Dobbins Air Force Base, Georgia

4 February 1955

I. Description of Incident

Military personnel observed a red-pinkish-white stationary object from this base as well as Knoxville, Tennessee, at 2345 EST which was observed for 15 minutes before slowly disappearing below the horizon. It appeared in the west and was brighter than red obstruction lights on the control tower at Dobbins.

II. Discussion of Incident

No triangulation from the two observing points was made which would have been extremely helpful and should be attempted in sightings such as this. The description and manner of disappearance strongly suggests astronomical sightings at Proving Field AFB and Maxwell AFB in October and December of 1950.

III. Conclusion

Probably astronomical (bright evening star).
