

Incident No. 32 -- 14 October 1945, 1200 hours, eleven miles North,
 N. E. of GALT HOUSE, Arizona.

Two mine operators observed one object at 6000 to 10,000 ft altitude, traveling 350 MPH S.E. in a straight line for a period of 45-60 seconds. The object was red against the sky, and black against a cloud. It appeared to be three feet in diameter from point of observation. The GMI report of investigation states that one observer thought it was a buzzard, but decided later that it was not; the other observer said it resembled a flying wing, but was not a flying wing. No reasons are given for these apparently superficial and conflicting remarks. As in many other instances, these observers cite their flying experience as qualification for their ability to observe and report details.

MY Opinion: From the limited data furnished in this report, it is difficult to arrive at any conclusion. If the object was actually 10,000 ft distant, and yet appeared three feet wide to the observer, it would of necessity have been huge. This sole point of contention tends to discredit the report.
