Incident #111 -- Philadelphia Islands -- 1 April 1968

There appears to be a notification, extrapolated to take into account, at a distance of 5 miles an object 22 feet long would be seen at an angle of slightly more than 4 minutes of arc, and would be very near to the limit of the resolution of the eye. The object would have been very much larger, if the observer is correct, for the average 10 degree 100 miles and the visible horizon.

Since the object was seen by only one person, and since the description is unconvincing, it seems in this investigation that not much weight can be given to this sighting.
