Subject: Thrive. Part 6.

May 28, 2012.

Not only do we have the funny looking Men In Black but we have part of our s-cret g-vernment who will k-ll you if you tell the truth about UFOs. We also have the t-ugs that work for the o-l companies and e-ectric power compies that will ki-l you if you make a fr-e energy device. Yes this is a wonderful Earth we live on.

This part talks about aliens.

I thought I was going to spend six months to a year arguing over whether the F-deral Reserve was fe-eral and whether there was any agenda going on. People are getting the movie, they are getting the coherence and they are moving very quickly to, 'OK, what can we do about it and what are the organizing principles?' This is where I think the knowledge that is in the liberty movement is now going to be blossoming and bringing its contribution to really rescuing what's going on across the planet.

One of the major breakthroughs in Thrive was offering a three-stage solution a solution plan, if you will. Certainly one of the stumbling blocks for the liberty community, as I've been associated with it for many years, is that so many of the thinkers are isolated in the ivory towers of the peer principles that they are not engaging much at all in practical, transition solutions. What I did in Thrive was kept to Mises and Ro-hbard notion of keeping the goal in mind but then creating effective transition strategies. As long as the goal is absolute liberty, and you commit to not creating any new violations along the way, it's easier to tolerate what goes on in the gradual shrinking of the system because the system is not going away overnight.

So that's where, in Stage 1, we take care of disenfranchised people not with new taxes but with money that is getting freed up from cutting the mi-itary budget and from getting rid of the Fed-ral Reserve and so much other corruption. If you take that money for some period of time and help people, and help transition from polluted to organic soil, and take care of people who have really been struggling the most and those who have been most damaged from this corrupt system, then that gets you to the stage where go-ernment has shrunk down to a kind of minarchist stage, where you're protecting individual rights and providing some needed secu-ity while you still have any gover-ment at all.

I personally am quite confident that if we can take it that far, the prosperity and freedom and securi-y will have so mushroomed that people will not want to stop there. By that time and really all these steps start at the same time by that time we will have seen that dispute resolute organizations work and private sec-rity and private insurance work way better than the state and people are taken care of by neighborhood and by chur-h and by family, by genuine charity rather than coerced. We are going to see how much better all these systems are already working, and it will just be natural to keep going to ultimately a voluntary civilization. If we don't ultimately go there, I am not sure it can work.

Daily Bell:

We think people should just stop participating in this creasing horrible society and practice peaceful civil disobedience. What say you?

Foster Gamble:

I totally agree and that's one of the reasons why they invited me to Oc-upy and I was eager to be there and learn from them, because there are a lot of people there who have been working on that for a long time, as have I. I have been a non-violent civil disobedient ac-ivist pretty much my whole life, and I think that if we get violent in reaction, other than in true self-defense, we're just going to justify more p-lice state measures. So I think it's critical that we actually use non-violent non-participation.

World W-r III has been going on for a long time and it's been going on in almost everyone's life. It's primarily because it's economic. In Thrive, John Per-ins makes very clear what's been going on in other countries, but in this country the vast majority of people's lives are being destroyed by this economic wa-fare. But if people catch on that through economic means we can collapse that house of cards that is the tapeworm ba-ks and the me-ia and the mil-tary and so forth those can be collapsed or they will need to turn on a dime to get with the new agenda if people organize effectively and vote with their money, vote with their lives, votes with their choices that they make every day. And one of those is to not articipate to whatever degree is safe and practical to not participate in those systems.

Now, I have chosen to pay taxes because I don't want to be taken out of the game. I object completely to any involuntary taxes, especially the in-ome tax, but if I were sitting in a jail cell I don't think I would be as effective as I have been through being able to make Thrive and the website and having a voice in the world. At the same time, though, I totally respect people like Larken R-se and Wesley S-ipes and others who have been willing to take that stand and pay the price and have that action speak very loudly.

Daily Bell:

Why is it necessary to bring aliens into the picture at the beginning of the movie?

Couldn't ancient civilizations have discovered what you mention? Does it have to be ETs?

Foster Gamble:

Well, that is interesting, and one of the reasons Kimberly and I funded the movie on our own, up through the first rough cut. That's as far as we could afford to go but we were committed to having any investors that came in know exactly what the story was. We didn't want anyone saying, 'Well, if I'm putting my money in then you have to take out ETs or you have to take out liberty or you have to take out con-piracy.' I will tell you there are people who have warned us to take out every single part of the movie.

(Laughing)

But we knew that our life's mission was to connect the dots, and this fr-e energy dot is as significant as any of the other ones. The change that it would make would be more dramatic than any other one I can think of and it's right up there with liberty, in terms of that core importance.

It is really part of the back-story to the fre- energy, this really convincing phenomenon of extra-terrestrial visitation. For anyone who is willing to immerse themselves in the data, you can read over 500 first-hand witness reports, from high level gov-rnment mil-tary people, astronauts, po-ice officers, pilots and so forth, and from countries all over the world. There are consistent stories from all sorts of people and consistent from people who have seen how these ships are driven.

The two key elements that for me are one the suppression of ETs and UFO information, hand in hand with the suppression of -ree energy, because they do go hand in hand. If we're being visited by beings from other planets or solar systems or other frequency dimensions, they're not burning fossile fuel to get here. That's physically impossible. So the implications are huge.

The other element is that this isn't just a pol-tical film. This film has a lot to do with our consciousness and our worldview.

We used to think the sun went around the Earth and that the Earth was flat but we grew beyond those realizations. A lot of people think that we're the only life in the cosmos and we are, I believe, truly cosmic citizens. We live on this particular planet in a vast cosmos, but our consciousness is connected to the entire rest of the universe.

To the degree to which people open up to that their consciousness expands, their identity expands and they begin to access inner guidance, whether it's from cosmic consciousness or higher-level beings or whatever. Many famous scientists and inventors have attributed their inventions to being able to access this inner intuition which is intimately connected with consciousness beyond the human rational mind and our particular plane of existence.

Daily Bell:

Give us your take on ancient civilizations. We believe that there was perhaps a global, coastal civilization that was very advanced and was drowned by melting glaciers. You disagree?

Foster Gamble:

I don't know about that but there certainly are a ton of flood stories in vary reputable documents, from all over the world from ancient cultures. So I think there must have been some pretty amazing floods in the past, whether from meteors or melting of glaciers during warming periods. Scientifically, I would certainly bet that those occurred. Whether or not we have had ancient cultures influenced by extraterrestrial cultures, the evidence is very convincing to me that that did happen. I can't prove it but circumstantially it seems to be so and the reports from all over the world are logically very compelling.
