Note from the Editor

2012 is going to be another exciting year for the Australian paranormal community. For starters we have Paracon Australia, our first paranormal conference happening on 24 - 25th March at Oran Park featuring David Wells, a well known UK Medium.

I am pleased to advise that SOuL Searchers will also be commencing a 12 week Parapsychology Certificate Course starting on the 7th March (see details on page 14).

Sadly, 2011 ended with some unprofessional behaviour by a few people on Facebook which I hope will not be repeated this year. Facebook is such a wonderful medium for meeting people and connecting to various groups who share a common interest. I have met so many lovely people lately who are happy to share their experiences.

Unfortunately you occasionally come across someone in the paranormal community who is not ethical in their dealings and have their own hidden agenda. Often their motives are counter productive to what the paranormal community as a whole is trying to achieve, but fortunately they are in the minority.

I guess in life you will meet all kinds of people. There are those you meet that have integrity and a high level of professionalism, and they are the ones that we should be giving our focus and encouragement to. Through the concept of supporting each other, the sense of 'all' grows stronger and stronger. Those that create chaos and division serve a purpose in that they give us the impetus to change what needs to be changed.

So if you come across some one that is vitriolic and unprofessional on Facebook don't take on their crap just unfriend or block them. Hopefully they will get the message eventually that their behaviour is unacceptable.

The Occult World of CG Jung

By Janine Donnellan

‘Your vision will become clear only when you look into your heart.....Who looks outside, dreams. Who looks inside awakens.’

I have always admired Carl Jung as a great psychologist and as an occultist. His life and work has held a great fascination to me.

Throughout the years of his long-standing professional career, Jung repeatedly showed great personal courage in his investigation of matters that no one else in the "respectable" psychiatric academia circles of his day would touch.

Jung considered himself, first and foremost, a doctor and healer of the psyche, so when Jung believed it necessary to explore a certain tabooed avenue in order to gain a better understanding of the psyche, then he just "went for it."

Carl Gustav Jung (1875-1961) was a famous and influential Swiss psychologist and psychiatrist, and founder of Analytical Psychology. His approach to human psychology emphasized understanding the psyche through exploring the world of dreams, art, the occult, mythology, world religion and philosophy. At the time of his death Jung left a huge body of work on such topics as spiritualism, extra-sensory perception, witchcraft, dreams, mandalas, coincidences, astrology, divination, yoga, flying saucers and even Zen Buddhism and the I Ching.

It is interesting to note that as a young boy, Jung found himself drawn to the occult. Unfortunately this interest became the basis of his traumatic break with Sigmund Freud which had a great affect on his life. Unlike Freud, Jung was interested in aspects of the unconscious that could not be attributed to an individual's personal development but derived from the deeper non-personal realms common to humankind – the collective unconscious, whose contents he called "archetypes".

Jung's interest with the occult was fostered as a young child by his maternal grandfather, Rev. Samuel Preiswerk, who believed in the paranormal, and had kept a chair in his study for the ghost of his deceased first wife, who was said often came to visit him. Jung's mother Emilie was also had an influence on his studies into the paranormal. Emilie was initially employed by her father to prevent the various spirits from disturbing him while he was preparing his sermons.

Emilie was a trance medium, a skill she developed herself in her late teens. Emilie continued to enter trance states throughout her life. The young Jung would often hear her speaking in a different voice which gave the impression she had a 'split personality'. Jung would later on experience his own 'split personality' experience at the age of 12. Jung referred to this personality as the 'Other,' which he believed was a person from the 18th century, who wore a white wig and buckled shoes, drove an impressive carriage, and held Jung in contempt. Jung believed that he had been this character in a past life.

When Jung was 21, his father died and soon after his father appeared in two dreams which changed his views on the possibility of life after death. During his life Jung experienced other dreams which he believed were premonitions, one of his mother's death and later on his sister Gertrude's death.

In 1900, the 25-year-old Jung joined the prestigious Burghölzli Mental Clinic in Zürich where he developed his theory of 'complexes', and initiated a successful 'patient-friendly' approach to working with psychotics and schizophrenics. It was at this juncture of his life that he developed a relationship with Sigmund Freud. Although Jung was a loyal supporter of Freud's work there were, times of dissension. One concerned Freud's attitude toward parapsychology. The story goes that Freud was sceptical and dismissed the subject as nonsense. Jung disagreed, he began to feel his diaphragm glow, as if it was becoming red-hot. A loud bang came from a bookcase. Both jumped up, and Jung said to Freud: "There, that is an example of a so-called catalytic exteriorisation phenomenon!", Jung's long-winded circumlocution for a poltergeist, or "noisy spirit". When Freud said "Bosh!", Jung predicted that another bang would immediately happen. It did. Jung said that, from that moment on, Freud grew mistrustful of him. From Freud's letter to Jung about the incident, one gets the feeling that he felt Jung himself was responsible for it.

In actuality Jung did seem to have numerous paranormal abilities. In one episode while in bed in a hotel room after giving a lecture, he experienced the suicide of a patient. The patient had relapsed into depression, and shot himself in the head. Jung awoke in his hotel, feeling an odd pain in his forehead. He later discovered that his patient had shot himself precisely where Jung felt the pain, at the same time Jung woke up.

In 1920 Carl Jung also had a close and personal encounter with a ghost which was reported in Fanny Moser's book Spuk (1950). Jung was spending a weekend at an English country house a friend had rented which had a history of being haunted. The climax of the haunting occurred when the head of a woman materialized on the pillow of Jung's bed close to his head. The ghostly head had one eye open, and it stared at the astonished psychoanalyst. Jung managed to light a candle, and the frightening spectre disappeared. He later learned from the villagers that all previous tenants of the country house had terminated their occupancy in short order after a night or two in the haunted house.

In a hospital in Switzerland in 1944, Jung had a heart attack and a near-death experience. His vivid encounter led Jung to conclude that his experience came from something real and eternal. In this experience Jung saw the Earth from a point of about a thousand miles above it. His accurate view of the Earth from outer space was described in detail two decades before astronauts in space first described it. Subsequently, as he reflected on life after death, Jung recalled the meditating Hindu from his near-death experience and read it as a parable of the archetypal Higher Self, the God-image within. Carl Jung, who founded analytical psychology, centred on the archetypes of the collective unconscious.

Unfortunately Jung's theories have received limited acceptance within mainstream psychology due to its complexity and inherent mysticism,

Unlike Freud and many other early theorists, Jung believed that life did not merely end in death: it came to a point of completion, before crossing over into another experience of expression and development via the death and release of the physical body. Carl Jung himself completed his life on 6 June 1961 after a number of dreams portending a transition to a tower bathed in light on the "other side of the lake."

Paranormal Phenomena

When things go bump in the night

"When all the evidence is presented, and all the false clues have been eliminated, the story that is left, no matter how incredible, must be the truth." - Sherlock Holmes

There is a high level of paranormal belief, in all societies around the world both geographically and historically. However we must ascertain that some events that we think are paranormal might be misinterpreted and conversely some events that we dismiss as coincidence might be actually paranormal.

SOuL Searchers gets approached on a regular basis regarding various types of paranormal activity, the investigation that ensues often reveals some interesting results. Some of the time the problem relates to geopathic stress, other times it can be difficult to give a definitive answer,

The following information highlights some of the phenomena that can be encountered during a paranormal investigation:

Cold Spots

Often cold spots can indicate the presence of a spirit form. Either the room becomes cold or a spot in one area of the room will suddenly become cold.

In an investigation one should check the condition of windows and doors to ensure the cold air is not a draft.

Rappings - Scratching – Knockings

One of the ways spirit can communicate is through sound. Often strange knockings are an indication that a spirit form is close at hand. Objects can also be dropped, moved or thrown.

Sometimes the rappings and scratching could indicate an animal presence. One of our clients mentioned spirit activity in a particular corner of a room, it turned out to be a slightly open window that was causing the blinds to hit against the window.

Power Drains and Equipment Malfunctions

When a spirit is drawing energy to become more visible they will often draw-in nearby energy; this energy can also come from batteries in video cameras, and other devices. Often cameras, tape recorders, even lights will suddenly go haywire or stop working all together when a spirit is present.

During one case a lamp that was flickering and dimming on its own was responding to the off peak water system coming on each night.

Physical Sensations

Physical encounters can sometimes occur such as the sensation of being touched, pinched, slapped, etc.

Sometimes in a paranormal situation fear can create a heightened sense of awareness and occasionally one's imagination can create a sense of being touched.

Smells

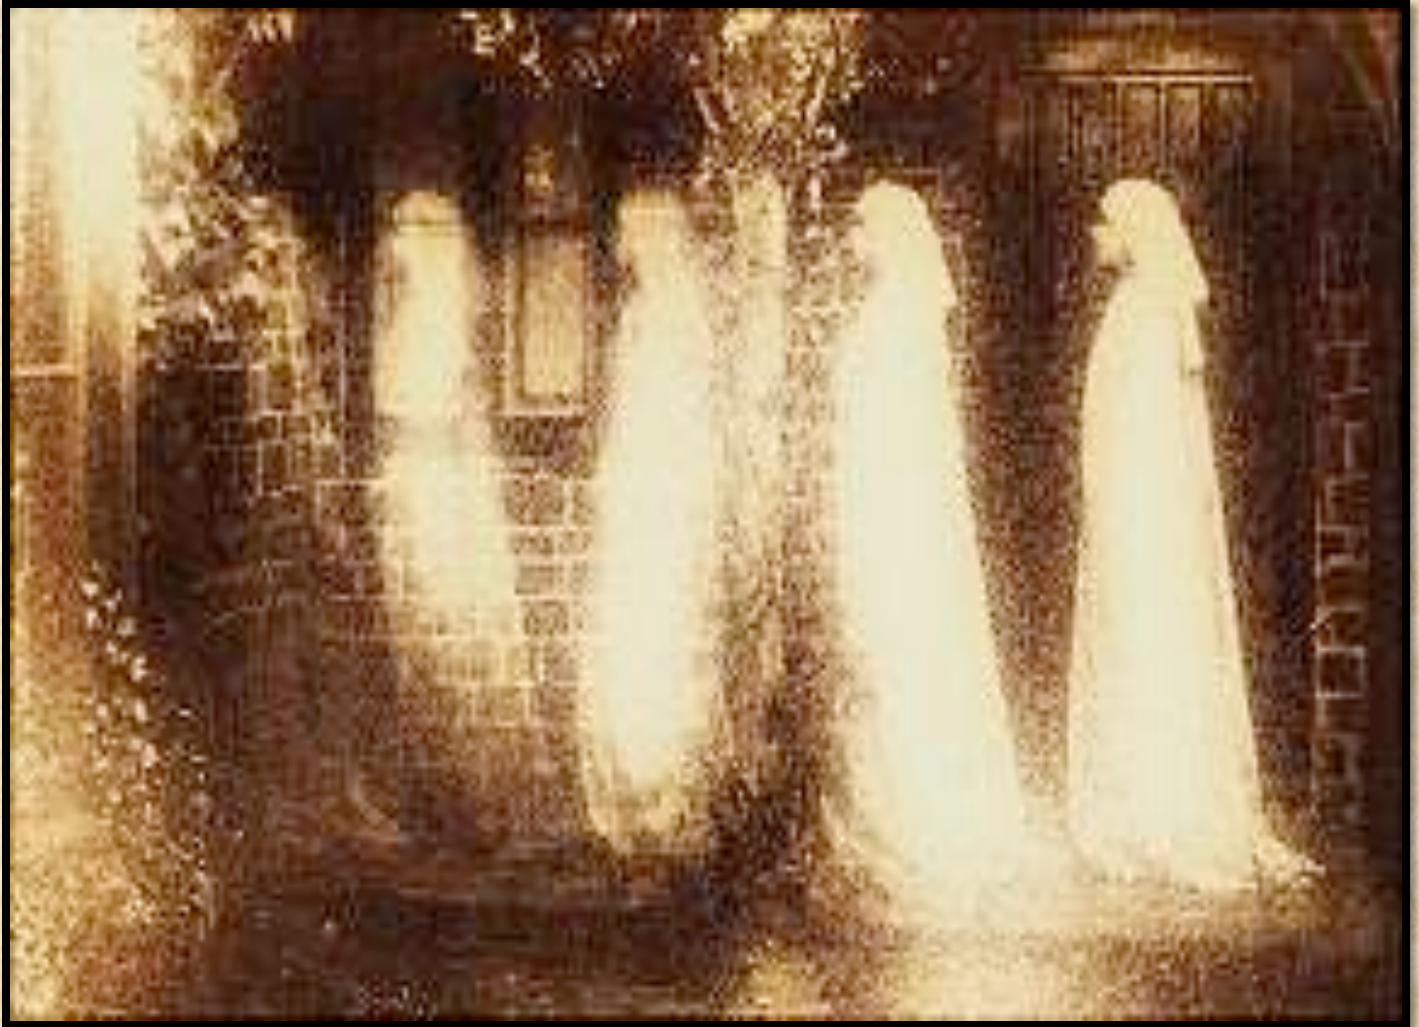

These smells can seem to come from nowhere, and develop instantly and disappear just as quickly. The smells can vary from sweet floral smells, tobacco to putrid rotten meat smells.

Mists and Other Masses

You may see other types of spirit manifestations in the form of strange shadows, black masses and wispy forms like smoke or the mist could be the breath in cold air or cigarette smoke.

The Stone Tape Theory

by Janine Donnellan

Back in the 1970s I watched a film called the Stone Tape which had a major impact on my concepts of paranormal activity. The Stone Tape is a television play directed by Peter Sasdy and starring Michael Bryant, Jane Asher, Michael Bates and Iain Cuthbertson. It was broadcast by the BBC.

Combining aspects of science fiction and horror, the story concerns a team of scientists who move into their new research facility, a renovated Victorian mansion that has a reputation for being haunted. Investigating, they learn that the haunting is a recording of a past event made by the stone in one of the rooms of the house - the "stone tape" of the play's title. Believing that this may be the key to the development of a new recording medium, they throw all their expertise and high-tech equipment into learning how the stone tape preserves its recording. However, during the process of their investigations, they try several experiments to eradicate the "haunted recording" only to reveal a darker, more malevolent layer.

Since its broadcast, the hypothesis that some ghost's sightings are actual recordings of past events which have been absorbed by the natural environment has come to be known as the "Stone Tape Theory". Essentially the theory is based on the suggestion that buildings and materials are able to absorb and store an impression of living beings who are experiencing a highly emotional and traumatic event which then gets projected back into the environment under certain conditions and or triggers. Current paranormal investigators generally refer to this paranormal energy as Residual Energy or Residual Haunting. The idea of past events being recorded is far from new however, Sir

William Barrett, Physicist and founding member of the Society for Psychical Research suggested in the late 19th Century; "In certain cases of hauntings and apparitions, some kind of local imprint, on material structures or places, has been left by some past events occurring to certain persons, who when on Earth, lived or were closely connected with that particular locality; an echo or phantom of these events becoming perceptible to those now living."

Researchers speculate that the paranormal recording can be captured during times of high emotional and traumatic stress such as murder, grief or an important scene in someone's life. This energy can be stored for an unspecified amount of time in the surrounding building materials or the environment and then the replay is triggered by a number of variant factors such as the anniversary of the event, particular weather conditions, or the phase of the moon etc. Witnesses of this paranormal replay may experience these events differently and according to their own level of psychic ability, stress or emotional levels or even brainwaves. The replay can take a multitude of forms including full manifestations, sounds such as voices or footsteps, smells and feelings. These experiences can be repeated like an ongoing loop.

The images that are seen in this type of event may walk through walls or even appear to be several feet above or below ground level such as the famous case that took place in York in 1953 when a farmer in England witnessed a legion of Roman soldiers marching through the cellar that he was working on at the time.

On 20th January 2007 some members of SOuL Searchers attended a ghost tour at the Redbank Range Tunnel (Mushroom Tunnel) in Picton, NSW. This tunnel was built in the 1860s to take the railway from Picton to Mittagong. When a new line was built it was left idle until the 2nd world war when it was used to store ammunition. After the war ended it was used to grow mushrooms, hence its nickname 'The Mushroom Tunnel' In 1916 a middle aged woman named Emily Bollard took a shortcut through the tunnel; unfortunately for Emily, halfway through the tunnel she was killed instantly and her body carried on the front of the train into Picton. In the years that followed, there had been many sightings of a ghostly apparition walking through the tunnel.

The tunnel is considered to be one of the most haunted places in Australia. Our investigation team had experienced some pretty scary happenings during our visit and had seen some spectacular light anomalies and orbs with the naked eye. A perfect example of the Stone Tape theory, was also witnessed during the night, a white ghostly figure assumedly of Emily was seen repeatedly walking up to the halfway point of the tunnel.

Although skeptics maintain that there is a major problem with the Stone tape theory and believe that there is no satisfactory explanation as to how or why such a recording could take place. A large proportion of traditional centuries-old hauntings can fall under the banner of residual: the lady in grey who 'still is seen walking the path', the headless horseman that appears at midnight or the apparition that appears on the anniversary of its death. The concept of 'stone tape theory' is a neat way of explaining these phenomena. For many such individuals the theory is a valid one; if one has a belief that there is a connection between psychic events that becomes embedded in the environment then stone tape theory is a natural progression and requires no scientific justification.

Borley Rectory - The most Haunted house in England

By Steve Millard

Built in 1863 near the river Stour in Essex by the Rev Henry Bull for his wife and 14 children Borley Rectory claimed the title of England's most haunted house.

The site goes back hundreds of years and is listed as a monastery in the doomsday book of 1066. At the site of the long gone monastery the house was built over long since disused tunnels and chambers. Much of the alleged paranormal activity centres around this time and early claims are of monks and nuns being seen. The picture opposite is of one of the tunnels under Borley rectory being explored by an investigator.

Henry Bull died in 1892 in a room they called the blue room. Later occupants will claim to have heard and seen Henry on many occasions in this area. The family remained in the house following his death and in 1900 three of his daughters saw a nun in the garden. A fourth daughter left the house to greet the nun and was startled when it disappeared as she approached. Below is a picture taken near the house of an alleged monk.

After this time a nun was regularly seen watching through the windows of the rectory until the family moved out in 1927. The house remained empty until 1928 when the Rev Smith moved in.

From the moment he moved in poltergeist activity was observed including voices and footsteps believed to be that of the previous owner Henry Bull.

In 1929 the renowned paranormal investigator Henry "Harry" Price paid his first visit to the site and began his investigations. As he was a known figure at that time the press was hot on his heels and soon the newspaper articles and publicity forced Rev Smith and his family to concede defeat and move out.

In 1930 the Foyster family moved in and so began what was to be the most active and notorious time in the Rectory's history. Most of the activity was centred around Marieanne, one of the ladies of the house and was mostly poltergeist in nature. This included alleged biting and unexplained markings on the walls.

Between 1930 and 1935 Harry Price recorded over 2000 instances of paranormal activity and once the Foysters had been driven from the property by a mixture of bad publicity and unexplained happenings the house again lay empty until 1937 when Harry Price was in a financial position to lease the Rectory for his own purposes.

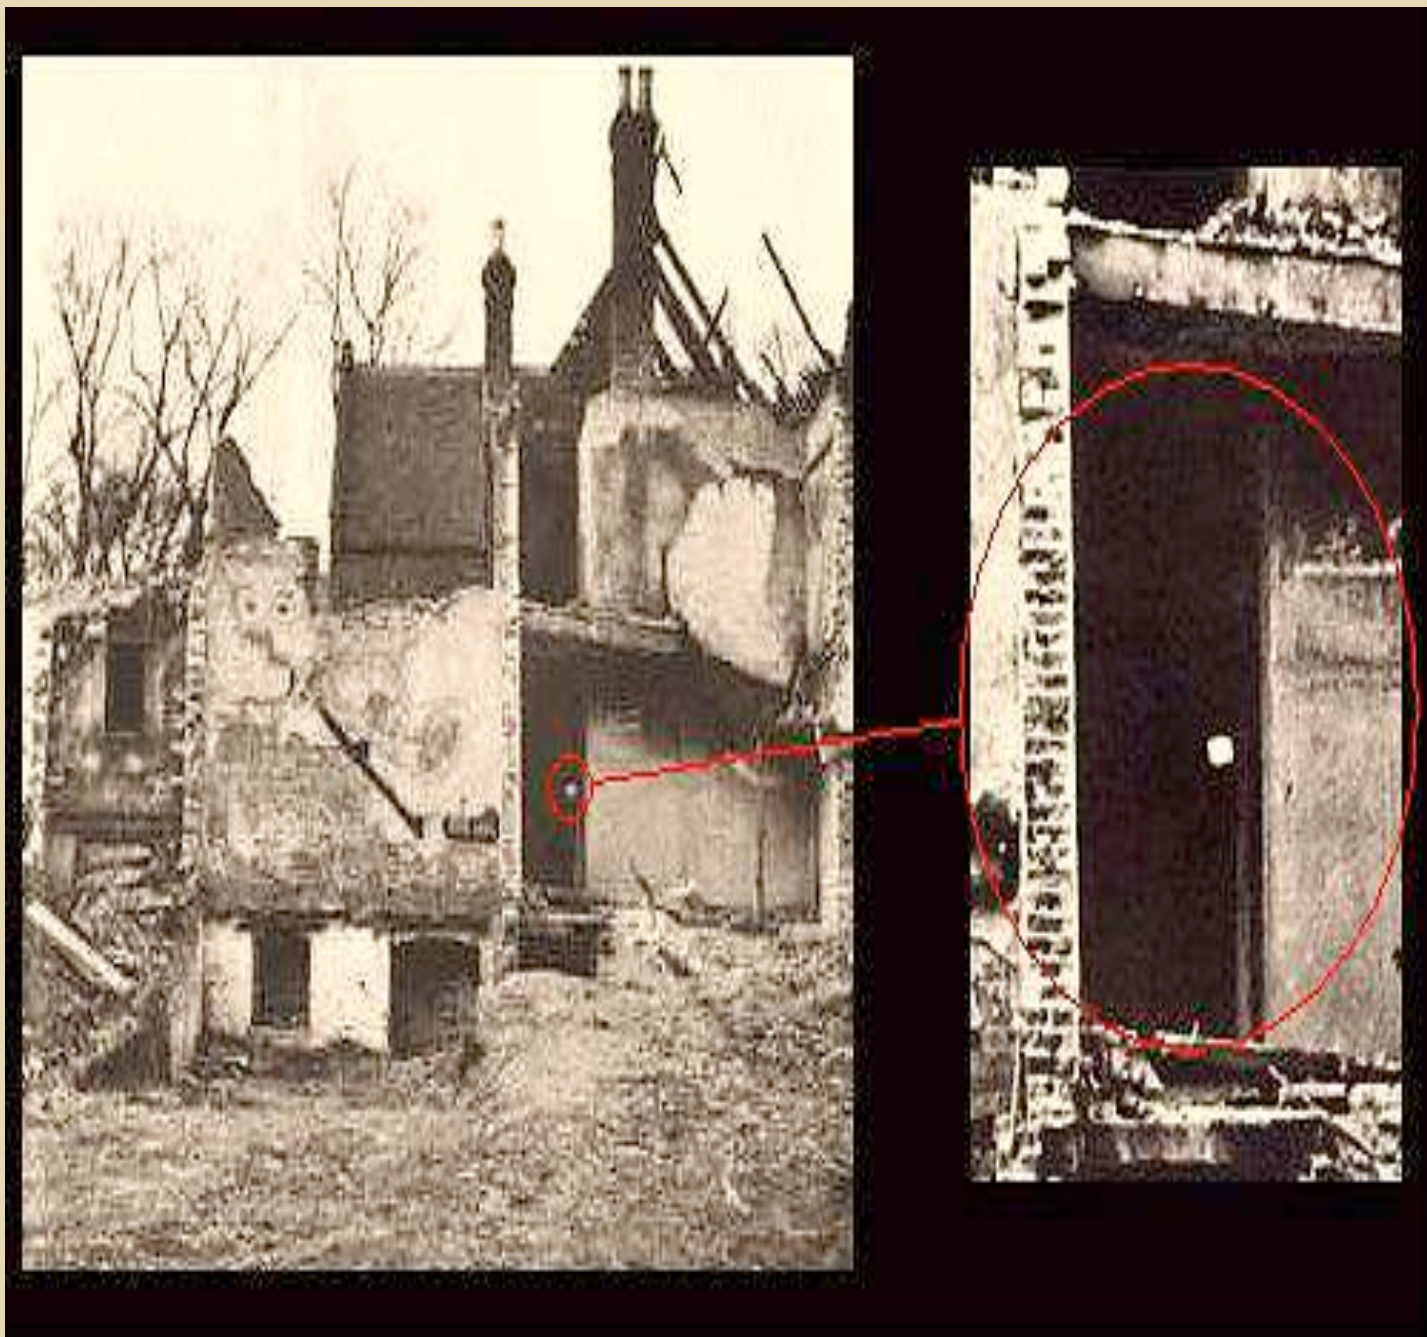

In 1939 the house was burnt down in mysterious circumstances and figures were seen standing in the flames near windows. In an interesting picture taken shortly after the fire what appears to be a figure is seen in the upstairs centre window. It should be noted that there were no floors remaining on upstairs levels.

Borley Rectory was demolished in 1944 and even during this time the paranormal activity appeared to continue. Workmen on the site reported masonry and stones moving on their own and one picture survives to tell this story although it is hotly debated and shows a brick apparently caught in mid air (see below).

Over the years this case has received much attention. The critics say the house and its alleged activity is nothing more than an elaborate fake helped on its way by publicity and Harry Price's search for fame. Others say that the activity is part of the rich heritage and history that has occupied that spot on the land for over a thousand years. There are many books written on Borley Rectory both for and against the haunting allegations. I have my own opinion but that is not for this article. I leave it to you to come to your own conclusions.

SOuL Searchers is pleased to announce the commencement of a Parapsychology Certificate Course starting Wednesday 7th March 2012.

Parapsychology is the scientific study of paranormal phenomena. The paranormal refers to exceptional human experiences that do not seem to be explainable in terms of our everyday understanding or known scientific principles. Some of the topics covered include history and philosophy of parapsychology, paranormal investigations, the nature of ghosts, spirits, hauntings and other paranormal phenomena, the role of technical equipment in investigations, geopathic stress, dowsing, vortices and portals, extrasensory perception and psychokinetics, clairvoyance and other psychic senses.

The Duke Hotel Investigation

By Janine Donnellan

History

- Compiled by Jenny Taylor

The Duke of Edinburgh Hotel, situated in the heart of the historic Sydney suburb of Enmore, has been serving patrons since 1876(1) or 1880, with John H. Smith as the first publican.(2)

There were three John Smiths in the Newtown area in the 1880s but Alderman

John Henry Smith (Alderman February 1880 - November 1882) is assumed to be the hotelier John H. Smith. A publican named Smith wrote to Council in 1866 requesting that his horse trough remain in its present position of the Newtown Road near White Horse Road. It seems most of the hotels of the day had their own trough and hitching rail(3) and stables.

John H. Smith operated the 'Somerset' Hotel in the early 1870s at the intersection of Crescent and Station Streets. By the late 1870s he was running the 'Duke of Edinburgh' Hotel on the corner of Enmore Road and Simmons Street.(3)

History of Enmore Road & Simmons Street

Enmore Road was an Aboriginal walking track and was known as Josephson's Track in the 1850s. Enmore Ward was created in 1862; the name is taken from the estate owned by Captain Sylvester Brown from 1835 and the Josephsons from 1838 to 1883. Enmore is the name of a small millennium-old town in Somerset near Cornwall; Brown took the name of his employer's estate in British Guiana or Barbados in the West Indies.(4)

Simmons Street in Enmore was formed by 1841 and named for Isaac or James Simmons who auctioned the land west of here. James Simmons was an auctioneer/landowner on the Provisional Committee of the Sydney Railway Company, which planned Australia's first railway in the late 1840s between Sydney and Parramatta.(5)

Recent History

The Duke hotel has been run as a family business for the last 14 years, with the current proprietors "taking pride in having created one of the friendliest pub atmospheres in all of Sydney...your time at the Duke will be always be memorable."(1)

The Investigation

This is one of those investigations where everybody experienced the unexpected. It was an investigation organised by a third party and the full scope of the investigation wasn't forthcoming until we actually arrived at the hotel. This is a good example of why one should personally contact the owner of the establishment to get the actual extent of the investigation.

As it turned out the investigation wasn't in the hotel but in the back of the property in a loft above the old stables, which could only be accessed by a ladder. The staff going up into the loft had complained that they had experienced some strange paranormal activity, one staff had resigned because of it.

The Courtyard in front of the Stables where the sound of horse hooves were heard.

The ground floor of the stables had been converted into a kitchen and the loft had become a storage area for the kitchen supplies. With the members of the SOuL Searchers team and a couple of journalists from the Telegraph in toe we proceeded to climb the ladder which was an OH&S nightmare as the metal ladder was a bit greasy from all the cooking in the kitchen. I was also in a state of high anxiety as I suffer from vertigo and the thought of climbing a ladder and even worse coming down the ladder added to the potential dangers of the investigation.

When we eventually got into the loft we discovered it was crammed up to the ceiling with boxes and junk, and the place had electrical cabling all over the place which as you can guess was not the best conditions for an investigation. The cables also gave off extremely high emf readings and getting any clear audio was near impossible as there was a constantly loud electrical hum.

We did get a couple of orbs in a couple of photos which could be paranormal but more probably dust particles.

From a psychic perspective it was agreed there was a male presence there but nothing could be substantiated. One of the interesting outcomes for the night was the emf sensor reacting to questions we were asking the entity. One of our team members also managed to record the sound of horse hooves on the courtyard outside.

Once we had finished the investigation we had to climb down the ladder with all the equipment and that in it self was another epic journey as the going down was far worse than the going up.

Orbs captured on photos (Is that a cat sitting on top of the ladder in photo1?)

A Ghost's Story ~ Part 1

It is hard for me to remember how I came to be here at this time. Somehow it seems that I have lived this moment for an eternity. All I know for sure is that I must wait, here at this window, for my family to return.

I try not to think too much of why I wait here. Whenever I do, the strangest things occur. I have these little flashes of images, yet I do not understand what they are and why I see them. And they unsettle me, these flashes. So I prefer to stay in the moment, sure of the one thing I know and understand; that my family will be home any time now.

I had a day where I decided to concentrate on those flashes to see if I could understand what they meant exactly. So I settled myself in my rocking chair by the window, and thought. I closed my eyes, and allowed my mind to drift. I could see my house around me...but somehow it looked different. I couldn't pinpoint how, but it did. I saw a calendar with the year 1886 on the very top. I heard children's laughter as I turned to them to smile....my children, how I loved them. There they were, all three of them, playing happily with their father with not a care in the world. I felt my heart swell with the power and love in these memories....but for some reason I was afraid to let the memories continue. My heart began to pound and I pondered whether I would delve further into my past. All I knew is that I had to make sense of my life, so I steeled myself and allowed my memories to surface.

They played out almost like a slide show. The children, playing happily; me waving goodbye to them and kissing their father as they set off from our house; waiting, waiting, waiting for them to return; standing at the window, this very window, worrying; and then the flashes became more intense and faster.

The stranger riding down my driveway; opening the door to hear his news and screaming in pain; my heart breaking; pills in a bottle; sobbing, heartache, no reason for living; falling asleep; bright light....and then I am here. Again; what happened to me?

And then the most unsettling of things; when did I last sleep? Eat? Bathe? Why couldn't I remember doing these simple, everyday things? I would gaze around my beloved home, and a thought would creep sneakily in; why was it so dirty and falling apart? When had I last maintained it...and why wasn't I continuing to do so? All I knew is that the answers to those questions would damn me...but set me free at the same time.

One day – which day it was I have no clue – I was standing at my window, waiting as I always did, when the strangest thing happened. These black, rolling vessels arrived and stopped right in front of my house. There was a creepy looking painting down the side, with some kind of words; from here, all I could read was “paranormal”. What did that mean? What were these things? Why was I so afraid....yet hopeful at the same time? I watched as the sides of these vessels opened up...and people got out. Strange people, people I did not know...and they were all dressed in black. I was even more afraid; black was the colour of mourning as far as I was concerned. I shrank back into the shadows as far as I could, so very afraid, but unable to take my eyes from them.

The next thing I knew they were in my house. My house! They walked through every room, discussing things between themselves and speaking into these strange looking devices. I couldn't believe they were doing this; couldn't they see this was my home? Did they just walk in unannounced into other people's homes too? Why they here and what were they carrying? I was scared; these people walked in like they owned the place....and was that my name I just heard? Surely not....I don't know them. But wait, here it was again; “Elizabeth? Are you here Elizabeth?” Wait...they were calling to me! But this can't be right....they don't know me, and I don't know them. I stayed very, very still to hear what they were saying.

“Elizabeth! I am a paranormal investigator. We are here to get proof of your existence. I and my crew will be back here tonight to find you, so you better be ready for us!”

Hang on.....what? Did I hear this correctly? These people were something called paranormal investigators, and they were coming back to get “proof of my existence?” But....why? Who were they, and what did it matter to them that I was here at all? And then....a glimmer of hope; just a glimmer. Maybe they could help me, I thought. Help me with what, a voice in my head questioned? Another voice, deeper down inside me, just whispered “maybe they can help me”. I went back to my window to watch these people in black return to their vessels and move away. They would be back tonight.....and I was very curious to see what would happen then.

Before I knew it they were back. These horrible black vessels returned, and the people from before all swarmed toward my house. They seemed to be carrying arm loads of things, things that I had no idea of what they were. All I knew is they looked scary. Maybe they could hurt me, so now I was even more afraid. I tried to duck as far back into the shadows as I could, and I was becoming more and more anxious; for not only were these strangers taking over my house, but I was unable to stand at my window to watch for my family. This feeling filled me with more anxiety than I had ever known. All I could do was hope that all of this would be over soon.

Sometime later – time was something that I couldn't quite grasp any more – these people started to call to me again. I peeked around the corner at them, and listened; “Elizabeth! We are back to find you. We need you to show us that you are here. Come and touch the K2 meter.”

Huh? What exactly was a “K2 meter”? Why would I touch it, not knowing what it will do to me? It looks so scary, like a torture device....no, I couldn't. I could not touch it. What if something happened and I was not here to greet my family when they returned? And what were all the other things? There were these boxes that seemed to have their own lights....so many boxes with lights, all of varying sizes. What the hell were these things? I had never seen anything like it....so I stayed away. My fear increased as these people became more aggressive.

“Elizabeth! We know you are here. People have seen you standing in the window. I need you to make a sound, or move something, to prove to us that you are here!”

Now I was really confused. Why did I have to prove to these strangers that I was here? I kept to myself, and had my own issues to deal with like anyone else....I found myself becoming quite angry with the arrogance of these strangers. Here they were, coming into my house with all of their strange equipment, and they are demanding that I show myself and prove that I am here? This was becoming very annoying.

“Elizabeth! I heard that you like to sit in this chair and rock. Come and sit here now and move this chair!” The person making these demands then placed their grimy hands on my chair. My beloved chair! My husband made that chair for me when I was expecting our first child. And now here was this stranger with their dirty hands all over and it was driving me crazy! I had to protect my chair. So, even though I did not want to, I walked over to my chair and sat down. And almost immediately I wished I hadn't.

“Oh my god, look at the reading on the EMF! It's spiking.....it's going off the charts!”

“Wow, do you feel that cold spot? It's really freezing around this chair!” “Are you serious? I just asked for her to sit in the chair....get the thermal imager, now!” “Did you feel that? Oh my god, I have goose bumps.....make sure the DVR is recording!”

And on it went, with me understanding nothing of what they were talking about. As I sat in my chair as they had asked me to. This was making no sense. They called me over and asked me to sit in my chair...and now they are getting all excited as these lights flashed and the boxes made beeping sounds. More people streamed into the room, with more weird looking equipment. They all talked excitedly amongst themselves as they prepared their extra gear....while I sat in my chair....waiting. God, would there ever be enough waiting?

Within a few minutes they had sorted themselves out. With a multitude of people and strange devices surrounding me in my chair, the demands began once again. “Elizabeth! We felt you here! Are you in this chair? Move the chair for us.....come on; rock the chair back and forth to prove that you are here.”

I sighed. These people were really starting to annoy me. But maybe, just maybe, if I did what they asked.....maybe then they would help me? Fine; I'd move the damn chair.....wait, why can't I move it? I'm trying to rock as I always have.....but nothing is happening. It's almost as if I had no muscles to move at all. I scratched my head.....why wasn't the chair moving?

Now my concentration had switched from these annoying “investigators”, who seemed to be going on and on about getting proof, or evidence, for themselves....to this chair. Why couldn't I move it? So many memories flooded back at that instant; receiving the chair from my husband; sitting in the chair with my hands rubbing my pregnant belly; rocking my three babies to sleep. I never had a problem moving this chair before....so why couldn't I now?

For some reason I felt like it was connected to those weird flashes I had experienced...and it made me uncomfortable. I said to myself "Lizbeth! Concentrate on rocking the chair!" So I did; I focussed all of my energy, and strained....and the chair moved. Just a little, but it moved. I was elated as I turned to the strangers....but they were long gone. When did they leave? Oh, I could hear them downstairs....but why didn't they wait here? How long did it take me to summon the energy to move the chair? This was the moment that I began to feel frustration. Why did these people have to come here and ruin everything? Why would they stand there and demand that I move the chair...but walk off before I could? I could feel the dark emotions swirling just beneath the surface. I was getting angry.

From downstairs I could hear them, still demanding that I make my presence known. Now I was not only angry, but determined. Fine, these people want to come in to my house and meet me? I would summon every emotion and every ounce of energy I could to give them what they wanted. Descending the stairs, I found them in the sitting room.

"Come on Elizabeth! We're getting tired of being here. It looks like you're playing with us. Show us now that you are here! Move something! Touch one of us! Make a noise! Do it now!" Ok...it was time for me to try and give them what they wanted. I concentrated my energy on the main one, the one who was asking most of the questions. Standing behind him, I took a moment to gather as much energy as I could....and I reached out to touch his shoulder.

He jumped a mile. "Whoa....was that you?" (Was he speaking to me?) "Did you just try to push me over?" (No, I tried to touch you....as you asked!) Another voice chimed in; "Why are you trying to hurt my friend?" (I wasn't.....I tried to touch him as he asked!) "Well, if you're going to become violent with us....." (Wait....I wasn't violent! I only tried to touch him!) The whole mood of the room changed....and I realised these people now felt threatened by me. This was becoming ridiculous. All I could think was "they came into my house...they asked me to touch them.....now they're angry! Why did they ever come here....?"

After the "touchee" recovered from what he said was "an attack", he turned to speak. "Hmmmm.....so this is the way it's going to be huh? You're going to play with us.....hey; it's not our fault that you're dead. Don't blame us because you took the easy way out and killed yourself. What was it, a bottle of pills, right? Just because your family died....you couldn't handle the thought of being all alone, so you took the cowards way and committed suicide....."

My eyes bulged and I hyperventilated; I began to shake. Dead? Me? My family? No, that can't be right.....so why did I feel that it was? Those flashes...they began to make sense now. Oh my god.....I couldn't believe it.....but it's true. I can feel it. I'm dead.

I collapsed onto the floor and began to sob. In the background I could hear those annoying people saying; "Did you hear that? It sounded like a cry! Keep going....get another recorder for EVP's..." I ignored them as I finally allowed myself to remember.....oh god....now I remember.

It was November 15th 1886. I wanted to make an apple pie that day. Hearing my family in the parlour, playing happily, I went to ask my husband if he could go to the neighbour's orchard to bring me back some apples. The kids shouted happily that they would go with dad to help pick the best apples. I smiled, wiped my floury hands on my apron, and waved them goodbye and they trotted down the driveway and toward town in our horse and cart. I went back to my kitchen to prepare the pastry for the pie. It was when I noticed the sunlight changing that I began to worry; they should have been back by now. I walked upstairs to my favourite window; you could see for miles in either direction from here. I gazed back and forth, but there was no sign of them. I sat in my rocking chair and anxiously awaited their return. Hours later, a stranger arrived on horseback. I hurried downstairs...and found it was not a stranger at all, but the local sheriff. He looked ashen as he took me by the hand and said "I'm so sorry Elizabeth....there has been an accident. The horse was startled, and took off.....carriage hit something and tipped over....everyone gone.....so sorry....." By this time his voice had faded as my screams began. No, it could not be possible. My whole family, gone? "Noooooooo!" I sobbed, as I ran from him back upstairs to my window. I heaved myself into my rocking chair, screaming and crying all at once. My heart felt as if it was tearing into pieces with the pain. And then...I remembered....the pills. Some time ago the Dr had prescribed me some pills for sleeping...yes, that's what I needed....sleep; eternal sleep, to be with my family. I went to my bathroom and found the pills; went back to my window, sat in my chair.....took a handful, swallowed. Took another handful....swallowed. Emptied the bottle...swallowed. Sighed. It would all be over soon. Tears still streaming down my face. Felt sleepy. Closed my eyes. Drifted out of my body. Saw a light, a beautiful white light....wanted to go. But....confused....what about my family? They knew I was here.....I should wait here for them.....don't want them to get lost.....light faded away.....and now I'm back at the window again.

Coming out of the memories, I was shocked. I had finally realised it....I was dead. What do I do now? Where was my family? If they died too, shouldn't they be here with me? Wait....the light. Did they go into the light? Were they waiting for me on the other side of that light? I knew...somehow I knew that was right. That's what had happened; they had walked into the light together....and now I was stuck. I looked around desperately, hoping to catch a glimpse of it...but nothing. No light....no way out.

It suddenly occurred to me; the strangers. They seemed to know I was going to be here....they knew my name! They must know about the light!!! I was excited; they could help me, I thought. That's why they are here, and needed proof; they wanted to help me find the light! I was elated.....now, where were they? Ah yes....I can hear them...they are in my bedroom. Still asking questions. Now filled with anticipation, I rushed into the room to them.

"Oh my god, did you feel that? It was a massive cold breeze coming in the door" and on they went. I began to shout to them as loud as I could; "I'm here!! Help me!!!!" They looked around, then behind, asking "Did you hear that? Was that you? Do it again...." I was exhausted. It had depleted my energy just by shouting. Drawing as much energy as I could from the environment, I screamed again; "Help me!!!!" This time, they didn't hear me. But surely....they heard me the first time. They had felt me enter the room. They knew I was here. With that realisation I was relieved. It was only a matter of time now before the light appeared. They would know how to bring the light back....they were experts in the field, by the looks. I was excited....I was going to see my family again!

And then this; "Ok guys, let's pack it up...." What? Oh, ok, they're finished with their proof....now the light. Here it comes. Any minute now.....I can't wait. "We all done? Everything packed up and back in the cars? Great job guys....hopefully some of what we experienced will show up as evidence. It's been a long night.....let's go."

No. This couldn't be. They weren't just going to leave me....were they? What about the light? What about helping me? I tried to scream at them, following them to the front door; "Wait! The light, what about the light? How do I get out of here? Help me....please!"

Tears streamed down my face as I begged for their assistance. They didn't seem to hear me; they were patting themselves on the back and talking about "evidence review". Surely this wasn't it? Surely they weren't just going to leave me here? They knew I was here! They're not going to just walk away.....

And then...I'm back at the window. Tears flooding my eyes as I watch them climb back into their black vessels and move off. I hoped they'd be back...or someone else would come. Someone who knew how to help me find the light again; someone with a heart, not just an agenda, I pressed my hands to the glass.....crying...waiting...watching. Hoping.

Book Review

The Red Book

Author: Carl Jung

Editor: Sonu Shamdasani

ISBN: 9780393065671

Format: Hardcover

Published: 27th October 2009

"The years, of which I have spoken to you, when I pursued the inner images, were the most important time of my life. Everything else is to be derived from this. It began at that time, and the later details hardly matter anymore. My entire life consisted in elaborating what had burst forth from the unconscious and flooded me like an enigmatic stream and threatened to break me. That was the stuff and material for more than only one life. Everything later was merely the outer classification, the scientific elaboration, and the integration into life. But the numinous beginning, which contained everything, was then."

These are the words of the psychologist C. G. Jung in 1957, referring to the decades he worked on The Red Book from 1914 to 1930.

Although its existence has been known for more than eighty years, The Red Book was never published or made available to the wide audience of Jung's students and followers.

Nothing less than the central book of Jung's oeuvre, it is being published now in a full facsimile edition with a contextual essay and notes by the noted Jung scholar Sonu Shamdasani and translated by Mark Kyburz, John Peck, and Sonu Shamdasani. It will now be possible to study Jung's self-experimentation through primary documentation rather than fantasy, gossip, and speculation, and to grasp the genesis of his later work.

For nearly a century, such a reading has simply not been possible, and the vast literature on his life and work has lacked access to the single most important document.

This publication opens the possibility of a new era in understanding Jung's work. It provides a unique window into how he recovered his soul and constituted a psychology. It is possibly the most influential hitherto unpublished work in the history of psychology.

This exact facsimile of The Red Book reveals not only an extraordinary mind at work but also the hand of a gifted artist and calligrapher.

Interspersed among more than two hundred lovely illuminated pages are paintings whose influences range from Europe, the Middle East, and the Far East to the native art of the new world.

The Red Book, much like the handcrafted "Books of Hours" from the Middle Ages, is unique. Both in terms of its place in Jung's development and as a work of art, its publication is a landmark.

Haunted Fremantle Gaol

In the year 2000 while visiting one of my company's offices in Fremantle I was invited to a Christmas party which was being held at Fremantle Gaol. I had no idea that there would be a night time tour as part of the Christmas celebration.

Dressed in cocktail dress, high heel shoes and carry a glass of champagne, I joined the tour not realising that the tour was going to be in the dark. Had I known I would have worn appropriate shoes and had waited to drink alcohol until after the tour.

It wasn't long before I started to feel the presence of spirit and I immediately put up my protective barriers. As I passed each cell I could hear soft whispers of active spirits and of times past. When I arrived at the room where the hangings were conducted we were advised that 44 people were executed there.. As I listened intently to the tour guide I felt a solid hand on my shoulder, I turned expecting to see a work colleague but there was no one there.

No doubt there are many stories of ghostly experiences happening at this prison, some are just recorded memories of traumatic events and some are active hauntings from distressed souls that have endured insufferable conditions, executed inmates and those that were classed as insane.

History

Fremantle Prison is a former Australian prison located in The Terrace, Fremantle, in Western Australia. The 6-hectare site includes the prison, gatehouse, perimeter walls, cottages, tunnels, and prisoner art. The prison was one of 11 former convict sites in Australia inscribed on the World Heritage List in 2010 as the Australian Convict Sites.

The prison was built by convict labour in the 1850s, and transferred to the colonial government in 1886 for use as a gaol for locally-sentenced prisoners. It closed as a prison in 1991 and reopened as a historic site. It is now a public museum, managed by the Government of Western Australia with daily and nightly tours being operated.

Validate

Validate is an independent investigative body seeking key elements that may provide evidential support to certain paranormal related theories such as hauntings, alleged foreign intervention i.e. UFO phenomena and cryptozoology.

In order to authenticate claims, Validate will endeavour to gather bona fide data without relying on calculations or any conclusions drawn by other groups or organisations. This clean slate approach enables Validate to conduct its own studies without influence. All obtained information (raw data) can therefore be thoroughly scrutinised at Validate's best capacity.

In essence, Validate deals with highly controversial areas that are considered as fringe science. Here, even the most qualified scientists who have invested time and risked their academic careers to pursue phenomena research, find it extremely difficult to understand and draw solid conclusions. Validate acknowledges these difficulties through experience. Although Validate operates on strict guidelines, it appreciates the fact that certain events are beyond our academic textbooks. In other words, Validate will not be dissuaded no matter how extraordinary the claim may be. Validate is also dedicated to assisting and coaching groups within the field with the aim of bringing unity to the paranormal (including Ufology) community.

Colonial Paranormal Investigations Australia

Colonial Paranormal is Victorian based and was born out of our interest in the Paranormal, and wanting to know about things that go bump in the night! We got started on investigations in 2009 after going to the Point Cook Homestead. We have so far done investigations at Old Melbourne Gaol, Old Geelong Gaol, Point Cook Homestead and J Ward with other groups and are now trying to strike out on our own. We'd love to find more like minded people who want to go on private investigations in Melbourne and around Victoria. We're not a tour group, nor are we out to make a profit or stand on the toes of existing groups. We'd just like to do our own thing. We have all our own gear and all we need is people keen to join us on investigations. By creating Colonial Paranormal we'd like to share the costs involved with getting into places. Most places charge a fee to get into, if we can split that with 10 people it's way cheaper than a tour. You can email us at melissa@colonialparanormal.com or visit the website <http://www.colonialparanormal.com/> or you can find us on Facebook "Colonial Paranormal".

Come and hang back after your tour with guides, some of who have also been in or are still in the paranormal research field. Let them tell you of their own experiences as well as reported experiences of others. Listen to stories of strange shadows and unusual photographs taken by the public. Hear about some of the characters that once resided in these very buildings before their death and before the buildings were transported to the township plank by plank. Once the two hour tour finishes, get to experience for yourself just what it is like to sit quietly in reportedly active areas of the township for an hour or two. Over 110 buildings to choose from! Listen to how a gentleman who had slipped into the solitary cell to take photos, whilst the guide told the stories, bolted out seconds later when he heard a voice whisper "get out!" behind him. Once the 90mins tour finishes, get to experience for yourself just what it is like to sit quietly in reportedly active areas of the Adelaide Gaol. SPACE CLEARING CONSULTATION

Sometimes your house or office can feel uncomfortable, and there is no real reason to explain your uneasy feeling. Other times, it's easy: someone has been there that was negative, ill or died. There may be instances when you moved into a space and just felt like someone else was there, or the space just didn't feel right.

Janine Donnellan from Spheres Of Light & SOuL Searchers can conduct a private space clearing in your home or business. Janine will clear negative or stagnant energetic 'imprints' built up over the years from the accumulation of day to day living and from previous occupants, replacing them with Love, Abundance, Prosperity, Good Health & Happiness.

The space clearing consultation takes between 1 – 2 hours and costs $80 plus travelling costs if outside the Sutherland shire.
