The President's Appointment File (Daily Diary) for 9-10 December 1965 totals eleven pages. They contain no mention of Kecksburg or an ICBM crash. I checked several other files (including the closed portions) and did not find any mention of Kecksburg or of a Soviet missile crash. I am not sure which file Mr. Clearwater was referring to, but he may have meant the National Security File, Situation Room File, which is entirely unprocessed (unavailable). It is one of the places I checked.

The "Hot Line" was activated 8 August 1963. It was first used (other than testing) during the June 1967 Middle East crisis. The U.S. terminal (teletype/fax, no voice) is located in the National Military Command Center (Pentagon), which communicates as needed with the President, wherever he may be. If a message did come in it would not be a matter of Johnson relaying it to the military, since they get it first.

If you would like copies of the Daily Diary pages and additional information on the Hot Line I can send them for $6.00 (minimum mail order fee) plus postage.

If you have any questions or need additional information, just let me know.

Sincerely,

JOHN D. WILSON

Dear Archivist,

I have written related to the enclosure. This message was put out by a lawyer in the Washington D.C. area. The dates that are involved are Dec.9 and 10th, 1965. I would like your assistance to help check out his claims.

I would like if possible the following:

- a) the schedule of appointments and phone calls for the President for the dates of Dec.9 and 10th, 65.
- b) any record of the hotline being used on the 9th, and possibly a record of whether the hotline was even in use at the time in question.

If you can think of any other item that might be at the Johnson library that might resolve Mr Lauren A. Colby's claim I would appreciate that as well.

I hope you can help.

Purely by chance, I happened to see some postings in this newsgroup about the UFO that landed near Kecksburg, Pa., in 1965.

The UFO was not a Soviet Cosmos space vehicle. Rather, it was a Soviet ICBM that went astray during a training exercize. The nose cone was filled with Plutonium but was not armed; if it had been armed, it would have destroyed the city of Pittsburgh.

The Military arrived on the scene almost immediately, because President Johnson had been alerted to the danger and probable landing area via the Moscow- Washington hotline.

The 12/9/1965 Diary entry is not sanitized. I went back to the original copy and the same marking is there. It looks like the typist goofed and was not content with overstriking the mistake with X's, but used a pen to block it out more thoroughly. There are a few closures in the Diary, but not many. For any of our collections the closures fall into two broad categories- Donor's Deed of Gift (personal privacy) or National Security Classified.

The Diary primarily documents phone calls and meetings between LBJ and non-White House persons. It was not meant to be a record of his interactions with the White House staff, even though some of those are also entered. LBJ received a small daily intelligence brief in written form. I do not think there was a daily oral component to it. The written briefs are in the National Security File, Intelligence Briefings File. It is an unprocessed file.

Material relating to Walt Rostow is found throughout the National Security File. Memos to the President and Files of Walt Rostow probably have the closest association to him. We also have Papers of Walt Rostow, but they are unprocessed.

The Diary Cards provide an alphabetical index to the Daily Diary. Neither collection is 100% reliable in listing all of LBJ's contacts, but they are pretty good. I found two entries for Eric A. Walker, one for a Lieutenant Colonel J. G. Cashman (none for Lt. James F.), and none for Michael E. Chervenka.
