THE STRANGE SHAPES SEEN IN THE SKY

Study explains saucers, not these

To try to solve the riddle of flying saucers which for years have been reported in all parts of the U.S., the Air Force has been tracking down more than 5,000 supposed sightings. The bizarre objects shown against the sky in these drawings represent sightings which the Air Force, after eight years of meticulous investigation, has not been able either to explain or positively discount.

The findings, revealed coincident with the Air Force announcement that the U.S. is building a vertical rising plane resembling a flying saucer, identify about 60% of the objects as weather balloons, high-flying airplanes, clouds or astronomical phenomena like meteors. Of those that were unexplained only a few were so clearly described that pictures could be drawn. Because they all differed, the Air Force concludes that it is highly unlikely that flying saucers like these do exist but admits this can never be absolutely proved.
