Marconi Deaths

MAR RDSALL RTS....

The very fact that a civilian UFO research organisation should be [interested in the unfortunate deaths, [or should we say murder] of several scientists in Britain over a couple of years or so, should be sufficient to give our readers a clue that many subscribers have indicated a possible link to the spell binding book known as A3, or ALTERNATIVE III.

Most of YUFOS research officers have in fact read the book and a number actually saw the T.V. documentary. Its almost impossible to relate the complicated workings of A3, but in a nut-shell, the American's and Soviets have been working hand in hand for fourty-odd years, and that they meet regularly under the Antartica in submarines.

The missing people syndrome; Most people who read the news fully understand that around 200,000 people in Great Britain go missing every year or so. In America the situation is far worse. Where do they go? Well Mars seems to be a good place to start looking for them anyway. But if you do recognise a past relative, his brain will not be working too well, for he is what the covert operation Alternative III requires to get as many of the Earth's scientists and 'brains' off this dying planet. The reason? Well purportedly their is a massive build up of gases coming from all sorts of spray tins etc. Its called in the scientific world - "THE GREENHOUSE EFFECT".

The Soviets and Americans understanding the dangers, decided to adopt a covert operation to save as many of the Earth's intelligent species as possible. They met regularly and studied ALTERNATIVE I; They originally were planning to set a series of nuclear explosions off in the Earth's atmosphere to smash several gigantic holes through the ozone layers. The ozone layers were of course holding all the deadly gases in the sky. Smashing holes through them, could [or would] they thought, release the gases into outer-space. No problem, but this would in turn mean that the far more deadly rays reaching Earth twenty four hours a day from the Sun, would just pour in. It couldn't be done, thus plans were adopted to generate a new operation - ALTERNATIVE II.

Alternative II was thought to be far more difficult, although once actioned, the human race, [or at least the intelligent community] could survive. A2 meant moving people underground, and away from the burning skies which are purportedly immanent. Basically they couldn't get away with it, without the rest of us knowing. So the ultra-secret operation known as ALTERNATIVE III was born. If Earth wasn't safe, then the only option was to get off the planet. Thus for some thirty odd years, the UFOs one sees are actually the craft operating under this covert organisation. Now it all sounds so far fetched that any normal thinking person, would of course reject the claims outright.

How then is ALTERNATIVE III public knowledge? Basically a few journalists began to research the subject known as the "brain drain". They were soon more interested in finding out why people leaving Great Britain for destinations all over the World were somehow not there when they went to speak to them! In complicated terms, they were shattered to learn of the truth. Thousands of people were being brain washed and turned into vegetables [this of course happening, once they were abducted].

Apparently, Alternative three could only function with massive help from persons who were classed as 'workers' and didn't know better. The ultimate destination of the scientists, was the Planet Mars, stopping off at a base on the dark side of the Moon.

As a former Editor of QUEST once said,"Its a little fact, and a little fiction - perhaps we should call it Faction"? [Nick Morris] Other researchers however, feel there are many parts of Alternative three that do ring true.

Thus you have the basic content which has interested many of our readers, and in the main, YUFOS felt it would be worthwhile to take a closer look at the deaths of the government scientists.

AFTER THE ELEVENTH CASE IN THE DEADLY SCIENTIST MYSTERY...

Conspiracy or coincidence ?

Its true to say, that scientists, [especially military] work under the most tightest of budgets and security. Their work is both unique, and at times surprising. The scientific community is like a tight-nit club, anything each individual happens to be working on, is regarded as his own. If it works, then everyones happy, if the research fails, then quite often it is brushed under the carpet.

Pressure and strain are not healthy, unfortunately in the scientific community, they usually go hand in hand. But every person suffers from these complaints, so what is stimulus for taking ones own life? Thats the question currently raging through the corridors of Whitehall at the moment.

Unfortunately, even a person with no interest in such subjects, can see that there is more than just stress and coincidence to blame. What were the scientists working on, and it just could be possible, that they learnt of something which drove them to suicide? It seems unlikely of course, but for the interest of all our readers, let us take an in-depth look at the people involved, and purportedly the work they were involved in. Much of the following documentation has appeared in the newspapers and has been submitted to YUFOS from interested members and subscribers. All have seen the possible link with the purportedly factual accounts raised in Alternative Three.

There are many links with the deaths of the seven government scientists. Most were were working for the massive MARCONI organisation, who have been clearly embarrassed by all the adverse publicity. Marconi of course, supply much of their knowledge to the Ministry of Defence, and indeed, are heavily involved with various top secret contracts

We have to go back to November, 1985, when a very puzzling death took place, although one should remember, that in all probability, what has been learnt from the press, may well be just the tip of a large dagger.

BRITISH TELECOM lead the field in telecommunications, and their technology is much sought after by middle east and third-world countries. Thus it came as quite a surprise when news first began to flow, regarding the strange death of JONATHAN WALSH, in Abidjan. According to official sources, Walsh fell off his hotel balcony. The unofficial explanation is more sinister.

Enquiries indicate that Walsh was murdered because he had spoken out regarding covert operations to secure contracts for the Ivory Coast government.

Both sound possible, but Police enquiries in the United Kingdom and Abidjan, failed to reach a satisfactory conclusion. Further Police enquiries with some 500 members of the British community living in Abidjan, revealed that Walsh was using heavy drugs and was 'high' on the night he fell.

Walsh was well known in his field as a Computer Expert.

Dr Keith Bowden's death was more perplexing, and before turning to the 'accident' which unfortunately occurred, we ask you to note the way in which each person died, and what their work entailed.

BOWDEN

Keith Bowden [Dr.] had everything to live for. He was the co-founder of the department of COMPUTER SCIENCES at Essex University. Aged 45, Bowden was happily married with a couple of children, living in a large house in the county of Essex.

Dr Bowden had for some time being working on computer controlled aircraft systems. He was already by the year 1982, one of the best known scientists involved with this research area.

On March 17th, 1982, Keith Bowden had attended a function in the City of London. Returning home late at night, the computer experts vehicle, suddenly left the road and crashed into a dis-used railway line at Witham in Essex.

On arrival at a Southern Hospital, examination revealed that Bowden's blood contained alcohol levels, far above the legal limit. Further Police enquiries indicated that he had been travelling extremely fast. The official verdict was an accident, but Mrs Bowden has never accepted that verdict. She strongly feels that it was not an act of God, indicating that there is perhaps further information relevant to his death.

Bowden had in fact, links with MARCONI, and had previously worked on projects for them.

The next unfortunate death, was that of ASHAD SHARIF, a computer analyst working for MARCONI at Stanmore, Middlesex. Sharif had formely worked for British Aerospace Company, in Bristol. His end came in a rather nasty fashion.

In October 1986, Sharif took his automatic vehicle and whilst driving through Bristol, suddenly stopped. He had with him, a large rope, which he proceeded to tie around a nearby tree, and then around his neck. Once in position, he set the vehicle in motion. He was garroted instantly.

SHARIF

Now according to sources close to Sharif, he had no reason to commit suicide, and furthermore, no history of depression.

Aged 26, he had a whole lifetime ahead of him, he had already reached such high positions.

Police enquiries revealed that the young scientist had in fact been seeing a married woman. This affair had just ended and purportedly he was driven to suicide, leaving a taped message claiming he had brought shame on his family. The inquests verdict? - SUICIDE

Not all the scientists have been actually killed. A number have 'simply vanished'. One of those is Avtar-Singh-Gida from India. He was working at Loughborough University on Underwater Acoustics. The Ministry of Defence had actually given Gida, an official grant so he could complete his work.

He went missing whilst carrying out field research at a reservoir in Derbyshire. We have however received information that after several months, suddenly Gida turns up again? The Ministry of Defence stated, "his work was not classified".

One man who never turned up again,(at least not breathing) was Vimal Dajibhai. This man had more than just links with Marconi, he actually worked for them.

DAJIBHAI

Based at Marconi in Watford, Dajibhai was a computer engineer with the company. He unlike Gida, was working on CLASSIFIED research. That research related around torpedo warfare simulators.

Vimal 'fell' from Clifton Suspension Bridge in Bristol in August, 1986. He was aged 24, and married.

Dajibhai's death is most perplexing. He had in fact, no reason to be in Bristol in the first place. His medical record showed no signs of depression or stress. Information reveals he had virtually no seemingly obvious problems at all.

When the inquest opened regarding his death, many uncertain facts began to emerge. The judge saw no reason to put forward any claims for suicide. The official verdict was "OPEN", his death was totally inexplicable.

Already we have seen how each death was so uniquely different. Add these deaths to yet another disturbing incident.

John Brittan [Dr], worked at the Royal Armaments Research & Develoment Establishment at Chertsey in Surrey. Prior this job, he was employed at the Royal College of Science.

Brittan was better known as a computer expert, and it was whilst working in this position that he met his death. He was found dead in his car whilst the vehicle was in his garage at his home in Camberely. Recognised in his work, he died from carbon mono-xide posioning.

Dr. Brittan was happily married with a family. Aged 52, allegations indicate he had medical problems. Reportedly, a bad throat. An inquest was held and the verdict reached, was ACCIDENTAL DEATH.

Probe ordered into scientists' suicide riddle

GODLEY

Lt. Col. ANTHONY GODLEY, may or may not be linked to the suicide and disappearing scientists saga. The last time anyone saw Godley was way back in 1983, shortly after leaving his home.

According to sources, Lt. Col. Godley had been heard rowing with his wife on the night prior his exit.

This gentleman at the time, was Commandant of Army Works Study School, at the Royal Military College of Science in Shrivenham, Wiltshire, Aged 49, his disappearance is totally baffling.

1987 seems to have brought things to a 'head'. And MARCONI again features heavily in at least two of the last four deaths.

However, PETER PEAPELL had no connections to Marconi company, but like Godley [above], he too worked as a lecturer (senior) at the Royal Military College of Science in Metallurgy.

Peapell was reported to be working on highly classified research relating to armour.

He died after returning home from a party in February, 1987. Peapell had been sober enough to get home, but was in fact over the legal limit for driving. On the journey back to his home in Oxon, Oxfordshire, he purportedly heard a 'clunking' noise on the underside of his car. After placing the vehicle in the garage, no one is really certain what happened next, other than a few hours later, he was found dead under it.

Police later revealed that he had died from carbon monoxide poisoning, although they were extremely uncertain how he had managed to get himself under the vehicle. The inquest never reached a definate verdict, and the case remains open.

Just three weeks earlier, RICHARD PUGH met his death in the most unusual of fashions. Pugh worked as a computer designer for National Telephone Systems. The Ministry of Defence gave information stating he had worked for them in the past, but on low-key projects.

Sources reveal that Pugh probably was murdered because of his knowledge in Computerised Warfare systems.

37 years old and single, he was found dead with a plastic bag over his head. His feet had been bound. Pugh was at the time of his death at home in Loughton, Essex. The Police believe he was at the moment of his strange end, engaging in a bizarre sexual experiment which went badly wrong. The inquest recorded a verdict of ACCIDENTAL DEATH.

Project Manager with a sister company of MARCONI - EASAMS, met an untidy death in March, 1987 [March 30]. Sands, like many British scientists, was purportedly involved with research into the UNITED STATES TOP-SECRET STAR WARS PROGRAM, or indeed, did learn of many developments into the research.

He took his car, laiden with many full petrol cans, and then proceeded down the A33 near Winchester. After coming across a disused cafe, he then ran head on into the building. Sands was aged 36, married, with two children.

Family sources revealed he was suffering from deep depression, due to his father having a terminal illness. The inquest has yet to be held, but already the death has raised many questions.

'Events would do justice to an Avengers' script'

Coroner baffled over secret scientist who took a U-turn to death

Flashback to the death scene

THE violent death of a defence scientist on top secret research remained a mystery last night.

An open verdict was recorded on 38-year-old David Sands, who died in a ball of flame when his car crashed at high speed into a brick wall.

The incident has been linked with the unexplained deaths of two other defence scientists and the disappearance of another. However police could find no connection, coroner John Cooke was told at Basingstoke, Hampshire. But MPs last night demanded an inquiry into the cases.

By JUSTIN DAVENPORT

The inquest heard that Mr Sands, who worked for the Marconi subsidiary Easam, lived happily with his wife Anna and their two children in the village of Itchen Abbas near Winchester. On the Saturday before his death, he left home without saying anything. Mrs Sands said this was so out of character that 'eventually she called the police. Her husband returned after 6½ hours appearing confused.

He said he had been wondering if there was a need for change in his life. He felt he was in a rat race.

The following day he told her he would 'not do anything silly. We were very happy together. He was under a lot of stress in his work but he seemed able to cope with it.'

On Monday March 30 Mr Sands left home for work and drove, as usual, along the A33 towards Camberley, Surrey. But suddenly he did a U-turn, took a slip road and drove without braking into the side of a disused restaurant.

Mr Cooke said he ruled out crime but all the evidence was against suicide. 'Why he should choose to do a U-turn travelling to work, one cannot explain.'

SDP defence spokesman John Cartwright said: 'Too many defence scientists have met sudden deaths. It justifies some investigation of the pressures under which they work.'

Not quite finished yet! And the SPACE AND DEFENCE SYSTEMS 'arm' of MARCONI feature heavily in disturbing death of VICTOR MOORE.

Moore worked at the Marconi plant in Portsmouth as a design engineer. At the time of his death, he was currently engaged in research on Satellite Tracking, a top-secret Marconi program.

He died just a few months ago in April 87, after taking a lethal drugs overdose.

According to his wife, the British Army had placed an order with Marconi for new research into a night vision sight. This had upset Moore,who was asked to help in the research. Mrs Moore indicated, "he was quite happy to work on weather satellites".

Moore apparently, did not like working on such projects. Whether this was his reason to put in for early retirement remains a mystery, either way, his request eventually was turned down. Events after this took a turn for the worse; after his refusal for early retirement, Moore was given three months notice.

PRESSURE: Victor Moore

WIDOW: Margaret Moore

The inquest which followed Moore's death learned that he was under extreme pressure at work. Moore was suffering from ulcers, and this could well have been his reason for his request of early retirement.Verdict - SUICIDE.

1987 was the year when people began to look with more than half-an-eye at the crazy events surrounding top British scientific deaths. Things came to a head, when another MARCONI linked man, ROBERT GREENHAIGH, jumped from a railway bridge at Maidenhead in Berkshire. Quite astonishingly, he had the fortune to land on soft grass. [40ft fall]

Greenhaigh survived and was found by a train driver by the name of Mick Hughes. This gentleman certainly wanted to 'kill' himself. He took out double insurance by slashing one wrist.

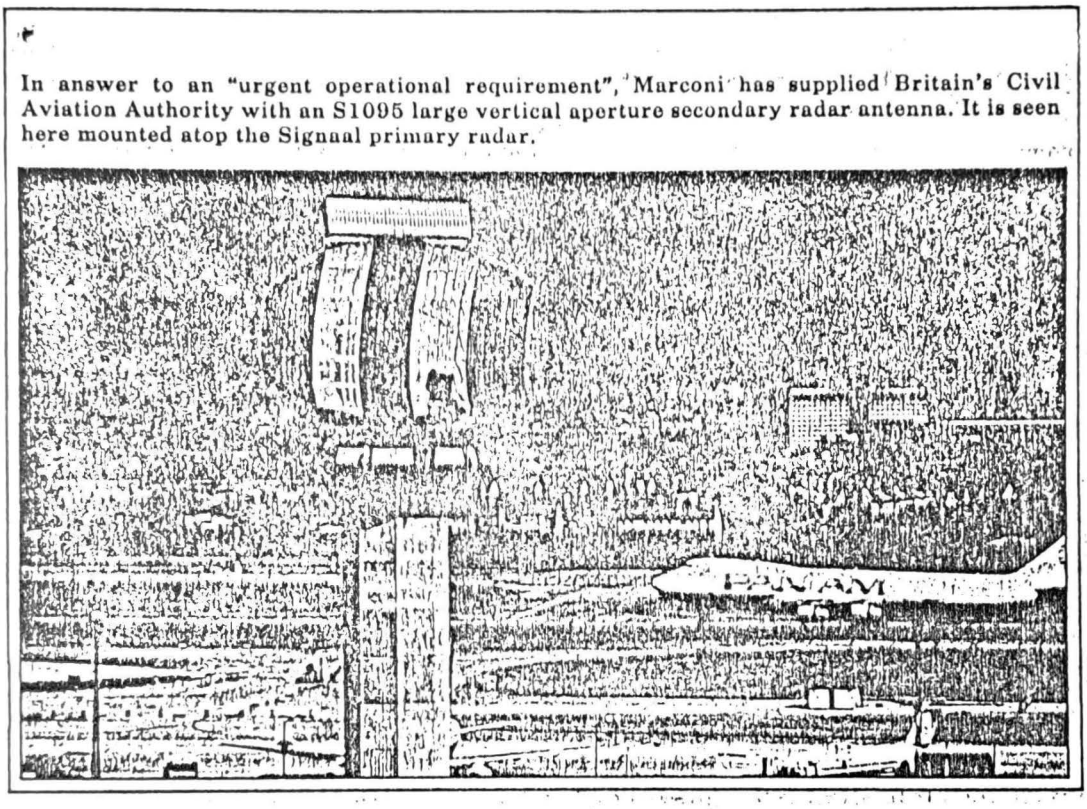
Greenhaigh's work was so secret, that even his closest colleagues had zero-knowledge of his business. At 46, Greenhaigh's work and past, could well be the key to this entire escapade.

The brief accounts given in QUEST tell only a small fraction of their work. There is much more to the research and connections of these gentleman than meets the eye. During the past five years, the media have knowledge of eleven deaths and disappearances. It is surely ridiculous to believe, that this is the real total. If pressure and strain were to blame for the deaths, then our scientists have more than good reason to leave Britain.

Without issuing too many critical comments, it seems clear that medical reasons do not play too big an issue here, nor is the coincidence factor relevant. What appears to be the link is MARCONI, the Ministry of Defence Contract Company in advanced technology.

In five of the deaths, MARCONI has been named and linked. In another three, the ROYAL MILITARY COLLEGE OF SCIENCE in Wiltshire is the connection. Two deaths relate to the study of underwater warfare. The remainder all were heavily involved with computer technology [several military potentials here].

The astonishing thing about these deaths, is the fact that the MINISTRY OF DEFENCE have refused an M.P.s [ALLIANCE DEFENCE SPOKESMAN - JOHN CARTWRIGHT] calls for a top-flight investigation. In fact, there will be no investigation at all.



In answer to an "urgent operational requirement", Marconi has supplied Britain's Civil Aviation Authority with an S1095 large vertical aperture secondary radar antenna. It is seen here mounted atop the Signaal primary radar.

The British Police appear to be less concerned than they perhaps should be. Again we can only pressume that there must be reasons for this? Very few public statements in respect of the deaths, have been made by the various Police Forces involved in the deaths. But they are united on one - there is no link. It seems absurd.

Nevertheless, several investigative newspapers have taken it upon themselves to get to the facts. All men have at some time in their lifes, been involved with research for the Ministry of Defence. A number were probably working on the Star Wars Program.

But Britain's ultra-top secret agencies are not taking the same attitude, and appear to be at 'logger-heads' with the men at Whitehall. The heads of MI5 believe the men from the ministry are being to casual, not to link the deaths is 'stretching things too far'.

DENZIL DAVIES [OPPOSITION DEFENCE SPOKESMAN], said, "this is a serious turn of events, it is time for the MoD to tell us what is going on, and why MI5 has been brought into the picture." Alliance M.P. Cartwright added: "There must be an overall investigation to ascertain once and for all if there is something sinister, or whether it is all just a series of very odd coincidences". To-date, there has been no change from Whitehall, although further information regarding the work of the scientists is beginning to emerge.

Peapell's work at the Royal College of Science[Military], was in part classified as Secret. [Research line - Metallurg]

Dajibhai's death in Bristol was unusual. You may recall he 'jumped' from the Clifton Suspension Bridge in Bristol in August of last year. When the inquest returned a verdict of "Case Open", this was beginning of twelve months of quite negative verdicts. It has been revealed however, that Dajibhai had several small puncture holes on his buttocks. No authority has been able to explain these marks satisfactorily.

Link David Sands knowledge of top secret research into STAR WARS with Robert Greenhaigh's access to information, sensitive to NATO, the picture becomes even more unclear. Further research carried out by Victor Moore on satellite tracking equipment suggests that a key area under review was indeed, Space Technology. Its virtually impossible to deny, that Dr. Keith Bowden's work on computer - controlled aircraft, is not connected?

But where there is death on this scale, there must be a reason. And that connection could revolve around the Soviets K.G.B. Robert Greenhaigh is still alive and has just about recovered from his fall. Now Greenhaigh has had a complicated life. At 46 years of age, he had top clearance at ICL. For some 15 years, he worked at ICL with the murdered double spy DENNIS SKINNER, who met his death when he was pushed from his flat in MOSCOW in 1983.

Skinner was working for both the BRITISH SECRET SERVICE and the RUSSIAN KGB.

The Soviets would of course be very interested in ICL's research, especially that which was classified TOP SECRET. ICL have an impressive research and supply record. They supplied a Command System for the British military services [NAVY], helped build another system for SUPREME ALLIED COMMAND, [NATO], and are currently hot favourites to win a £100 million order for a totally secret defence system, UKAIR. It is widely believed that DAVID SANDS, was also currently working on UKAIR for MARCONI.

Its a highly complicated web of national importance. Royal Air Force Fylingdales is shortly to open its new £200 million installation. [RADAR SYSTEM]. [NORAD] There is no doubt, Fylingdales will participate in the Stars Wars 'shield research'. It will be Europes main defence, in respect of tracking incoming missiles.

So is this the connection - America's proposed STRATEGIC DEFENCE SYSTEM? It certainly appears to be the case. MI5 are not happy, they dismiss suggestions that there is no link. The questions already answered, do not ring true. Many research establishments under direct government control, have been awared low-key contracts to develop certain areas of the defence shield. Combined, they are impressive. America's promise to supply part of the research to Europe, has been fulfiled. If the Soviets are concerned, then to eliminate key researchers, could slow down the process?

It could of course be all conjecture, or indeed suicide. Nevertheless the mystery does not stop there. Other top defence contract company's in Europe have experienced very similar deaths, involving their leading researchers.

At least two scientists working for the giant West German advanced technology company - SIEMENS, have been killed. Now news is slowly filtering through that in the Scandinavian countries, other scientists have been found dead in puzzling circumstances. Its more than likely that all the European deaths are connected.

ALTERNATIVE III, may well be riddled with fabricated jargon, and a year or so ago, top American magazine OMNI, actually commented about how rich this hoax, had made the authors. [LESLIE WATKINS & DAVID AMBROSE] But these gentleman did begin their research on the "BRAIN DRAIN" of Great Britain, and ran across many astonishing things on their way. If the scientists who have died, caved in under stress, then its remarkable. But there is always the Alternative II, a K.G.B. operation to slow down NATO research into STAR WARS. Many people would argue the fact that Alternative III, is the reason, no not a long trek to get off the planet(although you must never rule out anything], but did the scientists work involve something so secret, that they were unable to endure it any longer. And what did they learn, that was so unusual for them to take their own lifes?

Star wars brainbox in hanging mystery

IAN MacASKILL TUE

ANOTHER top boffin engaged on top secret star wars work for the Ministry of Defence has died in "extremely puzzling" circumstances.

Malcolm Hodges, 48, was found hanged in the garage at his home.

Police told an inquest the death was originally treated as suspicious.

But Det Con Dryden Pennington added: "We found no evidence of any other hand, but I'd never be able to say conclusively there was no third party."

Contracts

Surrey coroner Michael Burgess said: "Mr Hodges had not talked of taking his life and no note was left."

He recorded an open verdict on Mr Hodges, of Frimley Green, Surrey, boss of a company working on Ministry of Defence contracts.

● Since 1982 more than 30 scientists working on defence projects have died or disappeared in suspicious circumstances.

I suggested Cat-scan to the coroner.
