This talks about the size of the planet called Hoova.

Many of these `A-yans' and others escaped to Earth at the time of the destruction of Maldek, during the earliest phases of the Galactic or Luciferian wa-s. Their memories are very strong with regard to what happened there, and indeed the planet Aldebran which is destroyed by the Death Star of the Dark Side in the original Star Wars film, is an archetype of this planet Maldek. So it is with Solara's memories in her book, El: Ra: The Healing of Orion:

"Maybe she could liberate some of the small planets they had invaded if they were willing to join the fight against the OMNI. Too bad that AAlar-dar wouldn't join his forces with hers, surely overthrowing the Dark L-rds would be serving good. Maybe when he saw her strength and power, he would bring the Intergalactic Confederation to help. But, she knew that she couldn't count on him. Besides, there was always the possibility that he would try to stop her.

"Kurtala's mind was made up. She vowed to destroy the OMNI, whatever it took. Even if she now had two formidable opponents, both AAla-dar and the Dark Lo-ds, she was not frightened. Rushing from her quarters, she made haste to prepare for the horrible times to come.

"And thus the stage was set for the intergalactic wa-s."

The Aldebarans or Ar-ans have played a significant role in the troubles here on this planet. They were a small minority of people who escaped to the planet and unduly influenced others to accept their beliefs and the memories of their home planet and what took place there. The translation of the stories they told were taken at face value as a lesson in ra-e mixing, when, as it has been correctly said, there was no ra-ism on their home planet between the two different r-ces. At a time of a desired mixing of -aces on this planet, their stories were something that influenced other ra-es such as the Hebrew or Hoovid ra-e which came from the Twenty-Four Civilizations, and convinced them not to interbreed.

This was a devastating blow to the original plans for this experiment on planet Earth. Its success rested on mixing the best of all the rac-s to form one new and even more superior ra-e, balanced in all or many of its aspects by a deep love of its heritage from the many r-ces from which it had been formed. As this was the first time this experiment of mixing so many bl-ods together had been attempted, the interference of other alien Beings on the planet at the time was unfortunate. In a Universe based on Free Will, however, it was also unavoidable. It was "a monkey wrench" thrown into the works which eventually jammed up the gears of the overall experiment.

The Aldebarans or Ary-ns were known particularly for their intellectual ability. Unfortunately they also brought with them this piece of their history which has now formed an archetype within people heavily influenced by their bl-odline. This characteristic of the Ary-ns is what has created much of the anxiety centered on the separation of the ra-es that has plagued nations such as Australia, the U-ited States, Canada, Great Britain, and certainly South Africa, almost since their inception. Most of all it has brought itself forward in the teachings of the Teutonic ra-e and eventually caused the slaughter of many millions when the archetype was successfully used by Hi-ler as an appeal to rac-a-l purity, and a reason to destroy the J-ws, as well as many others.

The Je-ish Branch

It must be remembered here that when the Nine speak of `civilizations' they are speaking also of levels of consciousness. Any particular group of people or Beings will have a certain group consciousness formed by the simple communal linking of their thoughts. This is because we are all connected together as a small individual piece of that much greater entity known as S-ul. This is the origin of the Native American saying, 'We are all Brothers' or "we are all one".

Any school class will have a certain group consciousness. So will any city, or even suburb of that city. Any state will also have a certain group consciousness, any country, and certainly any planet. This is the generalized consciousness of the people themselves as the group who inhabit a certain planet such as Earth. It should not be confused with the consciousness of the planet itself, which on Earth is known as 'Gaia'.

This consciousness will usually manifest itself in a predilection for certain abilities associated with the mind or the emotions, and will therefore give rise to certain abilities in the fields of science, the creative arts, music, or even physical prowess.

As well as existing at different dimensional levels in the Universe, each of the Twenty-Four civilizations also has a different level of consciousness. All are not perfect, all are still evolving in their own way, and many have difficulties of their own to deal with, although none quite as bad as those we have here on Earth. We have, indeed, inherited the problems of the Universe along with becoming a genetic melting-pot. As such, we have also become a central focus for the healing of the Universe - a microcosm for the larger macrocosm. We not only have all the positive attributes of all of our interplanetary parents, but also all the negative ones. Thus, truly, we are the microcosm of all.

"In the beginning, all civilizations were equal. Yet each of them worked primarily with different levels and in different arenas, and the civilization in the level that was most influential became the most predominant civilization," say the Nine.

Humans 'abducted' by aliens will often mention seeing the various races of aliens working together onboard ships where they are taken. These various aliens don't always seem happy about the fact of working together- but at least they are co-operating on things. It is much like a group of nations operating together here on Earth, each one wanting to participate, yet each one wanting to retain its own sovereignty and individuality as well. Again it is a predicament of self-will versus higher will.

The planetary civilization known as Hoova is the one that brought forth the nation of the Hebrews. They were one of the original civilizations that seeded planet Earth in very ancient times, and therefore rightfully can be referred to as 'the chosen people' in one small unimportant sense. Others came too, but Hoova re-seeded the planet Earth on three separate occasions, hence the relative importance of the Hebrews to Earth's history. The last time they came to the planet Earth for this, according to the Nine, was in the time of Sumer.

Hoova itself is a planet 16,000 times the size of planet Earth. It has a population of only approximately five million inhabitants. This means that family and group ties are very important there because of the sparseness of their populated areas. Comparatively, Altea, another one of the planets inhabited by a member of the Twenty-Four Civilizations, is only 52 times larger than Earth. Because of the different speed of time in the finer vibration in which Hoova exists, a Hoovid would live approximately one million of our Earth years.

The Hoovids are a smaller race, with dark skin, and usually straight dark hair. While Hoovids have vocal ability such as we do here on Earth, Alteans on the other hand do not have vocal chords, but rely rather on telepathic abilities to communicate much as was previously discussed about the Pleiadeans.

In terms of the sexes, Hoovids have what is known as a tri-polarity gender similar to what one might think of as the male/female/neutral blend inherent in the FATHER. Alteans are of two polarities, blended in togetherness. Hence we have the uniqueness of the sexual reproduction and mating customs of Earthlings, and of the great desire to reunite the two. This desire for physical union can even cause an unbalanced state in Beings from other planets and dimensions coming to the planet much like it does with the people already here.

Gregg Braden refers to this and its effect on what is happening with the current planetary changes:

". . . Even as seeds, many have become "lost" in the density of the earth experience and are just developing a new sense of identity. As the memory returns, the constructs of their lives may appear to make less sense; careers, relationships and even commitments made prior to the wake up, may not feel harmonious with the codes being activated from within; the patterns simply will no longer "fit." For those individuals, their path will lead them through the doorway of experience that brings them to the threshold of resolving those feelings, facing the fears and coming to terms with the emotion of what has come to pass. Even now they are preparing, and being prepared for, "The Rapture."

The Nine say that the Hoovids, and thus the -ews, have been great civilization builders, and were chosen to seed Earth for their knowledge and seed-influence on civilization. Ancient Babylonia and Baghdad were Jew-sh outposts. They also had a great influence on the Greek and Roman civilizations, as well as on Islam through the Diaspora, and then upon the rest of the world. J-wish people are descended from the original Aksu line of star seeds.
