Site is a low, long, structure(s) with slightly curved/smooth angles between sides and top. It is on flat, open, empty ground. It is cool and dark. The structure is durable, but seems in some way (ADL/S) impermanent or prefabricated (ADL: tent). From above the structure horizontal markings/lines across the top are visible. Inside the structure, the ceiling is low and white. There are stacked boxes and a table. There is a large room that goes from one side of the structure to the other. The room does not extend from one end of the structure to other, however, as the structure is somehow divided. It is bright inside compared to the outside and the air is crisp and fresh. There is a constant machine droning sound. At one point there were some intermittent loud sounds. These gave me an ADL of oil drill. On a side wall there was a small protuberance, ADL "like" a pipe or beam running from floor to ceiling. The floor was white and slick ADL like plastic. The floor was uneven and bumpy and curved into the wall, ADL "like" it was one piece. That is, the wall and floor did not connect at a right angle. When I cued people I immediately got an ADL/S of bunks "like" ADL in a sub. Somewhere in the structure was thin stainless steel tubing, some of which was bent into right angles. There is a smaller structure next to the large one sort of to the side but in front of (or behind) the other. It had a gray pattern on it.
