This movie is being shown in county libraies and even places like Ralph Squire's Home. Somehow i seemed to have not been able to see it. I can only spread myself soo thin. Maybe I'll see it at some future date.

The second chapter is The Problem, where we really look to see who is suppressing these things and who's destroying our food supply and who's polluting our skies and our water and our soil and who's destroying the economy. We have a major problem here. What's going on? So basically, Chapter 2 is we follow the money upstream, to see who's actually controlling the money. And it turns out those same people, those same organizations and it's a small group of families are actually controlling virtually every sector of human endeavor.

Once we establish that, then we go into the next chapter, which is what we call the Global Domination Agenda, because it turns out, as far as I can tell from consistent vast research, the point of the control is not just to make money.

These families already have more money than anyone on the planet and they can pretty much print it whenever they want because they run the central b-anking system as well. But the agenda seems to be to actually take over the lives of all people across the entire planet, which is pretty chilling and sounds like a poor James Bond movie or something except that it seems to be true, and all the evidence that comes out in the news these days supports that hypothesis.

Given that, the last chapter in the film is Solutions and we really made a strong effort to have half of this movie be about solutions. Rather than scare people under their beds and then in the credits say, have people write your congressperson, buy a Prius, and change your light bulb, we actually looked to say, now that we know what's going on, here are some active solutions and strategy's that we can take, that can turn this thing around, especially given that it's a very small percentage of the population, it's not even the 1%, it's like .0001% of people that are actually perpetrating this agenda. As we wake up, especially through the Internet and we begin to take action, non-violently, especially in the pattern of Gandhi, Martin L-ther King, non-violent, non-participation is the key, and movement like O-cupy, A-onymous, and aspects of the tea P-rty and others are beginning to tap into these principles to take effective actions to turn this thing around.

Daily Bell:

You explain toward the end of the movie that there is a c-bal trying to shove the world toward global g-vernance, but that it is far broader than any one r-ligious group. Can you explain who is participating?

Foster Gamble:

Yes, it is really important that people understand that this is not a rel-gious thing, it's not a ethnic thing, it's not a nationality thing, but it is a group of people fundamentally who saw the potential of the central ba-king, fiat money scam. In other words a few people get to make up money whenever they want, and of course if they can do that, like the Monopoly game, they're going to be able to buy everybody out eventually. That's what is about to happen, we are almost there. It's taken in this country, since 1913, the creation of the F-deral Reserve to devalue the purchasing power of the dollar to almost zero, but it's become a global situation. We're about to see Greek collapse, the Euro collapse and it's coming to this country.

It's not an accident, it's not just incompetence, there is a small group of people, most simply the international bank-rs and their minions who have a plan, and there's plenty of documentation for this, to create a one-world gov-rnment, with them in charge. So it's really got the benefits of crony capitalism for them, but also the benefits of kind of c-mmunist d-ctatorship, kind of along the lines of the Chinese model and that's why David R-ckefellerreally praises the Chinese model, because they get to privatize the profits but socialize the loses, just like we're seeing in this country. The plan is very close to being fulfilled, they have just about taken over every sector of human endeavor, and they've virtually collapsed the entire global economy. Obviously the entire planet is bankrupt, but that's part of the plan. When they bring it all down that's the excuse, when people are running around scared to d-ath, they say, hey, we've got this global structure and this global economy and this one w-rld currency and the UN/A and N-TO will be the organizational units and the p-lice force, and we'll come in and rescue you. It's the classic problem reaction; solution and we are almost there. So we need to wake up and take action right away.

Daily Bell:

Much of what you related toward the end of the movie is in line with what we suggest regularly. We know you've read the Daily Bell because you sent us an email objecting to our characterizing the movie before seeing it. Are you a regular reader?

Foster Gamble:

Well, I go there quite often but I really haven't had a chance to put in the time to follow it as much as I'd like to. I was driven away for a while and lost interest with those two original reviews but as some of your membership started writing very thoughtful things after seeing the movie, I have been following it quite closely.

Daily Bell:

So much of what you reported in the movie parallels what we believe - even the stuff about the promise of the Internet and the struggle between what we call the Internet Reformation and the power e-ite. Do you believe, as we've argued, that the Internet is an updated Gutenberg press, and that there is in modern history a struggle going on between communication technologies and the ability of the eli-es to control information?
