Cursus monuments are now understood to be Neolithic structures and represent some of the oldest prehistoric monumental structures of the British Isles [1] cursus may have been of ceremonial function. Mothership photographed over Rhode Island They range in length from 50 metres to almost 10 kilometres and the distance between the parallel earthworks can be up to 100 metres. Banks at the terminal ends enclose the cursus. Contemporary internal features are rare and it has been traditionally thought that the cursuses were used as processional routes. They are often aligned on and respect the position of pre-existing long barrows and bank barrows and appear to ignore difficulties in terrain. The Dorset Cursus, the longest known example, crosses a river and three valleys along its course across Cranborne Chase and is close to the henge monuments at Knowlton. It has been conjectured that they were used in rituals connected with ancestor worship, that they follow astronomical alignments or that they served as buffer zones between ceremonial and occupation landscapes. Examples include the four cursuses at Rudston in Yorkshire, that at Fornham All Saints in Suffolk, the Cleaven Dyke in Perthshire and the Dorset cursus.[2] A notable example is the Stonehenge Cursus, within sight of the more famous Stonehenge. I chased a mile long Mothership over England and the ancient Britain's would have been impressed like I was. Note: There is strong evidence that ancient man worshipped disc shaped and cylinder shaped objects. American Indians in Ohio were buried in their mounds with small flint circular stones. Although, writing has not been found, it is possible to infer that circular objects observed in the sky became objects of worship. In his scholarly book, Egyptian Ideas of the Afterlife, British Egyptologist E.A. Wallis Budge said that the ancient Egyptians were preoccupied with life beyond the grave and that over thousands of years ancient Egyptians had a wealth of ideas and beliefs concerning immortality and the afterlife. Ancient Egyptian records described a fleet of UFOs moving across the clear blue sky over ancient Egypt. Air Force Gains Space-Surveillance Asset The 1st Space Operations Squadron at Schriever AFB, Colorado has taken operational control of the Space Tracking and Surveillance System Advanced Technology Risk Reduction satellite from the Missile Defense Agency. This addition gives the Air Force another on-orbit asset for monitoring objects in space as part of the space situational awareness mission. Bringing ATRR onboard will further enhance 1st SOPS' capabilities and contributions to the broader SSA mission, said Col. John Shaw, commander of Schriever's 50th Operations Group. STSS ATRR reached orbit in May 2009 for use in missile tracking experiments for MDA. After 20 months of testing that showed the satellite had operational utility, MDA last November announced plans to transfer the satellite to the Air Force. (Schriever report by Jennifer Thibault) Note (Our satellites track Fast walkers).

What on Earth? Inside the Crop Circle Mystery
Suzanne Taylor Producer/Director, What is ignored in the ET/UFO question is the positive effect that establishing contact might have. Science fiction portrays how bad it could be, but how about how good it could be? Think of the ideal. We are in contact. They are helping us. Their technology makes Earth thrive. Whether our relationship is directly physical or not, can you imagine what that would do to each and every one of us? It would be a new framework in which to experience life. We all would be learning life again. We would be so uplifted in our lifetimes. And while we have been confined to Earth, they have been travelling, so what is in this vast universe that they can open us up to? What picture they can bring us of life out there? To get us open to a next reality, consider how likely it is that ETs would be friendly.

If otherwise, wouldn't they have attacked by now? And why we've had no friendly visit yet could be they are waiting for us to get that they're for real.

If we were open to them, they could come in with no force or fear in play. In looking to the circles as a doorway, there's GREAT NEWS for crop circle fans! What on Earth? Is on iTunes. Crop circle movie is on iTunes.

Sightings in the U-ited StatesAlaska UFOsSEWARD --

I saw two UFO's coming from the northwest at a fast speed on May 25, 2011.

I ran to my motor home, grabbed my camera phone, looking out the window

I saw another coming from same direction. I snapped this photo, it's the first one, I've been lucky enough to get. I usually, never have a camera around. I've seen these objects now and I've have been putting cameras all around my property, and now carry my phone camera with me all the time. It flew to the southwest. There is a lot of activity, in Seward area, but the summer is very cloudy, but when it clears in the night sky, it's off the hook. Once in the day time one was just hiding in a hovering single cloud. I felt I was being watched, and kept my eye on the small cloud in the clear sky. It seemed out of place far away from the cloud front moving in, then the cloud dissipated and there it was. It must have noticed at the same time because right then it flew southeast to a cloud bank about two miles away. I clearly saw it in mid afternoon. I and many others have seen UFO's in Seward; some see them breaching the surface of the ocean, and flying away. Many others just drop in from space as it would seem, many times hovering over Bear Mountain, and Mt Marathon. I have to put salmon away for the winter, storing one year's supply of food hear the next few years might be extra hard and we may have earthquakes here soon. Thanks to Robert Mackey AK California JellyfishKevinmc360 recorded this event. I copied the videos from YouTube; Kevinmc360 UFO and the Oakland debunking video. No one has pointed out that these moving five star like objects passed behind a stationary star like object. I seen this type with my own eyes passing behind stars before; and that's why I noticed.

I was coming back from a poker tournament with a friend on June 10, 2011, when I saw something in the air about 75 feet high. I kept looking and couldn't figure out what it was, it stayed in the same spot and as we were getting closer to it coming down Mariposa Road toward Stockton.

I asked, Do you see that April?

It looked like a large jellyfish with a round top, something around the middle and large wavy things that hung down as it hovered silently that came to a point at a wide angle. I have NEVER seen anything like it and it had no lights, and it was a dark grey color. We turned around to try to catch it on video on our phones, but were not successful. Shortly after we turned around a jet fast flying very low passed very near. Suddenly it was gone! POOF! It was definitely a UFO right above the road. Thanks to MUFON Thanks to MUFON CMSFlorida

DiscTAMPA --

I was testing out a thermal camera, about 1:20 AM, and noticed a heat signature above the tree line that was pulsing low to high heat. About that time a plane coming into Tampa airport was going by to the right of the object when it completely went cold. Once the plane flew by it started pulsing again. I switched the camera to black its hot setting and you could see that stereo typical disc shape.

It then started getting smaller like it was flying away then went straight up very fast. Thanks to MUFON

Six Craft and LightCARBONDALE --

I saw a long shinny cylinder in the northwest sky around 6:54 am, as I was going to work on November 2, 2002. The sun was out, and there were no stars in the sky.

I went back into my house and got my camera, that took about three minutes; and to my surprise the object was still there. After snapping the first shot, it was gone. I've seen a lot of strange crafts in the skies, but this was the first time I was able to get a photo. Thanks to MUFON

CMSMORRIS --

I was outside at 10:15 PM, on June 3, 2011, looking up in the sky with a Genie night vision scope. I saw at least five different craft at very high altitude flying north and one was traveling west in a slightly erratic flight path. I was able to film this craft via night vision and iPhone. The last craft was a glowing orange sphere at a low altitude and could be seen with a naked eye. I was able to video a craft clearly moving south that was very bright glowing object. Will try to post them later. None of the craft left trails. The skies are getting busier. Just get outside and look up.
