Editor's Note

How important is observation in paranormal investigations?

According to the dictionary observation can be defined as the visual study of something or someone in order to gain information or learn about behaviour, trends, or changes. This then allows us to make informed decisions, adjustments, and allowances based on what has been studied. Observation is a basic but important aspect of learning from and interacting with our environment.

I have often wondered how important is the process of observation in paranormal investigations these days? When I started conducting paranormal investigations and house clearings over 15 years ago there were no TV shows on the paranormal and no equipment to measure and analyse paranormal activity. Armed with a camera and a note book I would spend time waiting and watching utilising all of my senses noting all events and impressions as objectively and precisely as possible to support my hypothesis.

Unfortunately technology seems to have become the main focus for a lot of paranormal investigators and for what reason? Is it to prove the existence of the paranormal for themselves, for the community, for science? Many investigators believe that the use of these tools is science and their readings serve as evidence of the paranormal. Many groups just want to replicate what they see on television and misrepresent technology to suit their own personal beliefs in the paranormal. Even if you could authenticate your research with the use of these tools, do you think that the scientific community would take any notice?

Parapsychologist Loyd Auerbach once said 'you can teach a monkey how to use an EMF detector, but that doesn't make it a scientist'. Nor does it make it a paranormal investigator either.

There are three principal means of acquiring knowledge... observation of nature, reflection, and experimentation. Observation collects facts; reflection combines them; experimentation verifies the result of that combination. ~ Denis Diderot

Halloween/Samhain in Australia

By Jenny Taylor

The names Samhain and Halloween both refer to more or less the same Autumn celebration which started in the northern hemisphere. But in Australia our seasons are offset by 6 months from those in the northern hemisphere and April/May is Autumn so most Pagans here would celebrate Samhain on the evening of 30th April/1st May. If you mention you're celebrating Halloween in May people look at you as if you're nuts because everyone knows Halloween is in October, lol. The northern hemisphere date of 31st October has become so wrapped up with the commercial hype of Halloween with lollies/candy being the main focus, plus trick-or-treating, spooky decorations, scary costumes etc that most people don't have a clue about its origins and the rationale behind the tricks and the masks etc .

Halloween or Samhain is an Autumn seasonal festival held when the days get shorter and the darkness increases. It's a time for saying farewell to the old year and to welcome in the new and also a time to honour our ancestors and acknowledge that without death, there can be no rebirth - all the non-candy related stuff that's been lost on the majority of the general population. They've probably never heard of Samhain either so that's why "Halloween" here is celebrated on the traditional date of October 31st by those who don't know any better. Although, a lot of us also do the Halloween thing for the kids anyway due to all the hype and advertising they're subjected to and the fact that it's a lot of fun. Celebrating Halloween in October here also means it's not cold outside and it doesn't get dark until quite late, so kids can wander the streets for longer. The Spring weather here is also great for pool parties — a little different to the colder weather of the traditional Halloween.

Historian Nicholas Rogers, exploring the origins of Halloween, notes that while “some folklorists have detected its origins in the Roman feast of Pomona, the goddess of fruits and seeds, or in the festival of the dead called Parentalia, it is more typically linked to the Celtic festival of Samhain (pronounced sow-an or sow-in)”, derived from the Old Irish Samuin meaning “summer’s end”. Samhain was the first and by far the most important of the four quarter days in the medieval Irish and Scottish calendar and, falling on the last day of Autumn, it was a time for stock-taking and preparation for the cold winter months ahead. There was also a sense that this was the time of year when the physical and supernatural worlds were closest and magical things could happen. To ward off these spirits, the Gaels built huge, symbolically regenerative bonfires and invoked the help of the gods through animal and perhaps even human sacrifice.

Halloween is also thought to have been heavily influenced by the Christian holy days of All Saints’ Day (also known as Hallowmas, All Hallows, and Hallowtide) and All Souls’ Day. Falling on November 1st and 2nd respectively, collectively they were a time for honoring the Saints and praying for the recently departed who had yet to reach heaven. By the end of the 12th century they had become days of holy obligation across Europe and involved such traditions as ringing bells for the souls in purgatory and “souling”, the custom of baking bread or soul cakes for “all crysten [christened] souls”. It was traditionally believed that the souls of the departed wandered the earth until All Saints Day, and All Hallows’ Eve provided one last chance for the dead to gain vengeance on their enemies before moving onto the next world. To avoid being recognised by a soul, Christians would wear masques and costumes to disguise themselves, following the lighted candles set by others to guide their travel for worship the next day. Today, this practice has been perpetuated through trick-or-treating. [Wikipedia]

Halloween’s never been a big thing in Australia and until more recent years it wasn’t celebrated here at all. Only my youngest has ever gone trick-or-treating. A lot of people here think it’s un-Australian and object to it. In previous years I’ve seen the number of costumed kids trick-or-treating in our area steadily increasing but this year there were hardly any. The one group of older kids that did come to my door (because of my friendly little jack-o-lanterns on the front porch) said they’d had one person yell at them that it was not Australian and then slam the door in their faces! ...some people can be really rude and mean-spirited!

When the veils between the worlds are the thinnest

By Janine Donnellan

The veils between the worlds are the thinnest at this time of year making it an excellent time to communicate with the dead or conduct paranormal investigations.

Communicating with the dead is essentially one of the oldest religious practices. From the earliest stages of civilization, people have used various means of divination to communicate with the ancestors and other supernatural beings when seeking guidance. It is one of the primary practices used by many psychics and mediums. Such persons were called diviners in the past, and they often belonged to special classes of priests and priestesses who were trained in the practice and interpretation of their divinatory skills.

The ancient Greeks had their oracles who spoke for the gods and as far back as 1000 BC the Chinese had "I CHING". During the Dark Ages, divining arts went underground, but after the Crusades they were followed more openly and soothsaying became popular which included such acts as necromancy, pouring oil into a basin of water to observe the formation of bubbles, scrying in water and in mirrors, shooting arrows, casting lots, and numerous other acts.

The latter part of the nineteenth century witnessed a revival in divination, especially in the United States and England, with such practices as spiritualism, tarot readings, séances, crystal ball scrying and other types of divination becoming widely popular.

The concept of conducting rituals to honour the dead is still being performed on Samhain night, and divination will at times be incorporated in the proceedings. The divination may include scrying into a fire, a glass, or a dark bowl or even guided meditation for the purpose of past-life regression or seeing into the future.

Scrying is a popular method of divination at this time of year. The object of the practice is to gaze at a crystal ball or a scrying mirror, induce a trance state and see what impressions come to you. The word "scry" is believed to come from the 14th century, from the word "descry" which means, "to discern."

You don't have to have any special gifts to scry. It's something anyone can learn how to do with practice. Samhain is as good a time to start as any, as you may get some of your most potent results at this time of year.

Some people like to use a Ouija Board to communicate with spirits at this time of the year. Communicating with the spirit world however is not some type of a game; it is serious business and needs to be treated with respect. If you are interested in communicating with someone who has passed over, unless you are experienced at communicating this way with spirit I recommend that you see a professional medium.

The First Spirit Photographer

By Ashley Hall

Fakes, Frauds and Hoaxes

In 1862, William Mumler, a jewellery engraver, discovered a faint shadowy human figure standing next to him, upon developing a self portrait.

The Spiritualist Church claimed it was the first photograph taken of a spirit, and before long, Mumler left his engraving job to become a full-time 'Spirit Photographer'. Within a year he was brought up on charges of fraud...

What happened at the trial to allow both sides to claim a victory?

William Mumler born 1832 started his working life as a jewellery engraver in Boston. During this period of his life he also dabbled with amateur photography on the side. His job as an engraver allowed him to afford what was then a very expensive hobby in photography.

One day in 1862 while developing a self portrait Mumler discovered what looked like a shadowy human figure standing at his side. Being quite familiar with the photographic process Mumler assumed it was a double exposure and thought nothing more of it. However when Mumler showed family and friends this image they told him the figure resembled his dead cousin.

It was not long before the photo caught the attention of the spiritualist community who proclaimed it the first photo ever taken of a spirit. On this day spirit photography was born.

Mumler soon started to take photos of spirits as a full time job and made the move to New York in 1868 where he found lots of work taking photos of those who had lost relatives through the civil war. Within the year he was brought up on charges of fraud by the police department who had sent an undercover agent to sit for him.

Mumler had come to the attention of the law when many began to notice that the spirits who appeared in the photos closely resembled those who had recently sat for Mumler and were still very much alive. Fellow photographers took offence to all this as they feared Mumler was giving a bad name to the profession.

During the trial one of Mumlers greatest critics P.T. Barnum (American Showman, businessman, entertainer and scam artist) who testified against Mumler. Barnum also hired another photographer to create a photo of Barnum seated with the ghost of Abraham Lincoln standing at his shoulder. Barnum did this to demonstrate how easy it was to pull off these near convincing double exposures.

At the end the judge in the case reluctantly dropped the charges against Mumler stating "however he might believe that trick and deception had been practiced [by Mumler], yet, as he sat there in his capacity as magistrate, he was compelled to decide...the prosecution had failed to prove the case."

The prosecution celebrated as they had publicly exposed Mumler. Mumler celebrated as he had beaten the charges laid against him.

However Mumlers finances were near ruin. He continued to take spirit photographs until 1879 when he gave it up and died penniless five years later in 1884. Shortly before his death he destroyed all his negatives.

The story behind this image is interesting however. Mary Todd Lincoln had become involved in spiritualism after her sons death in 1862 of Typhoid. During this period of mourning she went to many seances in order to make contact with her deceased son.

It was during this time that as many as eight seances were held in the White House itself and it was during one session that Mary Todd Lincoln finally made contact with her son.

In 1865 Abraham Lincoln was Assassinated by John Wilkes Booth at the Ford Theatre Mary Todd Lincoln went into another period of mourning travelling around the country to meet with different spiritualist mediums.

One medium told Lincoln she should sit for Mumler and this she did. Mary Todd arrived at Mumlers Studio in disguise and under an assumed name. Whether Mumler was forewarned or somehow otherwise guessed the true identity of the person who sat for him that day will never be known. However when the photograph was developed Mary identified her husband standing at her side...

Today most people accept that Mumler's Spirit Photos are just double exposures though quite nicely done. Although considered a fraud Mumler did perfect the technique and for that some credit should be given.

Obituaries

By Nic Hume

value of life, and their sentiments to religion. For a short period in the 19th century, obituaries were expressed in verse. A life told in a short poem was a splendid gesture, but lacked the room for detail on the person's life. Death journalism hit newspapers in England and America early 1880s. The standard obituary began to contain graphic content and morbid details of a person's death. Depending on the type of death, grotesque details were explained and sometimes autopsy findings were released.

It wasn't until the 20th century that the obituary became available to the common folk. In 1951, there were 31,932 registered deaths in NSW and 18,671 of those had recorded obituaries in the Sydney Morning Herald alone. Further abroad, after one of the most prolific tragedies, 9-11 affected people worldwide. The New York Times published 'Portraits of Grief', a series of obituaries for those who tragically lost their lives. This consisted of over 2500 obituaries, which 10 years later expanded to an interactive online feature, with images of the day and videos from survivors and families of the deceased. Virtual tributes and obit blogs trended with the accessibility of the web, and nowadays it's not uncommon to come across a 'In loving memory of...' page on Facebook. The humble, brief death notice of the 16th century has morphed over time to a living tribute, where many can visit, comment and share.

From a research perspective, obituaries are a wealth of information. I, myself, have a love of genealogy, and whilst researching my ancestry, have come across gold mines of information through obituary searches. The information on family units, including siblings, parents, spouses, and even cousins, as well as the date of birth and death and place of burial can be invaluable when looking into the history of a life. With the growth of obituary writing, in times to come more accurate and complete historical information can be found.

RESEARCH - Obituaries

o•bit•u•ar•y
/ō'biCHōō,erē/
Noun

That which pertains to, or is called forth by, the obit or death of a person; esp., an account of a deceased person; a notice of the death of a person, accompanied by a biographical sketch.

The word Obituary is derived from the Latin word 'obit' - meaning death. The earliest form of obituaries were 'death notices' and they were published in 16th century America. They were brief, and included the birth date, death date, place of death and cause of death. In the 18th century, the British took it a little further and expanded the death notice to include narratives about a person's life, recognise their accomplishments, and include the characteristics of the person, as well as inform members of a community of the memorial services details. Many obituaries included photographs of the deceased.

In times gone by, obituaries were reserved for the wealthy, or were published about soldiers, public servants, celebrities and adventurers. This kind of notice would assist with the sale of the newspaper, as the audience would have interest in the details of their lives and, unfortunately, their deaths. Details published were tastefully written to draw in the reader. Over time, obituaries changed somewhat to reflect 'frame of mind' as accounts of deaths of frontier men and women emphasised the Situated within the beautiful royal arcade shopping centre in Bourke Street Mall in Melbourne is the delightful and charming Spell Box store. Run by Danae and her wonderful team the shop provides pagan goods, readings, healings and herb supplies.

The SOuL.S.P.I team were fortunate to have recently spent time in Melbourne visiting places such as Spell Box and the old Melbourne Gaol. Of course the girls did not need much of an excuse to go shopping and where better than Melbourne.

The herbs at Spellbox are stored in an area away from the main shop in an area well known for paranormal activity by those that work and visit there.

Psychometry is my speciality and walking around the room that is filled with herbs and old furniture I got a real sense that some of the furniture was in fact holding its own energy and could have been responsible for some of the paranormal activity. One piece in particular, an old dresser felt like it had a navel attachment either at sea or owned by a sailor on land. The energy was dense and I was bombarded with images of the sea and of old ships.

Herb Cupboard

Even a toilet located nearby provided an interesting energy that other members of the team could sense and agreed was quite negative.

The staircase pictured next also had a residual energy that resonated with business. You could almost feel people at the turn of the century hurrying up and down the stairs.

Now my opinion of orbs is sceptical at best but I did catch this one and saw it with my naked eye. It left a slight trail which is just visible.

Staircase near Spellbox

Landing leading to Attic Reading Room

Now above the Spellbox store is a very much as it was at the turn of the century attic space. Up here they do psychic readings, tarot and mediumship. We were fortunate to meet Elizabeth who had been with Danae for many years. There has been many reports of paranormal activity recorded by people in this area. The residual energy of days gone by was hanging thick in the air and you felt that at any moment a spirit would materialise in front you. Sadly it did not.

Psychic Reader Elizabeth in the Attic with Steve

The SOuL Searchers team would like to thank Danae and her beautiful staff for making us feel so welcome and allowing us to do a walk through of their shop and I would recommend anyone to visit Spell Box the next time they are in Melbourne.

The Imaginary Friend

By Nic Hume

Growing up I never had one, not that I can recall anyway. I do remember (living) friends talking about when they were very young they would have an imaginary friend they would play with, and go on to describe them in detail. Ever the skeptic, even from a young age, I would silently think they were wacko. However, things changed when my second born was all of 2 years old and we were sitting on her bedroom floor playing, and she looked up over my shoulder and smiled the brightest smile. I asked her what she was smiling at. She replied with “The old man that’s sitting in the chair”. I asked her to describe him to me, and she looked over ‘at him’ and said he was skinny, had no hair, and was making funny faces at her. Being open minded to ‘spirits’, I encourage her to talk with him as the man she was describing was very similar to my maternal grandfather’s father – we called him Pop, he passed of lung cancer in 1980. This was the only time he ‘appeared’, and the only time she spoke of him. The idea of him around my child, 25 years after his death, bought a great sense of peace and comfort.

This leads me to other stories of children who see ghosts and, in a sense, have imaginary friends. I scoured the internet for stories, and came across a mother’s forum where one mother states that her 2 year old came to her and asked her mummy to tell the man to leave her alone, as she didn’t want him in her room anymore. Another mother spoke of how her 3 year old daughter’s imaginary friend came to live with them when her mother-in-law passed. She thought it was her way of dealing with the loss of her Nan. This 3 year old told her mother recently that another imaginary friend has come into the home, a boy by the name of 'Jack'. The detail that her daughter describes her imaginary friends is frightening to her mother. Lastly, the mother of a 4 year old says her daughter plays with a little girl called 'Emily', and she sometimes appears in her bedroom and plays with her toys. The 4 year old is never scared, and she says the little girl is nice, and just disappears through the wall when she goes. 'Emily' also has a baby sister which makes the mother stand and take notice, as sometimes when she is in the house on her own, she can hear a baby crying in her daughter's bedroom.

I looked at the psychology of Imaginary Friends and was faced with a flood of theories. Statistically, 65% of all children have make-believe friends at some point in their young lives. Imaginary friends can assist a child in coping with a major life change, or can just simply be fun play for the child. No matter why the imaginary friend is there, it is a great indicator of a fertile imagination that, in a sense, should be nurtured. Psychologists have argument for and against 'sibling/s' to be an indicator for a child to have imaginary friends. Those for the sibling indicator say that either the first born or lone child uses more imagination in solitude, to create the structures for life skills. Children that have one or more siblings have living companions to assist with role-playing et cetera to assist with development. Children with make-believe friends tend to be more imaginative, have richer vocabularies, and are better able to entertain themselves.

Imaginary friends are a psychological and social phenomenon where imagination is the creator of a friendship, rather than external physical reality. The fictional characters are created for improvisational role-playing due to lack of availability of a live companion to assist with growth and development. They often have elaborate personalities and behaviours, and can be described in great detail. They may seem very much the real deal to their creators, though they are ultimately fictional. Imaginary friends are made often in childhood, sometimes in adolescence, but rarely in adulthood.

A child with an imaginary friend reveals, according to several theories of psychology, a child's anxieties, fears, goals and perceptions of the world through that child's conversations with the 'friend'. For some children their imaginary friend is physically indistinguishable from a real person, while others view their imaginary friend in their heads only.

There's even a third category of imaginary friend recognition; when the child doesn't see the imaginary friend at all, but can only feel his/her presence. Imaginary friends are more often seen as abnormal in adults, and can lead to paracosm, which is a detailed imaginary/fantasy world, involving humans and/or animals, and even alien creations. This is an experience that is often developed during childhood and continues over a long period of time. So whether your child or a child you know has an imaginary friend, take comfort that it's normal and healthy for their development. It's also good to be aware of what the child is engaging in, pay attention to their detail and add constructive adult input to the relationship when required. You never know, it may just be Aunt Betty paying a visit or two.

The Never Ending Investigation - by Bobby C

My story begins many years ago with a simple idea, to conduct a paranormal investigation, At first it was more about experiencing something first hand, I wouldn't say I was a believer but I was no means a skeptic either, so in the beginning I read a lot of books on the subject and did a lot of research on equipment used and went out and bought the basic equipment needed. After a few months I co-founded a group with some friends and started out by going to cemeteries to learn how the equipment was used etc and it wasn't too long before we had the chance to investigate a major location. Little did I know that I was about to partake in an investigation that would go for almost one hundred investigations spanning over three years and change the course of my life forever.

The local abandoned mental asylum was a notorious location, spread out over seventy hectares and built in the late eighteen hundreds. The site had been purchased privately and not only was the general public not allowed on to the premises but before we were allowed in only one other group had ever investigated the location once, with over sixty buildings including an onsite morgue and cemetery. Some of the buildings hadn't had people set foot in them for many years. In my eyes this was a big step up and I was excited to begin, it started out as a two night investigation in which we investigated four of the buildings, the first night there was nine of us but after an uneventful night only five of us returned for night two, little did I know that I was about to witness something that would make me question everything I ever believed.

After a long uneventful investigation the night before I was starting to let my guard down and question if the location was even haunted, it wasn't until the early hours of the next morning when four of us were standing around upstairs in a two storey building starting to get tired and somewhat bored, no one was really talking just standing around in a daze when out of nowhere female voices started echoing through the corridors, and these voices weren't quite whispers they were loud yelling followed by loud bangs on the walls throughout the whole top floor, it occurred for a good fifteen seconds or so, a good four full sentences with no source, and being deep on the site along way from any possible human contamination it faded away as quick as it came and once again it was completely silent. All of us stood there in shock filled with a sense of fear and confusion as to what we witnessed, it was a good twenty seconds before anyone could even speak a word, no one was prepared for what happened, and for some it took many months to get over it, they were haunted by nightmares and utter confusion by the event.

During the review we discovered we had captured a full body apparition that to this day no one has been able to debunk, it was captured on the first night, even though no one had any experiences we had captured an incredible piece of evidence on our first try.

A few months later we went to show the evidence to the client and we were offered an exclusive deal to be the only group to come investigate every single building onsite with the condition I never disclose the name of the location, for me it was a deal of a life time and I didn't hesitate to say yes. We spent a few good months investigating different buildings on site but every time we went the numbers in our group became less and less and before I knew it I found myself alone with a choice to make, give up or continue alone. I remember walking into my first investigation as a solo investigator, it was completely different every noise every feeling was amplified and I found myself sitting alone in one of the oldest and largest mental asylums in the country but I knew I had to do this so I battled on. At first every time I investigated somewhere new it was like I was walking into a pocket of energy that hadn't been disturbed in years and activity followed almost as soon as I began.

Initially I tried to do as many investigations as I could sometimes doing up to four or five a week, every time I witnessed some type of new experiences I hadn't encountered before and the more I experienced the more I wanted to experience. Over time I experienced everything from objects moving by themselves, disembodied voices and footsteps even seeing human shapes moving around, sometimes just shadows other time silhouettes of glowing lights, I have even seen lights turn on in buildings that don't have any electricity. It wasn't long before the investigations didn't end once I left the location, I found the activity started to follow me around, usually it only lasted a few hours then disappear, it wasn't uncommon for me to leave an investigation and once I got home voices would talk, things would fall out of cupboards, there would be bangs on the walls not to mention I was starting to have extremely bad nightmares every single time I went to sleep. However after a few months it didn't seem to happen anymore and it didn't discourage me at all so I continued my investigations on a regular basis and eventually bought in another investigator to help me named Paul who had a passion for this as much as I did so we started from scratch and went back through every building. We had a lot of great experiences investigating and even turned my first five investigations into a documentary that I called 'The Investigation' but you can imagine this is the released video from my first five investigations so theres a lot of unseen footage from the other ninety five or so. The documentary got a fair bit of attention and drove my passion even further; knowing that people were interested in what I do which is very rewarding.

After a few years of investigations, coming and going from the location wasn't enough for me and once I discovered they were looking for someone to work at the location, a place also became available to rent on the site and I jumped at both. Not only was I investigating one of the greatest locations I have ever been to but now I was working and living in this great location, I was surrounded by it all day every day; after a while I had become a bit behind on my reviewing of all the footage I was shooting, I was always presented with the choice to review the last investigation or go do another one, so I archived all my footage onto portable hard drives. I have so much footage captured on video just sitting on my computer that has never seen the light of day. I also started trying different things bringing different people with me to see if the activity was different depending on who was with me, some of the people I brought were experienced others had no experience at all.

All these different methods started to run together so I wanted to turn them into documentaries to show the public what I do and some of the things I have captured., Recently, I just finished a project I titled 'Bobby C's Paranormal Apprentice', where I take someone with no experience what so ever and put them in situations that they would not be comfortable in and tape the results, not only is it a documentary into the paranormal but also a look into how people react to things they have never experienced before with some very interesting results.

Recently I joined a new paranormal group with fellow like-minded investigators Rob Kerr and Matt Manning called Ghoszt Crew, they have taken me to some really exciting locations and I experienced what activity at other locations are like and they have joined me at the asylum and experienced firsthand some of the best it has to offer.

My life has come a long way from a simple idea many years ago, I have seen it with my eyes and heard it with my ears. I have captured it onto video and digital voice recorders, evidence and reminders of the things I have witnessed of something so unrealistic existing in such a realistic world. Do I believe in ghosts? To believe implies there's a chance it isn't real, however, I have witnessed too much to simply be a believer, I know they are out there and I think one day they can be explained in terms we can all understand. I will have the one definitive piece of proof that cannot be discounted, I love where I am in life, I love what I do, I am a paranormal investigator and I will be investigating and asking questions trying to get the proof I'm after until I have it or I experience it for myself. This was just a glimpse into my views and experiences you can always come ask me any questions or watch any of my videos at;

Man Made – The Chronicles Of Our Extraterrestrial Gods

by Dr Rita Louise PhD & Wayne Laliberte, MS

We are rapidly approaching a time in our understanding of our ancient past, where we will finally correctly interpret the stories left to us by our ancestors. For hundreds of generations the same stories have been told all over the world. Seemingly unconnected societies, we are now discovering, often upheld the same basic mythology. Could it be that they are all recounting the same creation story? It certainly seems that way.

Hinduism, Buddhism, Christianity, Islam, The Sumerian's, The Mayans, The Babylonians, The Zulu's, The Egyptians – What do all of these cultures and their religious beliefs, as well as those of many others from around the world have in common? Their creation stories all seem to match the same basic outline. This would seem to be a very improbable state of affairs if we were to only view the situation through the accepted modern understanding of our past.

It is because of this we must admit that a new, fresh perspective is needed – and boy does this book offer one!

In 228 pages, freethinker Dr Rita Louise proposes the argument that perhaps our ancestors were not as stupid and under-evolved as we have been led to believe. With an impressive body of research and more importantly evidence, Dr Rita suggests that we should be looking at our ancestors creation stories in a more literal light. She compares story after story to show the reader exactly why she came to her conclusions – and, in my view, an extremely valid point is made.

Modern Historians tell us that our ancestors didn't understand the universe with its planets, stars and galaxy's. However when we look at their supposed mythology in depth, we soon realise that they understood far more than they should have been able to before the invention of telescopes and other scientific equipment. In this book we learn of a plausible explanation for how this could have come about. It is argued that if we take the creation stories at face value, rather than seeking hidden meaning, and assume that our planet was visited by alien beings who our ancestors believed to be gods, the whole thing starts to make much more sense.

Dr Rita Louise is the founder of the Institute of Applied Energetics and the host of Just Energy Radio. She is a Naturopathic Physician and has worked in the Human Potential field for over twenty years. A regular contributor to many Health and psychic magazines, she is also Chairman of the Board for the International Association of Medical Initiatives.

For anyone who watched the “Ancient Aliens” series on television and thought “Hang on a minute, they might have a point” I advise you to read this book. There is so much more information than any television program has ever told you. In this case, it really is important to read the book. An essential publication for serious researchers

Space Clearing Workshop

This is a 2 hour workshop to learn how to conduct a space clearing in your home or place of business. Sometimes a house or office can feel uncomfortable, and there is no apparent reason to explain your uneasy feeling. There may be instances when you moved into a space and just felt like someone else was there, or the space just didn't feel right.

At this workshop you will learn the basic techniques to conduct a space clearing on your home or business. You will learn how to clear negative or stagnant energetic 'imprints' built up over the years from the accumulation of day to day living and from previous occupants. You will also learn how to remove unwanted entities that may be attached to your home and to protect yourself from psychic attack.

Janine Donnellan from SOuL S.P.I will be the facilitator of this workshop. Janine has been featured in an episode of My Ghost Story, the Daily Telegraph, Mania Magazine, the Sun and the St George & Sutherland Leader as well as appearing on Psychic TV.

APPI's Sleep Over at Liverpool Tafe

Liverpool Tafe is one of those places that has had a fascinating and turbulent history.

Did you know that the building was designed by ex-convict architect Francis Greenway? Work on the new hospital commenced in 1822 and it was completed in early 1830.

From 1830 to 1836 the building was used as a hospital principally to care for sick convicts. The existence of the hospital stimulated the growth and spread of the settlement.

By 1832 patients of the hospital included convicts from as far away as the Goulburn Plains. There were no kitchen facilities and the northern end of the basement was the only bathing room.

After 1836 the hospital was transferred to the control of the military and apparently used as a military hospital and barracks. The military vacated the site around the mid-1840s and the winding down of the convict system meant that the district could no longer support such a large hospital.

The hospital became vacant in the late 1840s.

In 1852 the government granted use of the building and a sum of £525 to the Benevolent Society of New South Wales to establish an asylum for the sick and aged. Many of the buildings now on the college grounds were built or modified during this time.

In 1918 the Government Asylum became a State Hospital and Asylum and it remained so until the Health Department vacated the site in 1958.

The buildings were then renovated for use as a TAFE College and classes were first held in early 1960. The then Minister for Education, the Hon Ernest Wetherell MP, officially opened the site on 10 July 1961.

APPI (Australian Paranormal Phenomenon Investigators) now conducts paranormal tours and investigations at Liverpool TAFE.

SOuL S.P.I Sleep Over

On Thursday 25th January SOuL S.P.I attended APPI's Sleepover at the TAFE. It was a jam packed night of paranormal experiences and the APPI girls, were very accommodating and friendly throughout the whole night.

After the initial walk through, we were left to do our own investigations throughout the site. All of our team members had experienced some type of paranormal activity throughout the night.

We had connected to a little girl spirit in the Music room.

Here we are tapping in to the energy of the room.

Another interesting experience happened in the garden, where we had perceived a spirit near the bench. At the same time the lights around the area started to flash on and off.

We also had encountered a black mass walking down the verandah. The walkie talkie was making peculiar noises which added to the drama of that moment.

There were many exciting sightings during the night and we eventually retired back to base around 3am to chat about our experiences and then to sleep.

UFO and Paranormal Research Society

The society was established to provide the public with information relating to the paranormal world of the unexplained, no matter the type of phenomena. The society beckons the public to forward their own accounts of anything that seems bizarre or unusual so as to defy logic! The Society is an active, in the field group dedicated to pioneering the unexplained world.

The Society has now embarked on a project to deliver this material as recreations professionally produced whereby actors are cast into the roles of the characters and the original account from Australians that are investigated by the Society are put to film. This Series is called EERIE ENCOUNTERS and the first DVD, featuring the UFO phenomenon, is now available from the Society. The series will eventually go to air on TVS.

The Society actively engages the public on reports they give so as to lend credibility to the reports they give. Everything from Cryptozoology to ghostly apparitions is covered.

Validate

Validate is an independent investigative body seeking key elements that may provide evidential support to certain paranormal related theories such as hauntings, alleged foreign intervention i.e. UFO phenomena and cryptozoology.

In order to authenticate claims, Validate will endeavour to gather bona fide data without relying on calculations or any conclusions drawn by other groups or organisations. This clean slate approach enables Validate to conduct its own studies without influence. All obtained information (raw data) can therefore be thoroughly scrutinised at Validate's best capacity.

In essence, Validate deals with highly controversial areas that are considered as fringe science. Here, even the most qualified scientists who have invested time and risked their academic careers to pursue phenomena research, find it extremely difficult to understand and draw solid conclusions. Validate acknowledges these difficulties through experience. Although Validate operates on strict guidelines, it appreciates the fact that certain events are beyond our academic textbooks. In other words, Validate will not be dissuaded no matter how extraordinary the claim may be. Validate is also dedicated to assisting and coaching groups within the field with the aim of bringing unity to the paranormal (including UFOlogy) community.

Australian Paranormal Society

The Australian Paranormal Society (A.P.S) - founded and owned by Bill Tabone and Amanda Wright-Tabone, and co-ordinated by Bill, Amanda, Emily Tabone and Will Tabone - run a professional team of paranormal investigators who are located in Melbourne, Australia.

The A.P.S - is a 'not-for-profit' organization - that consists of a professional team of individuals 'with varying skills and a broad range of expertise' who are dedicated to researching and understanding unexplained phenomena worldwide - and we provide a 'free onsite assessment' for residential and commercial customers -Just email us with your enquiries.

The Australian Paranormal Society does not encourage nor will it condone trespassing at any time and it will only investigate a location if proper permission has been granted by the appropriate authorities.

The A.P.S aim is two-fold: to create a team of 'dedicated paranormal researchers' as well as an extensive online resource centre that will cater for varying levels of interest and understanding.

Our mission is to extensively investigate and empirically document all types of 'unexplained phenomena' within Australia, utilizing the most advanced equipment and methodologies.

We approach each reported incident with sensitivity, fully respecting the person's worldview and religious beliefs, while maintaining full confidentiality. Any evidence gathered on location will remain private and confidential and any public disclosure would remain at the full discretion of the client.

An A.P.S. requirement of any investigation is that a full 'debrief' and feed-back session will be scheduled with the client to whom all findings will be made public.

The A.P.S will initially consider various rational explanations for alleged 'paranormal phenomena' and will continue to assist our clients until a satisfactory conclusion about any phenomena is reached.

All investigations proceed with no preconceived assumptions and will remain unbiased by allowing any evidence uncovered to guide the direction of the investigation.

Occupational Health and Safety issues affecting the A.P.S team are critical during any investigation. If for any reason members of the A.P.S feel the investigation should cease for personal or safety reasons, the investigation will be postponed or terminated.

Through their investigations the A.P.S hope to gain a more concise understanding about the nature of unexplained phenomena through extensive data collection, experimentation and empirical documentation

The A.P.S. also offers a specialised team for the clearing of premises/spirit rescue. This team is separate to the investigative team although still part of the A.P.S. This team will only attend when a thorough investigation has taken place. All contact is through our email.

We are open to any questions the public may have and to support other fellow paranormal investigation groups.

Our aim is to also build a more open and united paranormal community.

An evidence analysis service for the public and other P.I. groups is also available.

Colonial Paranormal

Colonial Paranormal is Victorian based and was born out of our interest in the Paranormal, and wanting to know about things that go bump in the night! We got started on investigations in 2009 after going to the Point Cook Homestead. We have so far done investigations at Old Melbourne Gaol, Old Geelong Gaol, Point Cook Homestead and J Ward with other groups and are now trying to strike out on our own. We'd love to find more like-minded people who want to go on private investigations in Melbourne and around Victoria. We're not a tour group, nor are we out to make a profit or stand on the toes of existing groups. We'd just like to do our own thing. We have all our own gear and all we need is people keen to join us on investigations. By creating Colonial Paranormal we'd like to share the costs involved with getting into places. Most places charge a fee to get into, if we can split that with 10 people it's way cheaper than a tour. You can email us at melissa@colonialparanormal.com or visit the website www.colonialparanormal.com or you can find us on Facebook "Colonial Paranormal".

Your night will commence the Muster point in front of Miss Porter's House directly across the road from McDonalds King street Newcastle West. It will include an historical overview of the area including Cottage Creek which was the most remote "civilized" point of the township of Newcastle and the house standing on what was known as "Lock's Paddock – a stonemason's yard. You will have plenty of time to explore, take photos and stake out some of the rooms with us and listen for things that WILL go bump in the night! After holding some of Australia's most hardened criminals, Maitland Gaol closed on the 30th January 1998.

16 men were executed at Maitland Gaol between 1843 and 1897 - all for rape or murder. Executions were open to the public until 1861.

Are the 16 men that were executed still roaming the halls of Maitland Gaol? Come and find out for yourself!

For the beginner to the experienced keen investigator or even if you just want to learn about all things Paranormal. Come and have a great night with us all!

We will have special guest teams, WSPR - West Sydney Paranormal Research and ESP - Eastern States Paranormal to share with you some of their skills to help have a better understanding about investigating the unknown!

There will be key locations set up to investigate using the top of the range equipment and be shown how to use them efficiently with WSPR and ESP.

There will be a blog cell where there is a camcorder for you to blog your experiences throughout the night (in the DARK) maybe in satins cell? hmm sounds good to me!

At one stage of the night you all become the inmates and be locked in the cells of B-wing! This will be for a re-enactment of what it was like spending time in the Gaol.

There will be a BBQ feast and drinks provided, soft drink, coffee and tea. Don't forget your sleeping bags and blankets! if you would like to have a sleep at any stage of the night.. in a cell maybe?

AXIS MUNDI

A free online magazine from Spheres Of Light

axismundi.spheresoflight.com.au

Welcome to "Axis Mundi" ISSN 1839-4396

The Axis Mundi is a FREE online magazine, produced on a quarterly basis, which provides topical information to keep you up to date on news and developments in the Australian Pagan community. Subscribers are notified by email each quarter when a new edition is ready. In addition to our usual announcements on upcoming activities and events, the Axis Mundi contains articles and information that correspond to a seasonal theme and highlight the rhythms and cycles of the natural world and our lives. Your suggestions, comments and contributions are strongly encouraged. It is through your active participation that this online magazine will grow and develop into a publication that will empower you on your journey through all realms of possibilities personal, spiritual, and magical.

The Latin term, axis-mundi, literally means the axis of the world. Our logo expresses a shamanic point of connection between sky and earth where the four compass directions meet. At this point travel and correspondence is made between higher and lower realms and is reflected in the concept of 'as above so below'. In the context of our magazine it is meant to define a group that comes together from various ideologies and shares spiritual ideas, knowledge and experiences and is in a process of constant evolution.
