President's Report

Hello & welcome.

Since my last president's report in April, UFO-PRSA has made significant progress.

You will find that our website www.ufosociety.com.au has been fully rebuilt and now appears as a professional and user friendly site, only detailing elements relevant to UFOlogy. Furthermore, a new website has been developed exclusively for all paranormal related information, and of course, paranormal research www.paranormalinvestigators.com.au. More about our new websites a little later on.

Our ten part TV series PI – Paranormal Investigators & Paranormal Investigators – The Challenge has been broadcasted every week on TVS (Channel 31). In addition Channel 31 (C31) Melbourne has also taken on the series – first going to air on Saturday 7th June 2008 at 9.30pm. We are pleased that the series has reached such a level of popularity. TVS will be up to the third Challenge (Ghost Town - Yerranderie) on 9th June.

We are now heading into the third month of our Support Group. Unfortunately, we found that most people who were hoping to attend are not situated within reasonable proximity the Macarthur area. Therefore the Support Group will now be based online as a forum. For more information please contact our counsellor, Lorraine Cilia (see Vice President's report).

Regards,

Attila
President

P.S: Our next meeting will be on 9th July 2008.

Vice President's Report

Greetings to all my Earthling and Alien friends.

In the last couple of months, I have tried to make a support group available to those who have experienced strange phenomena especially when struggling to find an atmosphere conducive to speaking their truths. Unfortunately, I have to announce that holding such a forum, although best on a face to face basis, is clearly not viable due to the location being remote from many who would like to attend.

Instead, a forum link will be opened and I will moderate the content where such individuals have the opportunity to apply to join and therefore have a unique environment in which to 'speak and be heard' without value judgement. Many are uncomfortable with idea of others knowing exactly who they are, what they look like, etc, even though the need to speak out is great. In this way, such anonymity is yours to keep.

I will announce through the UFO-PRSA website and subsequent meetings as and when this link is available. It is conceived through the secretary that such a web page address will not be a publicly accessed 'link'. Members will be invited to join this group and the listings will not be public – the Forum is restricted in this way and will not appear in general public directory searches. I will be your moderator and I am looking forward to a much needed service becoming populated with members who require more private group discussions about their own personal experiences.

During the last month, we conducted a night-watch at the Barker's Lodge road area in the Southern Highlands districts for the simple reason that many people have had reason to place calls or emails with the society about strange sightings. As ever, our purpose is to look for explanations and barring any logical ones, present findings for members to make up their own minds. In this instance, a fairly quiet night sky was had by all – but we can clearly see why people would notice so much from a fairly well used main road. As a result, we have published several such past reports of note for you to see why we would look for future events in this area; and remember, the future is in all our hands.

UFO-PRSA Developments

We've been working on a number of localised projects, mostly to improve our exposure and appearance. One was to conduct some maintenance on our main source of information – that being our website. An idea was put forward to separate the two divisions yet maintain a link between the two. We began by totally overhauling www.ufosociety.com.au

This was achieved by reformatting and introducing our logo as a primary figure to the site. We also made the website more user friendly by applying additional dropdown menus to cater for more information as well as side bar links to other pages. Furthermore, all details relating to the paranormal was removed and relocated to the new website. Links from www.ufosociety.com.au to the new website was introduced. This gave us a professional and information rich website, specifically dedicated to the UFO field.

You will find new pages such as NSW Close Encounters Data Base, Projects, Barkers Lodge Road Encounters (which will include reports from Razor Back), Articles, Conference etc.

The New paranormal website www.paranormalinvestigators.com.au is solely dedicated to the paranormal. This includes a full introduction to our paranormal division, a complete research section, media information and a whole lot more.

Both pages have been designed to promote our organisation in an exclusive and unique way. Feel free to check them out. Please note that some pages are still under construction.

UFO-PRSA will be running a Paranormal Investigators course through the Australian College of Mediumship on 30th August 2008. Subjects will include:

- Historical overview
- Type of phenomena - unexplained, natural & hoaxes
- Case studies
- Specialising areas
- Preparation
- Research
- Identification
- Field work and equipment
- Methods of approach
- Group session
- Investigation (limited numbers)

The series PI – Paranormal Investigators and Paranormal Investigators – The Challenge has received good feedback and compliments that an Australian paranormal series has finally hit the air. TVS (Television Sydney) and C31 (Channel 31 Melbourne) has taken on the 10 part pilot series. Although not mainstream media, we are working on a few ideas that may one day see it broadcasted through one of the major channels. Our goal is to spread the word on Australian phenomena research.

RACE (Research of Australian Close Encounters) team members are now in preparation for the next major expedition. These ventures leads us every year to search for close encounters. So far, most of our expeditions have been successful. We have achieved this through preparation, dedication, aspiration and hard work. The team has always held together, even in dire moments – and we have faced a few over the years. The location is new and we will be assessing a potential vantage point at first hand – much like a reconnaissance mission. We endeavour to keep you updated of any further progress.

Dom's Corner – Newton's Apple

By Dominic McNamara

“Until more recent times, there have been many who would consider the prospect of alien life travelling the universe somewhat preposterous ...”

The conservation of momentum is one of the basic laws of physics; Newtonian Physics. Some of us are currently struggling to find a way of breaking that law. The reason is simple. In order to find a way of travelling to the stars, it is essential that we find a way around space; literally!

For it is the vast separation of distances – space – which is surely the final frontier. Until more recent times, there have been many who would consider the prospect of alien life travelling the universe somewhat preposterous based solely on the improbability of being able to travel such vast distances and still be alive at the other end. In other words, the very problems we ourselves would be faced with.

The current line of inquiry involves the idea of changing the fabric of the space-time continuum. There have been ideas along the lines of ‘portals’ and the like. They appear like a glimpse of another place right next door to the here and now. Perhaps, it was argued, there was an answer to be had in the idea known as ‘Swiss cheese’ of space; where different places could be linked more directly – perhaps even by black holes.

But is there a means for allowing a bending of the physical laws of space? What would changing the very fabric of space look like? Where can I point to it? Perhaps we should cover the ideas of Albert Einstein before we consider changing things accordingly. I would imagine that most of you have heard of the idea of gravity being an expression of mass warping space-time. No? Well then let's look at it.

Layers of space

If you imagine a layer of cling wrap stretched out between a couple of chairs or something to support each end, then you would have a taught area suspended in space which would represent a slice of space fabric. If I place a ping-pong ball on this film surface, it will be supported without too much trouble. But without doubt, there would have to be some sort of depression in the clear film, if only negligible. This then represents what happens when a body of little mass, not weight or size, imparts its existence on space-time.

What about a tennis ball? That would make an even bigger depression in the film. Now we approach the makings of the Earth's gravitational field. The thin film will almost wrap itself around the lower half of the ball and anything that is rolled out onto the surface nearby will be 'caught' by the curved space around the ball and sucked into orbit or collision, 'Roulette wheel' style.

So what if we then placed something like a melon upon our imaginary space-time slice? This would behave like an example of a strong source of mass such as the sun. Enough curvature to bend light was the prediction. During a solar eclipse, an experiment proved the ability of the sun's gravity to bend light rays without their being refracted!

So what has all this to do with propulsion physics? It has been theorised that if we bend space around an object far enough, we can end up with the ability to shield ourselves from momentum and its harmful effects at high speeds. Also, by deflecting such a 'warp' in front of the vessel, we would be able to control the direction of travel. Forward travel would be obtained by merely making a depression in space directly in front of the vessel in which you are travelling. The effect would be a 'pull' in the direction of the space ahead. No exhausting thrust would be required. So what would be the effect of a large distortion in any given direction! The theory I put forward is the one you have heard of before – Folding space.

"I seen it"

For a long time, people have been shown the analogy of space being folded in much the same way as a newspaper being closed and then opened. Transferring print from one page to the other seemed to be a likely analogy for instantly 'jumping' from one place to another. But in reality, it might be easier to think of the depression in time space ahead of a vehicle as 'linking the two places; the stronger the link, the faster the transfer!

With this idea in mind, many individual witnesses describe the ability of some objects to drift silently against the background sky whilst leaving electromagnetic 'marks' or interferences. Most obvious of these interferences would be the type enacted on a motor vehicle, especially that of combustion spark or alternator electrical activity.

The relationship between gravity and electromagnetism is growing ever closer and stronger with every new ground that is broken in the search for answers. It's the questions that have become divergent.

With regard to Propulsion physics, the research into the existence of torsion fields and their synthetic creation, have been brief and very often, a little cataclysmic. According to The hunt for zero point (Cook, 2002), as the allies were zeroing in on Germany, a number of scientists working in secret were taken out of the way of the advancing allies. They were literally silenced in the wake of the work performed in the name of science. Numbering 62 in all and many of them German, these men had worked on something involving the immersion of metallic liquids into spinning containers. These containers were then lowered into shafts or wells, which then glowed a luminous purple or violet in the dark. What were they working on? The codename of the experimental research was given as 'Laternenträger Chronos'. They were reputed to be experimenting in a torsion field generator of some kind and yes, the name suggests the very activity of a metallic liquid 'suspended in a bell or lantern down a well. But it was the other name that was increasingly suggestive – Chronos – 'time'. They were trying to generate enough curvature around the generator that it would have a side effect - to bend time itself!

Vortex

There have been many researchers delve into the idea of changing the levels of energy around them by changing their ideas of gravity. They soon found themselves smack bang in the middle of an age-old idea – the idea of spinning! After all, everything seems to do that quite well from galaxies to flushing the loo!

The greatest misunderstandings that we currently have are responsible for everything we hold dear - the magnetic anomaly and the rotating spiral or wheel.

These surely are some of the most basic gifts and inventiveness we are able to point toward, but as a result of this complacency, we appear to have missed something. The daring have stumbled into something that even BAE systems (formerly Marconi and British Aerospace) and NASA cannot further deny is of interest. There is a fundamental principal in magnetism and especially the electromagnetic spectrums, some of which have never been fully explained under Newtonian physics and all seem to encompass the idea that a spinning device creates a torsion field albeit an incredibly small one.

This then is an inclusion of the remarks of one Viktor Schauburger inventor of a repulsive generator involving vortex swirls. Eric Laithwaite, the inventor of the Maglev train used Gyroscopes and the nature of reduced weight take us a step further. Howard Johnson described magnets as room temperature superconductors and went on to propose that a motor could be driven into circular motion with magnets alone! He went further and built working motors! He described these notions as the result of electron spin of a difference to all other materials.

All were ridiculed. We however shall uncover all that these men did and revealed to a world, which does not listen.

Slowly we shall explore the very argument of ordinary individuals who have directed us rightly but without approval of the authorities, a dangerous if not precarious position for any of us.

Reports from Divisions one & two

“... it seems that this whole area is encompassed by a series of close encounters.”

When we overhauled the website, I thought it would be a good idea to add an additional page that would specifically detail the inexplicable events occurring around Barkers Lodge Road. The page ‘Barkers Lodge Road Encounters’ explains the type of phenomena reported, mostly by motorists in the early hours of the morning. However, the page will eventually digress to another area, that being Razor Back. From an aerial point of view, the two areas of interest are within close proximity to one another. Once you read the web page, you’ll see an uncanny relationship forming between Barkers Lodge Road and the Razor Back region. If you are familiar with the area, you’ll know that Barkers Lodge Road begins from Burragorang Road, Oakdale. Even there, people have reported strange phenomena over the years.

Standing back in observation, it seems that this whole area is encompassed by a series of close encounters. Most reports claim that the strange lights in the sky originate from the west – conveniently from the Blue Mountains National Park.

Burragorang Road

In January 2006 at 12.30am ‘C’ was driving to work along the Burragorang road. He was heading towards traffic lights when he noticed a string of coloured lights that appeared to be hanging in the air.

He estimated their combined length to be approximately 15-metres. The lights displayed red, blue, green and purple. 'C' turned right onto Burragorang road and found himself moving underneath them. He looked into his rear vision mirror but could no longer see them anywhere.

He was on his way to work at that time hoping to arrive ten minutes early. He said that it was around 12:30am when he sat at the lights. When he turned and drove under the objects, he travelled on along Burragorang Road and eventually reached Mount Hunter. He said that the journey could have been done in five minutes. Just past Mount Hunter, he noticed two bright lights which he presumed to be a truck coming toward him. As the lights came closer, he became alarmed as the lights were on his side of the road. Metres before an inevitable head on collision, the lights parted and ascended vertically into the air. Immediately he pulled up, got out of the car and looked up – there was nothing there. He then drove off. Just before arriving to work two lights came up behind him, this time parting some twenty metres behind him. The lights ascended and again disappeared. Instead of stopping, 'C' accelerated away.

Accounting for a momentary stop on the road, 'C' should have arrived at work around 12:45am. He had lost little or no time on the road but ended up being late - he didn't arrive until 1:10am. His boss approached him and asked him a number of unusual questions:

"What were you doing sitting up on the side of the road?"

"You're late for work! I saw you sitting up there with your lights on for twenty minutes!"

'C' then replied:

"What are you talking about? I didn't sit around anywhere, in fact, if anything, I was gunning it for the last few minutes!"

'C' said he felt strange all morning, as though someone was watching him - shadows in his peripheral vision.

On the following morning of the 3rd of January, at around 3.00 - 3.30am, 'C' was standing at the back of his workplace when he saw 12 yellow lights hovering in mid air. He said they looked like a handful of yellow smarties thrown into the air. As he watched, it became obvious that these objects were making movements in a triangular form above the mountains.

The objects were bright – similar magnitude to Venus. On this occasion his employer came out and saw the same thing. They watched for around 10 minutes until work beckoned. Half an hour later, the objects were gone.

On the third night (4th January) around 1:30am, 'C' was just starting his shift when his employer called out: "Your UFO's back!" So 'C' and another employee went outside. All three witnessed a bright orange ball of light descending to the ground. He said it floated like a feather and appeared to land near the road. When they investigated the landing site, nothing could be found.

The three men claimed seeing shadows in the car park shortly after the encounter. Expecting to find kids playing around, no trace of anyone or anything could be found. The back door to the premises was left open. At one point, the three men were all in the back room near the rear door. Apparently they started hearing paper being torn to shreds. Then a wad of paper, shredded and bundled, was thrown in through the back door.

Despite the fact that the three witnesses were in the back room at the time, they could not see who threw it. There was no scurrying away, no sound at all but eerie silence.

Reported by Lorraine

The following report from Victoria was submitted to our paranormal division in March 2008. Apparently the event was classified as a Category 1, 2, 4, 5, 6 and 7 haunting.

I am writing to ask assistance or anything that we can afford, about the poltergeist/abnormal activities that have been happening in our home since 2006.

We have had these 'neighbours' that have taken a dislike to us.

These 'neighbours' have since moved to the next suburb, but we are still targeted in one particular area of our house; especially at night, when my teenage daughter is trying to sleep in her bedroom and in our hallway and bathroom/toilet area.

These occurrences started gradually in 2006, from noises, that we thought were either possums in the roof, or rats or something like that in the walls. Then we discovered the noises were playing tunes and copying us when we played tunes to them. It was quite unnerving. We have had three lots of professionals through the house, and also one that made quite large holes in the walls to check what was going on. One of these persons mentioned the activities to their friends and they were advised not to come back into the house. After the noises got worse and louder and louder, pictures started banging on the wall every night, louder and louder. Then noises in the roof. Then noises in the walls, especially where we were sleeping. Things started to fly around the kitchen and bathroom and bedrooms and lounge room. Our cupboards were flying open and cutlery and crockery was flying out of the cupboards. Our food was flying off our plates and benches.

Clocks were flying off the walls; TV was flying off the benches. The computer was going crazy and the TV wasn't working properly. Fires were started in the bathroom in a tissue box and one was started outside in the dogs cushion (rubber).

This went on until the neighbours moved to the next suburb, but then the noises started again - especially when my daughter has been very ill and in and out of hospital. At the moment she is on the mend, but we do not have the sense of security in our home.

Tunnel apparition

While visiting an old tunnel sometime in 2006, a small group of amateur investigators decided to take a series of random photos. After going through the images they took, an incredible addition to their presence emerged. The image was assessed using various filters (looking for additional layers). It is believed to be a genuine article.

An Introduction to Paranormal Investigations:

This course will provide participants with a basic to intermediate understanding of paranormal research. The course will cover a broad range of studies in the paranormal field and how to distinguish between natural phenomena and potentially paranormal phenomena. Participants will be shown several methods of approach and an opportunity will be available to conduct an investigation at a haunted location (limited numbers). Please note that the investigation is only available for those who complete the initial course.

The course will run for a full day on 30th August 2008, and the investigation will be conducted on the same night.
