

Subject: Bigfoot 1.

From: "John Winston" <johnfw@mlode.com>

Date: 10/02/2012, 16:42

Newsgroups: alt.conspiracy.area-51

Subject: Bigfoot 1.
Feb. 10, 20012.

I contacted the man's wife who I gave a ride to his home. He will be back in about two weeks. His wife expressed an interest in Bigfoot because her uncle has seen one of them. She'll probably pass the information, after reading it, on to her husband.

.....
.....

Subject: Places Where Bigfoot Has Been Sighted.
Feb. 10, 2012.

Here are some of the places where Bigfoot is sighted. It starts out slow and picks up speed as we go forward into the article.,

.....
.....

Hundreds of people have reported seeing a large, hairy, human-like <http://www.savannahga.gov/cityweb/SavannahGaGOV.nsf/0da63f0738ee33ab8525770a004d7604/1026759edfa8c198852578bd005f22f0?>

creature lurking in the remote regions of California, mostly Northern and central California, which is popular location for <http://www.gardenbuildingsdirect.co.uk/Summerhouses> summer houses. We can only imagine the numbers of encounters and sightings which have gone unreported. The average person doesn't know what he just saw and surely doesn't know he can report such things. If the thought occurs, he doesn't know who or where to <http://www.bioethics.iastate.edu/classroom/summerhome.html> report the encounter. There are several people in California and elsewhere who would be interested in listening to your report. They are listed below.

The highest rate of sightings and recovered footprints are in the Northwestern most part Northern California near the Oregon border around the Humboldt Forest, Bluff Creek, Hoopa, Weitchpec, Orleans, Somes Bar and Willow Creek, located between Crescent City to the North and Eureka to the South; between Interstate 5 and Highway 101 on Highways 299 and 96. Why this general location has more sightings reported is not known.

Perhaps because an increase in summer back-packers, bikers, campers, fisherman, would-be trackers and the fact that much has been written about this general area and Bigfoot. A growing number of recent sightings have been listed in the Mt. Shasta region of California. In addition, many California Highway Law Enforcement and Forestry Service take these encounters and sightings as matter-of-fact and are for the most part go unreported as public sightings.

Other California cities with a number of reported sightings are Mt. Lassen, Mt. Shasta, Weed, Round Mountain, Elk Creek, Caribou, Happy Camp, Clear Creek, Trinity Alps, Weaverville, Salyer, Crescent Mills, Modoc County, Lake Oroville, Hayfork, Hyampom, Vacaville, the Lake Tahoe area, Yosemite, Mammoth Lakes, Bear Valley; and in the coastal cities of Eureka, Yreka, Fort Bragg, Orick, Crescent City, San Rafael and Olema as far south as El Capitan Reservoir and Alpine in San Diego County near the Mexican border where a family of 3 were sighted in the 1970's by a San Diego psychologist.

Unlike the Eastern reports, the California Bigfoot is extremely shy, illusive and while he seems curious, he is rarely aggressive when confronted by humans. Reports vary from state to state. Although kidnapping is sometimes reported, the victim is never harmed. Occasional acts of Bigfoot heroism occur, read sighting #61 listed in the Mt. Shasta area. Both sexes and offspring have been observed, usually in summer and fall. With a strong gelish frame, agility, and speed (one was clocked at 35 MPH), Bigfoot is a good swimmer and are often seen near and around bodies of fresh water; streams, lakes and rivers.

They are notable for a putrid, rank odor. Bigfoot enjoys a broad diet ranging from fish, rodents, and deer to fruits, berries and various vegetation. Bigfoot calls consist mostly of whistles, howls and shrieks similar to those of a mountain lion but has been reported imitating many different forest sounds. Most of all, the sasquatch is huge in stature: specimens up to 14 feet tall have been reported (tallest in Canada) with human-like tracks ranging from 11 to 21 inches long but averaging about 16 inches here in California. To follow are various sightings and encounters in California which range from the earliest cataloged reports in the '50's to today.

While there is a report included here from 1886, it appears that reports were feverish in the '50's and '60's. Only minimal attention is given to such reports in the '90's; even less as the year 2002 nears, sightings and encounters have considerably diminished. What that means in terms of how many survived a general life span of 30-35 years (Fahrenbach, '98 ISC Journal) or had surviving offspring is unknown. Gauging by the diminished reports, I would say surviving sasquatches are indeed rare and greatly outnumbered by elk and bears in California.

The majority of the older listings are taken from Betty Allen's recordings, Bill Bishop's listings from Bob Titmus, the Times-Standard, Bud Ryerson, Syl McCoy, Dewey Haupe, Peter Guttilla, The Bord's Bigfoot Casebook and the Filbey's 1987 Northern California touring map, the remainder from books and other reports filed or sent into this website.

I rarely add to this page anymore, (2009) preferring to document witness reports by state.

You'll find those left frame, under "

<http://www.bigfootencounters.com/sbs/sbs.html>

sightings.

That link used to be titled "State by State."

"Georgia, Times New Roman, Times, serif"

Browser users: To open a new window, place your cursor on link & right click

California Bigfoot Encounter Brief Listings

North Fork, Madera County, California

1999

No evidence was found to support alleged Sasquatch footprints.

Photos of tracker confirmed distorted bear tracks might be seen

<http://www.bigfootencounters.com/larson.htm>

here.

California

1999 (San Diego County) No evidence was found to support rumors of a Sasquatch recently reported by the BFRO.

Lake Arrowhead, San Bernardino County, California

March, 2000 the trail of tracks reported were long very narrow human not Sasquatch tracks.

Paradise & Sterling City, Butte County, California

April 16, 1969: Robert L Behme and wife of Magalia,

California see a sasquatch crossing the road between Paradise and Sterling City, California.

<http://www.bigfootencounters.com/stories/paradise.htm>

full story

Mendicino County/Ft. Bragg

1977: JS reports hearing dogs chasing a bipedal creature through the woods along Little Lake Road and the discovery of other animals found disemboweled.

<http://www.bigfootencounters.com/stories/bragg.htm>

full story

Crescent City, Del Norte County, California

August, 1995: Vacationing truck driver and wife watch as Sasquatch holding sea weed in his hands disappears across the hiway into the woods from the beach with black sand.

Observer wishes to make contact with the other observer in the other car.

<http://www.bigfootencounters.com/stories/crescent.htm>

full story

North Fork,

Yuba-Feather River - Plumas County, California

Sean Fries is stalked while camping on the Yuba-Feather River between La Porte & Quincy in Northern California. His 95 lb Pit Bull cowers inside the tent and a odorous stench was smelled throughout the entire encounter.

<http://www.bigfootencounters.com/stories/yuba.htm>

full story

Plumas National

Forest, Plumas County, California

Near Bucks Lake in the Granite Basin On October 17, 1998, campers report hearing something walk around their campsite during the night and the following night they heard the much reported bigfoot howl approx two miles off the distance.

Inyo National Forest

August 4, 1996: At 10:00 in the morning, women campers on East Lake reported a large bipedal creature, 8 to 9 tall, dark moving swiftly up on a ridge above the lake level approx, 300 yds from where they were.

Eureka, Humboldt County, California
Marci Honstead sees the head and shoulders of Bigfoot outside her bedroom window during an electrical storm.
Approx.1982.

Yosemite, Mariposa County California
Todd Wilhelm reported a road-crossing sighting of two Bigfoot creatures on the Eastern Slope of the Sierras in August of 1998.

Mammoth Mountain, Modoc County California Bikers report a dawn sighting near the tram at the base of the winter ski resort in July of 1998.

Lake Crowley, Mono County, California
Fisherman report being watched by a tall hairy creature from the banks as they fished in the twilight hours of September, 1997. Campers noticed a similarly described creature while cooking breakfast earlier that same month, Sept, 1997.

Weitchpec, Humboldt County, California
August 1958. Road builders Ray Wallace and Jerry Crew find 16-inch BF tracks all around a parked Caterpillar Tractor 20 miles south of Weitchpec [sic] just South of Bluff Creek. The tracks reappear a month later and plaster casts are taken. Weekly thereafter, Jerry sees Bigfoot tracks going from Northwest to Southeast on the same logging road. Ray Wallace finds human-like droppings the size of those a 1200 pound horse would make. Wilbur Wallace, Ray's brother, finds a full 55 gallon oil drum carried to the edge of the road and thrown down the hill. He also finds a 20 foot length of 18" culvert carried some distance away and a 700 pound tire & wheel for a "carry all" which had been rolled for a quarter mile and hurled into a ravine.

January 1958. Mrs. Bud Ryerson and several others see BF tracks on Martin's Ferry Hill near Weitchpec. [hwy '
169 today]

August 7, 1960. Bob Titmus finds 2 sets of BF tracks walking along a road 9 miles south of Weitchpec, near Hoopa tracking towards Willow Creek.

Hoopa, California
1958. A woman and her daughter see a large and small Bigfoot on a hillside above Hoopa Valley just Northwest of Willow Creek.

August 3, 1963. A man and his boy see a BF leap over a 5 foot fence and run into the woods near Hoopa.

Part 1.

John Winston. johnfw@mlode.com