SUMMARY OF INFORMATION

The husky black haired man is the most vocal at the table and appears to be almost an unofficial leader of the group though all at the table are men who are equally possessing of power and are mentally strong. They are not subservient to this man though they listen to him. The men are discussing how to react to a new system/regime/new players. They were sort of taken by surprise because while the current situation was one of several expected possibilities: these men had considered it of low probability hence hadn't developed plans for it.

The idea of trade/dealing is present. The new situation will be more expensive and time-consuming: there are concerns of increased administrative burdens and increased risk to their power base. What used to be a well-greased process will now take several steps of red-tape and result in lesser returns.

There are two main courses of action being thought of: some present desire to fight the system and cause a return to the old system; others feel that they need to come up with ways to cause the new system to bend and be more malleable to their needs. Figuratively, they are trying to decide whether to fight one big direct frontal assault or a series of well-placed and well-timed guerilla skirmishes.

Idea that despite their obvious power, these men are behind the scenes manipulators: that publicity or acknowledgement of their actions is an anathema to them.
