London, England

12 December 1959

I. Description of Incident

An observer in London observed a teardrop-shaped object of white light estimated to be as high as 5,000 feet then disappearing behind some buildings. Object was slow moving and was sighted at 0900 for 3 minutes.

II. Discussion of Incident

This report is very brief. Nothing is known about the reliability of the observer, local air traffic, beacons on water towers, etc. Therefore, no real evaluation can be attempted although the description sounds like the landing light on an incoming plane.

III. Conclusion

Insufficient information.
