Decision of — San Francisco — California — 1941, 1942

That [redacted] was a readily explained phenomenon. The subject was in fact too [redacted] to [redacted] and the variable "redaction" and absence of any [redacted] with [redacted] [redacted] explanation [redacted] interpretation. It is difficult, however, to [redacted] [redacted] the hypothesis completely, because of the lack of [redacted] information and the [redacted] possibility that [redacted] [redacted] was more subjective than objective.
