U.S. Experts Help Italians Pursue General's Kidnappers

VERONA, Italy — Six antiterrorism experts from the U.S. Defense Department joined forces with Italian police yesterday to hunt for the Red Brigades terrorists who abducted an American Army general.

Police had descriptions of six of the eight or nine guerrillas in the unit that seized Brig. Gen. James L. Dozier at his apartment here last Thursday, police sources said.

The general's wife, Judith, attended a church service at the chapel for U.S. service personnel and their families in the American school compound at the NATO base.

in the second such attack this month.

Pakistan lodged a protest over the latest alleged attack with the Afghan charge d'affaires in Islamabad. Afghanistan has denied a series of Pakistani reports of similar Afghan border violations in recent months.
