreshing themselves - perhaps making a pit stop to repair or replenish their craft and their supplies. Some stayed awhile but ultimately perished, the planet at that time being still way too hostile an environment for any kind of advanced life form then existent.

Part 1.

John Winston. johnfw@mlode.com