SG1A

The [REDACTED] will onload contraband from a Pacific side port in Colombia. It will have to make two different stops to onload the material. Whether this indicates two different types of drugs i.e. cocaine and pot or cocaine and pharmaceuticals, etc. it was unclear. However, it feels as if it will have to go to two locations. The vessel will stop at a number of other places. The association here is that the captain wants to "get lost in the shuffle" so to speak.

There is the impression that this vessel will, or is, hanging out within a group of small islands/sand bars several miles north-west of the PANAMA/COLOMBIA border.

One of its stops will be in the vicinity of BUENAVENTURA. This feels like a real "hot" spot for this operation. There is the impression that some of the crew is leaving the ship temporarily and then returning. They are going to meet with someone and then hook up with the vessel a short time later.

There is the feeling that the vessel will depart for North America within the next two weeks. It's intention is to give the appearance that it is fishing while heading northerly.
