Subject: Abduction.
April 30, 2012.

This probably should be called "Disclosure" Part 8, but we'll call it "Abduction" Part 1.

This talks about what happens when a person is abducted.

Scientific Proof of Alien Abductions

One of the tenets of scientific proof is that a valid observable phenomenon can be predicted and repeated. I know, for example, that if I drop my cup of coffee it will fall to the floor and spill its contents. Although this has something to do with gravity, my intricate understanding of Newton's Laws is not necessary to prove that something is pulling the cup down when it is released. Trying to scientifically prove the existence of extraterrestrial beings requires the same prediction and repetition but does not require an intimate understanding of their origins, purpose or significance.

The closest evidence that meets these standards was reported by John E. Mack, a Doctor of Psychiatry and a professor at Harvard University. Dr. Mack specialized in psychiatric problems associated with repressed memories, often from abused or neglected children, and developed a method for helping his patients unlock these painful memories, confront them and eventually move through the trauma.

In his practice, Dr. Mack encountered hundreds of cases where adults revealed, often under hypnosis, memories of being abducted by alien beings. At first these memories were thought to be substitutes for actual sexual or physical abuse, too painful to be recalled even in the hypnotic state. But then Dr. Mack noticed that the reports were all very similar and contained details of the appearance, actions and interactions of the small humanoids, their space vehicles and even the surgical utensils used in the physical examinations that were the central theme of these memories.

At the time of therapy, Dr. Mack's patients were not yet exposed to the plethora of movies and books that popularized the UFO phenomenon. In fact, his patients often knew nothing of these things and were quite taken back when they were exposed to their own recollections under hypnosis.

Eventually, Dr. Mack documented over 200 cases and published his findings in a book called "Abduction". The book was published in 1994, the same year that the series "X-Files" appeared on American television. This focused attention of the phenomena, both good and bad, and put Dr. Mack in the world's spotlight regarding UFOs and alien abductions.

Unable to explain why these repressed memories were all quite similar, many summarily rejected his findings and subjected him to ridicule. Nevertheless, Dr. Mack's work chronicles the phenomenon which has become the archetypal abduction experience that continues to happen even today.

In summarizing his observations of the abduction experience, Dr. Mack wrote:

"I was faced with the choice of either trying to fit these individuals' reports in a framework that fit my worldview -- they were having fantasies, strange dreams, delusions or some other distortion of reality -- or of modifying my worldview to include the possibility that entities, beings, energies -- something -- could be reaching my clients from another realm. The first choice was compatible with my worldview, but it did not fit the clinical data. The second was inconsistent with my philosophical grounding, and with conventional assumptions about reality, but appeared to fit better what I was finding. It seemed to be more logical, and intellectually more honest to modify my cosmology than to continue trying to force my clients into molds that did not suit them."

The patterns or common elements that Dr. Mack observed in his patients' abduction memories can be described as:

- (1) medical and surgical procedures, often including an introduction of the abductee to alien/human hybrids;
- (2) the relaying of an ecological warning about the survival of the planet and the human species;
- (3) the initiation of a transforming, consciousness expanding phenomenon;
- (4) the eventual development of relationships with these beings. We will explore these elements with some real stories from abductees.

Medical and surgical procedures...why?
Many people have tried to equate the abduction procedures with our own system of tagging endangered species in the wild.
Others have described the abductions as the normal activity one might expect when an alien race encounters a different species, on a different world. But the fact that physical exams have been going on now for many decades seems to suggest something other than benevolent protection or scientific curiosity. The systematic abductions of the same individuals over their entire lifespan is indicative of some larger agenda, perhaps even one which we are not prepared to accept.

Having studied the abduction phenomenon for over 35 years, Temple University professor David Jacobs, Ph.D., the author of the highly regarded books "The UFO Controversy In America" and "Secret Life", has come to regard the abductions as a means to breed hybrids (beings which are part human, part alien) in an attempt to replace our human population on Earth.

He is somewhat apologetic about his conclusion and realizes how outrageous it sounds -- especially to those with little or no knowledge about the aliens or the abduction phenomenon.

"I've been involved with UFO research for about 35 years now, since about 1965, and I have never been downcast or depressed about the phenomenon. I have never been pessimistic about it.
I've always been filled with wonder and awe and amazement at it.

I've been enthusiastic and optimistic about it.
"But I must say that now that I've learned as much as I have learned, and I think I've learned an awful lot, I am very, very unsettled and upset by what I see. I don't like what I see. I wish I didn't see this. I wish I hadn't uncovered this. I despair of it. It's thrown me into a tremendous sense of concern about the future and unease. I just don't like it very much. I wish I did. I don't want to be this way. I don't want to be the bearer of bad news. I could not have ever imagined that I would come to this position. What I'm seeing now, what I've found with the phenomenon, I could never have imagined."

According to Dr. Jacobs, the program is huge and spans a tremendous amount of time. It's done slowly and carefully to remain clandestine. However, the duration only seems long to humans, with a lifespan of 80 years. Aliens presumably live much longer and have more patience and time to reach their eventual goal.
And that goal, according to abduction experts, is to take over our planet, replacing homo sapiens with a hybrid race.

A typical abduction/breeding procedure

Michele was four years old when she remembers seeing the "face" that frightened her. Her parents thought she was having nightmares. Michele remembers a face with big eyes that would frighten her so much that she couldn't move. She would "wake up" to find herself in her bedroom, surrounded by something that felt like an invisible solid wall, at which point she would become hysterical. When her parents came to her she was unable to explain what had happened and could only tell them about the "face". Naturally, they thought it was a bad dream. hybying "doctor" with various kitchen utensils, pretending they were surgical instruments. Her playmates were often made to undress and play "check up". This abruptly ended when her parents learned of this odd behavior and suspected that she might have been molested Michele once was "missing" and returned home late from high school. Her friends told her parents that she would sometimes insist on walking home alone through a remote wooded area. This caused concern that she had had an accident or met with foul play. She eventually returned in a dazed and confused state leading her parents to think that she might have been experimenting with d-ugs. They took her to a doctor but there was no evidence of any medication in her system. Instead, the phy-ician found raised, reddish, triangular patches on both arms. Michele was unable to explain how she got these marks.

(JW I belileve the reason for the abductions is that the Greys have reproduced from the use of cloning so long that their reproductive organs have atrophied, so much that they are not longer in existence. The Greys don't have much emotions. The higher beings who are responsible for the seeding or bringing beings to different planets saw the humans on Earth as having too much emotions and spent too much time and energy on se-ual things. They helped the Greys to come here and mate with humans which produces a hybrid r-ce of beings who are more emotional than the Greys and more s-xually minded than than the Greys. The Greys contributed to the hybrids the ability to be more intellectual and less emotional than humans.)
